PRESIDENT DISTURBED

Over Industrial Deadlock In Coal Region

TALK AT WHITE HOUSE

At Which Ways and Means For Effecting a Settlement Were Discussed —Federal Interference Not Warranted by Laws and Constitution

Washington, Oct. 1.—The president yesterday took initiative steps to ascertain what, if anything, could be done by federal authority to settle the coal strike. At the temporary White House a conference was held with Attorney General Knox, Secretary Moody and Postmaster General Payne. Governor Crane of Massachusetts also was present. These men met with President Roosevelt first, and after the subject had been considered for some time they adjourned to another room and conferred together for an hour. They all returned later in the day and held another conference with the president.

President Roosevelt is deeply concerned over the situation. The approach of winter with a coal famine imminent, and the distress and suffering that must ensue unless coal becomes available, puts a situation which he thinks should receive the attention of the administration if there is anything that can be done by the government. Many appeals have been made to him and many suggestions have been received by him, and it was with a view to ascertain what power the federal authority could evoke that caused the conference to be held.

During the conference every phase of the situation was discussed. The general opinion of the advisers of the president was that the situation did not present a case in which there could be federal interference by any warrant of law. There has been no interference with federal authority in the mining region, either by stoppage of the mails or resistance of the United States court process. It was pointed out that there was no occasion for the use of federal troops, as Governor Stone of Pennsylvania had not called on the government for assistance, nor had he even exhausted the resources of the state by calling out the full strength of the state militia.

The question of the right to seek appointment of receivers for the mines in order that they might be operated was discussed, but neither in the constitution nor in any known law could any legal warrant be found for such action, though the discussion on such lines even went so far as the consideration of how the properties could be relinquished and control surrendered after the object of supplying coal had been accepted, assuming the federal government could intervene through receivers.

The outcome of the whole discussion was that there was a lack of the power in the federal administration to take any action at the present stage of the strike, although the seriousness of the coal famine now and the much greater evils soon to follow were considered at length and with a wish to discover some method of ending the industrial deadlock.

Governor Crane's presence naturally brought into prominence the proceedings begun in the Massachusetts courts to secure the appointment of receivers for the coal properties, but the opinion was expressed that the situation could not be met successfully by this method.

During the day advices were received that the strike might be settled by the operators and miners themseves and it was suggested that hasty interference of any kind by the federal government might prevent the consummation of the plans for a strike settlement, if any such were maturing. While recognizing the futility of efforts to end the strike that could accomplish nothing, it was stated that the president was anxious the end of the strike should be brought about at the earliest possible moment and that if the attorney general or any other member of the cabinet could devise a method by which the president could proceed that he would not hesitate to adopt it, unless meanwhile assurance of a settlement were received.

The conference will be resumed today, at which time Secretary Root, who spent the day in New York, will be present. It is understood that the visit of Secretary Root to New York was for the purpose of consulting prominent business men on the subject. The secretary left for New York Monday, after a short conference at the White House, when the same men were present who were at yesterday's conference. It has been intimated that the president may send for the managers of the coal properties, but this will not be done until after the conference today and perhaps not then.

COE PLEADS GUILTY

To the Embezzlement of $90,000, but Has Made Partial Restitution

Boston, Oct. 1.—With a plea of guilty to the indictment charging the embezzlement of $90,000, Henry W. Coe, late treasurer of the Bowker Fertilizer company, stood before Judge Aiken yesterday afternoon. Melvin O. Adams, Coe's counsel, related the facts how an auditor on the books of the fertilizer company found irregularities due to Coe's use of the funds to tide over the finances of the Dudley mills at Newton, in which he was interested. Adams told the court that Coe had not benefited by the misuse of the money. He said that about $32,000 had been returned to the fertilizer company, and Coe had pleaded guilty to the charge of taking $90,000. Coe had had in his charge $241,000. It was also stated that Coe's wife and daughter had turned over to the fertilizer company their endowment life insurance policies.

Treasurer Higginson, who succeeded Coe, gave his testimony as to the fertilizer's finances. Then a physician told the court that Coe is very ill with shaking palsy. The defendant's daughter also testified to Coe's condition. Mr. Adams then asked the court to postpone sentence for six months, and Judge Aiken said that owing to the peculiar circumstances he would take the matter under consideration and would make some disposition of the case probably today.

Rally In Stock Market

New York, Oct. 1.—The stock market, which closed utterly demoralized Monday as a result of stringent monetary conditions and other unfavorable circumstances, made a sensational recovery yesterday. The chief causes for the complete reversal were the action of the secretary of the treasury in removing the restraint on bank reserves, and persistent reports from various quarters that the coal strike had at last reached the point where negotiations for a settlement were actually under way. For this last rumor there appeared to be little or no foundation, according to the individual and collective statements of the leading operators made after the regular weekly meeting.

Wilcox Gets New Trial

Raleigh, Oct. 1.—The supreme court of North Carolina yesterday handed down an opinion in the famous case in which Jim Wilcox is charged with the murder of Nellie Cropsey last November. The court gives Wilcox a new trial. Nellie Cropsey disappeared at night from her home in Elizabeth City. She had been last seen with Jim Wilcox. Wilcox was arrested and tried. He was sentenced to be hanged. He declared his innocence and an appeal to the supreme court was taken.

COLER FOR GOVERNOR

Heads Tentative Ticket Made Up at Hill Headquarters

KINGS COUNTY MAY BOLT

Devery Makes Strong Argument For Seats For His Delegation, and They Will Probably Be Recognized as Ninth District Representatives

Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 1.—For governor, Bird S. Coler; lieutenant governor, C. N. Bulger; comptroller, C. M. Preston; secretary of state, F. H. Mott; attorney general, J. Cunneen; engineer, R. W. Herman; treasurer, D. J. VanAuken; judge court of appeals, J. C. Gray.

This is the ticket promulgated from the headquarters of Senator Hill. It was the result of a long conference of many of the state leaders. The announcement of this tentative ticket was received quietly by the throngs in the hotel corridors and later rumors were circulated that when it got before the convention it might not stand. One of these rumors was that Kings county was preparing a bolt.

The committee on contested seats, after a session which lasted from 3:45 until 8:10 p. m. yesterday, adjourned until today without coming to any decision in any of the matters brought before it. Interest centered in the Ninth district.

When Sergeant-at-Arms Wager called the New York contest Chief Devery, accompanied by his counsel, A. I. Elkus, was admitted to the room where the committee was prepared to consider the case behind closed and securely locked doors. The Devery side opened the argument and Elkus began an argument bearing directly on the law which applies to the case. He cited the vote which each of the candidates in the district received and declared that while Sheehan, who received the second highest number of votes at the primaries, might have had some right to send a contesting delegation to the convention, the action of Goodwin, who received but a small portion of the total vote cast, was an insult to the intelligence of the convention.

On behalf of the Goodwin delegates, A. J. Tulley presented 26 affidavits which, he claimed, substantiated the claim that the most flagrant violations of the law had been committed. These affidavits, he said, showed that Devery had paid money to influence voters.

After attorneys on both sides had been heard, Devery was given five minutes to address the committee. He said: "I am a Democrat and have been one all my life. I have never changed my colors, and come before you tonight simply because I made a fight against a leader who was not of any use to his district and who was not wanted there. Goodwin had every chance in the world. The police were his. They would do anything he ordered and I'm sure I didn't appoint the election officials. In the name of justice and right I ask that I be protected. I won fairly and squarely and certainly I shouldn't be robbed. I hope that your decision will be that we are to be allowed to represent the voters who showed at the election that they were for me."

At a late hour last night it was rumored about the corridor of the Grand Union Hotel that prominent party leaders had gone to Senator Hill and informed him that in their judgment it would be political suicide to keep Devery out of the convention.

Mr. Hill is said to have told them that possibly it would be best to permit Devery and his fellow delegates to take seats as the regular representatives from the Ninth district. This rumor could not be confirmed.

Close Contest For Head of Ticket

Providence, Oct. 1.—The Democratic state convention in this city today will witness one of the closest and most exciting contests known in Rhode Island politics. The important battle will be over the nomination for governor and the rival candidates are J. J. Fitzgerald and L. F. C. Garvin. The canvass has been in progress for several weeks and both sides claim a victory. The unbiased opinion of the politicians is that the two sides are separated by a margin of only a few votes, with the result yet in doubt.

Driven to Desperation

New York, Oct. 1.—In financial difficulty as a result of the coal strike, Henry C. Scheel, a coal merchant, tried to kill himself at his home yesterday. He has two shotgun wounds in his abdomen and the doctors say there is very little hope for him. Scheel lives with his wife and three children in a handsome residence and generally has been thought to be prosperous.

Good Afternoon

Should tomorrow prove stormy, the Brockton fair should be continued next week. It would be a disappointment to thousands if they could not go to this great carnival once a year.

The movement in Boston to reduce the salaries of school teachers is one that should succeed. The cost of the schools of Boston is in excess of all the other large cities of the country both per pupil and per capita of population. At the same time Boston is unable to provide school buildings for all its children of school age.

The delay of the present city government in building the new Quincy Point schoolhouse may result seriously if the present building is condemned, as there is no place in the district which could be utilized for school purposes. The Ward Two people lost their patience some months ago. Now that the money has been borrowed for the building, as well as the enlargement of the lot, the city should get some return.

Drift of Opinion.

☞There was a time when it was said that anyone was an idiot to blow out a kerosene lamp, as the match to light it cost more than it would to keep it burning. The price which kerosene is likely to reach, owing to the extra demand this winter growing out of the coal tragedy, may be large enough to not only be respectable but to pinch a trifle harder those engaged in the struggle for existence. So many other things have soared and to such greater heights that the extortion of the beef trust seems a comparatively slight thing at present.—Brockton Enterprise.

Almost One Hundred.

Capt. John Whitmarsh of Braintree who would have entered his centennial year this month had he lived, died on Tuesday. He was born in Weymouth Oct. 18, 1803, but for half a century resided at East Braintree.

He started when a lad to learn the shoemaker's trade, but on account of poor eyesight he tried the carpenter's trade. Having a desire for the sea, he ran on a sloop to Boston, and before he reached his majority was captain of a freighter.

Mr. Whitmarsh married in 1827, his wife dying several years ago. They had ten children. He was a Democrat in politics, a Baptist in religion, never used tobacco, and was a strong temperance advocate.

Weymouth's Puzzle.

Charles F. Wilcox was brought into court this morning upon the charge of assault and the case continued until Wednesday that he might be examined as to his mental condition.

Wilcox went to Weymouth by train from Boston Tuesday afternoon and went to the home of Dr. Hathaway and demanded admission to see his sister. He was not admitted and an officer was called to take charge of him.

The young man seems to be well educated but is evidently laboring under some mental strain. The police are trying to locate his friends.

THE MOUTH ORGAN

Mail Investors Got No Returns.

Sensational Testimony of Fisher at the Trial.

J. M. Fisher who plead guilty on Monday was on the stand until 2.45 Tuesday at the trial of himself and Frederick E. Betts, the alleged brokers, for using the mails to defraud. The direct examination of Fisher will be of local interest.

Q—Were you aware of the publication of the monthly circular? A—Yes sir.

Q—Had you personally anything to do with the getting up of these circulars? A—No, sir.

Q—Who had? A—Mr. Bailey and Mr. Betts.

Q—Now, were there customers who came to the office personally to transact business? A—Yes, sir, from 30 to 50 daily.

Q—What was the nature of their business? A—They would watch the quotations on the tape and watch the quotations going up on the board. They would put in orders to sell stocks quoted on the board.

Q—Who took the order? A—They were passed in at a window to either Miss Kelliher, Miss Farrell, William A. Betts, myself, Raymond Falls or some one else. We would take the orders and hand them through another window to the telegraph operator. A little later he would pass back tickets with figures on them, the name of the customer, the stock he bought and the price at which he bought it, which he would keep for reference. Those were margin transactions.

Q—Do you know in the case of any individuals whether any money was ever paid them? A—Traders in the room—yes, sir They got their money.

Q—Was there any other class of customers? A—Yes, those who came in to buy their stock outright. They would leave their money to buy a certain number of shares of a certain stock, and a little later the certificates would be sent them.

Q.—What other class of customers was there. A.—People who came in in answer to advertisements. They came in every day.

Q.—What was the course of business with these people? A.—They would hand in their money. I would give it to Miss Maitland, and get a receipt and give it to the customer, who would sign an agreement giving some one authority to handle his account.

Q.—Whose name was filled in on those slips? A.—Sometimes George A. Adams, sometimes a Mr. Endicott, and sometimes a Mr. Dow. Mr. Adams was in the office running the Cobb-Everett Co., and Mr. Dow was employed by Fisher & Co. Endicott I don't know.

Q.—What was the course of business with reference to these accounts. A.—For every $100 invested the customer's order would be filled out to buy 10 shares of a stock that was supposed to be in a "pool" at a certain price. It was printed in there to buy on every rise of three points. Every time there was a rise of three points more stock was bought, and so on.

Q.—Was that an actual transaction? A.—No, sir; it was not.

Q.—Was there any stock bought at all?" A.—Not to my knowledge, except in the cases I have mentioned.

Q.—Go on and tell what was d ne. A.—They would keep buying stock, o keep marking it on the account as having been bought, and when the money was all expended and there was another rise and no money to cover it, a call would be sent out for more money. If the customer responded, more stock was bought. That would necessitate another call on the first reaction of the market for more money. If the customer failed to respond, he was what they called "wiped out."

Q.—That is, there was a nominal sale of his holdings? A.—Yes, sir; a supposed sale.

Q.—And the customer lost his money? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—There never having been any purchase of stock, there never could have been any sale? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When were the accounts made up? After business hours, from 6 to 11 o'clock.

Q.—Is there anything else you can state in reference to those transactions? A.—In some cases these supposed transactions would show a profit to the customers. They would sometimes ask for the account to be closed up, and they would take their profit, but instead of that their accounts would be kept open, or else there was some stock added to it at a higher price, and the fluctuations of the market would show them that they had lost their money. That was done frequently.

Q.—What was the course of business with those who sent their money by mail? A.—They would get a receipt for their money, they would sign a slip known as "pool No. 8," or "pool No. 7," and so on, and a little later they would be notified of the supposed purchase of stock.

Q.—Do you know whether anybody who put money into those deals—either those who came to the office in answer to advertisements or those who sent their money by mail—ever received anything for what they put in? A.—Never a cent to my knowledge.

Q.—Did you have a conversation with Mr. Betts in relation to this matter? A.—Yes, the latter part of August.

Q.—State what it was? A.—I went into Mr. Betts' private office and asked him about this pool business. I said that the people who had put money into those pools had lost, whereas he had claimed the pools were going to pay them large profits. I asked him to explain to me how it was that everybody lost the money he put in. He said that was all right. He said the public were a lot of suckers, and they'd got to be trimmed, and he might as well trim them as any one else. I said: "And use my name?" He said: "That's all right." I said: "No, it is not." I told him at that time that he was a thief and a robber and a liar. We had some further heated conversation, and then I went out.

Q.—Did you have any further talk with Mr. Betts on that subject? A.—I had another talk with him, and he said he wouldn't run it any more or that he wouldn't do it again or something of that kind.

Q.—You remained with him, however? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And remained until the 28th of October, 1901? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Do you know Thomas Gwynn? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What financial transactions did your firm have with him? A.—We sent him $30 a week, which was to pay him and another man for some little work they did.

Q.—Did you know Stevens, the young man who testified here? A.—Yes. I talked with Betts about him. I told him he was a boy who had driven a team, had lost his money, and ought to have it back. Betts said: "Get him to open another account, and we will make the money back for him." Stevens came to see me and told me he had this Winona stock, and he would deposit the stock if I would give him a guarantee. I told Betts, and he dictated a guarantee to the effect that we would hold the stock until we got back the money he had lost. The boy came in several times, and finally he said he would be satisfied if he got his Winona stock back. I asked Betts about it. He said he could not get it then, but would later. I never was able to get it, and so far as I know, the boy has never got it back.

The witness said that at the time of the raid, Betts said to him that they would have to keep out of sight for some time. They went to the Crawford House, from there to the Essex, and finally got a room on Massachusetts avenue, where they remained from Monday to Thursday.

Q.—Did Betts say anything to you about what he was going to do at that time? A.—He said he was going to make the government suffer, and was going to sue the Boston Herald and the Boston Globe and other newspapers for libel.

The witness denied that he had ever had his name engraved as it appeared on the papers sent out from the office of the firm, and said that he had never given anybody authority to fix it to be engraved on a stamp. He didn't know by whom it was done.

Q.—Did you have any communication by private wire with New York? A.—Not to my knowledge. Certainly not after June 12, 1900.

Fisher was cross questioned at length by Lawyer Bartlett,

The defence opened its case and testimony was given by Henry M. Hartlet, Sanford L. Fogg and H. E. Stetson all of Bath, Maine, each of whom said they received returns from investments.

The trial was resumed at 9 today.

Beware of Snakes.

The fruit trees in Atlantic have proved too much for the small boys. Fences seem to make no difference whatever, and even the light of day does not daunt them. The sad part of it is, that the boys are not all small enough to be forgiven on account of their size. The fact that several not altogether harmless snakes have been found nestling in the several grape arbors, ought to be a note of warning. Snakes are not considerate enough not to bite the little hands which reach playfully after the forbidden fruit.

☞It is now generally admitted that Arctic explorers often lose their tempers. In the worst extremes of cold, strangely enough, the blood of the wanderers among the icefloes is often boiling. Fever heat in feelings and in manners is not unknown even in an igloo. The present outlook for a frozen north in New York for lack of fuel is causing some uneasiness. A winter famine in fuel might set countless teeth on edge, and even the best regulated families might be in danger of falling apart.—New York Tribune.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. McCullough Likely to Win

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 1.—The Vermont legislature assembles today and J. G. McCullough, the Republican candidate for governor, seems assured of election over Clement and McGettrick on the first joint ballot of the house and senate. Thus will be finally ended the fight which for lack of a majority was not decided at the state election on Sept. 2.

BIG SUBSIDY AND LOAN

By British Government to the Cunard Company

IN THE NATURE OF REWARD

For Resisting Efforts to Get the Company Into Morgan Combine—The Latter's Ships to Fly British Flag and to Be Controlled by Britishers

Sheffield, Oct. 1.—Four hundred covers were laid at the cutlers' feast, which was held here yesterday. The principal guests of the occasion were Lord Kitchener and Ambassador Choate. Military officers predominated among the guests and the distinguished persons present included Gerald W. Balfour, formerly president of the Board of Trade, the Duke of Norfolk, General French and General Ian Hamilton.

Responding to the toast "His Majesty's Forces," Lord Kitchener avoided political topics and confined himself to eulogizing the conduct of the army and the colonial forces in South Africa.

Mr. Balfour, in his speech, said his department had opened communications with Baron Inverclyde, chairman of the Cunard Steamship company, and J. P. Morgan, representing the shipping combine, and that it was the barest justice to both these men to say they had shown the utmost readiness to meet the wishes of the government.

Mr. Balfour then announced the details of the agreement with the Cunard company. He said the company had engaged to construct two vessels which would make from 24 to 25 knots an hour. He considered the proposed subsidy of $750,000 a year no more than fair remuneration for the services rendered. The government, continued the speaker, was firmly opposed to the principle of paying a subsidy in excess of such fair remuneration, and any such excess of subsidy could only be regarded as a bounty in disguise.

Mr. Balfour said an agreement had been arrived at with Mr. Morgan under which British vessels in the shipping combine would remain British, not merely nominally, but in reality. A majority of the directors of the new combine were to be of British nationality, the vessels were to fly the British flag, their officers were to be British and a reasonable proportion of their crew would be drawn from the same nation, while the combine had undertaken that at least half the tonnage hereafter to be built for it should be British-built and fly the British flag.

Further, in the event of the combine pursuing a policy hostile to the British mercantile marine, Mr. Balfour said the government was empowered to terminate the agreement, which was for 20 years' time, and renewable by five years' notice from each party to it. It was not desirable in the interests of Great Britain that the Americans should remain without a considerable share in the Atlantic trade, but it was desired that the inevitable development of this trade should occur with the least possible friction between the two peoples.

The speaker said it was his earnest hope that the arrangements he announced would, while safeguarding British interests, prove the surest foundation of lasting friendship between the two nations.

Ambassador Choate responded to the toast: "Kindred Beyond the Seas." In a humorous address he said Mr. Balfour had made the speech he himself had intended to make. Mr. Balfour, he said, had dispelled the idea that there was any such thing, in a hostile sense, as American invasion. The contracts which were the subject of daily dealings between the peoples of Great Britain and the United States were binding them more closely together.

The ambassador agreed with Mr. Balfour that the dangers of competition were of but little account and said that, after all, community of interests was the tie which had bound the two peoples together for the past century and that he hoped this tie would continue to bind them for the next thousand years. Mr. Choate said the echoes of the Sheffield gathering would cross the Atlantic.

The Cunard arrangement meets with the warmest approval both in Liverpool and London and Baron Inverclyde, chairman of the company, who is credited with having been throughout resolute in resisting the policy of absorption by the Morgan combine, is the recipient of a shower of congratulations for having secured an unexpectedly favorable agreement with the government.

Similar praises are liberally bestowed upon the government for its effective manner of meeting the Morgan combination. These feelings are expressed in all newspapers this morning and editorial articles on the subject, even in papers which have been most determined against the principle of subsidy, agree that in the present case a subsidy is justified. The subsidy and loan are looked upon as largely in the nature of a reward for resisting the efforts to get the Cunard company into the Morgan combine.

Convicted Under Crimes Act

Dublin, Oct. 1.—John Roche, Nationalist member of the house of commons, was yesterday sentenced at Mount Bellew, Galway, to six months at hard labor under the crimes act for inciting the boycott of land owners.

POISON IN A WELL

Discovered in Time to Prevent Consummation of Evil Design

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 1.—An attempt to poison an entire family is reported from Assonet, a small town six miles north of here. The method employed was the throwing of sugar of lead in considerable quantities into a well on the farm of Frank Barrows.

Mr. Barrows, in drawing water, noticed its milky appearance, and a closer examination showed a slight sediment. He became suspicious and turned a sample of the water over to Dr. Briggs, who pronounced the foreign substance in it poisonous. He stated that had the water been soft the attempt on the lives of the family would have proved successful, as the chemical would have been readily dissolved. Owing to the hardness of the water a chemical reaction was caused, giving the water its milky appearance.

Mr. Barrows says he has no suspicion as to the perpetrator and knows no reason why the act should have been done. When he made his discovery he found in the soft earth the footprints of a man who is not a member of the family, and through these an attempt will be made to trace the guilty party.

Milk at Eight Cents a Quart

Investment Pays 160 Percent

New York, Oct. 1.—Members of the original United States steel underwriting syndicate today received another 5 percent dividend of $10,000,000 from J. P. Morgan & Co. AIRSHIP EXHIBITIONS

Wonderful Results Obtained by Navigators on Long Island

New York, Oct. 1.—Two airships made ascents yesterday on Long Island, which surpassed the achievements of any other of their kind on this continent The airships were operated by Leo Stevens and Edward C. Boice. Both were in the air at the same time and both fared about equally well. The wind was light. It is claimed that the airship handled by Boice ascended to a height of about 1000 feet and sailed a course of about two miles, the navigator finally alighting near Sheepshead Bay race track.

For the Stevens airship it is claimed that the ascent was to a height of 4000 feet. After making a flight of about three quarters of a mile the balloon, in descending, came in contact with telegraph wires and became disabled, but the navigator succeeded in alighting in safety and the airship sustained no serious injury.

The airship used by Boice was the one imported to this country by Santos-Dumont, some months ago. Stevens made his own ship and has made several previous unsuccessful attempts to fly it.

Young Stratton Wants a Million

Colorado Springs, Col., Oct. 1.—I. H. Stratton announced yesterday that he had been approached by one of the executors appointed by his father in the will with a proposition to compromise the contest case, and answered that he would withdraw his suit upon a settlement of $1,000,000. Administrators and the son were in conference nearly all day and the announcement of young Stratton is believed to be the conclusion that has been arrived at.

Zola Funeral Preparations

Paris, Oct. 1.—The remains of Emile Zola will be interred in Montmartre cemetery. The funeral will be a civil ceremony, though, probably, the body will be accorded the military honors to which the deceased is entitled as an officer of the Legion of Honor. The President's Progress

Washington, Oct. 1.—The president had a very comfortable day yesterday and is reported to be doing nicely. He maintains his cheerful and buoyant disposition and the wound continues to heal.

Suicide on the Kearsarge

New York, Oct. 1.—Naval Lieutenant Commander Bronaugh committed suicide yesterday on the battleship Kearsarge at the navy yard by blowing out his brains. Armour's Big Profit on Wheat

Chicago, Oct. 1.—There has been no grain operation this season comparable to the Armour wheat "spread" which closed yesterday with a profit of $1,500,000 on 15,000,000 bushels. The operations have lasted about 90 days. In May and June Armour bought July and sold September wheat, and liquidated that "spread" at a moderate profit.

HEART TO HEART TALK

On Coal Strike to Be Held at the White House

PRESIDENT'S INVITATION

For Anthracite Mine Operators and President of Miners' Union to Meet Him and Consider Request to Reopen the Mines at Once

Washington, Oct. 2.—President Roosevelt will make an effort to bring the anthracite coal mine owners and their striking employes together in the interest of the public good. This conclusion was reached after a series of conferences with his cabinet advisors covering Tuesday and yesterday. The decision was arrived at when the lawyers of the cabinet informed the president that there was no way, under the constitution and the form of government of the United States, for federal intervention to end the strike. Every phase of the situation was canvassed and the determination to have the mine operators and President Mitchell meet the president was reached when it was found that no other method was open. At the conclusion of the conference yesterday the president sent an identical telegram to the coal operators and to John Mitchell, representing the employes, asking them to meet him here at 11 o'clock on Friday for the purpose of consultation.

At the meeting Friday the line of approach toward the settlement of the strike will be an appeal by President Roosevelt to both sides to come together as men and not to allow false pride or a feeling of obstinacy to stand in the way of the termination of the great strike. It is stated by one of the president's advisors that beyond this the president cannot go; he has no powers of compulsion to bring into play against either side and he must rely upon his persuasive abilities and his appeals to their sense of humanity if anything tangible is to be accomplished.

The president intends to lay before his hearers the situation as it appears to him with all the prospective horrors that will follow a fuel famine, and will urge them in the interests of humanity to open the mines and supply the demand for coal. The president has taken this action because he feels it to be his duty to do so, as the executive head of a nation, threatened with great peril. The president has, in a sense, taken upon himself the burdens of an arbitrator in this great dispute between capital and labor, and though the arbitration is not compulsory and is not even known under the name of arbitration in any of the invitations issued yesterday, it is the hope of the president and his advisors that it will be effective.

There will be no one present at Friday's meeting but the principals. It is true that Friday is cabinet day and that 11 o'clock, the hour appointed in the invitations for the meeting of the coal magnates and Mitchell, is the usual hour of assembling of the cabinet, but according to the present understanding that cabinet meeting will be postponed. The purpose of the postponement is plainly to relieve the invited guests from the feeling of reserve that might naturally be created if they appeared before the entire cabinet, including some exceedingly clever lawyers whom the coal people might not care to meet in a business way in the absence of their own legal advisors.

So the absence of the cabinet will give the president an opportunity to do just what he wants, namely, to have a good heart-to-heart talk with the operators and Mitchell, to induce them to talk to each other freely and to reason quietly and soberly and finally to agree if possible to make concessions on each side which will terminate the strike. And, at least, if this last object cannot be directly obtained, it is hoped that the foundation may be laid for an agreement in the near future, perhaps an agreement between the principals to have further meetings.

It is stated positively that the president has no assurances from either side which formed the basis of his call for this meeting. But, when Secretary Root was in New York Tuesday and the night preceding, he saw one at least of the coal presidents whose names appears in yesterday's list of invitations. Other great financial forces than Mr. Morgan, competent of exercise a tremendously powerful but secret pressure upon corporations, exist in New York, and it is surmised that with some of these the secretary, not unacquainted in a business way in that circle, may have had interviews during his visit.

President Roosevelt's proposition met a prompt response from a number of the men to whom invitations were sent. During the afternoon and evening the president received repnes to his invitations from President Mitchell of the mine workers, President Baer of the Reading railway and one or two others. Baer's prompt reply to the president's suggestion was particularly gratifying to Mr. Roosevelt, as it was believed that in all probability his acceptance will insure favorable replies from other officials who were invited. Baer has acted as the spokesman for the operators in the various statements put forth from time to time in reply to the miners' representations and it is realized that his influence will be a potent factor in any conferences that may take place.

VAN DERLIP AND COE

Receive State Prison Sentences For Embezzlement of Funds

Boston, Oct. 2.—Willard C. Van Derlip was arraigned in the superior criminal court yesterday, pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with embezzlement of $65,000 from the Lowell estate, of which he was trustee, and was given a sentence of from seven to eight years' imprisonment in state prison by Judge Aiken. Van Derlip received his sentence calmly.

Lawyer Lowell told of Van Derlip's appointment as trustee of his mother's estate; of his first suspicions, when four bonds were found to be missing; of Van Derlip's confession and how the latter had made restitution before his arrest. The defense rested their case on the fact that defandant had made restitution of property which might be of greater value than the amount named in the indictment.

Mrs. Van Derlip told the court that her husband had given up everything, leaving her, her two sons, and two daughters without any means of support. Lawyer Swasey pleaded for a light sentence, in view of the fact that defeudant is 66 years of age.

Judge Aiken said that, in imposing sentence, the court had in mind the family, the age of the defendant, and his infirmity. He then announced the sentence given above.

Henry F. Coe, who had previously been convicted of the embezzlement of $100,000 from the Bowker Fertilizer company, of which he was treasurer, was then called for sentence. The feeble old man stood grasping the railing as Judge Aiken imposed a sentence of not more than five nor less than four years in state prison, the first day to be in solitary confinement. With bowed head and faltering step, the old man was led away to the prisoners' room, where members of his family bade him a sad farewell.

Says Irish Are Not Prosperous

Boston, Oct. 2.—James Connolly, leader of the Social Republican party of Dublin, addressed an audience of 1000 people in Faneuil hall last night, and denounced John Redmond and John D. He said the Irish American people "are rapidly getting softening of the brain when they believed this story."

Petitioned Into Bankruptcy

Providence, Oct. 2.—Notices were posted yesterday by the assignees of the Gladding company, a large dry goods house here which failed recently, that a petition in bankruptcy against the company had been filed in the United States court. SEATS DENIED DEVERY

Big Chief Gets "Frost" From New York Democrats

HOLDS A MEETING OUTSIDE

Says He Will Support the Ticket and That Being Robbed of His Seats Was an Incident of the Convention —Hill Program Prevails

Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 2.—A convention so strenuous in its closing hours as to bring almost personal conflict and yet closing in such perfect harmony as to allow the completion of the state ticket with less than 100 delegates out of 450 in the hall, was the result of yesterday's closing of the Democratic state convention.

It began in the early morning with a prepared slate of candidates. The slate was not broken in any particular, but the right of objection to it was given to all the delegates except when, in the case of one New York delegate, it was believed to be an infringement of the rules under which the convention was acting. Naturally a great deal of the interest in the convention centered in the attitude it would take toward the seating of William S. Devery, former head of the police department of New York, and who held a regular certificate of election from the Ninth New York district.

It was not an unexpected event that the convention decided to unseat him. And it was not also unexpected that he and his followers, who were given ample room in the convention to make themselves conspicuous, were vociferous in their objections. Mr. Devery's attitude and that of his friends was picturesquely objectionable. So thoroughly had he made up his mind that the convention would have none of him that he did not attend the meeting of the committee on credentials. When the convention decided to adopt the report of the committee by the preponderous vote of 422 to 21, Mr. Devery walked out of the convention after being allowed to declare himself a good Democrat and proceeded to hold a mass meeting on the steps of the United States Hotel.

Perhaps the most dramatic situation during the convention was the refusal to hear the opposition that developed to Coler from the Third district of Kings and from New York city. Coler's name had been placed in nomination and the nominations closed. Nathan Straus of New York offered objections to Coler. He had hardly begun to state his objections when he was roundly hissed and finally ruled out of order. As he was about to hand his written objection to a newspaper man it was seized by a delegate and torn up. The Straus incident ended objections to the ticket, and the rest of it was nominated without any question whatever in a perfunctory manner.

The nominations are: For governor, Bird S. Coler; lieutenant governor, C. N. Bulger; comptroller, C. M. Preston; secretary of state, F. H. Mott; attorney general, J. Cunneen; engineer, R. W. Sherman; treasurer, G. R. Finch; judge court of appeals, J. C. Gray.

The platform calls for steadfast fidelity to American principles, arraigns the Republican party for lack of these; demands returns to the principles of Thomas Jefferson to stop demoralization of the country; opposes trusts that injuriously affect consumer and employer and drive out small manufacturers, and especially condemns the beef and coal trusts for unreasonably depriving the people of necessities of life. Restriction of the amassing of wealth is advocated, and the amendments of the tariff law by placing the necessities of life on the free list is demanded. The Dingley tariff law is condemned as a whole. The president is criticised for dilatory conduct and is accused of not wanting to offend the trusts.

The platform asserts that the proposition to amend the United States constitution to enable the federal government to proceed against the trusts is a mere subterfuge to get delay; condemns the neglect of the national and state administrations to enforce the Sherman law and the Donnelly state law; favors trade expansion, but objects to this country imitating England in trying to establish colonial government; condemns the action of the government in its treatment of the Philippines; demands justice for Cuba in the matter of trade by reducing the tariff to a strictly revenue basis; favors election of United States senators by direct vote,

Good Afternoon

Although showers were predicted for today, the Brockton fair caused the sky to clear.

May the conference of the presidents of the coal companies, President Mitchell of the miners, and others tomorrow be successful and prompt in its result.

A. C. Dowse of Malden, ex-President of the Massachusetts Press Association, and Manager of the New England Grocer, has been unanimously renominated for a fourth term in the Massachusetts legislature. Few members of the 1903 House of Representatives will have had a longer continuous term of service than Brother Dowse.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The days of the extravagant tip are over, at any rate, in New York. There were days when it took a bold man to tip with less than a quarter. Nowadays a ten cent tip is ample for ordinary resturant meals, while a regular tip of five cents on a luncheon is gratefully accepted, and secures the most courteous and cheerful attention day by day.—Harper's Weekly.

☞A Woburn stove dealer advertises a line of air-tight stoves. In a wood burning district no better producer of heat is known than these old-fashioned air-tight stoves. Ground bark that has served its purpose in the tannery was once a popular fuel, and could be used in an air-tight stove. If the coal scarcity continues many of these old-fashioned devices will be resorted to. Necessity is the mother of invention, and the methods adopted to heat the homes of the people the coming winter will show that the ingenuity of the Yankee has not been exhausted.—Lynn Item.

Live Wires.

Melvin W. Seelye of Quincy avenue ascended the pole at the corner of School street and Quincy avenue Wednesday morning to do some construction work. When he started down he found live wires below which imprisoned him. He was rescued by members of the fire department and police force by a rope outside the wires.

—A foghorn is to be placed in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, four feet in diameter and 12 feet long, the sound being produced by sirens. Compressed air is supplied by valves actuated by clockwork. Every two minutes the foghorn will emit a deep roar, followed ten seconds later by a sharp shriek. There are three air tanks, each six feet in diameter and 12 feet long, and three gasoline engines run compressors to fill these tanks. The plant runs automatically, and even the clock is wound by a compressed air motor.

—A Portland, Me. women reports a queer request from a tramp this week. He called at the back door and asked if she would please give him a handkerchief, as he had a bad cold. He got the family dusting cloth and went away happy.

THE NEW PASTOR.

Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Webber Given a Reception.

Wollaston Churches All Represented.

Mr. Webber Was for Many years a Newspaper Man.

The reception given at the Baptist church Wednesday evening, in honor of the Rev. Edmund D. Webber, and Mrs. Webber was a very pleasant affair and indicated the cordial relations of the society and pastor with each other and the outside community.

In spite of the bad weather quite a large number of people gathered in the church proper between eight and nine.

The reception committee stood with Mr. and Mrs. Webber in front of a beautiful bank of hydrangeas arranged in the chancel and all comers were made cordially welcome.

The committee consisted of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Pinkham, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gannett, Mr. and Mrs. Amos D. Albee and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burgess.

Mrs. Chandler Smith presided at the organ. Refreshments were served in the vestry under the supervision of Mrs. Arthur Jewell. Mrs. Jewell was assisted by the Misses Barker, Mrs. S. G. Abbott, Mrs. Edward Capen and the Misses King, Rhoades, Drew and Fenton.

Among those present were Rev. Edward A. Chase, Rev. Jesse Wagner, Rev. Henry G. Megathlin and Rev. Frank W. Pratt.

Rev. Mr. Webber is a native of Sackville, Nova Scotia. He was graduated from Arcadia college of Wolfville, N. S. After completing his studies he entered the employ of the Halifax Herald as night reporter, afterward being promoted to night editor. Later he edited papers at Pictou and Turro, N. S. He was also engaged in newspaper work at Fernandiane, Florida.

Later he retired from journalism and engaged in educational work for three years when he again entered the journalistic field, and visited all of the principal cities east of the Mississippi.

In 1899 he entered the Newton Theological Seminary and was graduated last June.

The Wollaston church is his first charge and he succeeds Rev. Preston Gurney, who resigned some months ago.

Assistant Librarian.

F. H. Lawton of Everett has been appointed assistant librarian at the B. U. College of Liberal Arts, as a successor to Prof. Sharpe, assistant in the English department, who will devote entire time to his duties.

Mr. Lawton is of B. U., 1902. He was born at Quincy in 1879. He prepared for college at Everett High, from which he was graduated in 1898. Entering B. U. in the fall of the same year, he was one of the first of his class to be chosen to Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

In his junior year he was elected president of his class. He has held the office of secretary of the historical club and president of the Y. M. C. A. On graduation he was chosen class orator. —Boston Advertiser.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Now for October Weddings.

The Brockton fair will continue through Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Luward, formerly of Wollaston, are now residing in Winchendon.

Oct. 15, is the date set for the re occupying of City Hall, which was to have been completed in August.

Nathaniel A. Thayer of Willow street Wollaston, has a position on the Big Four Railroad in Indiana.

Lawrence Loring of Willow street, has accepted a position in the Ætna Insurance Company, Boston.

It is understood that the School Committee new rooms will be located in the old street railway building.

Mr. Mullane, the popular Wollaston Park postman, has changed his route and Mr. McGowan takes his place.

The entering class at the Woodward Institute will be tendered a reception tomorrow evening by the seniors.

Odo H. Moleaner, a former Adams Academy boy, will be the guest of James Kent of Wollaston for some weeks.

Miss Lena Pfaffmann of Wollaston, former teacher in Massachusetts Fields school, is now teaching in the Brookline public school.

Frederick G. Thayer former correspondent of Quincy Daily Ledger and graduate of Thayer academy 1902, has been awarded a scholarship at Amherst college.

The Seniors of the High school will give a reception tomorrow evening to the freshmen, the class which entered the school in September. Some of the freshmen are said to fear the initiation.

A lady in going to the bank this morning dropped a chatelaine bag with quite an amount of money, which a little boy, by the name of Freddie Mitchell of 8 Cottage street, found, and soon returned to its owner.

The semi-annual convention of the Norfolk County Association of the King's Daughters and Sons will be held on Saturday, Oct. 4, at the Congregational church, East Milton. Morning session at 10, afternoon session at 2. Basket lunch.

Miss Mary B. Adams of the Wollaston Golf club won her match with Miss Cornelia G. Willis of the Morris County club for the women's championship, and will play in the second round today with Miss L. A. Wells of Brookline Country.

Extra police are on duty this week on Hancock street on account of the Brockton fair. At night, special officers are covering Hancock street its entire length. The idea is to put a stop to the nuisance some of the people make of themselves coming home from the fair in past years.

Harvest Supper.

The stormy weather did not prevent a good attendance at the harvest supper and entertainment at the Atlantic Methodist church Tuesday evening. The reader of the evening, Miss Hazel Bridgas of Malden, won the sympathy of her audience from the start, and each selection was greeted with applause. The program also included selections by Greene's orchestra and vocal solos by Mr. Samuel T. Foster of Boston.

All Roads to Brockton.

Today is the first good day that the Brockton fair has had this year, and this morning there was the usual procession of carriages and tally-ho coaches en route to Brockton. There was almost a continuous string from 9 to 12, sometimes two abreast. Quincy people went largely by train and electrics. Tomorrow the great firemen's muster will be the attraction.

Friends Unknown.

Charles F. Wilcox, the man who was arrested at Weymouth Tuesday, and who appeared to be laboring under some mental strain, was examined Wednesday. The physicians, however, found him to be all right and this morning he was allowed to depart. The Weymouth police were unable to find any trace of his friends.

The New Navy.

The Naval estimates for 1904 aggregate $82,426,030.58, and include $15,025,632 for construction and machinery, and $10,000,000 for armor and armament.

ONE STEP MORE

Will be fatal to the sleep-walker. Will he draw back or will he take the final, fatal step? A great many people are in peril like the sleep-walker. They are diseased. The disease is progressing day by day. The time comes when one more step away from health is fatal. The man who has suffered from indigestion or gastric trouble goes some night to a dinner and returns home to find he has taken that last step from health which can never be taken back.

To neglect the cure of indigestion or some other form of stomach trouble is dangerous. It is also inexcusable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It purifies the blood, stimulates the liver, cures biliousness, and eliminates bilious poisons from the system.

"The praise I would like to give your 'Golden Medical Discovery' I cannot utter in words or describe with pen," writes Jas B. Ambrose, Esq., of 1205½ Mifflin St., Huntingdon, Pa. "I was taken with what our physicians said was indigestion. I doctored with the best around here and found no relief. I wrote you, and you advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took three bottles and I felt so good that I stopped—being cured. I have no symptoms of gastric trouble or indigestion now."

If you ask your dealer for "Golden Medical Discovery" because you have confidence in its cures, do not allow yourself to be switched off to a medicine claimed to be "just as good," but which you did not ask for and of which you know nothing.

You can get the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, paper covers, free by sending 21 one-cent stamps, to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

BETTS HAS BOOKS.

Were at His House Last Sunday.

Miss Maitland Saw Them Then.

Was Star Witness Yesterday at the Trial.

Miss Lillian B. Maitland, bookkeeper for J. M. Fisher & Co., was the principal witness on Wednesday at the seventh day of the trial of Frederick E. Betts. She had charge of the books from June 1900, to Oct. 28, 1901, and testified in part:

She had examined the books since last October and had made memoranda.

When Mr. Pratt asked in reference to the name of a certain customer on the list, Mr. Moulton objected, and there was a gathering about Judge Lowell's desk.

Then after discussion, Miss Maitland, counsel, and his honor withdrew to the lobby to consult and look over the evidence.

They were absent from the court for 15 minutes, and no reference was made to the evidence offered before the recess, when the court came in. Then there was another session about the desk.

Miss Maitland was asked if she knew that H. C. Hubbard had had transactions with J. M. Fisher & Co.

She did know, and had given him a check.

She had seen numerous checks given Mr. Fisher by Mr. Betts, and had made out checks at Mr. Fisher's request, and had given some to Mr. Fisher for personal use, and these had amounted to about $5000.

Q.—Did J. M. Fisher have full opportunity to examine the books?" A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did he examine the books?" A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How frequently? A.—I cannot say. Quite frequently.

Q.—How much money was paid to J. M. Fisher between May 1, 1900, and Oct. 28, 1902? A.—About $5,000.

Q.—Was that in addition to his salary? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did he ever receive a check for over $30? A.—Yes sir, for $60.

Mr. Moulton—How often did Mr. Fisher receive a check for $60? A—Every single week.

Q.—Did you give Mr. Fisher a check for $60 every single week? A.—I did; I didn't personally.

Q.—Did you ever give him a check for $60? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How many times? A.—Ten or 15 times.

Q.—You paid Mr. Fisher whatever Mr. Betts told you, didn't you? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you ever get a check cashed, made out in Mr. Fisher's name, and give the money to Mr. Betts? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—Where are the books you kept? A.—I don't know where they are now.

Q.—Where were they the last time you saw them? A.—At Mr. Betts' house.

Q.—When was that? A.—Last Sunday.

Q.—Who got the books out of the way? A.—Mr. Drew and Mr. Aldrich.

Q.—When did you go away? A.—Nov. 13.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—To Shirley, Mass.

Q.—And staid there how long? A.—I think about six weeks.

Q.—Where did you go from there? A.—To Beachmont.

Q.—How long did you remain there? A.—I returned to Boston in April.

Q.—You knew the United States authorities wanted to talk with you? A.—Part of the time.

Q.—What salary did you receive? A.—$25 a week.

Q.—When did that stop? A.—About three weeks after I went away.

Q.—Didn't you take the books and papers at the time of the raid and put them in the water closet until the officers went away? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You were instructed not to pay money to J. M. Fisher without Mr. Betts' consent? A.—Yes, sir; not to pay money to anybody.

In cross-examination, District-Attorney Moulton brought out the fact that Miss Maitland had gone away from Boston immediately after the raid upon the Fisher-Betts concern, and remained away about six months, notwithstanding she knew she was was wanted by the United States authorities.

"Did you remain away from Boston after you knew the United States authorities wanted you?" he thundered.

"Yes, sir," replied the witness.

"And did you remain away," asked Mr. Pratt, shaking his finger, and emphasizing every word, "because of the insulting practices of those same United States authorities?"

This raised Judge Lowell's ire. "That remark is striken out," he said, with marked indignation. "'Insulting practices' is not an expression to be used here."

"I think," said Mr. Pratt, coolly, "that I have a right to use just that expression, your honor."

"You will not use it in this court," responded Judge Lowell.

Asst.-Dist.-Atty. Case remarked that if the words used by Mr. Pratt were to be allowed to stand in the records, he wanted to say a word about them.

"The remark is stricken out," replied Judge Lowell. "The jury will pay no attention to a remark of that kind. It is an utterly incompetent remark—wholly incompetent.

Mr. Pratt took his seat, protesting that he had a right to use the expression, and Judge Lowell terminated the matter very suddenly by ordering a recess for five minutes. The affair caused the most intense excitement in the court room, which was filled with spectators.

Other witnesses for the defense were J. F. Mixer of Brookline, who leased wires; Harold Winthrop, who had received $2,000 from a $500 investment; Richard B. McCann, editor of Bankers' and Manufacturers' Mercantile Agency; Herbert L. Baker, counsel for Fisher.

☞Our conclusion is that the anthracite coal monopoly does not furnish an argument for government ownership, but only an argument for the enforcement of existing law, or such amendment of existing law as shall still retain the institution of private property. The coal monopoly is not the natural outcome of the violation of laws which protect private property.—The Independent.

☞While the operation of the new Boston caucus law at the Republican primaries was not all that could be desired, the method itself is all right. The trouble is due to the carelessness and ignorance of voters and their tendency to cling to old methods. In the first place the methods adopted by the Republican City Committee on Wednesday night shut off the Democratic vote that occasionally interferes in the affairs of Republican caucuses. It raised the old-fashioned caucus to the dignity of a primary election and allowed the busy citizen as much voice in the selection of candidates as the active wire-puller. In fact the machine politician of today is as much at sea over the prospective results of the primary as any one else.—Worcester Spy.

The New Tablier Front—A Graceful Visiting Gown.

A particularly graceful visiting gown is of a soft shade of blue cloth. The yoke and the lower part of the sleeves are of buff embroidered chiffon, while the panel front of the skirt, the berthe and the extensions from the yoke to the belt are appliqued with graceful scrolls for which Corticelli silk is employed. The lower part of the skirt is ornamented with several wide tucks.

This model fully emphasizes the fact that the tablier front is to be well represented among the new gowns, not alone those intended for afternoon, but for evening wear as well. It will perhaps interest our readers to know of a recently imported skirt in which the tablier front was pre-eminent. It is cut in four divisions, each one bias and shaped to give the necessary flare. Each section is shirred to the other with tiny up-standing frills and the lower one spreads out into a very full flounce. The skirt joins the tablier at either side and the edges are finished with rosette bows of narrow black velvet ribbon, three or four strands carried from one to the other all the way down.

☞The Quincy bowling alleys on Granite street have been leased by Messrs. Ferris & Littlefield and are being thoroughly renovated and put in first class condition. In connection with the alleys will be a finely equipped Pool Room with three first-class tables. They will be opened about October 2, and announcement of opening night will be made in these columns. tf1wp

☞President John Mitchell probably occupies a higher place in the confidence of his followers and of the public at large than any other labor leader America has ever known. His power for good or evil is something tremendous. Yet this young man of a little more than 30 who has spent fourteen years of his life under-ground, pick in hand and lamp upon his cap, is not in the lest changed by his elevation to such an exalted position. The only effect it has had on him is to make him keenly, almost painfully alive to his responsibility. A man of heart and conscience he feels the burden. His daily and hourly prayer is that he may make no blunder which will bring unnecessary hardships upon his faithful followers or any advantage which properly belongs to them.—Walter Wellman.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

Americans Predominate In Ship Combine Directory

CAPITALIZED AT $120,000,000

England Will Not Discriminate In Favor of British Ships—Feeling In London That Cunard Company Has Been Treated Too Generously

New York, Oct. 2.—The following details concerning the organization of the international steamship combination were made public by J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday.

The International Navigation company, which controlled the American and Red Star lines of steamers, has changed its title to the International Mercantile Marine company, and increased its capital from $15,000,000 to $120,000,000, half of this amount being represented by preferred shares and the other half by common shares. There is also an authorized issue of $50,000,000 of 4½ percent bonds.

Mr. Griscom, head of the International Navigation company, is to be president of the combination. The new combination will embrace the American line, the Red Star line, the Leyland line, the White Star line and the Atlantic Transport line, as well as one or two other companies.

Charles Steele, who spoke for Morgan & Co. in the foregoing details, was asked about certain statements attributed to Gerald Balfour, that the new combination would be dominated by British interests. Steele said he thought that President Balfour intended to say that the subsidiary British lines would be so controlled, which he (Steele) said would be the case.

The statement that there would be no public vending or sale of the stock of the new company (those directly interested having subscribed for the entire amount) was also made by Steele.

It was intimated by Steele that an understanding had been reached with the British government by which no discrimination in favor of the British ships will be shown in matters of mails, transportation, etc. The directory is dominated by Americans, almost two to one.

Amendment of Certificate

Trenton, Oct. 2.—The ship combine was incorporated here yesterday by the filing of papers amending the certificate of incorporation of the International Navigation company, which was filed in June, 1893, with an authorized capital of $15,000,000. The amended certificate changes the name to that of the International Mercantile Marine company, with an authorized capital of $120,000,000.

Cunard Company Got Big End

London, Oct. 2.—A day's reflection appears to have convinced many people that the government has treated the Cunard Steamship company too generously, and considerable objection is crystallizing around the question whether the government has not acted over-hastily in thus departing from its traditional policy with regard to subsidies. The strongest objection is made to providing money with which to build new steamers. It is argued that so doing will form a difficult precedent, as other shipping companies are certain to demand similar privileges, which it will be found hard to refuse. It is feared also that the American and other governments will retaliate by increasing their subsidies.

The government will probably be briskly criticised when parliament reassembles, especially for deciding such a momentous question before the parliamentary committee, which is now considering the matter of subsidies, has made its report.

It is understood that the negotiations were conducted by Gerald W. Balfour, president of the Board of Trade; the Earl of Selborne, first lord of the admiralty, and the colonial office and, according to The Daily Chronicle this morning, the agreement with J. P. Morgan was only completed since the heads of the Atlantic shipping combine foregathered in New York city.

One shipping critic points out that there is nothing in the government's agreement with the Cunard company to prevent a working arrangement between the Cunard company and the Morgan combine. It is everywhere conceded that the Cunard company has made a good bargain, all other subsidies, to the Peninsular and Oriental and other steamship lines, being upon a small scale and less than $10,000 per vessel.

Monument to Martyr's Mother

Lincoln City, Ind., Oct. 2.—A monument to Nancy Hanks Lincoln was dedicated here yesterday. The stone for the monument was taken from the old base of the Abraham Lincoln monument at Springfield, Ills. General Black delivered the oration and Governor Durbin accepted the monument.

London, Oct. 2.—In a dispatch from Vienna, in which he refers to the Macedonian revolt, the correspondent of The Daily Express reports that Albanians have murdered the Russian consul at Uskub, European Turkey.

Police Chief Received Bribe

Minneapolis, Oct. 2.—The jury has returned a verdict convicting ex-Chief of Police Frederick W. Ames of receiving a bribe.

DISGRACE TO YALE

Misdeed of Students Results In a Pitched Battle With Police

New Haven, Oct. 2.—Yale students assaulted policemen and created a general disturbance last night that finally involved a squad of policemen in a pitched battle with them. Three of the students in the crowd were placed under arrest with much difficulty, their friends endeavoring by main force to wrest them from the officers. The men under arrest gave the names of Kay, Hamilton and Carpenter. They range in age from 17 to 19 years. They were released on bonds at midnight.

The trouble started when a party of students took possession of a truck wagon. They drove the horses at breakneck speed through the streets after putting the driver off. There were about 40 men upon the wagon and clinging to the sides. All were boisterous and some of them evidently intoxicated. The driver told Police Sergeant Crocker what the students had done.

Crocker began to take the students off. He intended merely to restore the team to the driver. The students struck and knocked Crocker down and his cheek was cut and his eye blackened. He was left on the sidewalk dazed.

Other policemen came to his rescue. Up Church street to the green a running fight was kept up with the officers. The students surged about the police and fought the officers, who had hard work to defend themselves. They were hemmed in too closely to use their clubs and were beaten with fists and clubs by the students. For half an hour after the arrests a throng of students surrounded the station house. Some tried to force an entrance and the doors had to be locked. The men arrested will be arraigned on the charge of breach of the peace.

Wrangling Over the Dead

Paris, Oct. 2.—Nationalist, anti-Semitic and clerical newspapers express great indignation that M. Zola, as a member of the Legion of Honor, should be buried with military honors and that the government is to be represented at his funeral. The Soleil says: "Zola died from carbonic gas; his Socialist friends propose to asphyxiate all of Paris next Sunday." The Gaulois says: "Next Sunday we will witness the apotheosis of Social revolution. Everything is to be feared from the collision which seems imminent between the favorites of the government and their victims."

Professional Grave Robbing

Indianapolis, Oct. 2.—Disclosures are predicted which will show that Rufus Cantrell and his gang, now in custody for grave robbery, are not the only ones who have been robbing graves in and around Indianapolis to supply the medical colleges of this and other cities in the west. Hardly a city or town in the gas belt has escaped the depredations of these grave robbers. This is an admission of Cantrell and he says that local colleges have procured many bodies from these parties.

Alleged American Crooks

London, Oct. 2.—A stylish American woman giving the name of Rachel Hurd was arrested yesterday on the charge of being an accomplice of Henry Conrad of Baltimore, who was committed for trial, charged with attempting to secure a wax impression of the key of a postoffice box near the stock exchange. She had $2000 in gold in her pocket. Bail for each was fixed at $5000. They have not yet found persons willing to furnish bail for them.

Millionaire Sues For $50,000

Trenton, Oct. 2.—Suit was started here yesterday by Joseph Hughes against Felix Warburg for $50,000 damages. Both are wealthy New Yorkers. Hughes' horse was killed and Hughes himself was injured by being thrown from his carriage. The horse was frightened by Warburg's automobile. Hughes was the organizer of the Continental Tobacco company and has made $200,000 a year for the past five years.

No Blockade at Port de Paix

Washington, Oct. 2.—The state department has been informed that the blockade decree issued on Sept. 18 by the provisional government of Hayti does not apply to Port de Paix. It was at this point that the interests of an American fruit company were reported to have been threatened.

President Continues to Gain

Washington, Oct. 2.—The president's injured leg continues to improve and his condition is satisfactory, according to the report given out at the temporary White House. He keeps in good spirits.

M'CULLOUGH ELECTED

Ballot by Vermont Legislature Left Competitors Far Behind

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 2.—A summer and autumn of political strife over the question of the choice of governor came to an end yesterday when the legislature of Vermont elected John G. McCullough as chief executive of the state. He had the support of 164 members of the convention. Percival W. Clement, the local option candidate, received 59 votes, and Felix W. McGettrick, the Democratic candidate, 45. Z. S. Stanton (Rep.) was elected lieutenant governor.

When the result of the ballots had been made known, a committee was appointed to notify Mr. McCullough of his election, and the joint assembly was dissolved.

Rhode Island Democrats' Ticket

Providence, Oct. 2.—The Democrats of this state made memorable their state convention here yesterday by a harmonious display of enthusiasm not equalled in 10 years, the potent factor at issue being the contest for the gubernatorial nomination, which was won by L. F. C. Garvin of Cumberland over J. J. Fitzgerald of Pawtucket. Garvin won by a majority of 18 votes, he receiving 119 to 101 for Fitzgerald. The rest of the state ticket is as follows: Lieutenant governor, A. Archambault; secretary of state, F. E. Fitzsimmons; attorney general, D. J. Holland; general treasurer, C. Potter.

Terrible Tragedy Revealed

New York, Oct. 2.—The body of Jennie Larsen, a Danish woman, 20 years old, was found in the apartment of Louis Applerod, 53 years old, in Harlem yesterday. She had been dead for days and the body was mutilated and much decomposed. Despite the gas and stench which first revealed the tragedy, Applerod, in a dazed mental condition, was in the room when it was entered by the police. The young woman was Applerod's niece. Police officials say that Applerod has convicted himself of the murder and that there is a complete case against him.

Misunderstood by British

Berlin, Oct. 2.—Ministerial circles are astonished at the anti-German expressions in the British press in connection with the application of the Boer generals to be received by Emperor William. His majesty intended to have given the generals some good advice, tending to promote harmonious relations between the Boers and British. Since, however, Emperor William's object is wholly misunderstood in England, it is said that the generals will not be received by his majesty unless the British government approves of it.

New Factor In Politics

Chicago, Oct. 2.—With the meeting of the National Republican league here today was set in motion a new force in state and national politics. The purpose of the promoters will be to build up a working organization to advocate Republican principles instead of the almost purely social body which has existed heretofore. President Hamilton says that the national and congressional committees are asking the aid of the league in their work, and he is confident it will be a prominent factor in national campaigns.

Democrats Had an Easy Time

Atlanta, Oct. 2.—The election for governor and state officials held throughout this state yesterday passed off quietly, no organized opposition having been made against the Democratic ticket, which was elected in full, as follows: Governor, J. M. Terrell; secretary of state, P. Cook; comptroller general, W. A. Wright; attorney general, J. C. Hart; treasurer, R. E. Park; associate justices supreme court, S. Lampkin, A. J. Cobb and J. S. Candler.

Miles Starts on Long Trip

San Francisco, Oct. 2.—Previous to his departure for Manila yesterday, General Miles received an invitation to complete the tour of the world. J. J. Barry, who is in charge of the Asiatic company's business here, says that in accordance with instructions received by him, he furnished General Miles all the information possible regarding the route and he thinks that the head of the army will traverse the new line across Siberia on his way home.

The Stratton Will Contest

Colorado Springs, Col., Oct. 2.—Judge Gunnell, counsel for W. S. Stratton's heir, authorizes the statement that an offer of a compromise has been made by one of the executors. The counsel for the executors, however, insists that nothing of the kind can be done unless the executors wish to pledge to young Stratton a portion of their own fees.

Bay State Republicans Enter Upon the Campaign

BATES AND GUILD NAMED

To Head the Ticket, Which Is Chosen by Acclamation—Chairman Long Discusses National Affairs and Says There Is No Issue Before Voters

Boston, Oct. 3.—The Republican state convention was held in the Boston theatre today and it was one of the most harmonious and pleasant gatherings in the history of the party. Such differences as may have existed in the preliminary period have been adjusted.

The following nominations were made by acclamation:

For governor—John L. Bates.

Lieutenant governor—Curtis Guild, Jr.

Secretary of commonwealth—William M. Olin.

Auditor—Henry E. Turner.

Treasurer and receiver general—Edward S. Bradford.

Attorney general—Herbert Parker.

JOHN L. BATES.

Hon. John D. Long, fresh from the cabinet of President Roosevelt, presided. He said:

"This is our annual pilgrimage. Here we renew our faith, and hence we go with a new inspiration of patriotism. The associations of the past are a sacred atmosphere. Brave men and true, who so many years led the fight for freedom and for the people's welfare and good government, are with us again. We clasp hands with the guiding sons of Massachusetts who have made her what she is in herself and in that national diadem in which she shines so illustrious a jewel. Let us rise in all our public and political relations above the meaner things of partisanship to the high ideals which, if not always within their reach or ours, were always their aim and should be ours.

"Our duty today is especially simple. Few words are necessary. The spirit of unanimity is upon us, and it is the spirit of the commonwealth. That duty is to nominate for governor one who, by personal character and by long and faithful discharge of duty in the public service, is especially well fitted for that post. One, too, who will carry on the policy of his predecessors, who has so signally commanded the confidence of all our people.

"Also to associate with him the brilliant and prepossessing scholar soldier and man of affairs, whose title to that honor everybody acknowledges.

"Also to renominate the heads of the four departments, who, by good service, have earned the blessing, 'Well done, good and faithful servants. You have been faithful over the trust—if one may dare to use that word—which we committed to your hands. Enter ye into the joy of another term.'

Mr. Long said he did not need to glorify the Republican party for party's sake, as its history is the glorious history of the last half century of the republic. Neither did he intend to attack the Democratic brethren, who number among them many able and honest men.

Mr. Long said the lesson of political parties is poorly learned if it be merely a lesson of personal frictions and partisan triumphs and the hunt for place. It should be a lesson of wise policy for the development and prosperity and honor of our beloved country, and in that way an unerring guide for the future.

"So swift if the oblivion which hides a personality that few remember many, even of the leading names connected with the last Democratic administration, but nobody forgets that its four years were years of the lean kine and the thin ears, of hard times and low wages, of mills closed, of capital alarmed, of reduced employment, of the old story of collapse so true and so often told. And yet the men to whom the policy that brought this result was due were honest men, and the republic was able to endure their government—for their allotted term. But not longer. Then came the policy of the Republican party. Then came McKinley. As if by magic, as if it were a flood of sunshine, came the most prosperous years the country has known. They have not put a silver spoon in everybody's mouth, but what an improvement, and who would set it back?"

Mr. Long paid a glowing tribute to President Roosevelt and the national administration. Government is not, he said, in its ultimate analysis, politics. "It is the running of the machinery of the business of the people on the lines which centre in the various departments. Was the work, taking into consideration its tremendous increase and making allowance for human imperfections, ever done better than today?

CURTIS GUILD, JR.

"If, then, there is not, as I am sure there is not, a demand for change in the men at the head, what is the issue? Is it the prosperity of the country? It was never greater. Is it the civil service? It was never so clean, nor was there ever a time when president and members of departments were so thoroughly in sympathy with its freedom from favoritism. Is it labor? What chief magistrate was ever more in sympathy with labor or when was labor—though none of us ever gets all he wants—ever better employed or better paid or its just demands more heeded? Is it finance? But all questions under this head were settled six years ago, when the attractive orator who stood for every financial frenzy was defeated for the presidency.

"Is it the tariff? That, too, is a settled question. The American people have decided in favor of laying tariff duties in such a way as to encourage, protect and develop American industries and labor; the opposite principle of a tariff for revenue only is no longer an American principle. An adequate tariff for protection incident to revenue has always been followed by industrial prosperity and the violation of this rule by industrial depression.

"Is it the issue of trusts? Then point, if you can, to a more earnest, honest and unceasing effort than that of the administration of President Roosevelt to deal with this question. If the outcry against trusts means an attack upon all aggregations of capital, then it is an idle and unreasonable outcry, because it is impossible to accomplish the great works and enterprises of the present time in the interest of the people at large except by accumulated capital, just as it is necessary also to accumulate labor, and both have similar rights and responsibilities in this respect.

"Is the issue our colonial system? Is it imperialism? It might have been six months ago, but imperialism is now past history. If this is the issue, we point to our own Charles H. Allen, governor of Porto Rico, transforming that island in 14 months into a paradise of good government and public freedom, which, when he left it, found its parallel only in the states of our union. Our imperialists, Governor Allen and General Wood of Cuba and Judge Taft in the Philippines—beneficent names that are immortalized in the islands and in the very hearts of the people of those islands. Yes, imperialism is a past issue. It never existed. It was a spook.

"Shall the flag come down? Yes, we answer, if it stands only for military occupation and subjugation. No, will answer the Filipinos if it shall stand for American influence, ideas, laws and institutions and American assimilation.

"We have made the individual Filipino personally more independent than if his islands, incapable at present of a Republican form of government by his own people, who are as yet unequal to such a task, were left to nominal independence to themselves and to the local and unstable government of the various forces or factions among them that might be strongest for the time being. We have done more to make the Philippines free and to insure their ultimate self-governing independence than immediate independence, so called, would have given them. And we will even do better by them yet.

'If, then, there is no issue in this campaign, how will it do, as a matter of good common sense, to let well enough alone, and to that end elect our Republican ticket this fall and our national Republican ticket two years hence. We will do it. Rather, the people will do it."

Points in the platform are: Deprecation of the coal strike and approval of the methods adopted by President Roosevelt and Governor Crane to end the coal famine; revision of the tariff as indicated by President Roosevelt, who suggested recently the appointment of a commission of five to consider the matter; reciprocity with Cuba, but not with Canada; endorsement of President Roosevelt's administration; approval of the policy now being pursued in the Philippines by the army, navy and the civil government; approval of Governor Crane's three years' administration; reiteration of the policy of a protective tariff for American industries.

THE PRESIDENT'S VOICE

Will Have Great Weight at Today's Conference

A SETTLEMENT EXPECTED

Chief Executive Will Point Out That, Regardless of Merits of the Controversy, It Is Time to End Strike In the Name of Humanity

Washington, Oct. 3.—It has been decided that Attorney General Knox shall attend the conference today between the president, the coal operators and Mr. Mitchell of the Miners' union. He will be the only member of the cabinet who will be present. Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, who recently made an investigation of the strike situation, also will attend on the invitation of the president.

While everyone connected with the administration is extremely reticent concerning the conference, there is a feeling of hope among those close to the president that it is going to result in a settlement of the strike. This hope is based on the acuteness of the situation and the necessity that exists for a settlement, along with the known determination of the president to bring about a settlement of the great labor controversy if such a thing be possible.

The president may begin the proceedings by making an informal but very straightforward statement of the reasons which compelled him to ask the coal presidents and the president of the United Mine Workers to come to Washington. He will say that, without regard to the merits of the controversy, it is time that something should be done to relieve the coal famine which now threatens general distress and perhaps industrial paralysis and social upheaval. He will appeal to them in the name of humanity to use all the power and influence which they may possess toward opening the mines. After he has made this statement it is expected that the coal operators and Mr. Mitchell will have something to say. Unless the president is disappointed, the meeting will not break up until some proposal has been made looking to an adjustment of differences and the reopening of the mines.

President Roosevelt has considered thoroughly the idea—which has been somewhat widely expressed—that the mere fact that the President of the United States is the cause of bringing the men together in conference does not insure success for the meeting. The president will, therefore, seek to be a positive personal force in the effort begun by him to bring about a settlement of the strike. It is his hope that the appeal which he has prepared will be accepted by the people at large as such a strong, common sense statement of the case that public opinion will force the operators and miners to come together. The president has considered fully the chances of failure, and he is not worried about that possibility, so far as any consequences personal to himself are concerned. Whether he succeeds or fails, he is willing to make the undertaking, in the belief that public opinion will give him the credit of doing the best he could within his limited power in the premises.

Non-Union Man Killed

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 3.—It is now almost certain that John Mullen, the non-union man who was run over by a trolley car at Smithville Wednesday night, was stunned or killed and then placed on the track. His own razor with blood on the blade was found near the spot and no cuts that a razor could have made was to be found on the body. It is supposed he was attacked and drew the razor to defend himself. Coroner Berge says positively it was a case of murder.

What Quay Said

Philadelphia, Oct. 3.—United States Senator Quay arrived here from Washington yesterday. He said he saw the president about several matters and during the interview the coal strike was alluded to. "I told the president," the senator said, "that I had had some experience in the strike field, and that he would find some very stubborn gentlemen when he got them together."

Tennessee Mines Wrecked

Tracy City, Tenn., Oct. 3.—The strike situation here seems to be growing worse. All the private mine operators have been asked to stop shipping coal and as some failed to do so their mines were wrecked and rendered useless. The miners at Clause Hill are out and no coal is being shipped over the Tracy City branch road.

An Unpleasant Surprise

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 3.—A crowd of strikers at Throop last night attacked a train going to the Pancoast colliery, which they supposed contained nonunionists, but which, in fact, had aboard two companies of soldiers. The train was stopped, the soldiers piled out and captured eight of the mob, all foreigners.

Drift of Opinion.

☞It is easy to understand how the automobile helps the good roads movement. Farmers cannot but observe that the better they make the roads the faster the automobiles go, and the bigger these are. If there is one thing a farmer enjoys more keenly than another it is hauling his crop to market over a road where he is likely any minute to meet an automobile weighing about eighty tons and going, say, a hundred miles an hour.—Life.

☞When the school board considers the question of raising teachers' salaries, it should begin with the hard worked class who at present receives the least. They are the ones who give instruction to the largest number of pupils. Capable and faithful—the layers of the foundation stones of the educational fabric—they have been too long overlooked. If there is not money for raising the salaries of all, let theirs be raised first.—Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.

☞No religion can maintain itself without cultivating in men a sense of responsibility. Christianity is peremptory in its demands upon the individual. With respect to questions of duty it permits no evasion, it accepts no excuse. There are multitudes of irresponsible people in society, but they are not Christians. The great need of the day is not more railroads, or currency, or even school buildings, but the cultivation of a general sense of religious responsibility among all classes. Each man is responsible is a measure for religion, both in his own soul and in the community, and no amount of theoretical sophistry or practical heedlessness can disguise or destroy that fact.—Zion's Herald.

☞Father Scully of Cambridge Mass., has recently died, and has been buried with honors by his fellow citizens, both Catholic and Protestant. While he was faithful to his own ideal of the church and its relation to education, fighting the battle for the parochial school with energy and enthusiam, he always respected the rights of his Protestant fellow citizens, and co-operated with them in all public affairs, to such an extent that some were even inclined to describe him as the first citizen of Cambridge. He was one of the leaders in the no-license movement which drove all the saloons out of the neighborhood of Harvard college, and made it necessary for the students who desired the indulgence which the saloon furnished to seek it elsewhere. By his freedom and charity in his dealings with his Protestant fellow citizens, Father Scully did more to build up his own church than a dozen members of the priesthood of the kind who stand on their dignity as members of "the Church" and refuse to have dealings with Protestants. He was a great-hearted, good man and was a living witness to the power of religion to serve the cause of good citizenship.—Christian Register.

PASTOR AND WIFE.

Given a Reception at Quincy Point.

On Return From Their Honeymoon.

The Church People Present a Purse of Gold.

Rev. Leon H. Austin and his bride were given a reception by the parishioners of the Washington Street Congregational church Thursday evening.

The reception which was held in the church vestry was in charge of the Ladies' Aid Society. The vestry and ladies' parlor were profusely decorated with potted plants, palms, ferns and cut flowers and looked very pretty.

Rev. and Mrs. Austin received in the ladies' parlor, and were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Sherburne.

The guests were presented by Mr. Arthur Foster, Mr. Frank Foster, Mr. Frank H. Newcomb, Mr. Daniel Scouler and Mr. Marcus S. Wight.

After the guests had been presented, refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. J. A. Lapham and Mrs. R. H. Newcomb assisted by Miss Ethel Kittredge, Miss Minnie Wight, Miss Grace Lapham, Miss Beatrice Adams, Miss Estelle Tirrell, Miss Gertrude Foster and Miss Theo Crane.

During the evening Rev. Edwin N. Hardy of Bethany church made a brief address, and Thomas B. Pollard presented the couple in behalf of the church people a purse of money.

Rev. Mr. Austin responded thanking them one and all for their most generous gift. The affair was one of the most enjoyable held at the church.

Hebrew New Year.

The Hebrews of Quincy are celebrating the beginning of the Jewish year 5663 at Hancock hall. This day is known as the Feast of the Trumpets, being ordained in Numbers, chapter 19, verses 1 and 2. Business of all kinds has been suspended and while some attended services at the Boston synagogues a larger part of those living in Quincy attended worship at Hancock hall Thursday and today.

—Before 1833, when wooden matches with phosphorus were made in Vienna, people were dependent upon flint and steel to secure a light. For many years people refused to use them, but by 1845 the ill-smelling and clumsy old tinder boxes were generally discarded.

All Humors

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs can not take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them.

They litter the whole system.

Pimples, boils, eczema and other eruptions, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, bilious turns, fits of indigestion, dull headaches and many other troubles are due to them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove all humors, overcome all their effects, strengthen, tone and invigorate the whole system.

"I had salt rheum on my hands so that I could not work. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it drove out the humor. I continued its use till the sores disappeared." MRS. IRA O. BROWN, Rumford Falls, Me.

Herbert T. Drake's bay mare Autograph secured the blue ribbon in the class for roadsters at the Brockton fair this week. She is five years old and stands 15 hands high.

The County Commissioners will give a hearing at Quincy, Oct. 25, on the petition to widen the bridge and approaches connected with the Hancock street bridge over the railroad near the Atlantic station.

Helped Themselves.

It is not safe to leave coal and wood about this fall unless it is well guarded or under lock and key. If it is left out do not be surprised if the next morning it is gone. The Quincy Quarry Co. started in one day this week to tear down one of its old blacksmith shops. As the wood was well seasoned it was decided to save it for use in starting fires this winter. The men were not able to complete the job the first day and left part of the building standing.

That night kind neighbors took a hand, and the next morning there was little more than a few nails left of the building.

This company also owns quite a tract of woodland, and every night the merry sound of the woodman's axe can be heard in those woods. The axe, however, is not in the hands of men employed by the company, but by men who are seeking to lay in their winter's supply of wood without cost to themselves.

As they have no way of protecting their property the company will put on a gang of men and cut the wood themselves.

Soft Coal at $5.

The Old Colony street railway posted a notice in the employes' room at the car barn on Thursday that made the men happy. The notice was that during the present strike the company would supply its married men with soft coal at cost which is a little over $5.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

CHARGES TODAY.

And the Case of F. E. Betts Goes to the Jury.

Little was done Thursday at the trial of Frederick E. Betts. The defence was anxious that Harry F. Curtis of Curtis & Sederquist should testify, to prove that J. M. Fisher & Co. had a wire to New York, but he and his partner kept out of the way. All efforts to locate them were unsuccessful.

H. A. Worthen, the cashier of Curtis & Sederquist, testified for the defence, who also recalled Miss Maitland the bookkeeper.

This morning the arguments were made and the case will go to the jury today.

When the jury report sentence will probably be passed on J. M. Fisher, who plead guilty.

October Magazines.

Country Life in America for October superbly illustrates the varied out-door pursuits of the best month of all the year. Among the leading features, "Yachting—A Personal Experience," is written by Thomas Dixon, Jr., about life on an eighty-foot schooner-yacht in Southern waters, which he found cost less than living ashore; "The Upbuilding of a Golf Course" considers conditions necessary for the best courses and "Grapes on a Suburban House Lot" deals with varieties of prize fruit. The country estate feature this month is the seat of Anson Phelps Stokes on Stockbridge Mountain, in the Berkshires, near Lenox. Many small articles deal with timely subjects, from the care of flowers and the making of a window garden to hunting, birds, and nature study of the month.

The leading article in the October New England Magazine is one in the series about educational institutions which have been recently appearing in its pages and presents a complete, illustrated, up-to-date history of "The Massachusetts Institute of Technology," by James Phinney Munroe, one of its more than two thousand living graduates. The illustrations and article show in an interesting manner how far ahead of his times the founder, Rogers, was, and the successful growth from the smallest of beginnings through the most trying times, is a living monument to him and the splendid men who followed him as president, Runkle, Walker, Crafts and Pritchard.

The World's Work for October comprises a wide range of interesting subjects and fine illustrations. The relations of labor and capital are given a prominent place by M. G. Cunniff's second article on labor unions - this one concerning "Union Restriction of Industry," a description of the life of a coal miner by Rev. John McDowell, who was a miner himself until he was badly hurt, and a discussion by George Maxwell of whether a fixed wage is just or not. There are four strikingly illustrated articles on varied and timely subjects: "Americans in the Raw," by Edward Lowry, made up of stories of the immigrants who crowd their way to America for fortunes: "Ocean Steamships," by Lawrence Perry, a most complete story of how great steamship lines are operated; "A Day's Work in a New York Public School," by William McAndrew, the new principal of the Girls' Technical High School, New York, and the personal story of the "Making of a Real Home," by Thomas Dixon, Jr.

Perhaps the most interesting character in the story of the American Revolution is Alexander Hamilton. A study of the man, his characteristics and guiding motives, was prepared by John Fiske before his death, and appears as the leading article in the October Cosmopolitan. No paper could illustrate more clearly the difficulties through which the American Union had to pass on its way to the excellence already attained and the perfection which it must ultimately reach.

By far the most striking feature of the October McClure's is John La Farges's study of Velasquez, which is richly illustrated with tinted reproductions of that artist's work. The other contents include a portrait-illustrated article by Ralph M. Easley upon "What Organized Labor has Learned," a study by A. C. Post of Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, a paper by Clara Morris on Rachael, a continuation of Miss Stone's account of her life among the brigands, and short stories by Eugene Manlove Rhoades, H. R. Martin and Dr. Henry C. Rowland, Booth Tarkington's serial, "The Two Van revels," continues.

Lippincott's magazine for October contains a complete novel and many short stories. The novel by Mary Moss, is entitled "Fruit Out of Season." It is fresh, clever and witty, and the reader is bound to ask himself, "Should Virginia Dryden, of thirty, have acted differently?" or, "Did Jack McCall, of twenty-one, make a fool of himself?" Some of us have known similar cases and can draw inferences. Miss Moss has a happy way of plunging into the story she has to tell at the first page, without a tiresome introduction, and the interest thus caught is held unbroken to the last word.

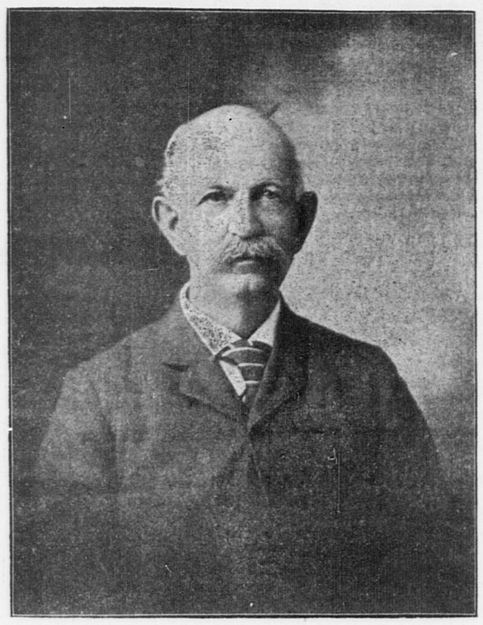
REPUBLICAN INDEPENDENT.

Marshal P. Wright, of Quincy, Endorsed for Reelection as County Commissioner for Three Years.



Nomination papers were filed at the State House today, giving Marshall P. Wright of Quincy a "Republican Independent" endorsement as well as the regular Democratic nomination for County Commissioner.

The paper was signed by the requisite number of voters in Norfolk county, mostly Republicans, and largely voters of the city of Quincy.

There was considerable delay on the part of the Board of Registrars of Quincy in certifying to the names on papers which were filed with them some time ago. Many names were thrown out on technicalities because they did not agree absolutely with the voting lists in residence, street and number, although known to be voters of the ward; like Henry M. Faxon, John Hall and others.

At the request of Mr. Wright, his name will be printed on the ballots with nominations as follows:—Republican Independent Democratic."

The Republican convention will be tomorrow.

Cost of Battleships.

The bids for the construction of the new battleship Louisiana were opened in Washington, Wednesday, and were, as usual, taken under advisement by the department that will announce later the firm that has been awarded the contract. According to the report the lowest price made by any of the bidders was $3,990,000. This goes to show how from year to year the cost of building warships increases. For instance, the cost of the Oregon was about $3,223,000, so the new warship will cost more than three-quarters of a million more than did the ship which Admiral Melville christened the Constitution of the present generation.

"Of course, the Louisiana will be a more powerful battleship than the Oregon, but she will cost the government considerably more to build and a great deal more to run. Her coal consumption will be greater, and while the Oregon carried less than 500 men all told, the new battleship will require over 700 men all told, thus increasing materially the labor expense of running the ship. When will a limit be reached in these naval expenditures, which now show a decided tendency to advance fully as fast as the increased strength of the ship on paper?—Herald.

Reception to State Officials.

About twenty-five Quincy Republicans attended the reception of the Republican State Committee at the American House, Boston, Thursday evening to the State officials and Congressmen.

In the receiving party were Gov. Crane, Lieut. Gov. Bates, State Auditor Turner, Attorney General Parker, Senator Lodge, Gen. Curtis Guild, Jr., and Congressmen Green, Lovering, Roberts, Gillette and Tirrell. The attendance was much larger than expected for a year without contest in the State ticket and for over an hour there was a continuous line of gentlemen who shook hands with the receiving party.

Major Briggs was chairman of the reception committee and had thirty to forty assistants, including one from Quincy. An orchestra furnished inspiring music, and all in all there was considerable interest taken.

☞Tuesday was stormy and opening night of Professor Kaplan's dancing school was postponed until next Tuesday. Private lessons may be arranged at any time.

Miss Adams Lost.

Miss Wells and Miss M. B. Adams of the Wollaston Club had a fierce contest right up to the last green, where Miss Wells won in the second round for the Women's golf championship, says the Boston Advertiser. At one time, Miss Adams had the match apparently secure, 3 up and 4 to play, but the Country Club player took the next four holes, solely by terrific driving.

The keen rivalry between the two players, which dates from the last Boston championship tournament, made their match one of the bitterest of the morning. Miss Adams started off in the lead, and although Miss Wells squared matters two or three times, Miss Adams again obtained a lead of 2 up on the 12th hole. Going to this hole Miss Wells drove into a bunker, and on the 13th, over-putting lost her the hole. The 14th was halved; the 14th looked like Miss Well until Miss Adams ran down a long put for a half.

It looked as if the Country Club player could not win, but Miss Adams began to weaken, getting little distance on any of her shots, and being strangely uncertain on the green. Going to the 17th Miss Wells drove out of bounds on her second, but Miss Adams gave her the hole by missing a foot put. The 18th should have also been easy for the Wollaston player, as Miss Wells drove behind a tree. Although out in good shape, she sliced her third into the barnyard.

In the meantime, although keeping perfectly straight, Miss Adams was getting but little distance, and got to the green in one more stroke than the Country Club player. Miss Wells had no difficulty in winning the hole and match 1 up.

Haynes Sentenced.

Judge Aiken in the Suffolk superior criminal court, imposed but one sentence Thursday. It was in the case of George Haynes, charged with maintaining a disorderly house at 9 Emmet street, South Boston.

Among the witnesses was the Catholic clergymen in charge of the parish.

The defense claims that Haynes was at work in Quincy, and was, therefore, not responsible for actions committed during his absence, but his honor found no reason to change the sentence of the lower court, that sentenced Haynes to three months in the house of correction.

I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

A SHARP ARRAIGNMENT

Of Trusts "Which Dazzle the Speculative World"

NINE OUT OF TEN ARE BOGUS

Senator Dolliver Says Even the Most Solvent and Best Managed of Trusts Must Eventually Collapse—Many Have Already Fallen Before Justice

Chicago, Oct. 3.—The "Iowa idea" came to the surface last night at a mass meeting under the auspices of the National League of Republican clubs, which met in annual convention here yesterday. United States Senator Dolliver of Iowa was responsible. Interest became intense when it was realized by those present that they were being treated to the first public speech on the subject by a national leader of the party since the Iowa Republican state convention. Mr. Dolliver said in part:

"Let us look at the Iowa idea for a minute, and I select that, only because I am more familiar with it, and because circumstances have arisen to give it a universal advertisement. It has been presented to the country as the sudden impulse of dissatisfied mischief-makers within the Republican party. On the other hand, it is the mature judgment of a man whose wisdom has never failed the Republican party in the 40 years of his interrupted public service.

"Our people recognize the value of a large capital for the transaction of a great business and especially for the commercial conquests upon which we are now entering. But they recognize also the danger of abuses, both in the organization and management of great industrial enterprises, and would have the government of the United States stand between the community and the reckless perversion of the beneficent law of corporate property.

"It is evident that, even if it were desirable to kill the trusts, it could not be done by merely remitting the duties which their foreign competitors pay at our custom houses. A successful attempt to repal the law of competition in the American market place would be speedily fatal to the protective tariff system.

"'Protection, in the perfection of its design, as described by Mr. Hamilton, does not invite competition from abroad,' says Mr. Blaine in his famous chapter on the tariff question in its relation to the political revolution of 1860, in 'Twenty Years of Congress,' 'but is based on the controlling principle that competition at home will always prevent monopoly on the part of the capitalist, assure good wages to the laborer and defend the consumer against the evils of extortion.'

"That principle, which never failed to justify the doctrine of protection in any period of the past, is today passing through an ordeal hardly even anticipated when the tariff law of 1897 was placed upon the statute books. We know that the trusts are 185 in number and represent the consolidation of 2400 separate plants. We know that less than 10 percent of the factory labor of the country is employed by them, and only 14 percent of our manufactured output is made by them and, leaving out chemicals and the products of iron and steel, the percentage is hardly visible to the naked eye. In the textile industries they are almost unknown, and most of the other fields of American production they have entered as mere intruders and disturbers of the peace.

"Between 1890 and 1901 most of them have been established, and, in the aggregate, counting all kinds of stocks and all kinds of bonds which they have issued, their gross capitalization has been $6,500,000,000, from which at least $2,000,000,000 should be deducted to cover spurious stock, which represents nothing except the swindling projects of adventurers and cheats at common law. So that, putting all the consolidations which have been effected in the last 12 years together, $4,500,000,000 may be set down as their true aggregate capitalization, including their bonds. These corporations have enlarged our productive capacity by the addition of new bonafide capital in a degree hardly noticeable. They have merely undertaken to dazzle the speculative world by playing upon the popular fancy for full page advertisemnts. And in nearly every one of them the motive of the organization has been mainly to shield capital already invested from the operation of natural forces always present in the commercial world.

"Before anybody makes up his mind that the so-called American trust is a permanent institution, let him consider the long list of ambitious combinations which have already had their affairs would up by the courts of justice. The alcohol trust, the linseed oil trust, the alkali trust, the asphalt trust, the bicycle trust, and scores of others whose very names are now even forgotten.

"What was the matter with these astonishing creations of the promoters' art? Nine out of 10 of them were bogus and, without stretching the law very much, could have been denied the use of the mails on an ordinary fraud order. Only yesterday one of the mammoth establishments, the National Salt company, had a little business before a court of equity in New Jersey. The organization of that trust in 1889 was looked upon everywhere as a step in the direction of monopolizing the necessaries of life.

"The more I examine the old law of competition, the better it looks to me. If the day of settlement has already come to so many of these once formidable institutions, how has it fared with those which have so far survived the test? Already the evidence is accumulating from which the doom of the trusts can be foretold, even the most solvent and best managed of them all. The figures of the census show that neither in the mercantile nor the manufacturing world has the small dealer, who owns his business and gives it his personal attention, anything to fear in competition with the overgrown and top-heavy investments of capital that surround him.

"There is no room in this discussion for vain exclamations of alarm and despair. Up to this time the tariff policy to which we owe the prosperous conditions which now surround us has been the ally of independent capital in its grapple with the modern trust system; but if the day should ever come when the productive energies of the American people are impotent in the presence of monopoly, the protection which for more than a generation our laws have given to all our industries alike is not likely to remain to enrich such a conspiracy of avarice and greed."

PERSISTENT INCENDIARY

Evidently Objects to Greenfield's Possession of a High School

Greenfield, Mass., Oct. 3.—It is evident that some one has a grudge of some kind against the Greenfield high school, as a second attempt was made late last night to burn its quarters in the old high school building. The fire was discovered in time to prevent serious damage.

On Sept. 1 the new high school building, which cost $40,000, was destroyed by an incendiary fire. The school then was temporarily accommodated in Grinnell hall until a few days ago, when the school was removed to the old high school building. Several men who live in that vicinity saw a light in the building as they were passing just before midnight and upon investigation a fire was found to be in progress on an upper floor, where a pile of books, a can of paint and other articles had been piled up and ignited.

The fire was quickly extinguished, but no trace of the incendiary could be found and there were no marks to show that the building had been forcibly entered.

Promoted to Generalship

Washington, Oct. 3.—In recognition of their long and honorable service in the army the president has directed the advancement to the grade of brigadier general of Colonel Amos S. Kimball, Colonel Chambers McKibbin and Colonel Charles C. Hood. All the officers named are near the retiring age of 64 years, and but for the action of the president would have retired in their present rank of colonel. All of them saw service in the Civil war, as well as during the recent war with Spain.

Nervy Bank Robbers

Minden, Neb., Oct. 3.—The safe in the bank at Norman was blown open by four robbers yesterday. The robbers secured about $1000 in cash. Many persons saw them at work and had to stand by helpless, for the robbers were well armed and threatened to kill anyone who interfered. The robbers escaped.

Missing Treasurer Returns

Wabash, Ind., Oct. 3.—John B. Rose, ex-treasurer of this city, who left Sept. 1 and who was alleged to be short in his accounts, returned voluntarily from Kansas and was arrested last evening. Rose and his relatives have practically made good the alleged loss to the bondsmen.

Zola's Will Found

Paris, Oct. 3.—The will of Emile Zola was found as indicated by Mme. Zola in his bedroom, the seals of which were broken in order to obtain the document. The room was immediately sealed up again. The will was opened late last evening, but its contents were not made public. It is understood, however, that Zola left everything to his wife.

CHILD'S MEDICINE—WHY?

Because children respond so quickly to its action. A medicine peculiarly suited to their sensitive nature. It is wonderful how rapidly delicate children improve in every way while taking Scott's Emulsion.

Because children like the taste. Most of them like Scott's Emulsion at once. The rest soon learn to like it. Little daily doses bring the results.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

GRANITE STATE'S LOSS

Loses One of Her Foremost Citizens In the Death of Frank Jones

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 3.—Former Congressman Frank Jones, millionaire brewer and capitalist, and for many years the most prominent business man and politician in New Hampshire, died at his home in this city last night, aged 70. His death resulted from a complication of diseases which had been undermining his health for several months, and terminating a business career that was one of the most successful in the records of New England's self-made men. Mr. Jones was for many years the leader of New Hampshire's Democracy, being twice elected mayor of Portsmouth, and a member of two congresses. In 1896 he voted for McKinley, and since that time he had been identified with the Republican party.

Frank Jones was born in Barrington, N. H., in 1832. He attended the common schools, and at the age of 17 was engaged in the hardware and tin business. In 1858 he became interested in the brewing business, which under his management has been developed to the first rank among the brewers of America. For many years he was closely identified with banks, railroads and other great corporations. He was also much interested in hotel property and was proprietor of hotels in this state, while he held large interests in several hotels in Boston. His hotels in this state were of his own design, and were erected and equipped under his direction. His homestead property, known as "The Maplewood Farm," of over 1000 acres, enclosed within its hedges charming grounds and conservatories, and has for many years been called the public garden of Portsmouth.

Woman Brutally Assaulted

Ellsworth, Me., Oct. 3.—While alone in her house at Penobscot yesterday, Mrs. Joseph D. Littlefield, aged 50, was brutally assaulted. She was terribly beaten about the head and shoulders, there being two deep gashes in her neck. The latter bruises appear to have been made by a heavy boot. Sheriff Whitcomb believes that it is the work of tramps. It is not thought that the motive of the assault was robbery. At present nothing is known of the circumstances and probably will not be known unless Mrs. Littlefield regains consciousness.

Hammered Father With Flatiron

Farmington, Me., Oct. 3.—Claudius M. Hatch of Kingfield, who was recently indicted on the charge of assault with intent to kill his father, was yesterday found guilty of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. He will be sentenced later. It appeared in evidence that Hatch went to his father's house and struck him with a flatiron. His father was knocked down, one leg was broken, and he was otherwise roughly handled. Hatch asserted that the seduction of his wife was the provocation for the assault.

Alleged Opener of Letters

New Haven, Oct. 3.—George Spall, assistant postmaster of Stratford, was arrested yesterday, charged with opening a letter addressed to Miss Ella Burr of Stratford. The arrest is said to be the result of complaints from Stratford that letters, particularly those addressed to young women were opened and read, and their contents afterward told of about the town.

A Local Option Proposition

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 3.—The feature of the business in the general assembly yesterday was the introduction of a local option high license measure, similar to the Massachusetts liquor law. It provides that it be referred to the people in February next. The matter was referred to the joint committee on temperance.

Electrical Strike at an End

Boston, Oct. 3.—An agreement was signed yesterday between the representatives of the electrical contractors of Boston and vicinity and their employes which ends the strike which affected five building trades. The men will return to work immediately. The agreement favors the strikers in every respect.

The New Orleans Strike

New Orleans, Oct. 3.—After futile efforts of four days to settle the street car men's strike, begun Sunday by dissatisfied employes of the New Orleans Railway company, all negotiations looking toward peace came to a positive end last night. Nine cars with United States mail signs were run over the several routes yesterday.

Anthracite For Employes

Harrisburg, Oct. 3.—The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company has notified its employes in Harrisburg who are heads of families that they will be supplied with one ton of anthracite coal each at $4.25 per ton in less than 10 days.

The Social Realm.

To work for those we love, with hand and brain
To spend ourselves unstinting, day by day,
And see the years slip, one by one, away,
While we no store amass nor guerdon gain:
To count the night hours pass in restless pain
And watch impatient for the sun's first ray—
All this till youth be passed and we grown gray,
Yet is not toil, if only Love remain.
While eye meets eye and gentle hands caress,
And tender word lifts off the weight of care,
The heaviest load will not too hardly press
If loving heart will still the burden share.
But when Love goes—ah! then we toil indeed,
And toiling, find our labor all our meed.

BETTS GUILTY.

On All the Nine Counts Against Him.

Defense Will File Exceptions.

The Maximum Penalty is Thirteen Years.

The jury in the case against Frederick E. Betts returned a verdict of guilty yesterday on each of the nine counts for which he was arraigned with J. M. Fisher for using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

The jury was out 2 hours and 40 minutes, which included one hour for lunch. But one ballot was required on each indictment, all the jurors voting "guilty."

FOR THE DEFENCE.

"Let us take the nine indictments charging my client with this crime. Nine individuals are named. The first is Mr. Warner. He invested $150. The substance of his testinony is that he didn't intend to put in any more money. He knew what he was doing all the time. He knew if the market went up he'd make, and if the markets went down he'd lose, and that is the case with every single witness who has appeared here.

"Now comes John Quincy Adams of Shamokin. John—how he ever came by the name of the old man eloquent of Massachusetts the Lord only knows—John goes on the stand and tells you that he believed he was buying 10 shares of Missouri Pacific at $102 a share.

"Now, if he says that, there is no law that I know of that compels you or any sensible man to believe him.

"Then there is Dr. Hill of Fall River, who didn't say anything in particular except that the stocks her money was invested in went down and she lost, as she naturally would.

"Mr. Stagg of Washington. He, like all the others was actuated by the expectation of LARGE PROFITS.

That is the expectation that actuate all who speculate in the stock market. These people sent so much money to be dealt with by these men just as they saw fit. They knew it was used to purchase stock on a margin. Were they deceived? Not one of the witnesses who came here undertook to say that the movement of the stocks purchased by them was not exactly as represented by J. M. Fisher & Co.

"Now they say you didn't have any wire to New York, and therefore, there couldn't have been any real stock transactions. Driven a little further they say, you didn't have any direct wire. If they rely on that statement to support the charges, they have woefully failed.

"What is a direct wire? Must it be as straight as the crow flies? I suppose if I have a wire which is wound three times about a post and goes into somebody's office and then off to New York, it isn't a direct wire. It isn't straight. But will any sane man hold that that wire is not in effect as direct as if it went like an arrow from my office to New York?

"The evidence shows that we had not one, but 25 such wires.

"Now about the Bankers and Manufacturers' Mercantile Agency. They claim that J. M. Fisher & Co., or some one else, were the agents of the agency. We admit that is so. There was of that fact. But what does that prove? No one comes here and says that he was deceived by any recommendation coming from the Bankers' and Manufacturers' Agency.

"Here are men who took a bet on a chance to win in the market and when they had lost you are asked to believe that, following a scheme of that kind, they have been defrauded. Are you going to believe that, gentlemen?

"They say, you can't do this business and make 300 or 400 hundred per cent. profit. Well, I don,t know. Excluding his Hill woman, who doesn't find any fault, what in dollars and cents is the amount of the loss? Three thousand dollars.

"Now the men who have testified here for the defence have been called to answer that insinuation, and it may

CONFERENCE A FAILURE

Operators Will In No Way Recognize Miners' Union

ARBITRATION WAS ASKED

But Was Squarely Refused by Employers, Who Denounce the Labor Organization as a Lawless and Anarchistic Body—Both Sides to the Controversy Declare That War Will Be Continued as Heretofore

Washington, Oct. 4.—The great coal conference between the president and representatives of the operators and miners came to and end at the temporary White House at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon with a failure to reach an agreement. Apparently the rock upon which the conference split was recognition of the Miners' union.

The president had urged the contending parties to cease strife in the interests of the public welfare; the miners, through the president of their union, had expressed a willingness to submit differences to arbitration of a tribunal to be named by the president and to enter into an agreement to abide by terms fixed by the arbitration for a period of from one to five years, and the employers, through the presidents of the railroad and coal companies and a leading independent mine operator, had squarely refused arbitration, had denounced the miners' labor organization as a lawless and anarchistic body with which they could and would have no dealings, had demanded federal troops to ensure complete protection to workers and their families in the mining region and court proceedings against the Miners' union, and had offered, if the men returned to work, to submit grievances at individual collieries to the decision of the judges of the court of common pleas for the district of Pennsylvania in which the colliery was located. There the matter closed.

Both miners and operators remained in the city last night, but today they return to their several localities, each saying that the struggle will continue.

It was a remarkable chapter in the economic history of the country that was written yesterday. For the first time the president of the republic had intervened directly between the great forces of capital and labor in an effort to avert what he himself regarded as a great national calamity. The result was to bring the principals in the great controversy face to face with the whole country eargerly intent and watchful of their doings.

Technically the issues between the two great forces stand as they did before the president summoned the contending forces to the national capital. What, if anything, will result from the conference, is for the indefinite future. Yesterday the views of the contenders in the great industrial struggle were so extreme and wide apart that there was no middle ground possible and so the conference came to an end without any agreement. The conference had lasted six hours, including a recess of three hours between the morning and afternoon sessions, taken to enable the miners and operators to prepare written responses to the president's appeal.

The immediate parties to the strike say they will continue as heretofore. What course the administration will take next no one is prepared to say. One of the operators as he left the White House with closely set jaw was asked regarding this and replied: "If anyone knows what the president will do next, that is more than I know."

Fourteen men, including the president, were in the second-story front room at the temporary White House during the momentous conference. President Mitchell and three of his district leaders represented the miners and five railroad men and one independent mine operator the employers. With the president were Attorney General Knox, Commissioner of Labor Wright and Secretary Cortelyou. All the cabinet save the attorney general kept aloof during the conference, but between the two meetings and afterward several of the president's advisors called upon him to talk over the situation.

The conference began a few minutes after 11 o'clock. President Mitchell and his district presidents were the first to put in an appearance at the White House. Their arrival was a few minutes in advance of the hour named, 11 o'clock. The operators reached the temporary White House at 1 minute past 11 in carriages, which they had taken on leaving the private cars at the railroad yards, where they spent Thursday night.

Each party was escorted to separate rooms on the first floor and soon after they were ushered upstairs, the miners' representatives being ahead. In the front room on the second story they found the president awaiting them. He was in a roller chair and had on a dressing gown. After introductions he smilingly explained his inability to receive his guests in a more formal manner.

The president entered at once on the business in hand by reading a statement which he had carefully prepared urging a settlement of the strike in the interests of the public. His manner was exceedingly serious and his voice showed deep feeling. Almost immediately after the president had closed, Mr. Mitchell offered to submit all the differences to arbitration. The operators looked surprised, but before any reply could be made President Roosevelt said he desired both parties to take the matter under consideration and meet again at 3 o'clock. The first session of the conference lasted less than 15 minutes. The operators were driven to their private cars and Mr. Mitchell and his party returned to their hotel. Both parties immediately set to work to prepare statements in reply to the president's suggestions.

At 3:15 the afternoon proceedings began. President Baer opened them with a statement setting forth the views of those he represented. He was followed by President Mitchell of the Miners' union. Then Mr. Thomas followed and was succeeded by Messrs. Markle, Truesdale, Wilcox and Fowler.

A tinge of the dramatic was given to the proceedings by Mr. Markle, who in addition to the statement, told the president that he wanted to present the case in another light, and as "exhibit A" he handed the president a copy of an illustrated paper with a cartoon showing a non-union miner being abused by the union miners and prevented from going to work, with justice bound and powerless. The president made no comment.

At the conclusion of the statements there was considerable general and what might perhaps be regarded as informal conversation. The president called attention to a part of Mr. Baer's statement in which he said the operators were willing to submit grievances to the courts of common pleas in Pennsylvania. The president asked Mr. Mitchell if he, not as president of the union, but as an individual, would agree to that. Mr. Mitchell promptly replied that he would not.

Mr. Thomas supplemented his statement by saying that he came to Washington during the Civil war with a gun on his shoulder to fight for a principle. He was contending for a principle now, which was that a man should not be denied the right to work because he did not have a license from a labor leader.

It was 5:05 when the conference ended. The operators later met a number of newspaper men, to whom several of them declared the interference of the president had resulted in retarding rather than forwarding the settlement. They declared that the situation was most serious as to the coal supply, but said that coal would be furnished to the public and that if given protection they could get men to mine coal to at least 70 percent of their capacity. They declared there would be no compromise and that the strike would continue until the miners succumb. They asserted their determination to make no concessions further than the offers already made.

During the evening President Mitchell dictated a formal statement concerning the conference and its results, in which he announced that the strike would continue as a result of the failure of the conference. He said he was firmly convinced that the miners would win.

In reply to questions Mr. Mitchell said that the president had said nothing in reply to the proposition of the miners to submit the question to arbitration but he added that their offer was in the line of the president's suggestion for an immediate settlement of the dispute. He also said that the merits of the strike had not been entered on at any length.

Referring to the manner of conducting the strike in the future, he said he thought it would proceed hereafter about as it had in the past.

It was announced at the White House last night that the president had no comment to make on the conference.

One of the president's advisors who was seen intimated that some consideration had been given before the conference to the question of future course of the administration in the event either party refused absolutely to do anything toward a settlement. He intimated that there was a possibility the interstate commerce commission might be able to take some steps with respect to carrying charges on the anthracite coal roads. Still, public sentiment, he added, was the chief resource of the president, as to both parties to the strike.

Depression In Coal Region

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 4.—The news from Washington of no agreement had a depressing effect. Some of the local operators think that the miners, now that all hope of arbitration seems to be gone, will gradually return to work. The strike leaders are of the opinion that the struggle will continue and that the cold weather will yet compel the operators to make concessions.

Coal Coming Northward

Chatham, Mass., Oct. 4.—The largest fleet of coal laden vessels for several months succeeded in getting over the shoals yesterday and passing this point. In the fleet were 20 barges, 12 four-masters and three five-masters. Ten three-masters and two four-masters were unable to work over the shoals, and are at anchor.

Great Britain Interested

London, Oct. 4.—President Roosevelt's intervention in the coal strike attracts great attention in Great Britain. Long dispatches from the United States, describing the situation, are published in the newspapers this morning, which nearly all devote editorial articles to the matter, applauding President Roosevelt's courage in ignoring tradition and red tape in the endeavor to effect a settlement of the dispute, but displaying no surprise at the failure of his laudable efforts.

ROOSEVELT IS INDORSED

Republican League Admires Him For His Courage

BENEFIT TO THE FILIPINOS

By Having Islands Remain a Part of United States Territory—Combination of Capital For Self-Aggrandizement Is Condemned

Chicago, Oct. 4.—The convention of the National Republican league was brought to a close last night with a mass meeting in the First regiment armory. The principal speaker was United States Senator Beveridge of Indiana, whose address was devoted largely to a discussion of the attitude of the two parties toward young men.

J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia was elected president. He made a brief speech, in which he urged the necessity of organized effort in seeking the success of the Republican party.

The league platform was then presented by the resolutions committee, and was adopted without discussion, as follows:

The National Republican league congratulates the party of Abraham Lincoln and our American citizenship of all parties upon the prosperity that was restored to the whole people under the wise and patriotic policies that signalized the administration of William McKinley, in war and in peace, and that have been continued with energy and fearlessness by the soldier statesman, Theodore Roosevelt. We give unqualified commendation to his administration. We believe in his honesty of purpose, admire him for his courage, and love him for his unswerving Republicanism.

The convention records its tribute of grief over the tragic death of the beloved American, William McKinley, and mourns him as the tireless champion of American prosperity and the dauntless defender of national honor.

We approve the action of congress and the national executive in redeeming every pledge that the nation made to Cuba upon the outbreak of the Spanish war. We believe that the Philippine islands, having become a part of the United States territory, should so remain in order that the benefits of popular government may be extended to and enjoyed by their inhabitants.

We favor the admission to statehood of the territories of New Mexico, Oklahoma and Arizona, and the extension of a territorial form of government to Indian Territory at the earliest practicable date, having due regard for the interests of the people of the states and territories and of the United States.

The unexampled prosperity that has attended the full exercise of Republican tariff policy is obvious, and commands unwavering adherence to that policy as one of cardinal importance in protecting American labor, maintaining American industries and sustaining American institutions.

We deplore the unfortunate conditions which brought about the differences between operators and miners in the anthracite coal region, and we urge such action by the parties as that a speedy adjustment may be made, to the end that the needs of the people of the country may be promptly supplied.

We condemn every combination of capital whose purpose is self-aggrandizement at the expense of the working man, the general public, the nation, or any state or local government, or to increase the cost of necessities of life, or in any way to assail the moral, physical or political welfare of the people.

We deprecate the employment of children of tender age at prolonged and exhaustive labor in mills, factories and mines, and in all unhealthful vocations, as an evil which calls for such legislation by the proper authorities as will protect the young in their morals, health and growth.

We characterize the Democratic party as one without a fixed policy on any of the great public questions of the day. It offers no remedy for any existing ills, and it is only active in opposition to the progressive acts of the Republican party, while it awaits a possible national calamity that may furnish it with an issue.

And, finally, we pledge to our party the constant and loyal support of the Republican clubs throughout the country and urge upon the officers of the National league the early formation of state organization in the states in which they do not now exist.

Dowager Empress Is Chummy

Pekin, Oct. 4.—The dowager empress entertained the ladies of the legations at breakfast in the summer palace yesterday. A Chinese guard of honor was stationed two miles along the route to where the ladies embarked on imperial barges, in which they proceeded through the canal to the palace. The procession presented a gorgeous appearance.

Show Seats Collapsed

Maryville, Mo., Oct. 4.—Fifteen hundred people were thrown several feet to the ground by the collapse of the seats in a tent where a show was in progress yesterday. Two hundred were injured, some seriously.

PATH OF OCEAN CABLES.

Submarine Tablelands That Stretch Across the Atlantic.

There seems to be no logical reason why cables cannot be laid across any section of the oceans of the world, no matter how great the depth. Some portions of the Atlantic cables are three miles below the surface, and this is not necessarily the extreme depth, for the cable may and probably does pass from the top of one submarine hill to another without drooping materially into the deep valleys between, says Lippincott's Magazine. The greatest known depth of the sea is 40,036 feet, or 7 3-5 miles, found in the south Atlantic midway between the island of Tristan da Cunha and the mouth of the Rio de la Plata. Soundings have been made to the depth of 27,480 feet in the north Atlantic south of Newfoundland, and about 34,000 feet, or nearly 6½ miles, is reported south of the Bermudas. Even such enormous depths as these need not hinder cable laying so far as the theory is concerned, but in practice, for reasons of economy in maintenance and otherwise, it is found best to take advantage of favoring conditions in the ocean's bed. To illustrate, all of the cables between the United States and Europe run up along our coast until they reach the neighborhood of Newfoundland before starting across to their destination in Ireland or France. The reason for this is found in the range of submarine tablelands, forming an ideal cable bed, which lies between the three latter countries.

The Sea Trout.

The gamest of salt water fish, after the striped bass, is the weakfish, or sea trout. The sport of angling for them is generally enhanced because, feeding as they generally do near the surface, it is possible to fish for them with light tackle. The best places to find them in the vicinity of New York are Jamaica bay, the southwestern shore of Staten Island and the mouth of the Shrewsbury river. While they have been caught weighing upward of twenty pounds, a six or ten pounder is a good size, and the average will only run from one to two and a half. There is never any doubt when a weakfish bites. He does not nibble around the hook, but takes the bait at one fair swoop and then starts off with it like a limited express with time to make up. He is a shy fish, and the man who uses a small line, light leaders and snells to his hook and keeps quiet while fishing is the one who is apt to have the best luck.—Country Life In America.

When Jackson Dined!

While the dinner hour still clings to the noontime among country people it has advanced in the cities until now it occurs at any time between noon and midnight. And that reminds us, says the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, of one of the many stories about Colonel Davy Crockett. While he was a member of congress and was at his home in Tennessee some one asked him about the dinner hour in Washington. He said the common people ate dinner at 12, the next above them at 1, the merchants at 2, the representatives at 3, the senators at 4, members of the cabinet at 5 and the vice president at 6. "But when does the president dine?" "What! Old Hickory?" said Crockett, anxious to fix a time that would suit his idea of Jackson's greatness. "Well, he don't eat till next day!"

Women In Paris Streets.

It is quite a feature of Paris to see streams of open carriages, private and hired, taking folks for an after dinner drive along the grand boulevards, which are thronged with promenaders and groups of people sitting outside cafes talking. Now and again a carriage will stop to deposit its burden in front of a cafe and return later, either to this or another to which its occupants have migrated.

With her husband a Frenchwoman may go anywhere, and it is quite customary for the very nicest Frenchwomen to take coffee in the open air outside a cafe and make this a pleasant meeting place for friends.—Exchange.

He Wouldn't Split.

"Yes," said the housewife kindly; "you can have a good meal if you split that wood."

"Madam," said the tramp in a precise grammatical manner, "I was born and raised in Boston— But stop, shall I tell you the sad, sad story of my life?"

"Yes, yes."

"When a youth in Boston, I was disinherited for splitting an infinitive, and since then (his voice broke) I have vowed never to split anything, not even the wood!"

"Sick 'im, Tige!"—Baltimore Herald.

No Consolation For Cracked China.

How many housekeepers there are that can sympathize with the old Virginia lady who said to her friend on finding a treasured old cup cracked by a careless maid, "I know of nothing to compare with the affliction of losing a handsome piece of old china." "Surely," said the friend, "it is not so bad as losing one's children." "Yes, it is, for when your children die you do have the consolation of religion, you know."

Her Observation.

"No," answered Miss Cayenne, "but I have known human beings who could chatter like monkeys."—Washington Star.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonja, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

—Members of the original United States steel underwriting syndicate will receive another 5 per cent. dividend of $10,000,000, notices to that effect being sent out by J. P. Morgan & Co. on Tuesday. This makes the fourth dividend of $10,000,000, a total profit $40,000,000 on an actual outlay of $25,000,000, a return of 160 per cent.

The Price of Pleasure.

It is hard for a lovely woman to forego the pleasures of the life which she was created to enjoy and adorn. She may have to be busy all day in office or in store, yet she cannot deny herself the social pleasures which are offered her.

But the fatigue is often too great for her, and she suffers from headache and backache as a consequence of over-exertion. Women who are tired and worn out will find a perfect tonic and nervine in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures headache, backache and the other aches and pains to which women are subject. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"I am so pleased with your instructions, I hardly know what thanks to give you for your kind favors," writes Mrs Milo Bryant, of Lota, Thomas Co., Ga. "I suffered so much with great pains in my back and the lower part of my stomach and palpitation of the heart, that at times I could hardly lie down. Could hardly get up in the morning, but after using three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, I am like a new woman."

Sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

PALMA DISCUSSES CUBA

Satisfied With Progress the New Republic Has Made.

FIRST FOUR MONTHS' EXPERIENOE

On the occasion of the ending of the first four months of "Cuba libre" President Palma gave the Havana correspondent of the New York Tribune an interview, in the course of which he said:

"Our first four months of self government has been as successful as any one could expect. We have paid all expenses of government and have a surplus. Everything is running smoothly and to my entire satisfaction."

A statement of President Palma in regard to the retention of United States artillerymen in Cuba will be of great interest in the United States and particularly to Washington officials. He said:

"It will be a source of gratitude and rejoicing for the Cuban people when the American troops are all withdrawn, and I hope it will be soon. They are not needed. Their presence has a bad moral effect. It looks to some as though the United States government has no confidence in the ability of the Cubans to maintain peace and govern themselves."

The old veteran spoke with considerable feeling as he said this.

"I don't want to be misunderstood," he added. "We are grateful to the Americans, but the people cannot feel free with American soldiers all around them. They are not needed to protect us from outsiders, and if they ever are they could be quickly dispatched here. Our artillery force, when increased to 5,000 men, will be sufficient for the country."

As to the question of reciprocity, President Palma said he hoped for favorable action by the United States senate at the coming session. The insertion of a Cuban plank in the Republican platform in several states he considers an augury for the success of reciprocal measures. "But," he said, "we want no reciprocity that will affect our commerce with other countries. Our ports must be open to the world, and we must foster commercial relations with every country. The reciprocity measure must be of equal benefit to both countries."

The chief executive is studying internal taxes in force in other republics. He intends recommending internal taxes on cigars, cigarettes, wines and other luxuries. The tax will be slight, but sufficient to raise large revenues.

In the matter of the loan of $35,000,000 in which congress gave the president a free hand to act, the latter said:

"The borrowing of so large a sum is a serious question for Cuba, and I must first carefully study it before deciding what to do. Of course, if we do decide to borrow, we will fulfill all requirements of the Platt amendment as to setting aside enough for a sinking fund and interest."

FARLEY'S PROMOTION.

Parishioner of New Archbishop Extended Congratulations.

Archbishop Elect John M. Farley enjoys a good story as well as the next, says the New York Times, and when passing a social hour sometimes recounts his experiences. At a dinner given to the Very Rev. Dean Llags in Yonkers several weeks ago the bishop related the following to the delectation of the assembled guests:

"It was shortly after I had been made vicar general, or monsignore—I do not remember which—when an aged Irishwoman encountered me on the street. She was a good old soul and had been a member of our parish church for years. Grasping me by the hand, she remarked:

"'Oh, father, and sure the Lord bless you. I hear they gave you a rise.'

"I replied that her information was correct.

"'Well,' she responded, 'an' I'm pleased for that. It's yourself that deserves the rise."

"I thanked the good woman sincerely and was about to leave her when, still holding my hand, she remarked:

"'An' all I hope is that the next rise they give you will be to heaven.'"

BOY STOPS SCHOOL STRIKE

Insists That Pupils Take Advantage of Present Opportunities.

Condy McCole, nine years old, a breaker boy, stopped the strike of a couple of hundred pupils at the Hillard Grove school, this city, says a Wilkesbarre (Pa.) dispatch, by a wholesome bit of advice. The pupils were going to leave school because some of the children had relatives working at the mines. Condy was asked to make the speech to the principal, D. L. O'Neill, but instead he spoke to them.

"When there ain't no strike," he said, "I've got to work in the breaker, and now, when I can go to school, I'm goin' to get all the schoolin' I can and not go on no strike, and that's what all of you ought to do."

That ended the proposed strike.

Ohio Puts Bar on Pingpong.

After a long and eloquent discussion the house code committee of the Ohio legislature has decided that pingpong should come under the ban of the law, along with pool and billiard tables, as well as roulette.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 5—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

There are a number of very interesting scenes in this twenty-first chapter of the gospel of John. The most important of these is the conversation of Christ with Simon Peter concerning His love for him, His evident forgiveness of his denial and His recommission of Peter as one of the apostles. The closing scene is very touching indeed. Christ prophesies the death of Peter as a martyr. The apostle then asks Him concerning John, to which Jesus replies: "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou Me." Christ did not mean to say that it was His will that John should live until His second coming; He simply meant in this way to emphasize to Simon Peter the important fact that the great concern to him should be his personal relation to the Master and not the future destiny of some one else. This is undoubtedly the great lesson of the searching question of the topic, which is, "What is that to thee?" Christ followed this question with the command, "Follow thou Me!" And this command is the matter of supreme importance to all His disciples.

Individual and personal responsibility to God and to Jesus Christ is constantly emphasized in the word of God. It is plainly set forth that God is not to deal with men in the mass, but as individuals. This makes our relation to God a very important question. When Daniel Webster was asked, "What is the most important question that ever occupied your mind?" he replied, "My individual responsibility to God." If Christ laid such emphasis on this subject, and if the greatest American orator considered it of the supremest importance, it is certainly worth while for us to consider our personal and individual responsibility to God in Christ absolutely regardless of the relation or responsibility of others to Him. Too many people make the mistake of losing sight of their own responsibility to God, unnecessarily considering the responsibility and relations of others to God. Libanius, the Greek philosopher, might have been converted to Christianity had it not been for the inconsistency of professing Christians. Yet it is easily recognized that he was in no way responsible for them, and the one question that he should have considered was his personal and individual relation to Christ. What was that to him? He should have followed Christ.

1. The salvation of the soul is a personal matter between Christ and the individual. It is absolutely impossible for one person to be saved through or by another person. The wise virgins could not give of their oil to the foolish ones who had neglected to obtain it. The responsibility was upon them, and no one else could make up for them what they had neglected. Each one must [illegible] responsibility.

2. Christian work is an individual matter. Christ taught that there was "to every man his work." No one can do the work of another any more than he can fulfill the requirements of the plan of salvation for another. There is a work for each one of us to do, and we will be held personally responsible for the accomplishment of it or the failure to do it.

3. The judgment of the future is also an individual matter. It is divinely taught that each one must render an account of himself unto God. We will not be called upon to account for others, and no more will it be possible for us to carry the responsibility which rests upon ourselves.

These things being true, the full importance of Christ's question and His command in connection with it should impress itself upon our minds. Instead of being unduly interested in the relation of others to Christ and in their future destiny we should above all things else consider how to meet the requirements and obligations that devolve upon us personally, and this can be done only by personally accepting Christ and by faithfully following Him.

BIBLE READINGS.

Matt. iv, 18-20; xxv, 14-30; Mark ii, 14; Acts xvi, 25-31; Rom. ii, 1-6; xiv, 12, 13; Gal. vi, 1-5; I Pet., 1-5; Rev. ii, 10; xxii, 12.

Expecting Disaster.

Many Christians are continually living in an atmosphere of dread. They expect disaster. Every occurrence of their lives is scanned with a fearful eye. Their thought seems to be: "I wonder what trouble is in store for me now?" Somehow they forget the promise, "All things work together for good." If they see in their sky a cloud the size of a man's hand, they never dream of looking for the silver lining, but straightway hide themselves. While they are hidden the silver lining appears, but they are not looking, and the heavens remain dark for them. Their opportunity is gone. They reap only sorrow, while their neighbors, more hopeful, are rejoicing in trust in God and experience of His love. It does not pay to expect disaster.—Episcopal Recorder.

Patience.

Patience is a virtue for which there is no substitute. There is often no other way out of a difficulty than the way of patience. But this really is a most gracious way when the sufferer finds it. Nor is it a way which any one need be ashamed to take, for our Lord recommends it—"In your patience ye shall win your souls." He knows that there is often nothing left to us but this one thing, patience. We must use it. We must win our souls, our very lives, by it.—Presbyterian Journal.

DEDRICK AND THE PEARY CLUB.

Quarrel of the Lieutenant and Surgeon of the Expedition Now Returning Has Not Disturbed the Cordial Relations of Their Wives. Ziegler, the Backer of the Baldwin Expedition, Calls Its Members "Cigarette Smoking Dudes."

There seems to be no end of trouble among the arctic explorers, interest in whose exploits is heightened by the announcement that Lieutenant Peary is now on his return from the far north. According to the accounts, there has been a serious quarrel in the ranks of the Peary expedition, Dr. Dedrick, the physician and surgeon, having either been forced out or resigned. Dr. Dedrick's wife, Mrs. Cora Dedrick, who is a teacher in the public schools at Arlington, N. J., says that she had never for a moment doubted that the doctor would pull through all right. She was sure his grit would carry him through any emergency that might arise. She declared that she had no information about his homecoming beyond the telegram from her husband lately published. Through a neighbor she telegraphed $50 to the doctor at Sydney, C. B., as he requested. She was not prepared to say whether she would continue to teach or not. It will depend on her husband's plans.

Mrs. Dedrick is not teaching school because of necessity, says a correspondent in the New York Herald. Her father is James L. Boyd, a well to do citizen of Washington, N. J. In addition to this the Peary Arctic club made an agreement with Dr. Dedrick when he sailed north four years ago to pay his wife $50 a month and to deposit $100 a month to her credit in a bank. Mrs. Dedrick refused to say whether the club has continued to make these payments since Dr. Dedrick resigned his commission, more than a year ago, but the understanding is that it has.

While Mrs. Dedrick was very guarded in her statements, it was plain that she did not entertain the same harsh feelings against the club that her husband did. She was strong in the defense of his actions, nevertheless, and said that he must have some strong reason for doing as he did.

She stated that she felt that the differences between her husband and Lieutenant Peary were not of a personal character. They were the warmest of friends before sailing, and Mrs. Peary had told her that they were greater friends than ever two years ago. Notwithstanding the fact that the husbands evidently quarreled and separated in the [illegible] month, Mrs. Dedrick and Mrs. Peary spent two pleasant weeks together last fall in a New York hotel.

Dr. Dedrick's life has been one of impulses. He was graduated from the Hackettstown public schools about twenty years ago and took up the study of medicine. Suddenly he gave this up and went to Washington, N. J., as editor of the Warren Tidings. He brought the paper quickly to a prosperous condition, but when on the wave of success he abandoned the newspaper and entered Hahnemann Medical college, in Philadelphia. About this time he married Miss Boyd. After graduation he went to Stillwater, Sussex county, and became a leading physician in that section. Suddenly he closed his office without any explanation and returned to Washington, N. J. For a year or more he devoted himself to arctic study, and when Peary announced that he was going to make a dash for the pole Dr. Dedrick secured a commission from the club.

William Ziegler, the millionaire backer of the Baldwin expedition, is very much wrought up over the failure of that enterprise.

"All I want is to reach the north pole," said Mr. Ziegler to a New York World reporter. "I don't care how much money it costs. If I can plant the stars and stripes there, I'll be the happiest man in the United States. I'm not after scientific research, though I know we'll get as much as anybody. It doesn't matter if one expedition has failed; I'll send another. But it won't be a lot of cigarette smoking dudes this time. We'll get there yet."

Mr. Ziegler's ire had been aroused by statements made by R. L. Vinyard in Boston upon his arrival there. In them he criticised Commander Baldwin and Captain Johansen, calling them both self willed men.

"I came back," said Vinyard, "because Mr. Baldwin came back. I had nothing to do with the trouble between the captain and Mr. Baldwin."

"Why did you leave when you knew a relief ship was at Franz-Josef Land?" insisted Mr. Ziegler. "You had coal and plenty of supplies. Oh, I know you say you ran short of food and dogs. Yes," continued Mr. Ziegler, turning to the World reporter, "they had a lot of tenderfeet along, and he's one of them."

"We were not tenderfeet!" rejoined Vinyard hotly.

"Oh, yes, you were," put in Mr. Ziegler. "You yourself have said that you wanted to smoke cigarettes and froze your fingers rolling them. You were all a lot of dudes, trying to make cigarettes when you were sent to discover the north pole.

"I sent this expedition to discover the north pole, not to eat pie or smoke cigarettes. The bone and sinew of the nation is not in its pie eaters or its cigarette smokers."

It is unusual for a Mayor to send out a campaign document with the annual tax bills of the city, and it is particularly open to criticism this year, when the tax bills are late, so that they reach the taxpayers within one month of the municipal caucuses.

However, the letter of Mayor Bryant does not make it so plain that there has been economy in the government of the city this year, as he claims has been his aim.

At the outset, no one seriously believes that the city is on the "verge of bankruptcy," and if it was the object of His Honor to refute that claim made by Henry H. Faxon some weeks ago, the answer is tardy.

First,—In his annual budget he recommended the appropriation of every dollar possible under the law which limits the amount to $12 on the $1000 of the valuation.

Second,—In order to make the amount as big as possible the "estimated miscellaneous receipts" were increased from $46,788.34 under Mayor Hall to $62,737.53. Quite a jump for one year! Almost enough in itself to reduce the tax rate of 1902,one dollar!

Third,—The Executive and Administrative branches have recommended appropriations in excess of the debt borrowing capacity of the city,—two and one-half per cent. of the valuation.

Fourth,—Appropriations have been made this year as fast as the maturing debt has been paid.

Fifth,—The appropriations for sewer extensions outside the limit have been excessive; almost reckless.

Sixth,—Some appropriations for current expenses for the year were exhausted weeks ago.

Seventh,—No appropriations were made for election expenses and some other annual expenditures which should be within the limit.

Eighth,—Several more appropriations may be exhausted before the year is out.

And one might go on, ninthly, tenthly, etc

This is a delightful season of the year to travel on the street cars, if you take pleasure in seeing the large collections of dahlias and other kinds of plants now in blossom. There are in towns adjoining this, thousands of blossoms of dahlies of many beautiful varieties and colors, which, for a few cents can be enjoyed, by taking a ride on street cars. Jack Frost will probably be present soon to take away their beauty, but owing to the coal strike, he has not dared to show his head. But the strike will be settled shortly, and then you will see him in his white coat covering the fences, lawns and flowers. Improve the present time.

The Republicans have at last found that there is a chance in the Tenth district, and with Hon. John O. Hall as the candidate it will be worth while to make a fight. Ex-Congressman Atwood says he is not a candidate.

If the Metropolitan parkway taking does not include the Dorothy Q house it certainly should, and the old historic house be preserved.

It would be well to give President Roosevelt a chance before reporting the conference on the coal strike a failure.

—Milk has risen to eight cents a quart in Boston, Somerille and Cambridge and it is thought it will remain there for the winter.

PARKWAY TAKING.

A Reservation Near Butler's Brook.

May Include Dorothy Q. House.

But When Will the Parkway be Constructed?

The Metropolitan Park Commission has recently made takings of land along Butler brook between Hancock and Hudson streets.

On the south side they have taken twenty feet from the center of the brook. This will bring the southerly line onto the Butler estate and it will probably necessitate the tearing away of a part of the old Dorothy Q mansion or the taking of all the estate to Butlers road.

It also takes a strip of land from C. W. Gay, the line running nearly through the centre of his stable so that the building will either have to be torn down or moved.

The line runs on the southerly side runs to Hudson street, then turns north and runs across the marsh to Merrymount park.

On the northerly side of the brook, near Hancock street, it is understood that quite a large tract is to be taken, and what is not required for the parkway will be make into a park.

It will be seen by these takings that the plan is to assume control over Butler's brook along whose shores the parkway will be built.

From Hancock street the parkway will follow the brook and go under the tracks of the New York, New Haven and Hartford and up the brook to West Quincy and the Blue Hills reservation.

Braintree B. B. C.

Not since 1893 have the residents of this town been treated to the national game of baseball, with the exception of a few games in the early spring by the Thayer Academy Team. Early this spring the Braintree Base Ball Club organized the board of directors consisting of Charles Bailey, George D. Finnegan, Walter T. Connell, N. L. Barnes and George W. Stevens. Mr. Bailey was chosen manager and he at once formed a very strong team. All the players volunteered their services for the pure love of the game until later in the season pitchers were engaged to occupy the box.

The games were witnessed from the start by large crowds, the fair sex attending in large forces, from one to two hundred attended each game and showed great interest. The lowest estimated attendance being three hundred and the largest 5000. If every one that attended the games would have purchased a ticket the success of the game would have been greater. As it is Mr. Bailey made it a grand success financially.

Next season it is expected that a much stronger team will be placed in the field. Give the games a boom both with your good will and money and the good old town will be able to compete with the strongest teams in the state.

The following are the runs, hits and errors of the local team and their opponents for the season:

IN COLLISION.

Houghs Neck Electric Strikes a Loaded Van.

There was a narrow escape from a serious accident on Coddington street last evening. As it was, several persons were cut by flying glass. The accident was caused by an electric car colliding with a heavy van loaded with piles. The place where the accident happened was half way between Newcomb and Canal streets, and at a point where it was very dark.

The 6.50 car for Houghs Neck was one of the smaller box cars and was in charge of Motorman J. E. McCarthy and Conductor Arthur Willis.

The team which is owned by Reynolds & Co. of East Boston was heavily loaded with piles and was driven by William Logan. The driver sat on the dasher of his wagon and did not see or hear a car coming.

As the car approached the team from the rear, the motorman saw that there was room to pass the team which was on the south side of the track, and going in the same direction as the car. The car had got partly by the team when the driver started to turn across the track. The result was that the car struck the forward wheels. Driver Logan was thrown from his seat and received a cut over the eye and a wrenched leg.

In the front vestibule of the car was W. H. Taylor and Charles Hodgkinson of Houghs Neck and Dennis Mullane of Boston. The only passenger was a Miss Crosby of Hyde Park. Fortunately none of those on the car was seriously injured other than a general shaking up, and being slightly cut by flying glass.

Driver Logan was taken home by his brother.

always indicate a weak heart. They are usually preceeded or followed by palpitation or fluttering, and there may be pain in left side, a smothering sensation and shortness of breath. Such a heart should be treated at once, before the disease develops beyond control. Heart disease is as easily cured as other troubles if taken in time.

"I was subject to fainting spells, and many times I have fallen on the street. I was often compelled to sit down while walking to avoid falling. When physicians failed to help me, I took Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and was completely cured."

Savage Dog.

As two ladies were walking on Hancock street Thursday evening near Elm avenue, on their way home from the house of a friend, between the hours of nine and ten o'clock, a Scotch collie in one of the yards near by began barking angrily at them, finally jumped the fence and became furious and but for the timely assistance of Officer Lyons who heard the barking and came to their rescue, they might have been badly bitten, as it was they were much frightened and the courteous officer conducted the ladies to their homes.

☞One of the reasons why there are so many small criminals of an age too tender to make possible police punishment according to the statutes of the state is because the parents do not give sufficient attention to the way their children employ the time. A law providing that parents should receive the punishment which their offspring would receive for their misdeeds if they were old enough would be one of the best possible preventatives for crimes committed by the extremely youthful.—Worcester Gazette.

—A young woman faultless in dress and ladylike manner, who lit a cigarette after a light luncheon in a hotel cafe in London, was put out by the proprietor, and the magistrate before whom both were subsequently arraigned discharged the lady because she had a right to smoke and the proprietor because he had a right to put her out.

Mrs. A. A. F. Hamilton.

Mrs. Alberta Adeline Turner Hamilton, aged 38 years, wife of Mr. Hugh Hamilton of Sheldon street, East Milton, died Sept. 27.
It has been the will of our heavenly Father to call to His heavenly home our beloved friend, and that while we bow in submission to Him who hath taken away, we do still lift up our hearts in grateful recognition of the goodness and sincere honesty and clean uprightness of life which ever was shown by our beloved friend, and we rejoice to testify to the love and respect which we feel for her who has gone to be with God. To her husband and five children we extend our heartfelt sympathy in their great loss. To all we commend the example of the life and character of the good mother to whom on Saturday morning God said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."
It will always be remembered of her never tiring, ever ready at all times as long as her health permitted, and long after her last illness commenced she was ever ready and willing to be at the bedside of all sick and suffering, lending a hand to help and a kind word to all.

Lodge Calms a Storm In Massachusetts Convention

A PLANK ON RECIPROCITY

And a Request For Immediate Revision of Tariff Overwhelmingly Voted Down—Changes Will Be Made When Proper Time Comes

Boston, Oct. 4.—An unexpected attempt to amend the platform presented at the Republican state convention yesterday caused a sudden storm. The agitation lasted but a few minutes, the proposition to amend being overwhelmingly voted down.

The effort to change the resolutions came as a complete surprise to the majority of the delegates after Chairman Draper of the committee on resolutions had read the platform and moved its adoption.

Ex-Representative Fitts of Somerville was recognized, and from the floor moved an amendment to the report of the committee on resolutions, and offered a plank for reciprocity with Canada and an immediate revision of the tariff, so as to include free coal, free iron, free steel and free hides.

Instantly a wave of excitement swept the floor of the convention. Isaac B. Allen wanted an amendment protesting against the alleged ill treament of colored voters in the south, but this was lost sight of in the interest aroused by the proposition of Mr. Fitts.

Senator Lodge, member at large of the committee on resolutions, noting the tangle which impended, averted further trouble by making a vigorous speech in favor of the resolutions as reported by the committee. He carried the delegates with him to such an extent that when Chairman Long placed the amendment before the convention it was overwhelmingly defeated, scarcely a dozen of the delegates voting for it, while the remainder of the 1187 delegates let loose a roar of noes which seemed likely to split the roof.

In his speech Senator Lodge said the resolutions had not been given due attention by the critics of the platform.

What the country would listen to is what Massachusetts says as to general principles, and the platform says clearly that if certain tariff changes are necessary they will be made. He continued: "We are protectionists, wedded to the principle of protection. If protection to American industry is to be assailed it must be in some other convention and by some other means. But we hold no rate and no schedule sacred. We are perfectly aware that no tariff is perfect, and the last tariff ever put on the tariff books was a tariff passed by a Democratic administration.

"We are prepared to make changes whenever necessary. We are ready to make them now, if the committees of congress, the commission of experts proposed by President Roosevelt, will show us that they are necessary and where they can be best made, but you cannot revise a tariff in a convention.

"There is nothing I would not do to make a tariff that should be in the interest of Massachusetts. I have fought for her interests in no less than four tariff revisions, but I recognize certain facts. I recognize that we are one state in 45; I recognize that our fellow-Americans have the same rights that we have; I recognize that we have only 14 members in a house of 386; I recognize that we have only two senators in a senate of 90 members, and I realize that we cannot impose our will on the rest of the country. We can get advantages for Massachusetts by acting with our fellow-Americans from all over the union, and not by attempting to dictate to them. What we want we will try to get when he revision comes, but do not hamper us when you send us out with your own mandate; do not put in your platform specific demands that are entirely in our interests and against the interests of other states.

"We have declared in this platform, as I think we ought to declare, that we are in favor of revision whenever it ought to be made; whenever the united party in Washington is satisfied that it ought to be made—that we are ready to make it at any time, and the Republican party is the party to make it.

"It is most unwise for the convention to take part in diplomatic negotiations. There was negotiation begun with Canada by President McKinley. And who broke it off? Canada did! It would be most unwise for this Republican convention, which has just declared that it would support Theodore Roosevelt, to embarrass him in any way in a negotiation with a foreign country. You may be sure that President Roosevelt and John Hay will make a reciprocity treaty with Canada if it can possibly be made, but I will tell you one thing they won't do—they won't surrender American soil on the boundary of Alaska or anywhere else in order to do it.

"Mr. President, I have spoken much longer than I intended. I only wish to say that we are not unmindful in this platform of the wishes of the Republicans of Massachusetts, and I believe that the rest of the country will give to the opinion of Massachusetts the great weight which her opinion has always commanded throughout the United States."

The platform presented by the committee was adopted with not half a dozen dissenting.

Workmen Had Close Call

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 4.—A two-story building on Massachusetts avenue, which was being renovated, collapsed yesterday while about a dozen men were working inside, but no one was hurt. The front wall was first to go, and then the floors immediately began to settle. This gave the workmen time to escape being buried in the ruins. The accident was caused by the giving way of some of the timbers supporting the building.

Aged Woman's Sad Plight

Newton, Mass., Oct. 4.—Gertrude Gallagher, 60 years old, a domestic living with Mrs. George M. Winslow, was found unconscious in the kitchen last night. A lamp which had been overturned while lighted was the cause and the woman was badly burned. The family are away and the accident to the domestic probably occurred 24 hours before discovery. She is hardly likely to recover.

Time For a New System

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 4.—Governor McCullough and Lieutenant Governor Stanton took the oath of office yesterday. In his inaugural the governor said that for 50 years prohibition had been the policy of the state. The mandate now comes from the people to formulate and submit to them the legislature's decision on some other system.

Three Railroad Men Killed

Greenfield, Mass. Oct. 4.—Two killed, the engineer of the combination train and the switch engine fireman, and a freight brakeman fatally hurt, was the result of a collision of a passenger train with a switching engine at East Deerfield yesterday. The dead are Fireman Parmenter, Engineer Wedgewood and Brakeman Smith.

Slugger Still Doing Business

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 4.—Another assault similar to those mysterious ones recently credited to a "Jack the Slugger," was reported last night, Miss Agnes McPhee being the victim. She was struck down and given four fearful wounds with a monkey wrench. Her skull is fractured and recovery is doubtful.

Forces Unchanged

Boston, Oct. 4.—Three ballots taken at the second sitting of the Ninth congressional Democratic convention last night brought no result. The vote was as before, Congressman Conry, 54; John A. Kelliher, 54, and Joseph A. Dennison, 50. The next sitting will be Oct. 14.

Joyner Will Be Asked to Run

May Be an Old Offender

Washington, Oct. 4.—Edward R. Dana was arrested here last night, charged with presenting a worthless check to a pawnbroker in the purchase of a diamond ring. The man is said to be wanted on charges of forgery in Chicago, Toronto, New Orleans, Detroit and other places, in amounts ranging from $100 to $2400.

Countess Welcome In Austria

Vienna, Oct. 4.—Emperor Francis Joseph has especially invited Countess Lonyay, second daughter of the King of Belgium, to visit him here. It is supposed that the emperor's invitation is intended as a mark of deprecation of King Leopold's unkindness to his daughter.

Cresent City Stores May Close

New Orleans, Oct. 4.—The retail merchants of the city yesterday determined that unless the street railway strike is called off by tonight they will close their establishments indefinitely. This would throw 5000 clerks out of employment.

She Cornered Him.

The city editor was troubled, not to say angry.

"Hang it all," he exclaimed, as he read the letter addressed to his department, "my wife has been asking me that question for the last week, and I refused to be bothered"— He looked at the letter again and jumped out of his chair. "Thunder and guns," he cried, "it's her handwriting too! Now that she has learned the trick she'll make me settle every social, household and historical question that comes up, and I'll be right on hand to take the blame if I make a mistake."

For a long time he remained buried in thought. Then he resigned.—Brooklyn Eagle.

His Appetite Forbids.

"Why don't you go to work?" demanded the man who had been asked for a dime.

"Why, that would increase my appetite," protested the beggar, "and I have a hard enough time looking after the one I have now."—Chicago Post.

THE FASHIONS FOR MEN

What They Will Wear During Autumn and Winter.

DICTUM OF SARTORIAL AUTHORITY

More Color Will Be Displayed In Masculine Garments This Season Than Last—Stripes In Waistcoats and Trousers Much In Vogue.

The new patterns as well as the latest materials for men's suitings and overcoats have arrived, says a New York sartorial authority. The mysterious arbiters of fashion who promulgate their decrees in regard to coronation robes and the correct thing in livery for grooms by means of colored plates which resemble the puzzles in pasteboard of the Sunday papers have spoken.

It was to be expected that this season would see more color introduced into the patterns for fall and winter, for after all is said and done it has to be confessed that for some reason or other we continue to get our ideas on men's clothes from London just as we seek inspirations for "creations" for women from Paris.

One distinct change from the general scheme of last year has been ordered. The padding under the title of "military" shoulders has been abandoned.

Striped cheviots will lead in material for suitings. In fact, for suits and for that extra pair or two of trousers which are required the stripes seem to be having a fairly long inning, and unless all signs fail it is not destined to end for another two or three years at least. Certainly this year the plates show more effects of this kind than ever before, not excepting the time when the exceptional popularity of the stripe led to its temporary withdrawal.

To be correct in color one should choose a pattern with a foundation of brown, for this is likely to be the prevailing tone this year, although gray a little lighter in shade than last year will also be used a good deal. Red is used more freely than for several seasons past.

For the trousers alone the black and white stripe which was seen quite a great deal last year is continued in favor, but the stripes are now wider than before, and the general effect is more pronounced and delicate, without being altogether "loud."

Coats will not be so short as last year, and the wide bottoms which were made almost essential by the absurd padding and squaring of the shoulders will be dispensed with. In a word, the suits for this fall and winter are to fit the figure in a proper, natural and sensible manner.

There is no change of any particular importance in the frock coat. It will remain about the same as last year, when it was lengthened just a little.

Ulsters and overcoats will have little to distinguish them from those made a year ago. Quite a number will be made in the heavier suiting materials of worsteds, cheviots and tweeds.

No changes of importance are contemplated in dinner or evening dress, the silk facings continuing to extend clear to the edge of the lapels of the coats. The waistcoats worn with evening dress will be either plain white or a delicate pearl.

Waistcoats for day wear will show the popularity of the stripe, for, although there is a great showing of plain browns and tans, there are comparatively few checks, the stripes being used in the patterns offered for those who cannot be contented with the front of one unbroken color.

While more color has been introduced into suitings and nearly all materials used by the tailor, the shirtmakers and haberdashers report a revolt against the loud effects in shirtings and half hose which prevailed last year. The tone of this revolt has been so decided that the manufacturers appear to have gone almost to the other extreme, and it is stated that the goods for the fall will be almost somber in effect.

The influence of the black and white stripes in the trouserings is seen in the patterns for the new half hose shown by the best dealers, the same colors being used quite a great deal in a variety of styles, none of which, however, is at all startling or "loud." Gray and white is also a favorite combination.

In hats the higher crowns appear to have come in again for those who wear the derbies, while the soft felts are almost an exact reproduction of last year's styles, very flexible and of light weight.

A Box to Be Closed For Many Years.

Captain Ewart has commenced the erection of a mausoleum in the River Cliff cemetery at Mount Gilead, O. The walls are to be seven feet in thickness, made of stone, concrete and brick, says the Ohio State Journal. More than ordinary attention is centered about the tomb because of a peculiar provision which the captain has made. Within these walls and incased in an iron box will be a roster of all the soldiers who have served from Morrow county. The names are to be on cast iron plates. The box will be locked and the key deposited in the Morrow County bank with the understanding that the box is not to be opened for 500 years.

To Marry Beneath His Rank.

German papers, without distinction of political opinions, are making a great stir over the case of Herr Lohning, chief tax collector of Posen, says the New York Times. The holder of this office has been retired long before reaching the age limit because his fiancee, in all other respects allowed to be suitable, is the daughter of an uncommissioned officer.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Reduced Stocks In Many Lines Tend to Sustain Quotations

New York, Oct. 4.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Distribution of merchandise shows no diminution and prospects are bright for continued activity. Dealers in many lines are urgent for prompt shipments, calling upon jobbers and manufacturers for goods already overdue. This indication of reduced stocks is a good sign and tends to sustain quotations. Western reports are especially favorable and the early marketing of cotton has brought distinct improvement at the south. Voluntary advances in wages have been announced in a number of instances, while the labor situation is more satisfactory, although not entirely free from controversy. Transportation facilities have improved in the coke region.

Pig iron furnaces are receiving larger consignments of coke, and there is less interruption because of fuel scarcity.

Supplies of cotton goods do not accumulate in first hands, the demand continuing to keep pace with production, which holds prices steady.

Wool averaged slightly higher in sympathy with the London sale. Hides and leather have become dull. New England shoe shops have received large orders for winter goods, assuring activity for two or three months at some factories.

On the whole crop news has been of an encouraging nature.

Boni Scents a Great Offense

Paris, Oct. 4.—The Gaulois this morning publishes a letter from Count Boni de Castellane addressed to General Peroin, chief of the cabinet of the minister of war, calling his attention to the published statement that he met M. Dreyfus at the Zola residence yesterday and shook hands with him. Count Castellane asks General Peroin to deny this statement, which, he says, if true, would be dishonoring to a French officer.

Gates Not Looking Well

London, Oct. 4.—A representative of The Associated Press saw John W. Gates last night. He looked very ill, but is endeavoring to fulfill his social engagements and to attend to the constant influx of cablegrams on business matters. Replying to a question about his health, he said: "You know we cannot burn the candle at both ends and combine business with pleasure."

Comptroller Ridgeley's Denial

Washington, Oct. 4.—Comptroller of the Currency Ridgeley authorizes denials of reports that he had overruled the action of Secretary Shaw relative to the reserve funds and relief of the strained money situation. Mr. Ridgeley said that he had not only had taken such a step, but that there had been no case before him on which any such action could be based.

Killed Son and Battered Wife

Sault Ste Marie, Ont., Oct. 4.—Noah Hale, a market gardener, yesterday shot and killed his son and badly injured his wife, beating her over the head with the butt of the gun with which he had just killed his son. The murderer then fled to the woods, whither officers and a posse pursued him.

Kaiser Praised the Panther

Berlin, Oct. 4.—The papers here print a letter from one of the crew of the German gunboat Panther, saying that Emperor William sent the following cable dispatch after the sinking of the Haytien revolutionary gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot: "Brave Panther. Well done."

THE COST OF RACING.

It costs the votaries of the turf $30,000,000 to witness horse racing in America each year, more than half as much as was voted by congress for the prosecution of the war with Spain. This vast amount comes out of pockets of the public that it may witness a lot of thoroughbreds chase one another around the various tracks of the country in tests of speed, says the New York correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In this state alone nearly $3,500,000 is spent during the racing season, from April 15 to Nov. 15, to maintain the six racing associations that deal in the "sport of kings."

To own a race track at the present time is better and more profitable than to have a diamond mine.

The "thirty days" grace to meet bills is unknown. Everything is spot cash, and the money rolls into the treasury in a continuous stream from the opening day to the close of each meeting. In order to secure this golden flow all that is required are a few acres of land, a grand stand, a betting ring and a fence. The public furnish the rest.

The different racing associations in this state are becoming enormously wealthy. They are required to pay into the state treasury a tax of 5 per cent on the gross receipts. The revenue is so great, however, they hardly notice this.

Each association pays its stockholders 10 per cent on their holdings. Twenty and 25 per cent could easily be paid from the amount cleared at each meeting, but the directors of each club think it advisable not to declare too big a dividend, and the surplus is invested in gilt edge securities.

WEALTH IN CORNCOBS.

A Mysterious Mill In Indiana Makes Much Money.

Greentown's corncob mill is doing a rushing business now, says an Indianapolis dispatch, and this fact has renewed interest in the puzzling question of what this big industry really is. It has become the corncob center of the Hoosier State, but little more is known of what becomes of the product from the cobs than when the business started up three years ago.

It is said the corncobs are ground into meal. This explanation is by no means sure, for the greatest secrecy is maintained about the factory, and up to date none but employees has gained access to the buildings, and all they know is that they grind up the corncobs, draw their pay and ask no questions.

That the company has found something rich in corncobs is certain, for the mills are kept running to their full capacity. The rumor is that the corncobs are ground up into three grades of meal. The finest is said to go into some kind of shredded biscuit, the second or red grade to the eastern breweries for the coloring of beer, and the third or mixed grade into a mixture of ground feed composed of corn and oats.

Much secrecy attends the shipment of "corona," as the townspeople have come to call it. The ground corncobs are sacked up and carried aboard waiting cars with as great precaution as marks the carrying of currency from the treasury at Washington.

RUSSELL SAGE'S ANXIETY.

Couldn't Wait Until After Church For Wall Street News.

As an illustration of Russell Sage's eager desire to keep in close touch with what is going on in the financial world a Wall street broker tells this:

An important meeting was scheduled for a day on which Mr. Sage was unusually busy, and when he arrived at the designated place the deliberations were over and all the participants had dispersed. Use the telephone as he would, Mr. Sage could not get in communication with any of them. Knowing that one of those who had attended the gathering passed the plate at a midweek service in a church near his home, Mr. Sage went there. He did not wait for the close of the service, but, taking a seat on the aisle through which his acquaintance passed, he waited until he came along with the plate and as he put a dollar bill on it remarked:

"Edward, what did you fellows do down there today? I did not get around in time."

The gentleman spoken to smiled and took the earliest opportunity to inform Mr. Sage of what had transpired.

The Proper Thing In Hats.

A New York hatter from whose judgment there is no appeal says that the thing to wear this year is a high crown and narrow brim. Makers of cheap hats may exaggerate this style and make it ridiculous, but a well made hat in the new block promises to become popular. Soft hats of the panama shapes in pearls, granites and nutrias are also beginning to fill the shop windows and are expected to become popular sellers. In a general way it may be stated that men's hats will present no strongly marked features, such as broad brims or fantastic shapes.

Prima Donnas' Mutual Admiration.

Mme. Patti and Mme. Nordica met by chance the other day at St. Moritz, Switzerland, and in a jiffy they were renewing the acquaintance of bygone years, says a Paris dispatch.

"It is ages since we met!" exclaimed the fair Patti.

"I know it," replied Mme. Nordica, "but you don't look a day older."

Mme. Patti blushed and put her arm around Mme. Nordica's waist. The two divas then lunched together merrily, and afterward they posed for a photograph. Then they separated, perhaps never to meet again.

A TRIUMPH OF REALISM

By Howard Fielding

Copyright, 1901, by Charles W. Hooke

THE editor of a certain magazine of a very quiet tone surprised me not long ago by asking me to write a story of criminal mystery for his publication. It must not be shocking, he hastened to say. A nice, gentlemanly crime, having a flavor of good society, would meet the requirements of the occasion.

"Quite the thing that might happen any day, you know," said he. And the remark was a part of the first of the extraordinary coincidences that have induced me to relate this bit of personal experience.

That afternoon I met Barton Wheelock in a billiard hall where he wastes a large part of his time, so much indeed that I had counted upon finding him there.

"Hello!" said he. "Saw you downtown this forenoon; shouted to you from my auto, but you were running for a car and didn't hear me."

With the idle curiosity of our species, which will prove the Darwinian hypothesis for any one who will study monkeys, I asked what he had been doing downtown.

"Errand for my mother," said he. "Carried a diamond necklace down to Burdick's to get the clasp fixed. Have a game of billiards?"

We played for a couple of hours, but my mind was never on the game. I was plotting mischief—inventing schemes for getting Mrs. Wheelock's diamonds out of Burdick's jewelry shop. It had struck me at once that that would be the sort of crime to please the editor.

I asked a few innocent questions about the necklace and learned little except the value of the trinket—about $8,000—and the fact that it was to be mended by Wednesday of next week. If some one should call for it on Tuesday, thought I, could he get it in a manner suitable to the purposes of polite fiction?

After the fashion of high grade criminals I went down to Burdick's on the following day to look the ground over. It was a fruitful hour. I returned to a little den that I had just rented in an uptown office building because my rooms had become too much of a haunt for idle acquaintances, and there in the afternoon and evening I worked out my story. It was to receive subsequent polishing, but at least the incidents and the people were in it.

I would not say this to Mr. Fain, the editor who has been mentioned, but the fact is that I did not do another minute's work on the story. I forgot all about it. The manuscript lay in a drawer of a queer old desk which I had intended to buy of the previous tenant of the room, though we had not fixed the price.

On Wednesday morning a boy came up from Mr. Fain's office saying that the story was wanted in a hurry, and I gave it to him just as it stood.

"HAVE A GAME OF BILLIARDS?"

Some hours later I received word that I was wanted at the telephone in the lower hall. It was Mr. Fain who called. His voice seemed to indicate some perturbation of mind.

"I've just read your story," he said. "When did you write it?"

"Last week," said I. "Why?"

I heard him gurgle two or three times, and then he became articulate.

"This is marvelous, marvelous," said he. "Do you remember my remark when we spoke of the story? Well, get the Planet of this morning; third column, third page. I'll hold the wire."

There was a newsstand in the hall, as Mr. Fain knew. I procured the paper, and in the place which he had indicated I found this headline: "Jeweler Burdick Cleverly Bunkoed. He Gave Mrs. James Wheelock's Eight Thousand Dollar Diamond Necklace to a Smooth Crook. Gems and Man Have Vanished. Fair Accomplice Lisps Over the Phone, 'Give Them to William.'"

Dazed by the monstrous absurdity of this coincidence, I passed on to the article:

"A soft voiced, neatly dressed man, having the manner of a well trained servant, walked into F. M. Burdick's jewelry store about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and laid a card upon a desk where the jeweler was opening some letters. The card bore the name of Mrs. James Wheelock, wife of the well known banker and herself a prominent figure in society.

"'I beg pardon, sir,' said the man. 'Is Mrs. Wheelock's necklace ready?'

"'Why—why, yes, it's ready,' replied the jeweler.

"'Then I'll take it, sir, if you please, and Mrs. Wheelock said I was to pay the bill.'

"'But I don't know you,' said Mr. Burdick.

"'I'm Mr. Barton Wheelock's valet,' answered the man as if that settled it.

"'You may be,' was the reply, "but I can't give you these diamonds on your bare word and this card.'

"The man seemed surprised, but he attempted no argument. With the most respectful manner he said: 'Very well, sir. I'll have to go up to the house again. Would a note from the lady be sufficient?'

"Mr. Burdick was very much impressed. He cast about in his mind

"A MAN HAS CALLED IN REGARD TO YOUR DIAMONDS," HE SAID.

"'Perhaps I could telephone to the house, sir,' said the man, 'and have the note sent down by a messenger boy.'

"'Why, if I can get Mrs. Wheelock on the phone,' replied the jeweler, 'we can settle the whole matter in a moment.'

"They went to the telephone, which is in a sort of nook by the door, and Mr. Burdick looked around for the book, but did not see it.

"'You have the number here, sir,' said the valet, pointing to the usual card for addresses tacked up on the wall beside the instrument.

"'Have we?' said the jeweler in surprise. 'Why, so we have—1771 Lenox. Yes, indeed.'

"He called for the number and got it promptly.

"'Is this Mr. Wheelock's residence?' he inquired, and a very refined voice, marked by a peculiar lisp, replied that it was.

"Mr. Burdick was not well acquainted with Mrs. Wheelock, but he remembered that lisp, which her friends declare to be 'perfectly adorable.'

"'A man has called in regard to your diamonds,' he began.

"'Oh, yes,' said the adorable voice; 'my son's valet. That is all right. Give them to William.'

"Mr. Burdick gave them to William, and that is the last that any honest person has seen of them. About 4 o'clock Mr. Wheelock himself called for the necklace. He was greatly surprised to learn that William had taken it, and he scented fraud, especially when he learned that Mr. Burdick had not given Mrs. Wheelock a chance to hear William's voice over the phone.

"Alarmed, Mr. Burdick rushed to the instrument.

"'We'll see whether the necklace has arrived,' he said, and he called up 1771 Lenox.

"'Is that Mr. Wheelock's residence?'

"'Wait, wait. Is that 1771 Lenox?'

The remainder of the article dealt with the unavailing efforts of the police. They discovered that a very sprightly woman bearing no resemblance to Mrs. Wheelock waited some time in Untermeyer's grocery store for a telephone message which finally came. No one heard what she said, for the instrument was very conveniently located for her purpose.

Mr. Burdick remembered a suspicious looking man who had visited his store during the previous week and had doubtless erased one of the addresses on the telephone card, substituting the bogus Wheelock address.

Now, this record of crime was an absolute duplicate of my story so far as it went. Of course I had changed all names and locations, but the essential points were exact. In my story the lady corresponding to Mrs. Wheelock had had a stammer instead of a lisp, for I had felt a delicacy about copying the facts too closely.

As to my solution of the crime there could be no likeness to facts, for I had made Barton Wheelock guilty. The man and woman actually appearing in the crime were represented as evil associates into whose company the youth had unhappily fallen.

"Fain," said I over the phone, "what do you make of this?"

"Marvelous, marvelous coincidence," said he.

"Hold the story," said I. "We can't print it now. It's too coincident altogether. I'll give you another as soon as I can."

I tried to get Barton Wheelock over the phone, but was told that he was downtown—at Burdick's, as I inferred. Half an hour later I walked into the jeweler's store, and the door had not closed behind me when a voice cried, "That's him!"

Mr. Burdick had identified me as the suspicious visitor and he demanded my arrest, but Detective Heilbron of headquarters, whom I had known for nine years, hesitated about proceeding to that extremity. The result was that I told the facts as they have been stated here.

"Why," said I in conclusion, "the bogus valet's manner and indeed his language are precisely the same as in the story. The telephone trick is identical even to rubbing out an address instead of putting the false one at the end of the list, where it might have excited suspicion."

Heilbron solemnly shook his head.

"This ain't no coincidence," he said. "I been on the force too long to swaller that. Who's seen that story? That's what I want to know."

"Nobody," said I. "I didn't show it to a mortal creature until I sent it down by the boy this evening."

"Who's been in your office meanwhile?"

"The janitor," I began, but he laughed.

"This ain't no janitor's job," he said. "Anybody else?"

"Nobody but Barton Wheelock," said I, smiling, "and he didn't see the story. He didn't know I was writing it."

Heilbron rubbed his head in a spot that he has nearly denuded by this habit.

"We'll go up to your place," he said. "The key to the whole case is there."

Suggestion is a queer matter, and one who writes stories sees many of its wonders. As the germ of this affair had sprung out of Barton Wheelock's mention of his errand, so the solution came out of that last sentence uttered by the detective.

"Give me the best description you can of the man who posed as the valet," said I to Burdick, and he complied with great particularity.

"I knew him with a beard and mustache," I rejoined, "but it's the same man."

"What do you mean?" demanded Heilbron.

"I agree with you," said I, "that it's a perfect certainty that the man who committed this theft got his suggestion from my story. Now, who could have seen it? The thing has been locked in my office—locked in my desk. The desk belonged to my predecessor, a little shystering lawyer with a bad reputation, a fellow named Elwood. A minute ago you spoke of the 'key' to the mystery. My mind seized the word. Elwood still has a key to the office and a key to the desk. He was to come to see me about money for the desk last week. Indeed, I heard that he was there, but did not meet him. Beyond a doubt he walked into my office to wait for me, opened my desk out of curiosity, saw my memorandum about the Wheelock diamonds, containing the true facts, and my story containing the suggestion."

At this point Heilbron slapped my shoulder so hard that I've been lame ever since.

"The man, for a thousand dollars!" he cried. "I believe I know him."

To cut the story short, they arrested Elwood and his wife in Richmond, Va.,

two days later and recovered the diamonds. He acknowledged his indebtedness to me without reserve. It appeared that Mrs. Elwood, who had been upon the stage in earlier life, had followed Mrs. Wheelock through the stores for two afternoons in order to acquire her vocal peculiarities.

Elwood, bearded, had visited Burdick's and manipulated the telephone card. Elwood, smooth shaved, had played the valet later. Elwood, still further barbered, I suppose, for such is the rule of the place, is working for the state at this moment in prison.

BETTS GUILTY.

be argued that some of them were from Bath. How does that happen? Were they mere names that Mr. Betts at the moment thought of? He could have given others if they were asked for, and these men come here and testify that they have made from 100 to 600 per cent. on their investments—in all the profits aggregating $20,000.

"Now comes John M. Fisher confessing here that he is a criminal. Every man has a constitutional right to a trial. If that man is guilty, it hasn't the slightest thing to do with the man F. E. Betts, who exercises his constitutional right and says,

I AM NOT GUITY.

I put the Government to the proof of this and stand like a man before my fellow countrymen. Fisher admits that he is guilty, that he had the intent to do wrong, and that is what you must prove: Betts denies that, and Fisher's evidence is put in here as the sworn evidence of a man who admits that he is guilty as a dog of the offence charged in this indictment.

"He asks you to believe that he, an intelligent man 30 years of age, went down there and sat like a moon-faced idiot looking at the board, trying for four months to learn the names of the stocks. He asks you to believe that he was nothing but "a mouth organ" in that institution.

"Fisher has been contradicted by every witness that has taken the stand."

In conclusion Mr. Bartlett touched briefly on the evidence of several witnesses and asked the jury to give the evidence the closest attention to find Mr. F. E. Betts not guilty.

ARGUMENT OF GOVERNMENT.

"In the light of all the testimony in this case what have we here? I think pretty soon it can be stated almost in a single word. It matters not what statements were made to these people, this money was taken by a scheme and was stolen from them.

"That is the foundation of our charge against Betts and that we have proved in this case, gentlemen, by evidence so overwhelming that I can add nothing to it by any argument I can make. Betts's references to R. G. Dun & Co. in his circular was false and fraudulent.

"When Mr. Betts asked a man to 'participate' or 'co-operate' in a deal he meant the sort of co-operation or participation as occurs between the fish and the fisherman.

"We now come to these men from Bath, Maine. Betts has got a coterie of 'gentlemen.' I think Mr. Pratt called them, down in Bath, Maine, and for some purpose of his own he has chosen to have transactions with them in which they are said to have made some profits. There transactions were back in November, 1900, and there is not a scrap of paper in this case to show that one of these Bath people's money was ever legitimately invested in anything.

"Now, gentlemen, we have called Mr. Fisher as a witness in this case, and now he is called a cur and a moon-faced idiot who sat for four months staring at a board. Well, gentlemen, there are in this case about Fisher. He had been a pretty good man until his association with Frederick E. Betts. Did Fisher sit staring at that board for four months? If he did it was because it suited Betts' purpose to have him there. What did Betts want of him? He wanted his name.

"Where are the books of the concern kept by Miss Maitland? Last Sunday they were at the house of Mr. Betts and there they are today. They would be the best vindication of the innocence of Mr. Betts if there had been a legitimate transaction. Those books you never have seen and never will see." Mr. Moulton closed his argument at 1.35 o'clock.

Judge Lowell then charged the jury. He defined the crimes of using the mail fraudulently. The pleading of guilty of Fisher should not be taken against Mr. Fisher. Judge Lowell finished at 2.20 o'clock.

THE PENALTY.

A motion for sentence will not be made until the bill of exceptions has been made out, as is the intention of the defence. Assistant District Attorney Casey will, however, request on Thursday next that Betts bail be increased from $5,000 to $10,000.

The maximum penalty, says the Boston Herald, for the misdemeanor of which Betts has been declared guilty is six months on each count. Eight of the indictments against him contain three counts each, and the ninth contains two counts, making 26 counts in all. This would make the extreme penalty to which he is liable, 13 years. The misdemeanor is also punishable by fine, and it has been suggested that the penalty will probably be settled in this way.

After the verdict had been rendered and the jury dischared, with the thanks of the court for the faithful performance of its duty, Asst.-Dist.-Atty. Casey made a motion that Betts' bail be increased to $10,000 on one indictment. This was in view of his understanding that Mr. Dinegan, Betts' surety, wanted to surrender him.

A consultation between counsel and court followed, after which Atty. Pratt adjourned to the corridor with Mr. Dinegan, to talk matters over. There he was joined by Atty. Bartlett, who had not been present when the verdict was given. In a little while they came in and informed the court that Mr. Betts' surety had no desire to surrender him.

Judge Lowell then said that on Thursday next he would make an order for an increase of bail to the sum mentioned by the assistant district attorney.

John M. Fisher, who was originally one of the defendants in the case, but who pleaded guilty last Monday and took the witness stand in behalf of the government, was an interested listener to the verdict. His face was wreathed in smiles when the foreman of the jury responded "guilty" to the questions of the clerk.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The chief novelty at Keith's for the week of October 6 is Mlle. Capell, who is described as "the latest European sensation in the line of equestrianism." The young woman is said to be quite handsome and her horse, a full-blooded Arabian, is the most beautiful equine of the high school class ever seen here. Mlle. Capell also has a troupe of four hunting dogs that assist in her act. In the regular vaudeville will be Hugh Stanton and Florence Modena, in the laughable sketch, "A Bargain Fiend;" the musical Johnstones, the greatest xylophone players in the country; Slater and Murphy, in a coon grand march, introducing some new stunts in buck dancing; Parros brothers, wonderful equilibrists; Reed and Shaw, muscular acrobatic comedians, and Carolyn Young, a talented whistling soloist. R. J. Jose, the favorite ballad singer, will be continued, but will change his repertoire of songs.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

"The Sign of the Cross," that most successful of all the semi-religious plays, is drawing large audiences to the Boston Music Hall and the capacity of this popular theatre has been well tested at all performances of this charming play. "The sign of the Cross" gives way next Monday afternoon to Reilly and Woods' big company of comedians, singers and dancers. This season they have a company including some of the highest salaried artists on the vaudeville stage and they present an entertainment that is bright, lively and interesting from start to finish. The entire company is seen in a laughable musical comedy, entitlrd "The Funny Page,' and introducing to the stage such characters as' Happy Hooligan, Alphonse and Gaston, Mrs. Katzenjammer, Foxey Grandpa, Dinkelspeil and others more or less samiliar to the readers of the comic supplements. The engagement is for one week only, with the usual matinees each afternoon at which the best seats in the house and 25 cents. This big attraction will be followed by Lottie Witliams Slater in the latest melodramatic success, "Only a Shop Girl."

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The great favor shown Shakesperian productions at the Castle Square Theatre has led the management of this popular play-house to present "The Taming of the Shrew" as the attraction at this theatre the coming week. Those unfamiliar with the history of the play will be interested to know that, while its earliest known edition is dated 1623, there was printed in 1495 an anonymous play, known as "A pleasant conceited historic called, the taming of the shrew," so like in character and incident that it would justify a claim to being an earlier edition of the play.

Those who hold to the originality of the play known in all recognized editions of Shakespeare, argue that he took a story common among the people as foundation for "The Taming of the Shrew," as another less-known playwright had done before him. The most popular version of this play known to the stage of today is that prepared by the late Manager Augustin Daly, under whose direction it was most successful for many years in his repertoire on both sides the Atlantic.

PARK THEATRE.

At the Park Theatre beginning Monday, October 6, Frank Harvey's popular melodrama, "Woman against Woman" will be revived by Corse Payton and his permanent stock company. "Woman against Woman" has always been a favorite play with Boston theatre goers, and as it has not been seen here for several seasons it is certain of a warm welcome back to Boston. The cast will comprise all the members of Mr. Payton's company, and an excellent performance in every way is assured. The scenery and costumes will be on an especially liberal and elaborate scale. His orchestral concerts before each performance and between the acts are thoroughly enjoyable, and the Tuesday afternoon receptions are becoming more and more popular. Next Tuesday afternoon, at the close of the performance of "Woman against Woman," all the ladies and children in the audience are invited to the stage, where they will be received by Nina Abell Drinker, the leading lady of the company, and partake of refreshments.

A LIVELY SUNDAY RIOT

In a Haverhill District Populated by Foreigners

FIVE HUNDRED TOOK PART

One Man Had a Thumb Bitten Off During the Melee—Women Took a Prominent Part and Stones and Bricks Flew Freely

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 6.—One of the worst race riots that has occurred in this city for years created great excitement in the River street district yesterday afternoon, and for a half hour 500 men, women and children were involved in a fight on River street, sticks and other missiles being freely used, causing bruised heads and bloody faces in abundance. Seven arrests have been made and warrants were issued at police headquarters for as many more persons.

River street is mainly populated by Italians, Syrians, Poles and Jews, and it was between the last two named races that the trouble occurred. Just how the row started is not known, but as near as can be learned it began in a block owned by Charles Rosengard, a local real estate dealer. The block is occupied by Polish families and Rosengard visited the premises for the purpose of collecting rents. Objections were raised and Rosengard claims that he was assaulted and thrown into the street.

Meyer Feinberg and Nathan Fine attempted to assist Rosengard and a general fight ensued, the three men being roughly used, Feinburg having one of his thumbs bitten off. George Newberg and Morris Newman were also badly battered, and a riot call was sent to the police station. Patrolman Hussey and Special Officer Glogofsky arrested two men after a hard tussle, when the crowd jumped upon Glogofsky and he was forced to allow the prisoners to escape.

The street was filled with fighting people, a number of women figuring in the riot, thereby greatly aggravating the situation. Bricks and stones were flying in every direction. City Marshal McLaughlin with Patrolmen Worcester and Donahue hurried to the scene, but by the time they arrived the crowd had dispersed.

A Startling Discovery

Indianapolis, Oct. 6.—Sensational developments came to light here in the investigation of the wholesale graveyard robberies that have occurred in this vicinity during the last few months, when detectives unearthed 10 bodies in the cellar of the Medical College of Indiana. A gang of 10 negroes was arrested several days ago, charged with the ghoulish work, and their leader, Rufus Cantrell, has confessed to many of the robberies and declares that other gangs have been operating in cemeteries in this and adjoining counties.

Another Colombian Complaint

Washington, Oct. 6.—The action of Admiral Casey in giving notice of his intention to decline to transport combatants, ammunition or arms across the Isthmus of Panama is greatly regretted at the Colombian legation. One member of the legation staff expressed the opinion that it would produce a most unfavorable impression among the people of Colombia should later developments show that Admiral Casey's step has been accurately reported.

Stepped in Front of Car

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 6.—One of Plaistow's oldest and best known citizens, Warren Huntress, aged 80, was killed by an electric car at Plaistow yesterday. Huntress, who was deaf, attempted to cross the track in front of the car. Motorman Walsh reversed the power, but was unable to stop his car in time to avert the fatality.

Dredger Went to the Bottom

War Veterans Gather

Washington, Oct. 6.—The 36th annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will begin here this evening and with the meeting of the various auxiliary organizations affiliated with the main body will continue until next Saturday. At the railroad stations it is said that the number of persons coming to the encampment is perhaps greater than ever before brought to the city on any occasion.

Two Missing Boys Found Dead

Camden, N. J., Oct. 6.—John Coffin, aged 11, and Price Jennings, aged 14, who disappeared from their parents' homes here last Wednesday, were found dead in a small wood near Haddon Heights. Paul Woodward, 18 years old, is under arrest, charged with having caused the death of the children. It is said the police are working on the theory that the boys were poisoned.

Yankee Capital in Ireland

Belfast, Oct. 6.—An American syndicate, with a capital of $20,000,000, proposes to erect large mills on the waterside at Belfast, Londonderry, Dublin, Cork, Waterford and Galway, with a view of importing corn and wheat in bulk, milling it and distributing it by means of coasting steamers owned by the syndicate.

Afraid of Anarchists

Copenhagen, Oct. 6.—The strictest precautions are being taken to guard the life of the Dowager Empress Marie Dagmar of Russia, who is now here with her father, King Christian, owing to what the police consider to be an authentic report that several Italian anarchists are to make an attempt to assassinate her.

An Expensive Call

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Professor Lorenz of Vienna has been summoned to Chicago in the case of Lolita Armour, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Armour, who is suffering from a congenital dislocation of the hip. The operation does not call for the use of the knife, but is strictly one of manipulation.

Twenty-Eight Cars Wrecked

Geneva, Oct. 6.—A meeting yesterday of the striking employes of the street car lines led to serious rioting. Twenty-eight cars were wrecked and the police had difficulty in restoring order. Many arrests were made. The present strike started a week ago.

PROPOSAL TO RESUME WORK

Washington, Oct. 6.—In an earnest effort to expedite the adjustment of the coal strike problem another conference over the situation was held at the White House yesterday and adjourned after three hours of deliberation. No statement was given out as to the conclusions reached and every participant absolutely refused to discuss what had taken place during the meeting.

The conference was called for yesterday, although it was Sunday, in view of the extraordinary importance to the American people of a solution of the question. Besides the president there were present Secretary of War Root, Secretary of the Navy Moody, Attorney General Knox, Postmaster General Payne and Carroll D. Wright, United States commissioner of labor. The last named was summoned to attend the conference on account of his expert knowledge of the situation in the anthracite coal fields and because of his personal investigation of the conditions there which he made some months ago at the instance of the president.

It was notable that only four of the members of the cabinet were present. This, however, was significant and only of the fact that three of these four were lawyers and that the issue involved was one which called for the deliberation of trained legal minds. The fourth cabinet officer, Postmaster General Payne, has taken a prominent part in the preliminary conferences over the coal situation which led up to the conference with the railroad presidents and the miners' representatives Friday and besides has had a lifelong identification with corporate interests which are involved in the present question. The fact that Mr. Payne also has been one of the closest advisors for many years in the national councils of his party likewise is important in connection with the personnel of the conference. It began shortly after 10 o'clock, the time fixed by the president.

When those who were to participate arrived at the White House, they found Surgeon General Rixey of the navy and Dr. Lung, the president's physician, already there, making the morning call on the distinguished patient. This caused a delay of a few minutes. When the two physicians left it was reported that the president's condition was progressing satisfactorily and there were no untoward developments.

The president, in expressing his views at the outset of the conference, talked earnestly and showed a deep feeling. His voice at times could be heard down stairs. Several times during the conference Secretary Cortelyou was summoned into the room and directed to prepare certain matters for the consideration of the president and his advisors. This was taken to indicate that some action of one nature or another was about to be consummated.

When the conference adjourned a few minutes before 1 o'clock all those who had joined in it declined to talk. Every member of the cabinet and Colonel Wright, the only outsider who was present, was pledged to the president to absolute secrecy as to what had occurred within the conference room.

The utmost efforts were made to guard against publicity, just as the presidential summons which called the conference had been made in a very quiet and carefully guarded way. Not since the Spanish war has there been such reticence shown at a conference of such a character as was observed yesterday.

In this state of absolute reticence of every one of the parties to the conference it is almost impossible to do more than draw the most general of conclusions as to the nature of the proceedings, based upon what preceded the meeting. The known facts are that the president has reached the conclusion that he has nothing to expect save refusal from a further appeal to the coal operators and therefore has decided to look for relief from a situation, which in his view is fast growing intolerable, to the miners' side. He feels that he hardly can expect them to make the sacrifice of all of their contentions without boiding out at least a promise of some return and the question before him is as to his ability to do this. He can pledge himself to appeal to congress to examine into the justice of the miners' complaints and remedy them so far as lies in the power of the legislative branch, backed by the earnest good will of the executive. Also he can suggest to Governor Stone of Pennsylvania that he cause the Pennsylvania legislature likewise to make an inquiry, perhaps hastening the usual methods by calling an extra session. But these pledges would be given only on condition that the men go at once into the mines to get out with 'all speed the coal for which the people are suffering.

To adopt this course means the continuance of the policy of exerting moral suasion to end the strike. It is certain that thus far the president has not found a single one of his constitutional advisors who could suggest any departure from this policy; no one could find a method sanctioned by law or constitution which promised relief and involved the use of duress against either the operators or the miners.

So it is believed that yesterday's conference was called by the president with the purpose of putting in exact shape the details of a plan conceived in its rough outlines even before the departure of President Mitchell last Friday afternoon from the mixed conference. The three hours spent in consultation yesterday were none too long to put into form the twin propositions, one to the miners' organization and the other to Governor Stone, and the fact that Secretary Cortelyou was called on to prepare one or more statements at the direction of the president is taken as an indication that messages were sent out at the end of the conference and that the reticence of all of the parties is explainable perhaps by their desire to avoid the discourtesy of publishing the nature of these before they are received by the persons to whom they are addressed, as well as by a wish to escape the complication of the negotiations by heated public discussion at this stage. That the parties to the conference feel that they have achieved something was made evident by the expression of one of a belief that the miners soon will be again at work.

Sixth Month of Contest

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 6.—The beginning of the sixth month of the strike shows no material change in the situation. The operators told President Roosevelt on Friday that 17,000 men are at work and that 15 percent of the normal coal production is being mined. Mr. Mitchell then denied that such a number of men are mining coal. He said the operators are including in the 17,000 all the engineers, firemen and pump runners (of whom there are about 9000) fire bosses, foremen, carpenters, clerks and all other employes. He also denied that 15 percent of the normal production is being sent to market.

Miners' Strike In Alabama

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 6.—If the orders of the officials of the United Mine Workers are obeyed, 4200 miners in the employ of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company will be idle today. The strike was inaugurated several days ago on account of the failure of the company to deduct $1 from the miners' wages without a written consent from each miner and has extended to the Blocton and Blue Creek fields.

Dynamite Used on Track

Tamaqua, Pa., Oct. 6.—Early Sunday morning a section of track on the Silver Creek branch of the Philadelphia and Reading road was blown up with dynamite. The explosion shook the houses in New Philadelphia and Silver Creek. When the workmen's train reached the scene of the explosion a force of 50 deputies were on hand to escort them to the colliery.

Crippled For Want of Coal

Newcastle, Pa., Oct. 6.—The Shenango Valley steel mill closed down at midnight, on account of inability to secure coal for the boilers. The plant employs about 1000 men. All the industrial plants in the Shenango valley are having trouble in securing coal.

A $9,000,000 Failure

Odessa, Oct. 6.—The failure of the great metallurgical works at Kertch for $9,000,000 has caused a flutter on the Russian stock markets and has resulted in making idle 5000 men.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Nobody would care a continental if all of the coal railroad Presidents should resign, as threatened. If their places could not more than be made good the country has certainly come to a bad pass.—Lynn Item.

☞Some interesting inside information about the "get-rich-quick concerns" is being given out at the Fisher-Betts trial in Boston, and the coolness with which the plans for daylight robbery were made by this precious pair is somewhat astounding. At the same time there is little new in all that is being developed, for it is the same old game that has been repeatedly worked and invariably finds the "suckers" necessary for its prosperity. The story told at the trial in Boston will undoubtedly be read by scores of people who are either tempting fortune in a similar scheme today or are ready to try their luck in the first scheme of the sort that presents itself. There is evidence every day that the people like to be humbugged.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞One hundred thousands tons of coal has been bought by the navy department for use in the winter manoeuvres in West Indian waters. A New York newspaper protests against the burning up of so much fuel in play while people at home are suffering from its lack. Most of this coal is stored at the Brooklyn navy yard, and if it could be sold by the government would go far towards helping many families out of their straits. How such a proposition would be received by the administration we cannot, of course, say. Yet it is by no means unreasonable. If the government of this country exists for the purpose of assuring the welfare of the people, why not let the coal be used where it would do the most good, even if the use were not in the line of strictly governmental activity? We suppose somebody will get up to say that it would not be constitutional for the government to sell coal. Perhaps not; under the existing conditions it would be humane, which is of a great deal more importance.—New Bedford Standard.

☞One of the beauties of the public ownership of "public utilities" is now being experimented by the colony of Victoria, which has gone about as far as any community can in shortening the working day and advancing wages and owning railroads and carrying on its business for the advantage of its employes. The ministry found it absolutely necessary recently to cut down expenditures, and to that end it reduced the pay of persons employed by the colonial government. At once the railway employes struck. The members of the legislature became alarmed at the opposition of the public employees and voted against the ministry. There was nothing left for the ministry but to dissolve session and appeal to the country, and the premier is now begging the electors to stand by the government and to prevent their own servants from paralizing the administration, including a suspension of railway traffic. It is reported that the ministry is being well supported, and the opposition is said to be demoralized, but it is also said that the campaign is proceeding vigorously, and the public servants and the labor party are secretly combining to oppose candidates who favor retrenchment.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

LABOR HAS RIGHTS.

Quincy Pastor Believes Church Will Side with Laboring Men.

The sermon of Rev. E. N. Hardy of Bethany church Sunday morning was timely and of interest. Speaking on "The education of the public conscience" he said in part:

"There are two articles of faith in which every church must concur: 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy mind and with all thy strength,' and 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' I wish to add a third, which all churches agree is a definition of the second: 'Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets.'

Measuring the striking miner by these rules, he fails to come up to the requirement, if it be true that he has interfered with the inalienable right of another man to work. That they have the right to organize, to refuse to work for a given wage, is true. They surely have a right to an honest wage for honest work and did not their strike affect a multitude of their fellow-men we should be unable to dismiss the question until we had fully examined the intricate problem of remuneration. Notwithstanding, we agree with President Roosevelt that it is their duty, irrespective of their right, to end the strike.

"Measure the operators by these rules, and especially the golden rule, and they appear to us to fall far lower on the scale. The 20th century is a little too far advanced to condone the refusal to arbitrate a matter of so great importance. President Baer's repeated reference to the Almighty is, to say the least, supremely disgusting. What has the church to say about this matter at this critical stage? It can at least declare both parties wrong. It can even go further and affirm that the root of the whole matter is selfishness. If the great principle which I have presented prevailed, there would have been no strike.

"Other things being equal, the side is most to blame which has the most light. The operators' claim that the miners are so ignorant that they are paid all they are worth is amusing when they are thoroughly checkmated by John Mitchell, a young man 30 years of age, and who had his training with the men whose cause he champions in the mines.

"It is my impression that ere long the church will side with the laboring man, not because he is less selfish, but because he has rights which must be respected. Andrew Carnegie boasts that he has given away $45,000,000 away for the past few years. I have been trying to conceive how any man can honestly earn $45,000,000 a year, and I query if our children's children do not call such accumulation of wealth or property stealing. I cannot conceive how any man who loves his neighbor as himself can make that amount of money.

Coal Strike Resolutions.

Another meeting was held in City Square Saturday night under the auspices of the Social Democrats. The speakers were Levi H. Turner of Atlantic and Patrick Mahoney of Boston. Mr. Turner confined himself to local issues and criticised records of Representatives Badger and McKnight.

Before the meeting adjourned Mr. Turner read a set of resolutions calling upon President Roosevelt to assemble congress at once, to take such steps as will place the coal miners and railroads adjacent thereto under the control of the government. The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Italian Wedding Celebrated.

On Saturday a miniature of the stars and strips rippled and floated from the top of the derrick at Andrew Deane & Co.'s stone yard, Intervale street.

The occasion was in honor of the marriage of Joseph Cassina to Mary Taugherlini, both of Quincy.

After the wedding ceremony, which took place before noon at City Hall, the happy bridegroom and his bride with their attendants repaired to the residence of Charles Scatina, on Columbia street, where a large number of their friends were gathered to welcome them, and fittingly celebrated the momentous event.

Among the friends who assembled to make happy the event were: Joseph Corstelioni, Narcus Waloiz, Ciconi Vincenzo, Joseph Pangrazzi, Crosta Felice, Palmero Johon, Ida Taugherlini, Fermina Ciseoni, Eugenia Bianhi and Rosa Castilioni.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

MAYOR'S LETTER.

Correspondent Criticises His Claims and Figures.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Your prompt expose of the claims of Mayor Bryant for retrenchment and economy are to be commended by the taxpayers. It has been very plain to all observers that there has been no economy in city expenditures, and certainly, as the Ledger shows very plainly, there has been no retrenchment when the city goes to the limit on appropriations and municipal debt. It is extremely fortunate that the State had placed limits as above. A few more years of such extravagant expenditures as have prevailed the past few years might depopulate the city if it did not bring us to the "verge of bankruptcy" which we hear so much about.

I quite agree with you, too, that the Mayor is open to criticism for sending out a campaign document with the tax bills and it was a campaign document without question. Had Mr. Bryant not been a candidate for reelection the letter would never have appeared.

If the city has to pay for the printing of such a letter it is a clear case of extravagant expenditure of city funds. As the Mayor's balance for printing on Sept 1, was less than $10, it may be interesting to learn to what appropriation the work is charged.

Mr. Bryant takes considerable credit for the payment of the Metropolitan Park assessments for three years, but he is silent on the fact that the Assessors of 1901 raised the money last year to pay the assessments of both 1900 and 1901, by increasing the levy for overlayings. Principal Assessor Thompson will vouch for this.

The taxpayers are evidently being hoodwinked on the Sewer expenses. The Mayor says the expenses have been taken care of by receipts. Strictly speaking there are no receipts as there are no annual rates charged as in the Water department. The income which has been used is simply the assessments which have been levied upon abuttors. According to the Mayor's figures, the Sewer system of the city is worth $417,176.55. As the abuttors pay one-half the cost in assessments, one would naturally expect the liabilities would be about one-half this sum, or even less, as some of the maturing bonds have been paid, but the Mayor in his summary says the city's liabilities for sewers are $374,900.00, almost as much as the assets.

Property of taxpayers is being advertised and sold by the Collector for non payment of sewer assessments, yet when payments are made the sewer debt is reduced but little. How is it? What will support the Sewer department a few years' hence when there is very little construction and but few assessments to levy.

The Mayor finds the liabilities for highways and bridges to be $240,057.00 with assets doubtful. Here is where the extravagance has come in. This is a large debt to accummulate for streets in thirteen years, in addition to the very liberal annual appropriations and maturing debt which the taxpayers have paid.

Other criticisms of the Mayor's letter might be made, but I will leave these to others.

A COAL SUPPLY.

It is men of action, not of theory, who are wanted at this time in our crisis relative to a coal supply. The Rev. F. A. Friguglietti, pastor of St. John's church announced at mass Sunday that if ten citizens would unite with him, he would make an effort to obtain 4,000 tons of Welsh coal, which would be sold at cost. If coal could not be obtained he would buy a large supply of wood at wholesale. The movement should be encouraged.

Fr. Francis said further, that should the strike continue he should close the main auditorium of his church for the winter and hold all services in the basement.

Barre Men Not Satisfied.

The Monumental News for October says: If any reliance is to be placed in the proverbial straws that are supposed to indicate the direction of the wind, there is every reason for believing that the granite cutters of Barre, Vt., will make a demand for an increase of wages to take effect March 1st next, at which time the existing agreements between the cutters and the manufacturers will expire. Whether or not the manufacturers are likely to give favorable consideration to any such proposition is purely a matter of conjecture at this time. The limit may have been reached, but the condition that confronts the retail dealer just now is the importance of placing his spring delivery orders sufficiently early to insure their completion before any complications arise. There is nothing to be gained by waiting.

CHOICE DENVER BEVERAGES

They Include "Creosote Cocktail." "Onionade" and "Kerosene Fizz."

These are the days of glory for the "soda water jerkers" in the downtown drugstores. An epidemic of advertising the artists has spread around all the establishments until nearly every one is calling attention both to the peculiar excellence of their concoctions and the star performers behind the marble slabs.

GET ARTHUR TO MAKE YOU A CREOSOTE COCKTAIL. They're Good.

COME IN AND GEORGE WILL MAKE YOU AN ONIONADE. Sweetens the Breath.

A Lawrence street establishment presents the following:

BOB AND TOMMY BOTH KNOW HOW TO MAKE A KEROSENE FIZZ.

But a Broadway establishment has most thoroughly paved the way for an entente cordiale between the customer and the man at the fountain in these touching words:

JUST WINK AT BILLY. BILLY KNOWS.

—Denver Times.

MRS. MURPHY'S GRIEF.

Hippopotamus Grows Hysterical When Separated From Her Baby.

Mrs. Murphy of Central park is not a wash lady, but a hippopotamus, says the New York Times. She lives in a tub, therefore, or something like one, and she has a mate named Caliph and a baby hippo named Lotus. The removal of the family from summer to winter quarters made a scene in which pathos and comedy were oddly mingled.

By persuasive prods of pitchforks in the hands of the keepers Caliph, much against his will, was induced to take up his quarters in the lion house tank. Then more prods forced Mrs. Murphy to join her mate. The trouble came when Lotus, who is a very likely child and has never been parted from his mother, was put in a separate tank.

The bereaved Mrs. Murphy opened wide her cavernous jaws and complained bitterly. She thrashed about wildly and bellowed like a huge cow robbed of its calf and altogether behaved with such feminine tempestuousness that the very lions grew uneasy. The roaring of the lions only made the bereaved mother more frantic. She plunged more madly and bellowed more loudly, while Lotus added his baby voice to the pandemonium. It was the voice of one that refused to be comforted, and for a time the keepers had all that they could do, and the lion house sounded like an African jungle at midnight.

HELEN GOULD AIDS FIREMEN

Gives Check to Company and Will Build Clubhouse.

The members of Jackson Engine company, a volunteer organization of Tarrytown, N. Y., the other night, says the New York Press, were entertained by Miss Helen M. Gould in Lyndhurst, her country seat. She gave a check for $100 to be added to the fund for the purchase of a new chemical engine.

She spoke of building a clubhouse for the use of the firemen. When she asked if they would make use of such a building, there was a great chorus of "Yes."

Miss Gould said she might build the clubhouse near Woody Crest, the manual training home for boys which she maintains near Lyndhurst. Miss Gould has given uniforms to the employees on her place, and they have formed two baseball nines.

☞"As we view the matter, the coal operators make a great mistake in refusing to recognize the labor unions. Such recognition by no means puts them under any obligation to submit to such terms as a union may demand or to any other terms, but it would fix definitely the responsibility of continuing the strike on the labor leaders. If there is to be legislation which shall solve strike problems it must be by making such leaders equally amenable to law as the employers of any infraction of the terms of settlement.—Waltham Free Press.

Social at Atlantic.

Miss Lillian Hammond of Billings street gave an informal social at her home Saturday evening, in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles L. Hammond, who has recently returned from the South. An auction sale during the first part of the evening created a great deal of laughter and a wide distribution of beans in payment of the pretty gift each guest bought. Miss Gertrude Hall was successful in guessing the largest number of advertisements from appropriate pictures. A merry game of foot-ball was indulged in, by blowing a ping-pong ball through the goal of either Yale or Harvard, the former team scoring 3 to1. A clothes-pin race was one of the mirth-provoking features of the evening. After refreshments were served, the guests were called upon to show their poetic ability, and some very amusing rhymes were the result. Miss Hammond proved herself a very excellent hostess and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The Afterno on Fire.

Box 41 at the junction of Granite and School streets was pulled at 1.27 this afternoon for a slight fire in a small unoccupied barn on Granite street adjourning the granite sheds of the Swithin Bros.' Granite Co.

The fire started on the floor in a lot of hay sweepings but did not get far before discovered. It was quickly extinguished with a hand chemical. The cause of the fire is unknown, but as it has been on fire twice before, it was doubtless the work of an incendiary.

THE FUNERAL OF ZOLA

Attended by Thousands of Workingmen of Paris

TRIBUTES TO DEAD AUTHOR

From Friends Who Lay Great Stress on the Part He Took In Behalf of Dreyfus—Large Force of Military Acted as Guardians of the Peace

Paris, Oct. 6.—The remains of Emile Zola were laid at rest yesterday with simple but impressive ceremonies. It was such a funeral as Zola himself would have wished, without pomp, but with the serried ranks of thousands of working men, many accompanied by their wives, sorrowfully marching behind his coffin. Municipal guards, mounted and on foot, lined the route, but except for a company of infantry, which rendered military honors to the body as it was carried from the house to the hearse, they were there as guardians of order and not as participants in the ceremony.

Former Captain Dreyfus marched in the funeral cortege, according to the authority of the prefect of police; but he passed completely unnoticed by the crowd. A little distance behind him came Mme. Dreyfus, accompanied by her father. Dreyfus sent a handsome wreath which was placed beside the coffin.

Preceding the hearse were three other cars almost hidden beneath masses of magnificent floral offerings from Zola's admirers in all parts of the world.

Mme. Zola wished to follow her husband's body to the grave, but her doctors absolutely forbade her to do so; she therefore bade farewell to the remains in the mortuary chamber.

As the bier emerged to the street the mounted officer of infantry saluted it with his sword and the two lines of soldiers presented arms. The crowd of mourners in front of the house uncovered and amid a deep silence, broken only by the melancholy rolling of muffled drums, the coffin was laid in the hearse.

Among the masses of spectators which lined the route there were probably many who were not admirers of Zola, but the deep respect for the dead which is inherent in Frenchmen prevented a discordant note, and everybody uncovered as the hearse passed. The cortege entered the deserted cemetery and followed the avenue through the tombs to the cross roads, where a small platform had been erected for the funeral orators. This platform faced the catafalque upon which the coffin was deposited. Here it rested beneath the overhanging boughs of lime trees from which, during the speeches, yellow leaves fluttered down upon it.

The final oration was delivered by Anatole France, one of the most ardent champions of the revision of the Dreyfus case. He said that Zola's work could be compared only to that of Tolstoi, but that Tolstoi had built up a city of resignation, whereas the ideal of Zola had been work. The speaker dwelt upon the Democratic aim of the dead novelist's work and then burst into a powerful tribute to Zola's part in the Dreyfus affair and a denunciation of his enemies. He said he would not maintain a cowardly silence before the coffin of his friend, and spoke of the sinister situation in the country when the populace, misled by monstrous lies and excited by odious declarations, believed it had been betrayed and felt exasperated. Then Zola wrote to the President of France that terrible letter in which he denounced forgery and felony. M. France then recalled the yells of rage and shouts of "death" which had pursued Zola to the law court during the long trial, which he said had been judged in voluntary ignorance of the case, on false testimony and amid the rattling of swords.

In those days, continued M. France, many good citizens despaired of the salvation of the fatherland and of the moral fortune of the country. But all was saved; Zola's courageous words had awakened France. The consequences of his action were incalculable. A new order of things had been founded; better justice and a deeper knowledge of the rights of all men had come from his act.

At the conclusion of the orations the relatives of the deceased novelist grouped themselves beside the coffin and a monster procession, composed mainly of members of labor organizations, was allowed to enter the cemetery and file past the body. Each delegation brought a wreath and deposited it beside the coffin. The people plucked the flowers and ferns which had been strewn on the coffin during the ceremony and carried them away as souvenirs until none was left. After the march past, the coffin was placed in a temporary vault.

The proceedings were perfectly orderly until the delegations left the cemetery. Then several of the leading actors in the Dreyfus affair, such as Colonel Picquart, Maitre Labori and M. Jaures, were recognized and loudly cheered. Maitre Labori, who was greatly excited, addressed a few words to the crowd; but, fearing that his words would lead to trouble, the police induced him and Colonel Picquart to enter the lodge at the gate of the cemetery and remain there until the crowd had dispersed.

LODGE ON COAL STRIKE

Says Anthracite Mines Are Not Under Control of a Trust

Boston, Oct. 6.—The speech of Senator Lodge at the Essex club Saturday evening was noteworthy, dealing as it did with the coal situation. He expressed earnest sympathy with and emphatic support for the president in his efforts to end the coal strike. He said: "I feel rather strongly in regard to the attitude taken by some of the conferees, but there is one thing which I think we can all say, and that is, that the President of the United States has acted in a manner which all Americans approve. I think also it is a painful illustration of the wisdom of what the president has been saying in various speeches in New England and elsewhere in regard to the necessity of some government supervision or regulation of what are commonly called trusts.

"There is no trust in the anthracite region. The mines are owned by large corporations and by small corporations and by individuals, but there is no such thing as a trust really, as a matter of accurate definition.

"There are certain large corporations which it is the fashion to call trusts, and there are certain large corporations in the anthracite coal fields, and this strike shows the necessity of some kind of supervision and regulation of these great corporations, which produce the necessaries of life, by the national government. These great corporations are as essential to modern business as anything can possibly be. They are good servants, but they are dangerous masters.

"There must be some power that can control them in the last resort. There is a cry to take the duty off coal. Personally I see no possible objection to taking that duty off. I should like to see congress pass a law authorizing the president to proclaim the removal of the duty on bituminous coal coming from Canada just as soon as Canada takes off the duty from our coal going into Canada."

American League Made Money

Boston, Oct. 6.—Major league baseball, and in fact practically all baseball, for the season of 1902 is a thing of the past. On Saturday the curtain dropped for the season on league baseball in this city. The season just closed furnishes a striking contrast from a local standpoint. The American league made large money, estimated at between $30,000 and $50,000. The National league, on the other hand, lost big money, a conservative estimate being $25,000. Both teams finished third in their leagues.

Would Debate Liquor Question

Concord, N. H., Oct. 6.—Henry F. Hollis, Democratic candidate for governor, desires to meet N. J. Bachelder, Republican candidate for the same office, in joint debate on the question of prohibition in New Hampshire and its bearing on the attitude of the two great parties. To this end a letter to that effect was made public yesterday afternoon by the Democratic state committee.

Fur Shop Cleaned Out

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 6.—The establishment of Marshall Larner, fur manufacturer, was entered Saturday night and robbed of furs valued at nearly $3000. Entrance was effected to the building by a rear window, the thieves rigging a rope ladder, made of a single rope with loops for footholds, to an awning hook over the piazza. No trace of the perpetrators has been found.

Brothers' Lives Crushed Out

Barton, Vt., Oct. 6.—Two deaf and dumb brothers, John and Sampson Brown of Brownington, were struck and killed by an express train while they were driving over a crossing at Barton Landing. This crossing is hidden by a curve on the track and is considered a dangerous place, two boys having been killed there by an express train last summer.

Spain proposes to provide itself with a better navy. Improvement would be easy, but reaching a first-class naval standard in these times is a difficult achievement.

COMMON SENSE AND CONSUMPTION

The treatment of consumption is every year becoming more successful. The majority of cases can be cured if taken in time. Not more medicine but more common sense is the cause of the improvement.

As a builder of flesh and restorer of strength Scott's Emulsion is still unequaled. The special action of Scott's Emulsion on the lungs is as much of a mystery as ever—but an undoubted fact.

Common sense and Scott's Emulsion is good treatment.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

UNDER MILITARY GUARD

Mob Threatened Destruction of Railway Company's Property

Glens Falls, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Soldiers of the National Guard are again guarding the peace of this town. The militia company of this place is now protecting the property of the Hudson Valley electric railway in Glens Falls. A squad is also guarding a bridge at Sandy Hill, having been sent there following a report that one of the canal bridges there was to be blown up.

The presence of militia is due to the action of a riotous mob which held possession of Glens Falls for four hours Saturday night. The mob was composed of sympathizers with the striking employes of the electric railway and the police force was powerless against it.

At Cool's switch four cars were stalled at one time. They were soon abandoned, the non-union motormen and conductors placing themselves in the hands of the police for protection or deserting to the strikers. The car windows were smashed and a perfect fusillade of bricks and stones were hurled at the cars.

Conductor Currier was so badly injured by rough handling and by being hit in the head with missiles that he is in a hospital in a serious condition.

About this time Company A made its appearance and took the motormen and conductors under protection. The militiamen used the butts of their guns and threatened to shoot. Captain Mott made several arrests. Chief of Police Patterson fired twice at persons who attempted to prevent him closing a window in the jail and who threatened him with revolvers. He thinks he hit one man.

Thirteen persons are now held for inciting riot. The town was quiet last night, as no attempt was made to run cars.

A Royal Marriage Failure

Vienna, Oct. 6.—The Neues Wiener Tageblatt publishes two letters written by the late Queen Marie Henrietta of Belgium, showing a half century of matrimonial misery. In one letter, dated Sept. 20, 1853, a month after her marriage, the queen says: "I am an unhappy woman. God is my only support. My poor mother begins to perceive what she did when she arranged my marriage. She only sought my happiness, but she now sees the contrary in the case. If God will hear my prayer I will not live longer." The other letter, written later, was in the same tenor.

Trust Fight Backed by Press

Rome, Oct. 6.—Signor Luzzati, formerly minister of finance, has contributed an article to the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna, in which he suggests a conference of European statesmen and economists in an attempt to arrive at an understanding on the subjects of trusts and combines, against which he says customs, tariffs and commercial treaties are but fragile armor. Signor Luzzati's idea is supported by other Italian economists and by the press, who declare that Europe must adopt means to meet the "American danger."

Promises Unfulfilled

New York, Oct. 6.—A committee of Boer sympathizers welcomed F. W. Reitz, formerly secretary of state of the Orange Free state, who arrived with his wife on the steamship Statendam yesterday. Reitz said: "The Boers have been tricked into forsaking their colonial allies by oral promises of Kitchener and Milner that they would endeavor to obtain at the time of the coronation amnesty of all the rebels."

Mayor Says Cars Must Run

New Orleans, Oct. 6.—Mayor Capedeville last night notified the New Orleans Railway company that it would have to operate its cars upon all lines today. The telephone cable, containing 42 wires and connecting all the barns and offices of the railway company, was cut Saturday night. The trolley feed wires also were cut in several new places during the night.

Prince In Motor Accident

Athens, Oct. 6.—A bulletin issued on the condition of Crown Prince Constantin of Greece, who was painfully injured Saturday by the overturning of his motor car near Villatator, says there are no complications. The cuts around the eye have been stitched and the remaining bruises are unimportant.

Convicted of Bribery

St. Louis, Oct. 6.—Robert McClure Snyder was convicted of bribery in the criminal court last night and was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the state penitentiary. Two of his attorneys signed his appeal bond for $25,000, securing his release.

A Bloodless Duel

Madrid, Oct. 6.—As an outcome of newspaper attacks, General Barges, captain general of Catalonia, fought a duel yesterday with pistols with the director of the newspaper El Imparcial, of Madrid. Neither of the combatants was injured.

Captured by Brigands

Salonica, Oct. 6.—Brigands have captured a Turkish landowner named Shefik Bey at Orisar, 40 miles from Monastir. He is being held for a ransom of $15,000.

TROOPS IN COAL FIELD

Whole Division of National Guard Called Out

A DEFINITE TEST OF CLAIMS

Likely to Result Before the End of the Week—Governor Declares Intention of Suppressing Disorder—Mitchell Calls For Meetings

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 7.—With the whole division of the National Guard in the field there will be 23 soldiers for each of the 430 mining operations and a little more than one for every two men now at work about the mines.

There is no settled opinion here as to what effect the calling out of the whole of the guard will have. The operators have claimed that it would break the strike by inducing to return to the mines thousands of men who they claim are only deterred now from so doing by fear of violence. The strike leaders have been saying the calling out of the Third brigade had no tendency to break the strike, but that it has had the effect of deterring men from returning to work. The present week will, it is believed, put the rival claims to a definite test.

Governor Orders Out Troops

Harrisburg, Oct. 7.—Governor Stone late last night ordered out the entire division of the National Guard of Pennsylvania to duty in the anthracite coal regions. The soldiers will be in the field today. The order calling out the guard says that men who desire to work have been beaten and driven away and their families threatened. Railroad trains have been delayed, stoned and the tracks torn up; the civil authorities are unable to maintain order and the territory involved is so extensive that the troops now on duty are insufficient to prevent all disorder.

The order further says that as tumults, riots, mobs and disorder usually occur when men attempt to work in and about coal mines, the brigadier general commanding will see that all men who desire to work and their families have ample military protection. He will protect all trains and other property from unlawful interference and will arrest all persons engaging in acts of violence and intimidation and hold them under guard until their release will not endanger the public peace; will see that threats, intimidations and all acts of violence cease at once.

Mitchell to His Followers

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 7.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers slipped out of town before dawn yesterday morning for Philadelphia, where he met Carroll D. Wright, who is President Roosevelt's personal representative on matters pertaining to the anthracite coal strike. Mr. Mitchell returned here last night, unaccompanied and unannounced, and made the simple statement that he had met the labor commissioner. He refused absolutely to discuss his visit to Philadelphia, declined to say where in Philadelphia he met Mr. Wright or what passed between them. Subsequently he informed a representative of The Associated Press that he saw other gentlemen while there, but declined to disclose their identity.

A conference between Mitchell and his district presidents continued until 11:15 p. m. and at 11:30 o'clock, five minutes before the national president left for Buffalo, he gave to the press the following statement, which was hurriedly prepared after he returned from Philadelphia:

To district secretaries and all mine workers in the anthracite field:

"You have, no doubt, read in the daily papers, the proceedings of the conference at the White House last Friday in which your officers proposed an immediate resumption of work if the operators would agree with us to refer the questions at issue in the strike to the decision of the President of the United States and a tribunal named by him. You have noted the reply of the presidents of the coal-carrying roads, in which they responded to our overtures by denouncing your union, its members and officers in the most vehement and malicious manner possible. They also declared that a large majority of the strikers would return to work if given military protection and they demanded that the president send United States troops to the coal fields.

"In order to demonstrate to the people of our country that the statements of the operators are unfounded, that the mine workers are law-abiding citizens, the officers of all local unions should call mass meetings of all men on strike, union and non-union, such meetings to be held in each mining town at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 8. We know that the mine workers are not restrained from going to work by fear of bodily harm; and if this is the sentiment prevailing at the meetings, resolutions should be adopted, emphatically declaring the statements of the operators to be untrue.

"We also advise that acts of lawlessness by the coal and iron police and by strikers be denounced and the service of members of the union tendered the local authorities to preserve law and order.

"Great care should be exercised that those on strike do not permit themselves to be provoked by the coal and iron policemen into the commission of overt acts. The operators, failing to break the strike and deprive you of your well earned victory, are now attempting to array public sentiment against you by making false claims that a reign of terror exists in the coal fields. Be steadfast and true while this struggle for living wages and American conditions of employment is going on, and we have no hesitancy in saying that victory will be achieved in the not distant future. The heart of the nation beats in sympathy with you and all good citizens favor your cause.

"Do not fail to have resolutions drafted in plain, temperate language, telegraph them at our expense to President Mitchell's headquarters, immediately upon the adjournment of meetings."

Probable Appeal to Mitchell

Washington, Oct. 7.—There was only one development of importance in the coal strike situation yesterday. Frank P. Sargent, commissioner of immigration and for many years chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, had a long interview with President Roosevelt and left Washington very soon afterwards. Mr. Sargent indicated that the interview concerned the coal strike, but he would not discuss the matter. From the fact that he always has been influential with labor organizations it is generally believed that he is entrusted with a message to President Mitchell of the Miners' union.

While many propositions have been under discussion, it is almost certain that the administration is taking up only one plan at a time.

The present plan is that outlined in The Associated Press dispatches Saturday and Sunday and contemplates an end of the strike by the action of President Mitchell and his associates, and a full investigation of the mining conditions later.

No hope is entertained that anything can be accomplished through the coal operators since the attitude they took at the conference Friday. Should the movement now on foot fail there seems to be no other plan which presents a feasible solution of the serious problem.

While it is generally believed that President Roosevelt has sent a direct appeal to Mr. Mitchell there was no confirmation of such action obtainable at the White House.

Wright Kept Out of the Way

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—John Mitchell paid a mysterious visit to this city yesterday and after remaining here about six hours returned to Wilkesbarre. It was later learned that Mitchell had met Carroll D. Wright, but all efforts to locate Mr. Wright proved futile.

To Help Check Famine

Washington, Oct. 7.—The treasury department yesterday sent the following letter to the collectors of the principal ports of entry in the United States: "Reports indicate that quite a large quantity of coal is being imported. If any portion of this should arrive at your port the department desires every facility offorded for its prompt delivery. So far as may be, give consignments of coal the preference over everything else, and for the present solve all reasonable doubts in favor of the coal importer."

A Famine Indeed

New York, Oct. 7.—The coal famine in this city reached a stage yesterday where dealers were unable to supply anthracite at any price and had great difficulty in filling orders for bituminous coal. Those dealers who could deliver soft coal were selling it at $10 and $12 a ton. In many parts of the city the effect of the scarcity of fuel was shown in the shutting off of steam in factories and in stopping the hot water supplies in flats and apartment houses.

Germany Is Interested

Berlin, Oct. 7.—The coal strike in the United States is attracting more and more attention here. The newspapers print rather full accounts of the conferences at Washington. The press takes sides with the miners and censures the operators for their unyielding attitude.

DEALING WITH TRUSTS

Will Not Prove an Easy Matter For the Government

THE PLAN OF PUBLICITY

Will Only Have the Effect of a Sedative Upon the Public Mind, In Gaston's Opinion—Would Deprive Trusts of Governmental Favor

Boston, Oct. 7.—Responding to an invitation to speak on "The Trusts," William A. Gaston, Democratic candidate for governor, spoke before the Cigar Makers' union in Paine Memorial hall last night. He said he could not look upon the subject from other than a business standpoint. He said:

Organizations which started as trusts in the legal sense have, as the combination movement has developed, become corporations. A corporation may be of enormous size and yet may have none of the attributes of a trust. Thus a single railroad corporation, or a corporation exercising a local franchise, may represent an investment of tens of millions of dollars and may employ thousands of men, and yet it is entirely different in its nature from a trust.

Therefore it is not merely the element of size which constitutes a trust. The distinguishing feature of the trust is not the fact that it necessarily involves monopoly, either partial or entire, or the fact that it is a corporate organization. The feature is found in the element of combination, in the fact that the trust brings under one ownership and control a considerable number of corporations or of enterprises widely separated in location and sometimes dealing with a large variety of subjects.

Until recent times no single corporations, except those engaged in transportation, occupied a vital relation to the people of the whole country or even to a large section of it. Today, many of the most important necessities of life and many of the greatest products of industry are controlled by the great combinations known as trusts. That it would be possible, or desirable, even if possible, to break up the great trusts and to compel them by national legislation to dissolve again into the constituent parts which have made them up, I do not believe. The economic basis of the trust is found in the fact that unrestricted competition often involves an enormous and unnecessary waste both of capital and labor; if the trusts did not have this strong economic basis they could not have developed to such an extent as to bring the trust question to the forefront of political discussion.

When we come to the question of what can be done, or ought to be done by public action, to meet the conditions created by the great development of trusts, we find ourselves confronted with great difficulties.

While I fully recognize the effort with which the president has endeavored to approach the trust question I believe that he has thus far failed to formulate any practicable plan of action. His suggestion that the constitution of the United States should be amended so as to vest in congress full power to control and regulate corporations engaged in interstate commerce seems to me to be one of the most impracticable and objectionable which the discussion of the question has brought forth. The president's further suggestion of legislation which would bring more publicity into the management of the trusts may be a good one as far as it goes, but it certainly does not go very far.

Publicity is a very pretty palliative, but hardly a remedy; it may have the effect of a sedative upon the public mind, but it will not control the trusts. There is one policy, however, in relation to the trust question which is simple, practicable and measurably effective. When the government taxes an article produced by a trust in such a manner that a portion of the tax goes into the public treasury, while another and larger portion goes into the treasury of the trust, it establishes a relationship which is practically that of partnership. The first thing, therefore, to do in dealing with the trust problem, is to deprive the trust of the governmental favor and protection which it now enjoys. If, after we have done this, oppressive monopoly is still found to exist, we shall have to devise some additional remedy.

Geneva, Oct. 7.—The cantonal authorities have called out the military reserves to preserve order and prevent the strikers from interfering with the street car employes who are desirous of continuing work. There are threats in some quarters of a general strike.

OSTRICH LOGIC.

"When I can't see danger there is no danger." That's the logic of the ostrich which hides its head and exposes its body to the hunter. There are not a few people who seem to have gone to the ostrich to learn logic. The most dangerous enemies of humanity are the enemies which can't be seen, the disease breeding microbes which infect the blood. It is harder to get the microbe out of the blood than to keep it out, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does both, by purifying the blood and then keeping it pure.

If there are eruptions on the skin, boils, pimples, sores or other signs of impure blood, use Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which will purify the blood and cure the eruptions which come from it.

"My blood was all out of order, and I had to go to the doctor," writes Mrs. James R. Moss, New London, Stanly Co., N.C. "He gave me medicine which helped me for a short time. In the winter of 1895 I got worse than I had ever been. My tonsils were enlarged and my neck swollen all out of shape; my throat was sore and I could not cure it. My husband went for the doctor, but he gave me no encouragement. He helped me a little, but it did not last long. He attended me for twelve months, when I heard of a lady whose condition was like mine, who was taking your medicine and was getting well. So I secured some of the medicine and began taking it. In one week I was able to do my cooking. When I began taking the medicine I could sit up only a few minutes at a time, and I could rest or sleep only a little while at a time. My throat was so sore at times I could not even swallow sweet milk, and my tonsils were full of little eating sores. My left side was swollen out of shape and I could hardly get my breath. The doctor said I would not get well, but three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, three bottles of his 'Pellets,' three bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and the use of salt water did the work and cured me."

Insomnia

Nerve-racked, weary and heavy-eyed, the head that seeks repose finds only ceasless tossing and feverish unrest. Strange fancies—vague forbodings—fill the mind with harrowing thoughts until morning brings its rasping headache, irritable temper, and loss of appetite. Rest the nerves—build them up—and gentle, restful, refreshing sleep will be yours.

Good Afternoon.

The coal operators will probably find that they cannot get out an adequate supply of coal even with the protection of all the militia of the State of Pennsylvania. It will then be up to them to arbitrate with the miners.

An appeal to the State Board of Health by the people of Quincy Point has resulted in prompt action by the city government to abate the nuisance. It was fortunate for Quincy Point that the past summer was not an excessively hot one, or an epidence might have resulted. They may not have escaped yet.

Evidently Hon. William W. Towle, the Republican candidate for Congress in this district, is a gentlemen whom all conscientious voters can support. Few men in public life are so well endorsed as is Candidate Towle, who has a record in the Boston city government and in both branches of the Legislature. When such men enter public life, the State and country are fortunate. With good united enthusiastic work, Mr. Towle can be elected.

While the city government has been lavish with the money the past few years for streets, water extensions, sewer extensions, etc., there are other directions where the best results can hardly be expected. With the popular demand for High school education, it is imperative that the High school should be enlarged. It should have been done last year, but apparently nothing is being done to relieve the overcrowded buildings. The classes are large, and with the necessity of dividing them, it is very difficult to accommodate all. Two buildings are used much to the disgust of those who are compelled to go to the old one which was once vacated. Where the buildings are a mile apart it is difficult to obtain the best results even if the accommodations were ample. Quincy owes it to the 500 or 600 High school pupils to enlarge the building immediately.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The threat that five railroad presidents in Pennsylvania will resign if a settlement of the coal strike is forced will not scare the country at all, but will only make men spit on their hands and work the harder to force the settlement and secure good riddance of five unpopular men.—Lynn Item.

☞ "Men or boys thinking of the navy as a profession have a great opportunity before them. I consider that there is as great a future in the navy as a profession as there is in any other department of industry, and I include the enlisted men as well as the officers. Our navy is expanding and the system of promotion spurs the men on to greater endeavor and they become petty officers."—Capt. Hobson.

CITY COUNCIL.

Quincy Point Measures Were Prominent.

New Schoolhouse and and the Nuisance.

School Committee Urged Enlargement of High School.

A TRANSFER.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Chief Engineer asking for a transfer of $400 from repairs and fixtures to fire alarm. To Finance Committee.

A NUISANCE.

The Mayor in a communication stated he had received a petition from Ward Two, relative to the nuisance at the corner of Washington and Chubbuck streets, and recommended that immediate action be taken. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Newcomb offered an order for $1,500 to abate the nuisance according to plans of the City Engineers and Board of Health. To Committee on Finance.

SCHOOL DEMANDS.

Three communications were received from the School Committee.

The first called attention to the urgent need of enlarging the High school. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

The second gave notice of the communication received from the State Police relative to better protection against fire and better sanitary and ventilation arrangements at the Quincy Point school building. To Committee on Public Buildings.

The third acknowledged receipt of the resolution of the City Council relative to closing the school on Oct. 2, and stated that the Committee found it inexpedient to close the schools that day. Placed on file.

PARKWAY RESERVATION.

The Mayor forwarded communications from the Metropolitan Park Commission and the local board relative to the takings of land between Hancock street and Merrymount park.

A recess of five minutes was taken to examine the plan after which the Council approved the taking.

PETITIONS.

Several petitions for minor licenses were received and referred.

A petition for an electric light on Edwards street was received. Referred to the Executive department.

POLES AND WIRES.

The New England Telephone Co. petitioned for permission to attach its wires to poles of other companies. To Committee on Streets.

The Quincy Electric Light Co. petitioned for a location of two poles on Saville street and 47 on Granite street. To Committee on Streets.

SEA STREET.

A public hearing was held on the relocation of the southeasterly end of Sea street.

No one appeared in favor.

Eben W. Sheppard, Commodore of the Quincy Yacht club appeared in behalf of the club to remonstrate. He said present plan takes a part of the yacht club lot which is now too small. He thought the lines might be changed so that no land of the club would be taken. In reply to questions asked, he said club would not object if line was changed.

Hearing closed and order recommitted.

QUINCY POINT SCHOOLHOUSE.

The joint Committee on Finance and Public Buildings reported a substitute order authorizing the Commissioner of Public Works to modify the plans of the Ward Two school building so as to have a ten-room building the cost not to exceed the amount already appropriated. Adopted.

SIDEWALK.

The Committee on Streets reported an amendment to the order for a gravel sidewalk on Whitwell street. The amendment provided for paved gutters and changed the lines and the amount from $3,000 to $2,500. To Comittee on Finance.

EDISON STREET.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for $500 for laying out Edison street as a public way. To Finance Committee.

The Committee on Licenses and State Aid reported favorable on a number of petitions which were adopted.

CITY SQUARE TRACKS.

The order changing the location of the street railway tracks in City square took its second reading.

EVADE QUESTION.

Quincy, Oct. 2, 1902.

To the Board of Health, Quincy, Mass.

Gentlemen:—In my visits to the dump on Quincy avenue, I have seen many hens and chickens feeding there. I should be pleased to have you inform the epicureans of Quincy if you would relish chickens and eggs laid by hens which subsist on vault and cesspool matter.

Yours respectfully,
Henry H. Faxon.

Office of the Board of Health,
City Hall, Quincy, Oct. 4, 1902.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon, Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir:—Your letter to the Board asking them to inform the Epicureans of Quincy if we should relish chickens and eggs laid by hens subsisting on vault and cesspool matter received. We are always glad to answer questions from any citizen or body of citizens if it is in our power to do so and this question while not calling for formal action of the Board seems easy of reply.

You intend by "Epicureans" to designate not representatives of a certain ancient school of philosophy but "epicures," persons with a keen taste and relish for the most delicate and refined delights of the table. We must confess that both in our official and private capacity we have had little experience of that class whose purses are long enough to enable them to indulge in expensive viands and are least likely to at the present season, when plain corned beef seems an almost unattainable luxury and even the means of cooking it beyond our slender resources.

We find ourselves therefore at a loss to call by name any epicures who are waiting to be informed, and ask you who doubtless have better knowledge of who they are, to furnish a list to us, when I have no doubt the Board will give them the required information.

Yours respectfully,
John S. Gay,
Chairman of the Board of Health.

Many Naturalized.

A special session of the district court was held Monday evening for naturalization. Final papers were granted to 56 persons, and first papers were taken out by as many more.

The number of first papers taken out was 66. Judge Avery announced this morning that he would hold another special session of the court for naturalization next Monday evening at 6 o'clock.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

UNEQUIVOCAL.

George H. Wilson Writes He Will Not Be a Candidate.

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger.

I have heard a number of times in the past week that the rumor has been quite widely circulated, and in fact have seen it so stated in your valuable paper, that I was to be a candidate for Representative again this year, either as an independent, or as the candidate of the Democratic committee in place of one of the regular nominees, whom it was stated was to withdraw in my favor. Now I wish to make it unequivocally plain to the voters of Quincy, that there is no foundation at all for this rumor. I informed my friends before the caucuses that, while I most certainly appreciated the great honor which the Democratic party had conferred upon me in years past, and the very satisfactory way in which they have always supported me at the polls, I did not desire to stand as a candidate this year. Since then nothing has transpired to change my mind.

The Democrats of this city have nominated two very worthy candidates, men whom I believe compare favorably with those of the opposition, and it will certainly give me the greatest of pleasure to not only give them my earnest support from now until election, but to urge my friends to do likewise.

Thanking you for your valuable consideration in the past I am respectfully

Geo. H. Wilson.

EMBEZZLEMENT.

F. E. Betts Arrested on a New Charge.

New Hampshire Woman Complainant.

Frederick E. Betts was locked up in the tombs last night in default of bail on a new charge. He was arrested in the evening, by Inspector Armstrong, on a warrant charging him with the embezzlement of 15 shares of Adams Express Company stock, valued at $3500. The complainant in the case is Mrs. Mary E. Ross of Alton Bay, N. H., and the warrant was issued Monday at the request of her counsel, Atty. Alfred S. Hayes.

Betts was found in a Court street restaurant, and after a brief conference with his counsel, Atty. Harvey H. Pratt, was taken to headquarters, where he was detained while Mr. Pratt made efforts to secure bail. The attempt proved futile, however, and Mr. Pratt, shortly before 10 o'clock, appeared at headquarters and announced the fact to his client. Betts was taken to the Tombs and locked up for the night.

The circumstances surrounding the case are very similiar to those brought out at the recent trial in relation to the nine different cases in which Betts was found guilty. Aug. 14, 1901, it is said, Mrs. Ross sent to J. M. Fisher & Co., of which firm Betts is held to have been the head and tail, 15 shares of Adams Express Company stock certificates with instructions to sell them and forward her the proceeds.

Time went on and Mrs. Ross, failing to receive anything from Betts except promises and excuses, finally countermanded her order to sell, and asked for the return of her certificates. Again Mr. Betts was ready with excuses. He was a very busy man and could not attend to the matter at once, but would do so very soon. First he promised to send the certificates by express, and then he said he would send them by special messenger, in the person of George A. Adams. Becoming suspicious, Mrs. Ross secured the advice of counsel.

A bill in equity was brought and an injunction issued restraining Mr. Betts from disposing of the stock and the Adams company from having it transferred in the books of the company. The stock was never transferred, but up to last evening it had not come into the hands of its owner.

Eclipse of Moon.

On the night of Thursday, Oct. 16, there will be an eclipse of the moon. This performance shows us the moon in a state of total eclipse, and will be well worth witnessing. From the time the moon enters the penumbra until it emerges therefrom there will be an interval of five hours and 33 minutes. Unfortunately, the time of totality occurs about 1 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 17, when most of us will be enjoying a private eclipse of our own, but those who care to be awake at that time will have the only treat of its kind for the year, and will be well repaid for their vigil.

Lunar eclipses are due to the interposition of the earth between the sun and the moon. The sun is at nighttime under our feet, at the other side of the earth, and throws a high shadow upward. If the moon enters into this shadow, it is plain that the sunlight is partly or wholly cut off, and since the moon shines by no light of her own, but only by borrowed light from the sun, it follows that when the moon is buried in the shadow all the direct light is intercepted, and she must lose her brilliancy.

WELL ENDORSED.

And Unanimous Choice in Tenth District.

William W. Towle for Congress.

Hon. John O. Hall Received 26 Votes Out of 88.

There was a full attendance of the delegates to the Tenth Congressional convention of the Republicans at Union hall, Boston, Monday evening, and Hon. William W. Towle of Dorchester was unanimously nominated.

The Committee on Creditials reported the convention entitled to 88 delegates all of whom were present.

Hon. William H. Lott of Ward 20 declined to be a candidate.

Hon. William W. Towle was placed in nomination by Representative Calleander who gave him an unqualified endorsement; saying he was a man of radiant integrity, pure in private life, without a stain in public life after service in City Council, the House and the Senate, a gentleman, a faithful servant, a royal friend, one who would be a credit to the Tenth district and all the Massachusetts districts and the country.

The nomination of Mr. Towle was seconded by Guy How of Ward 20.

Hon. Russell A. Sears of Quincy placed in nomination Hon. John O. Hall of Quincy, claiming all the good qualities for his man that were claimed for Mr. Towle.

Senator Sprague seconded the nomination of Mr. Hall.

An informal ballot on which Hon. Henry O. Fairbanks and Hon. R. A. Sears acted as members of the committee, the result was:

Whole number of votes	88
Necessary for a choice	45
William W. Towle of Ward 20 had	54
John O. Hall of Quincy	26
Wm. H. Lott	8

The ballot was made formal, and on motion of Mr. Sears the nomination of Hon. William W. Towle was made unanimous.

Mr. Sears was one of the committee to introduce the candidate, who responded in part as follows:

He accepted the nomination, expressing not only his appreciation of the responsibilities it involved, but his full faith that it was possible to place the Tenth District in the Republican column. He pledged himself to try to do that. He expressed himself in full faith with President Roosevelt to bring about the revision of the tariff along the lines of Protection.

The Republican party was not responsible for the evil of the trusts; tariff was not responsible. Trusts existed in those matters not affected by the tariff. He deprecated the drawing of dividends on watered stock. He believed the only way of dealing with the trusts was in accord with the views of President Roosevelt for a proper and wise control. He said he stood with President Roosevelt in his method of dealing with the coal strike. He asked all his hearers to bring about the beneficent result and place the Republican Party in the Tenth District where it belongs.

THE MAYOR ACTS

Calls Citizens Meeting to Consider Relief.

The Mayor has invited a few citizens to meet him at City Hall Wednesday evening. The invitations read:

"How to obtain adequate supply of fuel for the inhabitants of Quincy for the coming winter has become a most serious proposition. The scarcity of coal and wood hereabouts and the very high price for the little at hand bids fair to cause great suffering among families of limited means and among the poor.

"I believe something can be done to alleviate the situation by a committee of representative citizens acting with the Mayor in the way of securing fuel of some character for those who are unable to pay the present prices.

"The city as a municipality can do but little. I, therefore, earnestly invite you to attend a meeting of the prominent citizens held at City Hall, on Oct. 8, at 8 P. M. to take advice, and, if possible to find ways and means to meet the emergency in question."

GREAT WAR A NUCLEUS

Of Courage, Patriotism and Self-Sacrifice

OUR ARMY UNSURPASSED

Though Smaller Than That of Any Other Nation—With Volunteers When Our Honor Is Threatened We Could Face Any Army on Earth

Washington, Oct. 7.—The ceremonies incident to the beginning of the 36th encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which commenced here yesterday, were varied in character and mostly only semi-official. The only formal proceeding of the day was the dedication of Camp Roosevelt, the tent city on the White House grounds, which will be the headquarters of the several corps organizations during the week.

The ceremonies there consisted of a number of addresses by men of national reputation, the chief speech being delivered by Secretary Hay; for the rest of the day old soldiers busied themselves largely in renewing acquaintances.

The events of the day outside the dedication ceremonies at Camp Roosevelt included a fine regatta on the Potomac, an attractive automobile parade, an interesting procession by the Red Men of this city and neighboring cities and campfires in the evening.

In his address at Camp Roosevelt Secretary Hay said:

In the name of the president and in his stead, I bid you welcome to Washington. I need not say that on every inch of American soil, wherever that starry banner waves, you are at home, and need no formal words of welcome. A peculiar interest attends this gathering. Never again shall all of us meet in a camp like this. Not often shall the youngest and strongest of us come together to renew our memories of the past, and our vows of eternal devotion to the cause to which in those distant days we swore allegiance. Thirty-seven years have passed since some of us, wearing crape on our arms and mourning in our hearts for Abraham Lincoln, saw the great army which he loved pass before the White House in the grand review. But the men in the street that day afforded their own country, and the rest of the world, a lesson which shall never be forgotten, though its tremendous import was not immediately perceived.

Since then the world has learned the lesson of that hour. The normal condition of the republic is peace, but not the nerveless peace of helplessness. We do not need the overgrown armaments of Europe. Our admirable regular force, with its perfect drill and discipline, though by far the smallest in the world in proportion to population, is sufficient for our ordinary wants; but when the occasion calls, when the vital interests or the honor of the country are threatened, when the national conscience is aroused, an army will spring from the soil, so vast, so docile, so intelligent, so formidable, that it need not fear to try conclusions with any army on the face of the earth.

But that was only half the lesson; the other half was equally important—that when that citizen army has done its work, it makes no claim, it exacts no conditions of disbandment, but melts away into the vaster body of the nation. The great host of 1865 ceased to exist as an armed force; but in every town and hamlet of the land it lived as a part of the body politic—a nucleus everywhere of courage, patriotism and self-sacrifice. This was a new product the republic might proudly show to the world, saying, "These be the peaceable heroes I breed from great wars."

There were many brilliant deeds done in the war that resulted in enduring fame to fortunate individual soldiers; but the disbandment of that army, flushed with victory and idolized by the country, reflected honor upon all our race, a glory in which individual claims are lost.

For four years you showed yourselves good soldiers—equal to the best the world had seen. For 37 years you have been good citizens; and who shall say in which capacity you have wrought best for the republic?. Our fathers ordained that in this republic there should be no distinctions; but human nature is stronger than laws, and nothing can prevent this people from showing honor to all who have deserved well of the country. Every man who has borne arms with credit has earned and is sure to receive a special measure of regard. And it is our peculiar privilege to remember that our armies and navies, regular and volunteer, have always been worthy of esteem. In distant generations, under different flags in conflicts great and small, by land and by sea, they have always borne their part nobly.

And in our own time the young men who stormed the hill of San Juan, and have borne our flag with such honor to the forbidden city of Pekin and the jungles of Luzon, have shown that their progenitors bred true. The men of today are as good Americans as the men of yesterday, and the men of tomorrow, with God's blessing, will be the same. The dominant characteristic of every American army that has ever stepped to the tap of a drum has been valor and humanity. They have carried nothing but good to any land they have occupied. As our comrade, McKinley, said: "The flag has never floated over any region but in benediction."

Alleged Sandbaggers Arrested

Made Dead Child's Heart Beat

London, Oct. 7.—The Moscow correspondent of The Daily Mail says Dr. Koulatke has succeeding in his experiments in reanimating the heart of an infant which he extracted from a child that had died 24 hours previously. The heart beat with normal regularity for one hour. Dr. Koulatke hopes that his discovery will assist in reanimation in cases of death by drowning.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

A WHOLE REGIMENT

Ordered to Protect Property of Hudson Valley Railroad Company

Glens Falls, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Sheriff Gill has called on Governor Odell for another company of National Guards. The village trustees have posted a proclamation forbidding all parades, mass meetings or congregating on the streets until the trouble is settled between the trolley company and the strikers.

Albany, Oct. 7.—Governor Odell late last night issued an order directing the entire Second regiment, composed of separate companies between Troy and Plattsburgh, on duty to protect the property of the Hudson Valley Railroad company, upon whose lines a strike has been in progress for some weeks.

Adjutant General Henry is on duty at National Guard headquarters and has prepared a list of additional available troops should their services be deemed necessary by Colonel Lloyd.

Royal Welcome to Booth

New York, Oct. 7.—A great ovation was tendered last night to General Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, at Carnegie hall, which was crowded to its utmost capacity, while hundreds were turned away from the doors. General Booth was introduced by Mayor Low, who paid an eloquent tribute to the great work done by the army in New York. General Booth made an earnest plea for the rescue of the "slum class" in America, which, he declared, was rapidly increasing in numbers.

Tom Willing to Meet Marcus

Cleveland, Oct. 7.—In his speech at Steubenville yesterday, Senator Hanna challenged Tom L. Johnson to a debate on the tariff, the subject to be discussed from a strictly economic standpoint and with no reference to monopolies. APPEAL OF PRESIDENT

Not Viewed With Favor by Miners' Rank and File

THEY WANT CONCESSIONS

Before Trusting to the Promise of an Investigation—Opinion Divided as to Operators' Ability to Mine Coal Under Protection of the Military

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 8.—The two principal features of the anthracite coal strike which claim public attention in the coal fields are: "Will the miners yield to the desire of the President of the United States for them to return to work and investigate afterwards? Will the mine operators be able to carry out their promise to produce enough coal to relieve the situation if given the protection of the full military power of the state?

After a most careful inquiry among the district officers (not including the district presidents who are in Buffalo) and the rank and file of mine workers, it is found that sentiment is strongly against accepting the president's proposition in its present form. As to the other feature of the situation, opinion is divided and will remain so until the real test comes.

The president's message to Mr. Mitchell became known here yesterday afternoon and it was earnestly discussed by the striking miners and citizens generally. It is positively known to those who are close to the officers of the union that President Mitchell and his district presidents have all along been opposed to the men returning to work without some concessions, but whether they are still so inclined with the president appealing to them cannot be officially stated. It is reasonably certain, however, that they still are opposed to such action. In connection with this, 2500 striking mine workers of the Prospect, Oakdale and Midvale collieries of the Lehigh Valley Coal company met in this city yesterday and unanimously decided to remain on strike until they get some concessions.

The calling out of the entire military force of the state did not cause a sensation in the Wyoming valley. Wilkesbarre city and the surrounding country are about as quiet as any day since the suspension was inaugurated.

A tremendous interest is manifested in the effect the presence of the entire division of the National Guard will have on the strike. There is a wide difference of opinion as to the probable effect. Coal company officials welcome the soldiers and say that prospects are bright for the resumption of mining under the protection of the military. The strikers received the news in a matter of fact way.

Citizens outside of the controversy are also divided in their opinion. There is one noticeable thing and that is the strikers show a firmer stand than they did before Governor Stone acted Monday night.

The general comment that it is now up to the operators to mine coal, now that they have the entire state military protection, which they have been asking for, is not shared by all officials of the company. It is claimed the state has yet to show what is proposes to do.

There is feeling among some of these officials that the mere move of sending all the troops into the coal region may not have the desired effect in bringing about an early resumption of the collieries. An official of one of the largest coal companies in the territory is authority for the statement that an early resumption depends altogether upon where the military authorities place the troops.

Several hundred of the National Guardsmen now in the field are strikers and they propose to turn a portion of their pay from the state over to the relief fund of their fellow workers.

A DARING CRIMINAL

Sandbags and Robs a Man Under the Very Noses of Many People

Manchester, Mass., Oct. 8.—The most daring robbery that ever occurred in Manchester took place last night, when Joseph M. Lipman was sandbagged and robbed just as he entered the main entrance of the town hall building. The affair occurred shortly before 8 o'clock when many people were entering the town hall to attend a meeting of the A. O. U. W., but nothing was known of the assault until theprostrate form of the unconscious man was stumbled over by a fellow member of the lodge who had entered the darkened hallway, the gaslight having been turned out.

Lipman was struck a blow from behind, breaking in his derby hat, and this was followed by another blow upon the top of the head and other blows on the face, mouth and back of the skull. His pockets were turned inside out and rifled of their contents, his papers were scattered about and his empty wallet was found lying beside him.

Lipman was collector for the North Shore lodge, A. O. U. W., and is known to have had quite a sum ofmoney with him, the treasurer having expected to receive $218 from him last night. His watch was not taken from him.

Lipman is about 35 years old. It is thought that he will recover.

OIL TRACT DOOMED

Many Derricks Burned and Twelve Lives Lost In Beaumont Fire

Beaumont, Tex., Oct. 8.—Another great fire is sweeping over the oil fields here, causing the loss of 12 or more lives. The fire was discovered shortly before 11 o'clock last night and with remarkable rapidity it spread to the many derricks in the Hogg-Swayne tract. The encroachment of the flames was so rapid that many people were caught in the fiery path.

Up to 1 o'clock it is estimated that 50 derricks have been destroyed and over 100 are still burning. It is said that the tanks of the Hogg-Swayne syndicate are imperilled and the tract seems doomed.

Reports as to the estimated loss of lives are conflicting. One report places the loss of life at 26 persons, but the report cannot be confirmed. The fire looks worse than the fire of several weeks ago.

Ladronism Rampant

Manila, Oct. 8.—General Lee telegraphs from Tacloban, Island of Leyte, that ladrones have twice attacked the town of Carigara, where they killed a number of native constabulary and levied contributions. The population of Carigara withdrew to the mountains. Ladrones have been active recently in several parts of the islands. The municipal police of several towns in Luzon have been disarmed and a system of volunteers has been established in their stead. It is hoped this measure will succeed in checking ladronism, as the police have proved ineffective.

Oil "Not In It" With Coal

Washington, Oct. 8.—Oil cannot compete with coal for naval use is the conclusion reached by the board of naval engineers, which for many weeks past has been making a series of practical tests with various oil burners under a 2000 horse-power boiler in this city. They report that out of the 14 different devices presented by American inventors for tests not one would burn coal oil under a naval boiler and produce steam in competition with coal, even were the oil sold at $1 per barrel.

DEFENDERS OF THE FLAG

Object to Monuments to Those Who Strove to Pull It Down—Root's Reference to Troops In Philippines Brings Tears to Smith's Eyes

Washington, Oct. 8.—The veterans of the G. A. R. and their friends were entertained yesterday by a parade given in honor of the naval veterans and by a number of reunions held in the big assembly tents at Camp Roosevelt. The naval parade was not as large as many that have been seen in Washington, but it was in every way interesting. The veterans of the navy each appeared to be an embodiment of much of the nation's recent history and every squad of them was an object of interested observation. They were generally old men, and many bore evidences of wounds received in battle.

In striking contrast to them were the young men of all the branches of the present service who marched with them. This escort included representatives of both the land and naval forces and they elicited much favorable comment.

The huge tent which has been given the name of General Philip Sheridan was crowded during the afternoon. Secretary Root's address consisted entirely of an expression of the gratitude of the present generation for the services rendered in 1861-5 by the men who constitute the Grand Army.

Governor Bliss of Michigan spoke of his recent appointment to the senate of ex-Secretary Alger, saying that it was vindication of an ex-soldier who had been much villified.

General Wilson referred to the proposition to erect a monument to Robert E. Lee, saying that our monuments should be to men who had assisted in keeping the flag flying and not to those who would have pulled it down if they could have done so.

Captain Potter, in endorsing General Wilson, said: "Our soil is too pure to be used for the erection of a monument to any rebel."

Speeches were made at both the Fourth army corps and Spanish veterans' reunions by General Smith, General Howard and Colonel McElroy. General Smith declared that the success of our arms in Cuba and the Philippines had been largely due to the influence of the veterans of 1861, and was greatly applauded.

The army of the Tennessee held the principal reunion of the night and General Dodge was the chief speaker at that meeting. The reunion was held in the Grant tent. General Howard, who is the only survivor of the army's commanders, presided. Speaking of the courage displayed by the American soldiers in Cuba and the Philippines, General Howard said that being the sons of veterans of 1861 they could not be otherwise than courageous.

General Dodge said that the society of the Army of the Tennessee is endeavoring to perpetuate its history and memories by erecting in Washington monuments to the memory of its dead commanders.

Washington last night officially extended the freedom of the city to the members of the Grand Army. Conspicuous among those on the platform was General Jacob H. Smith, who was moved to tears as Secretary Root, beside whom he sat during the evening, paid this tribute to the soldiers in the Philippines:

"I know, upon testimony overwhelming, that the army of the United States today is just as well as brave, self-restrained as well as gallant, humane as well as courageous, and that never in the history of warfare among men has an army exhibited the highest qualities of civilization and of manhood to a greater degree than the American army in the Philippines."

General Torrance was presented a handsome gold badge and the ceremonies were brought to a close by the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by the United States Marine band.

Severe Blow to Fishermen

St. Johns, Oct. 8.—Steamer Virginia Lake has returned here from Labrador and brings reports that the whole coast of Labrador has been swept by a fearful gale. Eighteen vessels were driven ashore and are total losses. Some of the wrecked vessels had cargoes of fish on board. The Virginia Lake brings home 139 shipwrecked fishermen. No lives were lost.

London, Oct. 8.—In a dispatch from Copenhagen, the correspondent of The Times, discussing the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States, says it is known that King Christian is personally against the transfer of the islands, and it will be a bitter moment for him when, sacrificing his own sympathies to the popular will, he finally signs the treaty.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Evidently the Luce caucus law works just well enough to show that it ought to be nearer like what Mr. Luce wanted it.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ It is often said that municipal government is a failure. If municipal government is a failure, then all government must in time be a failure. In order to make municipal government a success it is only necessary for the men who pay the taxes to attend their primary elections and to assist in the selection of first-class candidates for municipal offices. If taxpayers refuse to attend the primaries and then go to the polls and vote for the candidates chosen by the politicians and by the corporations, then the taxpayers have only themselves to blame.—Omaha World-Herald.

☞ The cry throughout the business world today is not, Where can we find men at such and such a salary to fill such and such a position? but, Where can be find workers—men who will sink self to find self—men who, by doing a little more than is demanded of them, are acquiring a knowledge of and interest in the business in which they are engaged, and who, finally, dominate all others and force themselves to the front by reason of their knowledge of the details of the work upon which they are engaged? And so it makes but little difference what form the work may take, whether it be manual labor or mental strife, whether it be work at one end of the ladder or the other, so long as it be honest and self-respecting. For if there is any one thing that Americans should be taught to respect is the dignity, the responsibility and the possibilities of—work.—President Vorrland of the Metropolitan Street railway.

Two Inquests.

Two inquests were held before Judge Avery this morning. The first was on the death of William Julian, who died in Quincy, Aug. 3. Julian fell from the train in Hingham and was being taken to a hospital in Boston. He died as he was passing through Quincy. The second inquest was on the death of Walter C. West who was killed by a train near the Quincy depot, August 23.

Not the Ones.

Word was telephoned to the police station on Tuesday that two men were on Adams street in a buggy selling furs. The police thought that they might be the parties who had stolen the furs in Cambridge trying to dispose of them here. Inspector McKay and Officer Ferguson went out and hunted the men up. The men proved that they were all right and were not molested.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. ANOTHER VICTORY.

Quincy High Defeats Revere High on the Gridiron.

Quincy High School defeated Revere High School at Merrymount Park, Tuesday, in a well played game, by the score of 17 to 0. Revere was somewhat lighter than Quincy, but it was Quincy's superior attack that won them the game.

Miller kicked off for Quincy and Revere advanced the ball about 5 yds. Revere could not gain on first down, but on the next made the necessary distance. On the next play Quincy got the ball on a fumble. Miller gained 5 yds. and repeated it on next play. R. Saunders made 2 yds. Desmond followed with a beautiful run of 10 yards around the left end.

A series of rushes by Miller carried the ball to the 3-yd. line where it was given to R. Saunders. He fumbled, but the ball rolled across the line and Morrison fell on it for Quincy's first score in five and one-half minutes. Miller kicked goal. Score: Quincy 6; Revere 0.

McQuarry of Revere kicked off to Fenno, who ran back 20 yds. Miller made 1 yd. and then kicked out of bounds and it was Revere's ball on her 40-yd. line. Revere could not gain and it was Quincy's ball on downs. Miller, Desmond and Saunders alternated in the rushing and carried the ball to the 10-yd. line, from where Miller was pushed over. No goal was kicked. Quincy 11; Revere 0.

H. Saunders of Quincy, received the next kick-off and returned 10 yards. After a series of rushes by R. Saunders, Desmond and Miller, the latter kicked over the Revere players and it was Revere's ball on her 1-yard line. Time was called. Quincy 11; Revere 0.

Jewell and Pinkham were substituted for Quincy in the second half. McQuarry kicked off for Revere and H. Saunders received the ball. By beautiful running he brought it back 30 yards. He was tackled hard and fumbled, and Revere got the ball. On three rushes Revere made 12 yds., showing the best gain of any part of the game. Revere then kicked out of bounds but returned the ball. Revere made some short gains and it was Quincy's ball on downs. Miller and Desmond alternated and gained 25 yards. R. Saunders was then given the ball on a double pass and skirted the left end for a touchdown after nine minutes of play. Miller kicked goal.

On the kick-off H. Sanders made 10 yds. Miller and Desmond also gained ground and brought the ball to the Revere's 20-yd. line where time was called. Score: 17-0.

ANOTHER ENTERS.

John P. Bigelow Being Pushed into Representative Contest.

The latest one to enter the Representative contest, which is already overcrowded, is John P. Bigelow, the ex-Councilman and old "war horse" of Ward Three. Nomination papers favorable to him are being signed.

Papers are also being signed for Eugene F. DeNormandie of Ward Five and John McKnight of Ward One, which may or may not be filed before Friday, Oct. 17, the last day.

The above three, with the six regulars, will make nine in all for the two places to be filled.

If all enter they will be printed on the ballots for the state election as follows:

John P. Bigelow, Republican Independent.
Peter M. Carlson, Socialist.
William J. Collagan, Democrat.
Eugene F. DeNormandie, Republican Independent.
Peter T. Fallon, Democrat.
Richard R. Freeman, Republican.
John McKnight, Republican Independent.
Edward J. Sandberg, Republican.
Levi H. Turner, Socialist.

Work on New Bridge.

Work rebuilding the Quincy Point bridge is progressing, but owing to the nature of the work the progress seems slow. The two stone abutments on the Weymouth end are well under way and the masons have commenced building that on the Quincy end.

The part of the work that holds the greatest interest for visitors is the building of the concrete foundations for the turret upon which the drawbridge is to swing. Some idea of the amount of work in this part alone may be gleaned when it is known that 800 yards of cement will be required to bring it up to the low water mark.

The filling of the mold for this piece of work is slow. At present about 60 yards of concrete are dumped into the mold every day. The peculiar thing about this is that the mold is full of water all the time and one would naturally suppose this would interrupt the work. The engineers, however, say water makes no difference and that concrete will harden just as quickly under water as above it.

Besides the center concrete turret there are several smaller turrets upon which work has been commenced.

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. We purchased some of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and he commenced taking them. Inside of thirty days he had gained forty pounds in flesh. He is now fully recovered. We have a good trade on the tablets.—Holley Bros., Merchants, Long Branch, Mo. For sale by all druggists.

PRETTY WEDDING.

Eloise Perry Flood Becomes Mrs. J. D. Kent, Jr.

Church Ceremony Followed by Reception.

Beautiful Decorations of Asters and Palms.

St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 7, at eight o'clock, was the scene of the prettiest wedding of the season.

The contracting parties were Miss Eloise Perry Flood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Flood, and Mr. James Dearborn Kent, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Kent. The sweet looking bride was becomingly attired in a gown of white crepe de chine over taffeta, lace yolk with pearl trimmings. The veil was caught up with a crescent of pearls, the gift of the groom and she carried in her hand a white prayer-book.

Mr. Frank Flood gave his daughter away and Miss Jennie M. Flood, the only sister of the bride, attired in yellow silk muslin, lace yolk and medallions, and carrying a large bouquet of chrysanthemums was the maid of honor.

The best man was Mr. Gilbert Ray Kent, brother of the groom, and the ushers were: Mr. Thomas Long Bramhall of Dorchester, Mr. Herbert Harper Albee of Wollaston, Mr. John Manning of Wollaston and Mr. Percy Ainsworth Hull of Wollaston.

The bridal party advanced up the aisle to the sweet strains of the organ, presided over by Mr. E. Landis Synder, and the march was sung by the choir boys assisted by the Quincy choir. The Episcopal ceremony was used, the betrothal service took place at the chancel steps and the marriage at the altar.

Palms and white asters made an attractive decoration and the arrangement about the altar of asters and white altar cloths was most artistic.

A reception followed the ceremony in the rear of the church, and the bride was assisted in receiving by the maid of honor and the best man. Many guests from out of town were present.

Mr. and Mrs. James Kent, Jr., will be home to their friends after Jan. 1, at 23 Prospect avenue, Wollaston.

The bride is well known as she has been organist of St. Chrysostom's Church for nine years. The groom is a Harvard man and at present instructor at the Adams Academy.

Blanchard—Thomas.

A very pretty wedding took place Tuesday evening at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thomas on Saunders street, North Weymouth, when their daughter, Bessie Vivian, and Theodore Ray Blanchard, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Blanchard of Quincy, were united in marriage. The bride who is a charming brunette was beautifully gowned in a dress of white crepe de chene and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The wedded pair stood under a floral bower. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thomas H. Vincent of North Weymouth. The bride is a graduate of the Cowles Art School, Boston, and is an accomplished violinist. After an absence of a month they will make their home at 380 Washington street, Quincy.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures, I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

—A young woman faultless in dress and ladylike manner, who lit a cigarette after a light luncheon in a hotel cafe in London, was put out by the proprietor, and the magistrate before whom both were subsequently arraigned discharged the lady because she had a right to smoke and the proprietor because he had a right to put her out.

FASHION HINTS.

A very novel waist is here illustrated made of folds of crepe de chine in tuck effect and trimmed with lace straps and a deep lace yolk. Black chiffon bands are very artistically disposed and a large rosette of the same is placed at the left side. The sleeves are remarkable for

For shirt waists pongee is especially recommended and it is very fetching made up with bands of ecru embroidery, or over a color with a heavy lace yoke. This material is particularly suitable for the Gibson or Duchess waists, the former giving the broad shoulderd effect so much sought after after just now, in the shape of folds or tucks extending over the shoulder, the latter fastening under a double fly and showing fronts richly embroidered with Corticelli wash embroidery silk. The favored color in pongee is the natural ecru tint, although it can be procured in different shades. Mercerized fabrics of all kinds will be extensively worn, the process having been vastly improved since it was first brought upon the market, and all sorts of silk and linen mixtures are greatly in vogue.

A LONG STEP FORWARD

MEETING AT PHILADELPHIA

To Be Held by Operators and Manufacturers, the Latter Having Heard the Strikers' Side of the Contest—President's Plan Rejected

Buffalo, Oct. 8.—The conference between the committee appointed by the National Manufacturers' association and President Mitchell and his lieutenants, held at the Iroquois Hotel yesterday afternoon, did not result in any definite plan being agreed upon for the partial resumption of work in the anthracite coal fields, but the members of the manufacturers' committee stated that they were greatly pleased with the progress made. The fact that communication was established with the operators by long-distance telephone and an appointment made to meet a committee representing them in Philadelphia today is looked upon as significant, as it had been announced by members of the manufacturers' committee that there existed no understanding with the operators prior to yesterday's meeting and no step in that direction would be taken until the negotiations with President Mitchell reached a stage where such a meeting would promise results.

The following men represented the manufacturers at yesterday's meeting: David M. Parry, president of the Manufacturers' association. Indianapolis; George H. Barbour of Detroit, Richard Young of New York, Frank Leake of Philadelphia and John Maxwell of Indianapolis. The miners were represented by President Mitchell, Secretary-Treasurer Wilson and District Presidents Nichols, Duffy and Fahey.

The conference was held behind closed doors and only a brief statement was given out at the end of the meeting. The statement is as follows:

"The committee of the National Association of Manufacturers has listened to the explanation of the present strike difficulty as offered by a special committee of the United Mine Workers, at the head of which was Mr. John Mitchell. The National Association of Manufacturers' committee has learned what it could of the conditions and now goes to Philadelphia for the purpose of meeting a committee of mine operators with the idea of getting their side of the difficulty. The National Association of Manufacturers' committee carries no proposition from the mine workers and has no other mission than the desire to speedily bring about a settlement of this dispute."

This was signed by the representatives of the Manufacturers' association.

Mr. Mitchell yesterday afternoon positively declined to discuss the request made by President Roosevelt that Mitchell use his influence to induce the miners to resume work with a promise of the appointment of a commission to investigate the mine's grievances. It was learned from a reliable source, however, that Mr. Mitchell does not regard the proposition favorably and that he will decline to ask the miners to resume work under the conditions stipulated.

Ohio Legislature With Strikers

Columbus, O., Oct. 8.—The lower branch of the Ohio legislature yesterday adopted the following resolution: "That we most heartily commend the patriotic and manly efforts which President Roosevelt has already taken to bring about a settlement of the anthracite coal strike and to restore business; and to the thousands of miners and their capable and efficient officers, headed by President John Mitchell, we express our congratulaions upon their law abiding and patriotic conduct during the entire strike; and, believing that their cause is just and right and ought to prevail, we extend to them our sympathies and best wishes for success."

Government to Investigate

New York, Oct. 8.—United States District Attorney Burnett has been instructed by the attorney general in Washington to investigate the working of the coal trust in his district, that of the southern half of New York state.

Strike Agitation In France

Paris, Oct. 8.—The national committee of the French Miners' Federation met here yesterday with the intention of deciding whether an immediate general strike was to be ordered, agitation in favor of such a step having been in progress for some time. The meeting lasted three hours and then adjourned until today without arriving at a decision.

Porto Ricans Not Americans

New York, Oct. 8.—A decision was handed down yesterday by Judge Lacombe, in which he holds that a citizen of Porto Rico is not a citizen of the United States and as such entitled to land here without interference from the immigration authorities, but is, the insular decisions notwithstanding, an alien within the meaning of the law.

Vanderbilts Must Give Up

Albany, Oct. 8.—As a result of a decision by the court of appeals yesterday the estate of Cornelius Vanderbilt must pay an additional transfer tax amounting to $118,000. The Vanderbilt estate contended that under the law no tax could be imposed on a trust fund created by the will of Cornelius Vanderbilt.

BLAMES LIQUOR FOR IT

Vicious Assault Upon a Woman Confessed by a Maine Youth

Ellsworth, Me., Oct. 8.—Guy Grindle, 17 years old, confessed yesterday afternoon that he committed the murderous assault upon Mrs. Littlefield, who was found nearly dead in her home at Penobscot last Thursday. He was brought here last night and lodged in the county jail.

Grindle says that on the morning of the assault he, with Urban Leach and John Littlefield, the victim's son, cleaned out the Littlefield well and then all three went to Grindle's house. There they parted, Grindle remaining at home, the other two going gunning. Grindle had been drinking that morning, and, seized with a sudden impulse, he went back to the Littlefield house, got an axe, crept up behind the unsuspecting woman and struck her on the back of the head. It is not clear whether he stabbed her where she fell or dragged her to the bedroom, and cut her there. He took a dollar bill, then went down town to Varnum's store, and was there when John came rushing down, bringing news of the assault upon his mother. Grindle claims that his deed was wholly unpremeditated. He had never quarreled with the Littlefields, and had no motive for the crime, but attributes it to a sudden, irresistible impulse, as the result of drinking.

The victim of the assault is comfortable and improving, with the prospects in favor of her full recovery. Her memory is slowly coming back, but she has given no sign that she knows her assailants. She has not yet been told of Grindle's confession and arrest.

ALWAYS IN SIGHT

Crowded street. People passing by. Old and young. All eager about their own affairs and always somebody in plain sight who needs Scott's Emulsion.

Now it's that white-haired old man; weak digestion and cold body. He needs Scott's Emulsion to warm him, feed him, and strengthen his stomach.

See that pale girl? She has thin blood. Scott's Emulsion will bring new roses to her face.

And here's a poor, sickly little child. Scott's Emulsion makes children grow—makes children happy.

POISON IN A WELL

Thought to Have Been Placed There by Man Seeking Revenge

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 8.—Philip Clark, who is suspected of having attempted to poison the family of Frank Barrows, a farmer of Assonet, by dropping sugar of lead into a well on the Barrows farm last week, was brought here yesterday from Worcester. One day last week Barrows, who was drawing water from a well, noticed its milky appearance and became suspicious. He summoned a chemist to examine the water and enough sugar of lead was found in it to have killed a dozen persons. If the water had not been hard the poison would probably have been undiscovered, as it makes no precipitation in soft water.

Barrows' sister, Mrs. Perry, lives with him, and the prisoner is her cousin. Clark is said to have been dissatisfied with the disposition of a legacy and had made demands upon Barrows and his sister for money, which was refused him and thus started a dispute. It is thought that Clark may have poisoned the well in the hopes of revenging himself upon the family. He is held in $20,000 bail for appearance in the district court.

MANY RIOTERS FINED

But Poles and Hebrews at Haverhill Are Still at Swords' Points

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 8.—The special session of the district court of northern Essex, which has been sitting in this city for the past two days on the cases resulting from the recent riots between Poles and the Hebrews, was brought to a close yesterday afternoon. Five Poles were fined $10 each for rioting, and one $5. One man was fined $20 for assault, two others being fined $10. For assault and battery two more were fined $10 each.

A serious aspect to the situation arises from the fact that about 200 Poles held secret meetings Monday night and discussed their grievances at some length. It was voted to boycott the stores of the River street Hebrews, and it is predicted that trouble between the two nationalities is likely to occur at any time.

Hebrew Rabbi Slegel has been assaulted by a number of Poles, and many of the Hebrews do not dare to go out of doors after dark. Last night a number of minor assaults occurred.

Sale Blocked by Wreck

New London, Conn., Oct. 8.—The sloop yacht Ouida, belonging to C. D. Bellows, is a total wreck on the southwest point of Plum Island, N. Y., having pounded to pieces in a heavy sea yesterday. Last Sunday, with some prospective purchasers on board, she was given a trial trip. Afterward papers of sale were made out and were to have been transferred when the yacht was delivered in New York. The yacht went ashore on Plum Island while on her way to New York and will be a total loss. Those on board were taken off safely.

Tragedy In Hub Saloon

Boston, Oct. 8.—George Gould, steward on the steamer Hanoverian, in company with three other stewards, went into a saloon here last night, where they were invited into the proprietor's private room. Seeing a revolver on the table, Hughes picked it up and it exploded, the ball entering Gould's right side. He died in a short time. Although it is believed the shooting was accidental, Gould's three companions were held, pending an investigation.

Count's Big Undertaking

Boston, Oct. 8.—One of the callers at city hall yesterday was Count Salvador, son of Prince Aci of Palermo, who has been walking around the world on a wager of $20,000. He must earn his expenses and walk 18,000 miles within three years to win. The $20,000 is to go to charity.

THE CURE FOR TRUSTS

Shaw Says It Is Not Dependent Upon the Tariff

EXISTING LAWS ENFORCED

Will Be Reinforced Whenever Needed —Only Anti-Trust Measure on Statute Books Today Was Opposed by the Democrats In Congess

Boston, Oct. 9.—More than ordinary interest was attached to the annual dinner of the Republican club of Massachusetts here last night from the fact that the club has as guest Leslie M. Shaw, the secretary of the treasury. The speakers included, besides Mr. Shaw, Governor Crane, Lieutenant Governor Bates and Senator Lodge.

In opening the after dinner exercises, President Draper expressed regret that Secretary of War Root, who was an invited guest, should have been kept away on account of the stress of national affairs. Mr. Draper then presented Governor Crane. Governor Crane spoke briefly. His duties, he said, were brief and simple. They were honored with the presence of a member of the president's cabinet. He took great pleasure in presenting to him the greeting of the commonwealth.

President Draper next introduced Mr. Bates, who gave a historical sketch of the manufacturies of Massachusetts, and made a plea for a continuance of the protective tariff, which, he said, had made possible Massachusetts' remarkable success in business.

Mr. Shaw was introduced as the man who had met problems in such a way as to receive the praise of the people. His subject proper was "The Trusts." He submitted as one proposition that the Democratic party seemed to care more for establishing campaign issues than for the wise management of affairs when the campaign was over.

Mr. Shaw said that as far back as 1888, when the trust question was in its infancy, the very best brain and the very best statesmanship of the Democratic party culminated in a report that they did not know what to do, and with a recommendation that subsequent congresses deal with a subject admittedly too complicated for them to solve. It did not take long for Republican statesmanship to formulate a remedy. "Senate file No. 1," was the journal designation for the bill now known as the Sherman anti-trust law. It passed both houses. It was signed, and it remains the only anti-trust law of a federal nature on the statute books this day.

Mr. Shaw gave quotations to show, he said, that in 1890 the biggest Democrat in congress—their leader—opposed the Sherman act—first, because it was evolutionary; second, because it would be ineffective; third, because the state, and not congress, should deal with the evil, and then urged a revision of the tariff as a cure-all; and also to show that while he did this in a most strenuous way, he recognized and admitted, as the mouthpiece of his party, that placing trust-controlled articles on the free list would "punish the innocent together with the guilty;" that it would introduce such "vacillation in our tariff laws as would unsettle business," and that it would "invite combinations for mere purposes of speculation." When the opposition party, fighting with united ranks in 1890, and on the eve of a great victory, would not consider a remedy so manifestly fraught with evil, Mr. Shaw said did not believe the Republican party, in the midst of its greatest achievements, will pick up a Democratic castaway.

If there is a monopoly of any kind in the United States it probably is the Standard Oil company, and yet its success has been in no manner dependent upon the tariff. Protection, then, is not the cause of this monopoly, and if not the cause of all monopolies then its removal would not cure all monopolies.

Existing laws against trusts are being vigorously enforced. This policy must be continued, and the laws themselves must be reinforced wherever needed. But there are some things that must be permitted to regulate themselves.

Mr. Shaw doubted that the government can profitably dictate either the width of a railroad track, or the weight of the iron, or the size of the ship, of the capital to be employed in an industry. It can require the railroad to fence its right-of-way, and the common carrier to carry goods for all at a common rate. It can demand that the big ship shall not run down the small one, and that it shall give sailing vessels the right-of-way. It may and must enforce the present law, which forbids combinations, conspiracies and monopolies, and it must strengthen every weak place by additional legislation. It should invite competition among American producers, but it should never throw wide our doors to the products of poorly paid Europeans or the presence of poorly paid Asiatics.

In Mr. McKinley's speech of acceptance of his first nomination he declared that "It was wiser to open the mills for the unlimited employment of American labor than to open the mints for the unlimited coinage of the world's silver." The mills have been opened, and no American in this year of grace seeks employment in vain. What is the result? We manufactured more last year than all the shops and all the factories of any other two countries on the face of the earth, by more than $3,000,000,000. Our people consume more food, wear better clothes, live in more comfortable homes, and enjoy better educational advantages than any of which the world bears record. Our markets are the envy of all nations, and our productive capacity the astonishment of all peoples.

Our hope must be the preservation of that which is desirable and our aim the consummation of yet grander achievements. We must neither close our eyes to the evils that confront us nor forget the blessings we enjoy. It is early in the morning yet, and we are an infant nation. The day is full of promise, and that which is, and has been, is but the earnest of that which is to be.

Senator Lodge was the last speaker of the evening. He answered the attacks which had been made upon Secretary Root in connection with some of the work of the army, particularly of happenings in the Philippines. He pointed out what had been accomplished for the people of Cuba by the regular army, and he recalled the time when General Wood went out of Cuba leaving it "free, emancipated, clean, without a debt, thus keeping the word of the United States as no nation had kept its word before."

Corpse Cold Storage Plant

Louisville, Oct. 9.—Thirty dead bodies were found last night in a cold storage plant in the rear of an ice cream factory here. The same pipes which were used in congealing the cream for table use were connected with a small plant where they kept the bodies cool. The heads of the several colleges interested in the establishment say they are given the bodies by state institutions with the understanding that they are to be held 30 days for identification. In order to assist in the identification an arrangement was made with the ice cream plant to furnish the cooling air.

Albany, Oct. 9.—A Delaware and Hudson coal train jumped the track on Quay street in this city yesterday and the engine crashed into a three-story brick building used as a storehouse for rags and paper, demolishing the front wall and damaging the structure so that it will have to be torn down. The crew stuck to the engine and escaped serious injury.

HEROES OF CIVIL WAR

Once Again March Through the Nation's Capital

A RESTORATION OF YOUTH

In the Enjoyment Experienced by Many of the Old Veterans—President Roosevelt Drives Up and Down the Line In His Carriage

Washington, Oct. 9.—For more than six hours yesterday the people in Washington hummed the chorus of the old Civil war song "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys are Marching," and for an equal time the veterans constituting the Grand Army of the Republic made good the claim. The parade was the climax of the 36th encampment of their order. The occasion was in every way worthy of the Grand Army.

Beginning at a few minutes past 10 o'clock, when the head of the column moved from its station at the Capitol, it was almost 5 o'clock when the last squad in the line had passed the place of disbandment west of the White House. None of the soldiers were marching any great part of the time, for the entire line of march did not exceed 2½ miles in length, but those who composed the rear detachments were on their feet practically all day, much of the time being consumed in waiting to take their places in the line.

The route of the parade was down historic Pennsylvania avenue, along which many of them marched as raw recruits in going to the war in 1861 and 1862, and many others on the occasion of the grand review after the close of the war in 1865. The participants in the imposing pageant entered with life and vigor into the spirit of the occasion. Each countenance bore evidence of the joy the experience brought to the individual, and it was plainly evident that there was in the occasion much of the restoration of youth for most of them.

If the veterans had needed any spur to their enjoyment they would have found it easily in the crowds who thronged their pathway and in the smile which providence bestowed on them, for the weather was perfect. The government departments and the schools were closed for the day and practically the entire population of Washington turned out to do honor to the veterans, along with the hundred thousand visitors to the city.

The crowd was enthusiastic and outspoken in admiration, greeting every division of the procession with cheers and dismissing it with a "Godspeed" that had in it both praise and feeling.

President Roosevelt also lent his energies to the entertainment of the capital's guests. Unable to endure the strain of reviewing the column from a stand, he rose from his reclining chair and had himself driven up and down the line. The unusual interest thus manifested was appreciated by the old soldiers and the president was everywhere received by them with loud applause.

There were at least 25,000 men in line and the estimate of Commander-in-Chief Torrance ran as high as 30,000 men.

For several hours last night General Torrance received the ladies of the various organizations auxiliary to the Grand Army. The function took place in convention hall, and during the evening many thousands of women filed past the commander-in-chief and gave him a cordial greeting. A pleasing incident in connection with the reception, and which came as a complete surprise, was the presentation, on behalf of General Torrance's staff, of a handsome gold watch to the general and a diamond ring to Mrs. Torrance.

Last night the veterans held campfires in the big tents in the White Lot.

The leading candidates for commander-in-chief are General Stewart of Pennsylvania, General Black of Illinois, Colonel McElroy of Washington and General Sickles of New York. Stewart is thought to have the lead at present, though Black's friends claim about an equal number of delegates pledged.

Castro's Life In Danger

San Juan, P. R., Oct. 9.—According to advices received here from Venezuela it seems certain that the revolutionists will triumph, probably in a fortnight. Every effort is being made to capture President Castro, who, it is asserted, will be assassinated if caught. The president, it is claimed, will attempt to seek refuge on board a foreign man-of-war.

STARTLED

By some sudden sound she drops the vase upon the floor. She is nervous and may be told that nervousness is a luxury which only a rich woman can afford to indulge in. Nervousness has cost many a woman her position. Sometimes when women run machinery the price of nervousness is mutilation,—a finger lost or perhaps the whole hand crushed.

Nervousness in women is commonly but a symptom of womanly disease. It is useless in such cases to "doctor" for the nerves alone. Cure the diseases which attack the delicate womanly organism and nervousness will be cured also.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong, sick women well. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves and induces refreshing sleep.

"In the fall of 1897, I was troubled with nervousness, headache, heart trouble and female weakness," writes Miss Blanch M. Bracey, of Sala, Oswego Co., N. Y. "Last summer I wrote you and you advised me to try your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I did so and I began to improve rapidly. Continued taking the medicine, half a dozen each of 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' for the space of five months, and in less than a year had regained my former health."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the muddy complexion.

If your heart action is weak, make it strong. Build up the muscles and strengthen the nerves with the greatest of all heart remedies, Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"The least exertion or excitement caused my heart to throb and pound and I had smothering spells, pain and palpitation. Three bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure overcame all these disturbances and made me well."

Good Afternoon

Mr. Theophilus King and Mayor Bryant gave the Quincy coal fund a substantial start last night, and it is to hoped that there will be a prompt and generous response, that $5000 may be quickly raised so that there will be no coal famine in Quincy this winter. Coal at cost would be appreciated by every consumer, but there are those in city who will not be able this year to buy at cost sufficient to keep them comfortable. The calls upon the city for assistance will be more numerous than ever, and unless there is an early move made to secure a cargo of coal and a supply of wood, it may be impossible later to obtain either.

The Republican of the Second Norfolk district have made a wise choice in a candidate for the Senate, in Representative Albion F. Bemis of Foxboro. The two B's—Bemis and Brackett—may be busy bees at the State House next winter, and Norfolk county will be well represented.

Mr. Devery has joined the ranks of the representatives who do not represent. It is but just to add that he tried to do his part, but was not allowed to do the convention.

Quincy's school census shows 5621 children. The usual ratio of school children to population is 1 to 5, so that the city must have a population of 28,105. And we are growing rapidly!

Whether he prove successful or not, President Roosevelt has earned the gratitude of the American people by his efforts to end the coal strike.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The Standard Oil Company advanced the price of petroleum Monday, indicating that the magnates do not propose to permit the beef trust and coal barons to enjoy a monopoly of skinning the public.—Lynn Item.

☞Don't worry too much about your fuel supply. Although there is no prospect of a settlement of the strike at the present time, it is to be remembered that the problem is being studied by the leading men of the country, in and out of official positions and that the power of the American people which has never yet failed of having its effect is being focused at the present time.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞Some genius for statistics has figured out that 67 per cent. of the marriages each year in this country are due to propinquity. What caused the other 33 per cent. the statistican does not tell us. It would be interesting to know, for instance, now that the summer season is over, how many marriages are due to heroic developments at the seashore, in the woods and on the mountains. Everybody knows that when a young and athletic male rescues a fair and fragile young female from a damp, disgusting fate in an undertow the proper thing is for them to marry. This, of course, must represent some certain per cent. but it is extremely difficult to fix it definitely. Then there are the woods, where it is so easy to get lost and so romantic to be found just as the darkness begins to threaten and the owls begin to wake and hoot. And then there are the mountain climbs, where ascent and descent are alike so terrible, and one bent on rescue comes from above or below with strong, sure footed steps.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞One of the untoward effects of the coal strike is going to be seen in the reckless cutting of the forests of New England. The forests are made to cut, but they are not made to be cut with no reference to the interests of the future. Yet some men have gone into them with apparently no regard for themselves or for those who are coming after them. Instead of cutting with discrimination, they are cutting with recklessness, leaving the land as bare as if it had been mown with a gigantic scythe. Wood which is of comparatively small value at the moment, and of scarcely any value under usual conditions, is being laid low when a little care and the exercise of a little judgment would save it for the much greater value that would certainly come in a few years. There was never a time when the usefulness of intelligent forestry in this country was more apparent than it is now, when wood lot owners are in their excitement throwing away their own interests for the sake of what seems to them to be an immediate gain. It looks now as if the wood cutting were going to be decidedly overdone, and as if in about a year, when another season for buying fuel comes round, the men who are piling up cut wood of an inferior quality were going to have a lot of unsalable fuel on their hands. There is probably good wood enough to supply all the demands which will be made and good prices can be obtained for it. But why should the wood which will be valuable a few years hence be sacrificed, now before the necessity has come?—New Bedford Standard.

☞The Nancy Hanks Lincoln memorial, which was unveiled Wednesday in the rather desolate region where the grave has been, in Spencer county, Ind., these many years, is one of the best deserved monuments in America, and it is gratifying that so great a concourse of people attended the dedicatory exercises. There is something picturesque, and even pathetic, in the event, when one considers how utterly unconscious Nancy Hanks in life was of the future eminence in the world's motherhood she was to attain. When she died in the wretched poverty of the western pioneer days, her great son was still a mere child, and even in her dreams she could not have imagined for him the tremendous career which was wrought out in his life.—Springfield Republican.

☞The sewing girl is out of the way of getting a husband. She does not come in contact with men in her work, as other girls do, and with so little time for anything but her work she does not make the acquaintance of marriageable men. The very nature of her employment excludes men from her society during her working hours. Her associates, and even her employers are almost invariably of her own sex. No class of women are more deserving of good husbands than are the women who make their living with their needles. They are usually modest, refined and domestic. They do not hunt husbands, and being so withdrawn from the daily lives of men, husbands do not usually hunt them because they do not usually known of them.—Louisville Courier Jounal.

An Interview.

The coal merchants of the city have been criticised because they are unable now to supply coal as ordered, but there are always two sides.

Eben W. Sheppard, when interviewed by the Ledger, said there are two reasons why his firm sold coal some weeks ago to out-of-town dealers.

First, prices being high, customers were not buying coal, and we could not advise them to buy, as we honestly expected the coal strike would be settled, when prices would again become normal.

Second,—We had obligations falling due, which every business man has, that had to be met. Collection were poor, and we took the next method of realizing cash, which is our quick asset. We thought then, as we do now, that we had sufficient stock on hand to tide over our customers until we commenced to receive coal again.

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. We purchased some of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and he commenced taking them. Inside of thirty days he had gained forty pounds in flesh. He is now fully recovered. We have a good trade on the tablets.—Holley Bros., Merchants, Long Branch, Mo. For sale by all druggists.

☞Now is the time to use printer's ink on the elm and apple trees, before the heavy frosts. opl

October Magazines.

The Review of Reviews for October presents some striking pictures to illustrate twentieth-century shipbuilding. The new battleship Maine, in contrast with Lord Nelson's frigate Victory; one of the new English submarine torpedo boats; and Mr. Charles R. Flint's yacht Arrow, which on September 6 steamed at the rate of 44.13 statute miles an hour, are the types illustrated.

Everybody's Magazine for October has a story by Rudyard Kipling, a sketch about Old Steamboat Days on the Missouri, a paper on The Career of Alfred Bait, the Croesus of South Africa, stories recalled by the death of John W. Mackay, and an article recounting the Experiences of a Literary woman as a Working Girl at a Lynn Shoe Factory.

In the October Woman's Home Companion is an article on How Mrs. Roosevelt Keeps House. Other features are: The Children of the Poor in Great Cities and the Old Fiddlers' Contest. The double page of pictures showing What We Have Done for Our New Possessions tells better than words the work the United States is doing in the West Indies and the Philippines.

Following Mr. Chapple's entertaining Affairs at Washington, the leading special article of the October number of The National Magazine is The Palaces of St. Louis, with pictures of eleven of the homes of the World's Fair City. S. Glen Andrus of Chicago, in the King of All the Cattle Kings, tells the story of the Mexican who is the largest land and flock owner on the American continent.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

TO RAISE FUND.

To Supply Quincy With Coal at Cost.

Mass Meeting Held at City Hall.

Resolutions Adopted Criticising Coal Operators.

Mayor Bryant called the meeting to order and briefly stated the object, which was that coal might be furnished at cost.

Ex-Councilman Walter S. Pinkham was elected chairman of the meeting.

Mayor Bryant said the proposition was to appoint a committee to obtain a supply of coal.

Brooks Adams, Esq., was called upon and replied that he had no practical experience in this matter. He would be happy to do all in his power, but did not think himself competent to give advice.

Overseer of the Poor Cunningham stated that his department generally sent out from 175 to 200 tons of coal during the winter months. There was no coal at the almshouse now, and 40 tons were required. At the present time many who otherwise would not ask for aid are doing so, and upwards of 300 tons will be required.

Frank S. Patch, of C. Patch & Son, was called upon and stated hard coal was now $15 and soft coal $9. In reply to questions, he stated that at present the supply in the city was 2,000 tons of hard and 2,000 tons of soft. The normal supply was 25,000 tons. He thought the present stock would supply Quincy until Jan. 1. If strike was settled now it would be six weeks before any coal reached Quincy. The wood situation was bad. All the wood obtainable in Maine and New Hampshire had been purchased and the price advanced.

Eben W. Sheppard of J. F. Sheppard & Sons, was also called upon. He said the situation had been fairly stated by Mr. Patch. In reply to questions, he said the dealers in Quincy were asking market price. He had been offered $20 per ton for his supply. The situation in Quincy was better than any other place. When I sold coal to out-of-town parties I thought the strike would soon be settled. We have shipped from 1,500 to 1,700 tons out of town. He did not believe people would suffer. He believed ways would be found to settle the strike; that as soon as the train block was relieved there would be plenty of soft coal.

Up to this time the meeting had been very harmonious. But Levi H. Turner, the socialist candidate for Representative, then took the floor and attempted to discuss the causes of the strike, and asked Mr. Sheppard if it was not a conspiracy on the part of the coal barons to make an artificial scarcity in New England.

Mr. Sheppard replied no.

Mr. Turner then attempted to discuss what he called a conspiracy.

Col. Anderson raised a point of order that this meeting was not to discuss the cause of the strike, but to see what could be done to relieve Quincy.

Mr. Turner took exceptions and declared if this was a mass meeting he had a right to discuss the question.

Frank Tinney then asked Mr. Sheppard about the price of coal in Quincy, and the latter replied that Quincy always sold at Boston prices.

Theophilus King said it seemed to him the proper thing to have a committee appointed and buy a cargo of coal. Let us get $5,000 and give $2500 to the poor and the other $2500 will come back. He would subscribe $500. Of this $250 would be given to the poor and $250 as an investment to come back when the coal was sold.

Mayor Bryant them stated that he would also subscribe $500 in the same manner as Mr. King had done.

Upon his motion it was voted that the chairman appoint a committee of twenty to raise funds to purchase and distribute the coal.

The plan is to purchase what coal there is at present in Quincy and sell the same to citizens. People who can not afford to pay more than the normal price will be supplied at that price and the coal that is supplied by the Poor department to be paid for at normal price.

A question as to the use of soft coal was asked, and William E. Badger of the Board of Health, and an expert machinist, replied that he had burned soft coal in his range and it worked all right. All that is necessary is to open the top slide and lower slide so as to give a good draft and you will get plenty of heat. It will only be necessary to brush the carbon off the top of the oven once a week.

Mr. Turner offered a set of resolutions similar to those passed at the Socialists meeting in City Square Saturday night.

An effort to have them ruled out of order failed, and they were passed by the meeting, although there was a strong no.

The meeting then adjourned.

MAY HAVE BRIDAL CAR.

Scheme to Protect Passengers From Showers of Rice.

For the protection of its passengers the Chicago and Northwestern road may be forced to haul a bridal car on one of its eastbound trains, says a dispatch from Freeport, Ill. This train is numbered 156 and leaves this city every weekday evening at 6:15 and arrives in Chicago at 10:10. It has been estimated that this train carries more wedding parties and bridal pairs than any other short run train in the middle west.

There was strewn on the floor of the car the other day sufficient rice to fill a bushel measure, and the package racks were hung with old shoes of every size and kind. The seats and the windows were festooned with white ribbons, and at each station there would come in through the open windows showers of rice and handfuls of small circulars setting forth the fact that a newly wedded pair were about to get on the train.

For this reason the company thinks it would be a good plan to load the blissful pairs in one car, which would be properly labeled and decorated and where ordinary passengers would not be unceremoniously disturbed.

Demand For Naval Cookbook.

Since the publication several days ago of the fact that the navy department has issued a cookbook the department has been fairly flooded with requests for copies, says a Washington correspondent. Rear Admiral Kenney, the paymaster general of the navy, who prepared it, has had time for little else than answering these requests. The demand has been so great that the edition is almost entirely exhausted.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

HOW TO BURN.

Soft Coal May Be Used for Household Purposes.

The most important fact to remember in burning soft coal, says the Scientific American, is that the great quantities of gas thrown off when first ignited render it necessary to supply considerably more air above the bed of fuel than is the case with anthracite coal. Thus in replenishing the kitchen stove, it will not do to fill the grate entirely full of fresh fuel, since this would result in the rapid lowering of the oven temperature, which would not be restored until the mass has become ignited and the gases had been somewhat burned off.

It will be found that the best method is to feed small quantities of fuel to the fire at frequent intervals, keeping the lower drafts closed more than they would be in burning anthracite coal, and keeping the upper draft constantly open.

For use in the heating furnace, soft coal will be found to give good results when once the proper manipulation of the furnace has been learned. It should be understood at the outset that more constant attention will be necessary, for the reason that soft coal burns more quickly and will not remain incandescent for so long a time as anthracite coal.

During the daytime the attendant will have no difficulty in keeping a steady fire if he is careful to feed the furnace frequently; to keep the bottom drafts but slightly open, and to give a liberal feed of air through the air inlet in the furnace door. Owing to the rapidity of combustion of bituminous coal it will not be possible to bank up the furnace for the night and leave it with a certainty that there will be a live fire remaining in the morning; but this difficulty can be overcome if a ton of anthracite is laid in with the winter's supply of soft coal, and the anthracite used only for banking up the fire over night. A ton of anthracite used for this purpose should suffice to tide the household over the period of high prices.

There is one feature connected with the use of soft coal, however, which, unless it be carefully safe-guarded, may introduce an element of danger. We refer to the heavy deposits of soot in the flues which will occur when soft coal is used. This soot, unless it is swept out at stated intervals, will accumulate, and being inflammable, would be liable to ignite and produce a fierce fire in the chimney, with a consequent risk to the dwelling.

It sometimes happens that the ends of rafters or beams are, by careless or ignorant construction, allowed to project into the chimney flues. These might become ignited and carry fire to the interior of the house.

There is further danger that the shower of sparks from a burning chimney would ignite the shingle roof of the surburban cottage. These risks may be obviated by sweeping the chimney, say once in two months. The "chimney sweep" is an important personage in the old countries, and it would be a curious incidental development of the strike if he should make his appearance even temporarily in this country.

RESIGNATION OF BAER

Interesting Rumor In Relation to Coal Strike

DENIED BY READING MEN

President Mitchell Confers With Senators Quay and Penrose at New York—Manufacturers' Trip to See Coal Operators Was Fruitless

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—A rumor was current here last night that George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia and Reading railway, had submitted his resignation to the board of directors. Inquiry at Mr. Baer's residence here elicited the information that he had retired for the night, leaving strict injunctions that he was not to be disturbed. Two members of the board of directors, however, emphatically denied the report. The Reading directors met yesterday to consider the annual report of the company and it was stated that no other business was discussed.

The impression prevails here that United States Senators Quay and Penrose are still endeavoring to effect a settlement of the strike. The two senators went to New York late yesterday afternoon, but declined to state the object of their visit. The hasty departure of President Mitchell from Wilkesbarre for New York, and the fact that the senators left here at about the same time, is regarded as suggestive.

Mitchell Is Non-Communicative

New York, Oct. 9.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers association arrived here last night with the district presidents. Mr. Mitchell had the appearance of having been under a severe mental and physical strain, but assured questioners that he was in good health, though tired.

At 10 o'clock Mr. Mitchell called up Wilkesbarre by telephone, the reason being that he had expected some telegrams which he did not find awaiting him. Shortly after this he turned to the newspaper men and said:

"Information has been conveyed to me by 'phone that a total of 260 local unions have reported unanimous votes against resuming work. The men are not deterred from going to work through any fear of bodily harm, but are resolved to remain out until the differences between them and the operators are arbitrated or until they are ordered to return by their leaders.

"This leaves not more than 40 or 50 local unions to hear from. The unanimous action includes the votes of strikers not members of the union, but who were present at the meetings and voted with the union men."

At 11 o'clock President Mitchell and two of the district presidents went from the Ashland House to the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where Senators Quay and Penrose and Louis N. Hammerling of Wilkesbarre were registered.

President Mitchell's conferenc with Quay and Penrose lasted for an hour and three quarters. At its conclusion Mr. Mitchell returned to the Ashland House. He declined to say a word as to his talk with the senators and the latter also refused to talk.

Mission Without Result

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—The visit to this city of the committee representing the National Association of Manufacturers for the purpose of conferring with the presidents of the anthracite coal carrying roads, who last week met President Roosevelt and the officials of the Miners' union at Washington, appears to have been fruitless. The committee arrived here early yesterday morning and spent the greater part of the day at the Manufacturers' club awaiting the appearance of the presidents, but none of the latter answered, in person at least, the request of the committee for a conference. Last night the committee issued the following vague statement:

"The committee of manufacturers came to Philadelphia after meeting John Mitchell and his associates at Buffalo on Tuesday, for the purpose of considering measures by which the coal strike could be ended, and this committee will meet again Oct. 14."

After the members of the committee had breakfasted they dispatched a messenger to the offices of President Baer of the Reading company, announcing that they were ready to meet the operators. The nature of Mr. Baer's reply is not known, but in answer to a question the railroad president said: "I know nothing about a committee." He declined to make any further statement.

No Feeling Against Troops

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—The entire National Guard of Pennsylvania is camped in the anthracite coal regions, the last regiment from the western part of the state having arrived late yesterday afternoon. Contrary to expectations the troops were well received and there was no disposition on the part of the strikers to annoy the soldiers. Universal quiet reigns throughout the entire region. The soldiers were scattered throughout Schuylkill, Luzerne, Carbon and Northumberland counties.

The fact that all of the locals throughout the anthracite region have voted unanimously to continue the strike would indicate that the presence of the troops will have but little effect upon forcing the men to return to work and from present indications it would seem that the settlement of the strike is no nearer a solution than it has been for many weeks.

BRAGG'S INDISCRETION

Causes a Shift In the Havana and Hong Kong Consul Generalships

Washington, Oct. 9.—Edward S. Bragg, consul general at Havana, has been transferred to the post of United States consul general at Hong Kong, taking the place of William A. Rublee, who has been transferred to the consulate at Havana.

General Bragg's usefulness at Havana was impaired last summer by the becoming public of a slighting remark about the Cubans contained in a letter written by him to his wife, in which he used this language: "Uncle Sam might as well try to make a whistle out of a pig's tail as to try to make something out of the Latin race."

A Story of False Molars

Cleveland, Oct. 9.—Believing that he had swallowed his false teeth during sleep Tuesday morning, and being supported in his belief by the operator of an X-ray machine, Frank Buettner yesterday had his esophagus opened its entire length to recover the missing article. No teeth were found, however. A search of the bed in which Buettner slept Monday night disclosed the teeth between the mattresses. Buettner's condition is serious. The object which the X-ray expert held to be teeth was a swelling due to laryngitis.

Martial Law at New Orleans

New Orleans, Oct. 9.—As a result of the continued difficulty experienced by the New Orleans Railway company in attempting to resume their schedule on account of the conflict between the strikers and those who attempted to fill the dissatisfied men's positions, all the militia in this city were ordered under arms last night. Sixteen persons were injured in yesterday's riots, pistols and other weapons being freely used.

Proposed Audience Abandoned

Berlin, Oct. 9.—The idea of Emperor William receiving the Boer generals has been abandoned. The emperor had intimated his willingness to receive the Boers in audience on condition that they would refrain from doing or saying anything anti-British and that they be presented through the British ambassador, but the generals appeared to expect an invitation from the emperor.

Domestic Discord In Palace

Vienna, Oct. 9.—A dispatch from Belgrade says that to revenge herself upon King Alexander for stopping her "pin money," Queen Draga created scandalous scenes before the courtiers. The king reproached the queen with being the curse of his life. Draga retorted with coarse abuse, accusing the king of a liason with her sister Helen, and even boxed the king's ears.

Fast Mile on Slow Track

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 9.—Dan Patch went an exhibition mile over the four cornered course here yesterday in 2:01 flat. The track had not had time to dry thoroughly after heavy rains, and the hoofs of the pacer sank into the clay an inch and a half in many places. With a good track there is little doubt that a new pacing record would have been established.

Great Historical Discovery

Athens, Oct. 9.—Near Cheronea, the place where the Macedonians buried their dead after the defeat of the Athenians and Thebans by Philip of Macedon, 338 B. C., a number of skeletons have been discovered in a good state of preservation. Alongside one of the skeletons lay a sarissa, or pike, carried by the Macedonian phalanx.

Will Have British Crew

Glasgow, Oct. 9.—The proposal to place the Shamrock II under the control of an American skipper and crew, when she is refitted to meet the new challenger, has been abandoned, and at the conclusion of the tests on this side of the Atlantic, Captain Bevis and the crew of the Shamrock I will be transferred to the Shamrock II.

French Miners Will Quit Work

Paris, Oct. 9.—The decision of the national committee of the Miners' Federation to declare a general strike throws the responsibility upon the mine owners, because the latter have declined to discuss the claims of the miners. The French miners number 162,000 men.

Yellow Jack on the Isthmus

Washington, Oct. 9.—A report from Captain Potter, commanding the U. S. S. Ranger at Panama, states that the health conditions on the isthmus are unsatisfactory and that yellow fever and dysentery prevail among the Colombian troops stationed there.

Five Killed In a Wreck

Washington, Pa., Oct. 9.—A wreck occurred last night at Van Emen's station, in which five lives were lost and a number injured. The killed were all foreigners. A coal train ran into a construction train at the opening of a switch.

Macedonians Up In Arms

Sofia, Oct. 9.—A messenger arrived yesterday at Rilo, a village on the Macedonian frontier, with the news that a general insurrection had broken out in a dozen districts in Macedonia.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Friday, Oct. 10.
Sun rises—5:50; sets—5:12.
Moon sets—11:52 p. m.
High water—5:15 a. m.; 5:45 p. m.

Over the eastern and central parts of the country the temperatures have risen generally, though not decidedly. There is nothing on the weather map to indicate any decided changes in the weather, and generally clear weather may be expected.

BRAVE LIFE SAVERS

Rescue a Vessel and Crew From a Most Perilous Position

Chatham, Mass., Oct. 9.—Schooner George Glover lies at anchor close under Chatham beach, thanks to the Orleans life saving crew, after having passed through one of the most exciting experiences that befall coastwise craft. The Glover, from New York to Boston, passed over the shoals safely in company with other vessels. While in Massachusetts bay Tuesday night, in sight of Minot's light, she was run into by an unknown three-masted schooner and all her head gear, jibs, etc., were torn away.

Those on board, who included two women, thought the vessel was surely sinking, and they worked all night on deck clearing away the wreckage, the seas constantly sweeping over them. At daylight yesterday they were sighted by a passing schooner, but declined her assistance. Later, the Orleans life saving crew put out to the schooner and succeeded in bringing her to her anchorage, where she now remains. All hands on board were exhausted, and a tow boat will probably tow the schooner to port.

Bennett Meets With Defeat

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 9.—In the Fourteenth Essex Republican representative convention held here last night, W. T. Babb and Wallace H. Randlett were nominated, thus eliminating Frank P. Bennett from the contest for the speakership of the house. Bennett was present, and said that he would run on an independent ticket, if he was the choice of the Saugus Republicans, in a meeting to be held next Saturday evening.

Want Charges In Writing

Woburn, Mass., Oct. 9.—The committee of the Woburn city council appointed to investigate charges of bribery made by President Brady against Alderman Greaney and other aldermen held its second session last evening, but was as barren of results as the first one. The committee decided that there were no charges to investigate until they were put in writing and voted to again request President Brady to do this at a meeting next Monday.

The Lipman Assault Case

Manchester, Mass., Oct. 9.—Developments have been slow in coming to light in the assault case of Thursday evening, when J. M. Lipman was assaulted while entering the town hall by some unknown person with a sandbag. The victim is in a critical condition, never having fully regained consciousness. His head bears marks of the severest kind of a drubbing.

Liquor Agencies Proposed

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 9.—Senator Walbridge introduced a bill in the legislature yesterday modifying the prohibitory law and removing all the harsh features of the old statute. The act calls for the election by the legislature of a state commissioner to have charge of state agencies for the sale of liquor for medicinal, chemical and mechanical purposes.

Coal and Wood Bonfire

Wakefield, Mass., Oct. 9.—The coal sheds of Samuel H. Helen were burned last night and with them a large amount of sawed wood and nearly 100 tons of soft coal. It is thought the fire was the work of an incendiary. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

First Snowfall of Season

Littleton, N. H., Oct. 9.—The mountains in this section were snow-capped yesterday morning, it being the first snowfall of the season.

Alleged Conspiracy to Defraud

Norfolk, Oct. 9.—Aaron Marx, Louis Wasserman and J. A. Codd, butchers of this city, were arrested yesterday, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government by jointly operating fictitious bids for supplying the Norfolk navy yard with 100,000 pounds of fresh meat and 100,000 pounds of fresh vegetables. Richard Eastwood is also charged with the same offense, but has not been apprehended.

Bryan Working For Fusion

Falls City, Neb., Oct. 9.—William J. Bryan yesterday began a campaign on behalf of the fusion ticket of Nebraska, which will continue with little interruption until November. He made three speeches. Trusts and imperialism were dwelt upon, with incidental reference to the coal miners' strike and the financial question.

With Fortnightly Sailings

London, Oct. 9.—It is officially announced at Bristol docks that as a result of negotiations carried on at Bristol and Boston, J. H. Welsford & Co. of Liverpool will begin a steamship service between Avonmouth and Boston. Vessels will sail from both ports once a fortnight.

First Reports Exaggerated

Beaumont, Tex., Oct. 9.—The damage by fire in the oil field was confined to an area comprising about two acres and the losses consist of 75 derricks, 50 pumping plants, and six small oil tanks. The loss is placed at $150,000. One man was fatally burned.

McLean Homeward Bound

Colon, Oct. 9.—Commander McLean of the cruiser Cincinnati sailed for New York yesterday on steamer Seguranca. Commander Mason is now in command of the Cincinnati, which sails for Cape Haytien after coaling. The isthmus is quiet.

WITHOUT AGREEMENT

Senators and Governor Confer With Coal Operators

LATTER TURN DEAF EARS

To Pleadings For Consideration of the Political Aspect of the Struggle —Determined to Resist Demands of Strikers to the Bitter End

New York, Oct. 10.—Replete at its opening with promise of a solution of the struggle between the United Mine Workers of America and the operators of the anthracite properties in Pennsylvania, yesterday closed without apparent appreciable progress toward an agreement upon the issues in controversy. Most noteworthy of the day's events was a conference at the office of Senator Platt, at which there were present, among others, Senators Quay and Penrose and Governor Odell and nearly all the heads of the big corporations controlling the anthracite fields.

In all seeming this conference had a contrary effect to that which had been hoped from it, and the operators departed declaring adherence to the policy they have followed from the first of resisting the demands of the Miners' union to the bitter end.

There were other conferences during the day in which President Mitchell and people of more or less consequence in the industrial world participated, but these, so far as information obtainable goes, were as barren of result as the principal meeting, details of which are given below on the authority of one who was present.

According to this authority Senator Quay and Governor Odell expressed the opinion that should the strike continue for another fortnight or longer the effect would be to so possess the public mind with the one subject of shortage of fuel that political duties would be neglected and the voters remain away from the polls on election day, with the natural result that the majority party in Pennsylvania and New York would be the greater sufferer. Senator Penrose expressed his concurrence in the representations of the others and Senator Platt and Mr. Lauterbach spoke in a similar strain.

On their part the operators declared that the question at issue was entirely apart from party politics and they refused to be influenced by representations as to the effect the strike might have upon the fortunes of one party or the other.

One of the political conferees next suggested that to protract the struggle with the Miners' union would be to open the way for the advocates of anti-corporation legislation at Harrisburg and Albany to move for the introduction of measures calculated to impair the value of railroad and coal property, and that it was even possible that in the stress of public opinion laws might be enacted that would impair for years the value of the properties the operators represented. It was said by one speaker that a bill of this antagonistic character had already been framed and was ready for submission to the Pennsylvania legislature. The possibility of harrassing litigation both in Pennsylvania and New York was also dwelt upon, and the fear expressed that in some instances the state of public mind might influence the determination of such suits.

These representations failed to move the operators, who declared that party politics should not be injected into the situation. The operators further expressed their confidence in the integrity of the courts and said they had no fear of the success of any attack that might be made through the state legislatures upon the property interests concerned.

This brought the conference to a close and the men separated. Shortly afterwards General Thomas of the Erie had a long talk with J. P. Morgan, the nature of the conversation not being disclosed by either of the men.

ITS FIRST PRESIDENT

Carroll Wright Heads New Department of Clark University

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 10.—The new collegiate department of Clark university was formally launched yesterday with dedicatory exercises and the inauguration of the first president of the college, Carroll W. Wright, United States commissioner of labor and statistics. The exercises were attended by a large delegation from sister institutions as well as by several hundred citizens of Worcester. The three speakers, besides President Wright, were Senator Hoar, president of the board of trustees; Senator Lodge, and President Hall of the university.

The delegates and professors of Clark university, about 50 in all, marched in a body to the gymnasium, attired in academic costume, taking seats on the platform. After devotional exercises came the speeches and the inaugural of President Wright, after which President Hall extended the right hand of fellowship in an address of welcome to the first executive of the new department. The exercises closed with the benediction pronounced by Rev. Calvin Stebbins.

Rhody's Republican Ticket

Providence, Oct. 10.—In a short, harmonious convention yesterday the Republicans of Rhode Island nominated a state ticket as follows: Governor, C. D. Kimball; lieutenant governor, G. L. Shepley; secretary of state, C. P. Bennett; attorney general, C. F. Stearns. The platform reaffirmed that of the Republican convention held at Philadelphia two years ago; expressed approval of President Roosevelt and his administration and favored his nomination for president in 1904. Congressmen Bull and Capron were renominated at the district conventions.

$20,000 For Breach of Promise

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 10.—The jury in the superior court yesterday returned a verdict of $20,000 for the plaintiff in the McDonald-Kieran breach of promise case. The principals in the case are Miss McDonald, a Radcliffe graduate, and Patrick Kieran, superintendent of the water works system here. It was alleged that the promise to marry was made in 1886, and the couple had been on the best of terms until last March, when Kieran began paying attention to another woman, and the suit resulted.

Fatal Wreck In Connecticut

Danbury, Conn., Oct. 10.—One person dead and over 20 injured is the result of a head-on railroad collision last evening at Sandy Hook. An excursion train failed to take a siding, it is alleged, and crashed into a regular train standing in front of the station discharging passengers. The engines on both trains were considerably damaged and the first car on the excursion train was crushed. Miss Mamie Quinlan, aged 22, was so seriously injured that she died. Hardly a person in the car escaped injury.

Employes Piled Out In Dark

Adams, Mass., Oct. 10.—Fire in No. 3 mill of the Berkshire Cotton Manufacturing company last night caused a loss of $10,000. The blaze started in the power room and as the engines were shut down the lights went out, and about 1200 employes crowded out of the building in the dark. While several persons were bruised, none was injured seriously. The damage was mostly by water.

She Had Pneumonia

Boston, Oct. 10.—Late Sunday night Lottie Munroe, a pretty woman of 23, a nurse in a hospital at Providence, was found on a street here in a dazed condition by a policeman, and was sent to the city hospital, where she died yesterday. She came here on her way to her home in St. John to spend her vacation. Medical Examiner Draper found death to be due to pneumonia.

Says He Didn't Use Poison

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 10.—Philip Clarke, who is under $5000 bonds on a charge of placing sugar of lead in a well on the farm of his brother-in-law, Frank Barrows, at Assonet, admits that he visited the farm shortly before the condition of the well was discovered, but denies placing poison in the well.

Lipman Is Improving

CHIEF OF GRAND ARMY

General Stewart of Pennsylvania Is Chosen

MEDICAL BUREAU SCORED

In Report on Pension Investigation— Laws Held to Have Been Unjustly Administered Under Commissioner Evans—No Pension Claim Frauds

Washington, Oct. 10.—The Grand Army got down to business yesterday and the encampment of the order, besides hearing an address from Commander-in-Chief Torrance and reports from a number of officers and committees, elected a new head for the ensuing year.

The new commander-in-chief is General T. J. Stewart of Pennsylvania, who was a leading candidate for the honor a year ago. His competitors yesterday were General John C. Black of Illinois, a former commissioner of pensions, and Colonel John McElroy of this city. The name of General Daniel E. Sickles of New York was presented to the convention, but he withdrew from the race. William M. Olin, secretary of state of Massachusetts, was elected vice commander-in-chief, and James M. Averill of Georgia junior vice commander-in-chief.

Aside from the election of these officers the most interesting feature of the encampment was the report of the committee appointed last year to investigate the administration of the pension office by the then pension commissioner, H. C. Evans, and to then bring the results of the investigation to the attention of the president.

This committee severely scored the medical division of the pension bureau, declaring that it was a deadline where were executed the claims of veterans seeking pensions. It accused the personnel of this division of approaching the reports of the examining surgeon throughout the country with suspicion and distrust and as made in bad faith. It denounced the reports that extensive frauds were practiced in pension claims as absolutely baseless.

The Women's Relief Corps, the Daughters of Veterans and the Ladies of the G. A. R. also met in annual convention yesterday. Thousands of veterans and their wives, not delegates to either of these organizations, attended army corps reunions in the big tents on the White lot or spent the beautiful day in sight-seeing.

In Farragut tent last night, standing side by side, each recounting the deeds of the armies which followed them, were General Sickles and General Longstreet, both of whom faced each other on the battlefield of Gettysburg. The wearers of the blue representing the survivors of the Third army corps gathered together last night and told again the story of the memorable conflict at Gettysburg. After both Sickles and Longstreet had spoken, Sickles told the veterans that they now had heard both sides and they could take their choice, which brought forth the remark: "We will take both."

Understood Their Business

Washington, Oct. 10.—The army engineers stationed at the Washington barracks gave an exhibition yesterday of their skill in pontoon bridge building for the benefit of the G. A. R. visitors. Companies K, L and M were assigned to the work. In 40 minutes they constructed a bridge 360 feet long, of such strength that a battery of field artillery could easily have passed over it. It was dismantled in considerably less than the time required to construct it.

American Enterprise In Chile

Santiago de Chile, Oct. 10.—A number of engineers have arrived here for the purpose of building railroads and other public works in Chile for New York capitalists. The party was received yesterday with great cordiality by President Riesco, who promised them every facility in their work. It is said that $25,000,000 is to be expended on railroads and other improvements.

Mackay Left No Creditors

New York, Oct. 10.—Surrogate Thomas yesterday granted ancillary letters of administration on the estate of the late John W. Mackay to Mr. Mackay's son, Clarence H. Mackay. The Mackay estate in the state of New York amounts to $2,500,000, and there are no creditors, either in this state or elsewhere.

Ready to Receive Prince

New York, Oct. 10.—The United States dispatch boat Dolphin arrived in port from the Washington navy yard last night for the purpose of conveying to West Point on his visit to the United States military academy the Crown Prince of Siam, who is due to arrive in this city from Europe today.

Killed by Needless Operation

Cleveland, Oct. 10.—Frank Buettner, whose throat was operated on by surgeons to recover a set of false teeth, which he thought he had swallowed, but which were found later in his bed, died yesterday from the effects of the operation. The pain in his throat was due to acute laryngitis.

Poison In Mineral Water

Mannington, W. Va., Oct. 10.—Rev. W. R. Prendergast, pastor of the Catholic church here, died yesterday from the results of poison by means of mineral water served at dinner. A colored servant is at the point of death and 12 other people who drank the water are very ill. The poisoning is a mystery and the authorities are investigating.

Alleged Conspirators Held

Norfolk, Oct. 10.—Commissioner Bowden yesterday held for the federal grand jury Aaron Marx, J. A. Codd and Louis Wasserman, for conspiracy with intent to defraud the United States in the matter of the Norfolk navy yard beef and vegetable contracts. All of the accused were admitted to bail.

Irish Leaguers Coming

Liverpool, Oct. 10.—John Redmond, chairman of the United Irish league, and John Dillon and Michael Davitt boarded the steamer New England yesterday for Boston, to attend the national convention of the United Irish league, which is to open at that city on Oct. 19.

Coal Conference Resolutions

Detroit, Oct. 10.—The 186 delegates, representing 11 states, who attended the interstate conference on the coal situation here yesterday, adopted resolutions last night urging the president to institute civil proceedings looking to the enforcement of the interstate commerce act against the coal companies and criminal proceedings against their officers; petitioning the governor of Pennsylvania to call a special session of the legislature of that state to condemn all the coal carrying roads and sufficient of the mines to supply the demands of the people. The resolution also petitions the president to call a special session of the house of representatives and to recommend to them the appointment of a committee with full power to investigate the cause of the strike and to place the blame therefor. A supplemental resolution urges the president to at once institute proceedings to dissolve "the present combination of the coal operators" and to have a receiver appointed to operate the mines.

Troops Taking It Easy

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 10.—There are no developments in the mine workers' strike in this valley. The entire community remains quiet and the troops have nothing more to do than go through their daily routine. Intense interest is manifested in President Mitchell's visit to New York.

Good Afternoon

The selection of the Maple place corner for the new Quincy Federal building is an admirable one, but it will call for two or three important changes. Many doubtless would like to have the appropriation for the building made sufficiently large to permit the enlargement of the lot to Temple street. All public buildings should have spacious grounds. Then Maple place should be extended to Chestnut street, and at the same time widened and rebuilt. Unless this is done, the street railway should be moved from the side to the centre of the street, as it now abuts the Bass and Nightingale property and it would be very objectionable to those who drive up to the post office on business.

W. M. Olin has made Massachusetts an excellent Secretary of State, and has all the necessary qualifications to make the Grand Army an excellent Vice Commander-in-Chief, and later Commander-in-Chief.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Hall Caine has two versions of his dramatization of "The Eternal City"—one for America and another for England. The heroine, Donna Roma, is made a different person for this country than she is for the other. Imagine William Shakespeare having prepared two versions of "Romeo and Juliet," with Juliet an abandoned woman for one class of theatre-goers, and an innocent girl for another!—New Bedford Standard.

☞The person who has anything for sale and decides to raise the price 100 per cent. or more about this time seems to be doing it, whether there is any excuse in fact or not. The public has become so accustomed to extortionate prices that it does not appear to resent them when they come, but financial matters, to a certain extent, are matters of figures and it will not be long before there may not be enough money to buy anything in the possession of the purchasing public. What then?—Brockton Enterprise.

☞English paragraphers have been somewhat amused by the report that the redoubtable De Wet, the man of iron, had been so fatigued by the meeting of admirers in Holland that he had been obliged to take a rest. Well, for that matter, when Dr. Nansen, the hardest af Arctic explorers, just back from farthest North, lectured in this city, he was seen casting anxious glances about to see where the draft came from. The hardship and perils of civilization are not to be despised. —Springfield Republican.

☞The National Livestock association, composed of stock-raisers throughtout the west and individual stockmen, have decided to fight the proposed merger of the packing interests, and have notified the packers of that purpose. The stockyards at Kansas City and Denver are at present outside the control of the merger people and will stay out and join the stockmen in their effort. Of course such a fight requires capital, but there is capital enough in the country if the cattle raisers mean business, and they can turn an anti-monopoly trick worth any number of high cards that the trust people can play, if they are determined in their purpose.—Haverhill Gazette.

SITE SELECTED.

Post Office to be on Washington Street.

The Maple Place Corner Approved.

Is Directly In Front of the Public Library.

Oct. 9, was the day set by Secretary Shaw of the Treasury for final decision on the selection of a site in Quincy for a Federal building, and he was prompt to act. The site selected is one, too, that will give general satisfaction, as he has accepted the proposal for the lot on Washington street at the northerly corner of Maple place, which was offered for $11,900.

This lot was enlarged by taking part of the Nightingale estate toward Temple street, to meet the requirements for size, which was approximately 130 by 150.

The estate selected is directly opposite the beautiful Thomas Crane public library and its extensive and well-kept grounds, and it is to be regretted that the new Federal building will not have as extensive grounds.

House, $5,000.

Land, 10,434 square feet, $4,700.

The Nightingale land adjoining, part of which is taken, is taxed at the rate of 94 cents per foot, there being 24,152 square feet which is assessed for $23,000.

Almost at the last moment a new offer was made by Col. A. B. Packard for a site at the corner of Hancock street and Cottage avenue. He agreed to sell 15,500 square feet for $11,900.

The enlarged Prescott lot bounded by Washington, Canal and Wibird streets, however, stood next to the Bass estate, and had a strong endorsement. Mr. Prescott informs the Ledger that he will improve his property next year by the erection of a business block on Washington street, and flats on Wibird street.

The Richard Newcomb lot on the opposite side of Wibird street, and a part of the Nancy Brackett estate on Hancock street were also favorably considered.

The next thing will be to get an appropriation from Congress for a building. This may not be accomplished for two or three years.

The government want only the land, and the owners of the Bass estate will be allowed to move the house. The Ledger learns it is the intention of the owners to move the house to the lot at the corner of Washington and Temple streets which will result in a great improvement.

The sale of the Bass property to the government was made by Councilman Lewis Bass, Jr., as agent.

The government will pay $14,000 for a post office site at Northampton, having selected on Thursday, the Pleasant street lot owned by Miss L. M. Grisnold. Northampton expects to get its building next year.

A Cool Day.

The temperature at noon today was 53 degrees. This is the coldest day at noon since May 10, when it was 50 degrees. The coldest day in October last year was Oct. 25, when the mercury dropped to 45 degrees at noon. There were but five days in the whole month that were colder than today.

Foot Crushed.

At the Braintree depot last night Henry Cleary of Weymouth had his left foot badly crushed while trying to board a moving train. He was taken to a Boston hospital and amputation will probably be necessary.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

The committee in charge was: Mrs. Elwell, chairman, Mrs. Bain, Mrs. Bates, Mrs. Backus, Mrs. Braese, Mrs. Burke, Mrs. Broughton, Mrs. Dickey and Mrs. Cornish. The ladies are planning to give a fair in the near future.

—The Grand duke Boris ought to write a book on America. Back on European soil, he is reported to have said, "There are no idlers in America. Everybody works." Either the Grand Duke has a queer idea of work or else somebody gulled him unmercifully while he was over here. There are doubtless millionaires and sons of millionaires, who work hard, but if the gilded youth that are to be met in certain circles ever really got acquainted with work they cut the acquaintance very shortly. It is to be feared that the Grand Duke saw some Crœsus scorching in an automobile and imagined that that is work.

Apply Elsewhere.

William T. Shea, of the Democratic State Committee, and others, will not have the pleasure of looking at the check list used at the recent Republican caucus in Ward One. At the time the petition was in circulation the Ledger stated that it would not result in exposing that check list to the public as there was no law compelling the caucus officers to do so. Mr. Shea doubted the statement, but when he filed his petition with City Clerk Harlow he found the Ledger's statement to be true. Mr. Harlow who is clerk of the Registrars of Voters told him that under the Boston caucus act the Registrars would be obliged to produce the check list upon petition, but as Quincy had never accepted the Boston caucus act he would have to apply elsewhere.

Vesper Music.

The music at the vesper service of the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday, Oct. 12, at 4 o'clock, will be mainly from the work of Sir Arthur Sullivan.

"Te Deum Laudamus," Mietzke

Selections from the oratorio of the Prodigal Son:

(a) Soprano Solo.—"O had'st thou harkened to my prayer."

Hymns.

(b) "For thee, O dear, dear Country." tune, 'Homeland'.

(c) "Jesus, look on me." tune, Hanford.

Game Tomorrow.

The Wollaston Foot ball team will play its second game of the season at Merrymount park Saturday with the Porter A. A. of Weymouth at 3.30 o'clock. The Wollaston team played a strong game against Hingham last Saturday beating them 28 to 0, and as they have had some stiff practice, hope to put up a still better game against Porter. The management have arranged games with Hyde Park for Oct. 18. and Boston Y. M. C. A. Oct. 25.

Betts' Bail.

The Betts case in the United States court has been continued until Monday, when there will be a heavy increase of bail.

In the case for embezzlement in the Boston municipal court, bail was fixed at $3,500, which was furnished.

—A Weymouth teacher, who wanted to know the age of a new scholar, told him to get the desired information at home. He returned to school with this note—the name being omitted. "— was born on the 16th of October. He is 7 years old. His birthday is the 13th of June." The teacher is still guessing as to how birthdays can become movable feasts.

Distress After Eating

Nausea between meals, belching, vomiting, flatulence, fits of nervous headache, pain in the stomach, are all symptoms of dyspepsia, and the longer it is neglected the harder it is to cure it.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Radically and permanently cure it—strengthen and tone the stomach and other digestive organs for the natural performance of their functions.

Accept no substitute for Hood's.

"I had dyspepsia twenty-five years and took different medicines but got no help until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Have taken four bottles of this medicine and can now eat almost anything, sleep well, have no cramps in my stomach, no burning and no distress." MRS. WILLIAM G. BARRETT, 14 Olney St., Providence, R. I.

When the Keys Rattled.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the white key. "You are fearfully 'sharp' today."

"Well," retorted the accused one, "I'd rather be 'A sharp' than 'B flat.'"

"Good gracious," shrieked the string, "keep still! I'm highly strung, and my pedal extremities are affected. I know I shall break in 'pieces.'"

"So I note," murmured the bass.

"I'm cleft in twain," moaned the staff.

"My trouble is trebled since young hopeful began to play," said the book for beginners.

"It's all right while he is only 'A minor,' but wait until he begins to be 'A major.'"

And they all started to have a good "time" with the metronome.—New York Times.

Sensible to the Last.

A good story is told of a late Dublin doctor famous for his skill and also his great love of money. He had a constant and enriching patient in an old shopkeeper. This old lady was terribly rheumatic and unable to leave her sofa. During the doctor's visits she kept a one pound note in her hand, which duly went into Dr. C.'s pocket. One morning he found her lying dead on the sofa. Sighing deeply, the doctor approached, and, taking her hand in his, he saw the fingers closed on his fee.

"Poor thing!" he said as he pocketed it! "Sensible to the last!"

Came With Her.

"Your husband," said the talkative man, "has such a gentle disposition. He inherited it from his mother, I suppose?"

"No," replied Mrs. Henpeck significantly, "I think I may safely say that was part of my dowry."—Philadelphia Press.

Easy Descent.

Smith—Poor fellow, he has a hard time getting along, hasn't he?

Brown—He did for awhile, but since he started down hill he finds it comparatively easy.—Chicago News.

What was probably the first public library in the United States was started in Charleston, S. C., in 1749.

It takes 3,600,000 grains of oats to sow an acre, 2,800,000 of barley and only 1,000,000 of wheat.

☞ There is said to be plenty of soft coal at the mines, but not sufficient transportation facilities to get it distributed. The anthracite miners have plenty of cars that are idle, but will not allow the use of them for carrying soft coal. Certainly these coal operators are doing the dog in the manger act to perfection.—Lawrence Telegram.

A hearty invitation is extended to the pastors of this city and friends of the church to be present on that evening.

A FAITHLESS LAWYER.

Accepted a Retaining Fee and Then Played His Client False.

A lawyer tells how he once played a client false. "I shall have to make a lawyer out of that boy of mine. I don't see any other way out of it," declared the well known attorney, with a laugh. "He came into my office on his way home from school and laid a nickel down on the desk before me. 'What is this for, son?' I asked. 'Retainer,' he answered soberly. 'Very well,' said I, entering into the joke. 'What have I been retained upon?' My boy dug down into his pocket and produced a note from his teacher and placed it before me without comment. It was to the effect that he had been 'cutting up' and advised a whipping. 'Now, what would you advise?' asked he in a businesslike voice after I had read the note and saw the trap that young rascal led me into. 'I think that our first move should be to apply for a change of venue,' said I. 'Very well,' he answered. 'You're handling the case.' 'Then we will turn the note over to your mother,' said I. I saw the young imp's face fall at this, but he braced up and said, 'See here, pop, you're bound to see me through on this, 'cause you've accepted my retainer, you know!' 'I'll argue your case before the court,' I answered, 'but you'll have to accept the decision. I would not dare to attempt to influence the court.' Well, I pleaded the boy's case, promptly had it thrown out of court, and the boy got what he deserved, a good whipping. It was the first time I ever played false to a client."—Detroit Free Press.

A Gluttonous Boy.

A merchant died at Ispahan in the earlier part of last century who had for many years denied himself and his son every support except a crust of coarse bread. On a certain occasion he was overtempted to buy a piece of cheese; but, reproaching himself with extravagance, he put the cheese into a bottle and contented himself and obliged the boy to do the same, with rubbing the crust against the bottle, enjoying the cheese in imagination. One day, returning home later than usual, the merchant found his son eating his crust, which he constantly rubbed against the door.

"What are you about, you fool?" was his exclamation. "It is dinner time, father. You have the key; so, as I could not open the door, I was rubbing my bread against it, as I could not get to the bottle." "Cannot you go without cheese one day, you luxurious little rascal? You'll never be rich." And the angry miser kicked the poor boy for not having been able to deny himself the ideal gratification.

Kind Words Mean Much.

Cultivate kindness of heart, think well of your fellow men, look with charity upon the shortcomings in their lives. Do a good turn for them as opportunity offers, and, finally, don't forget the kind word at the right time. How much a word of kindness, encouragement or appreciation means to others sometimes and how little it costs us to give it!

We do not need to wait for some special occasion. When calamity overtakes a friend, words of sympathy and encouragement are offered sincerely enough, yet in certain respects, as a matter of course. Such an occasion calls for expression on our part, and we naturally respond. But why wait for occasion? Why not speak the kind word when there is no special occasion?—Philadelphia Ledger.

☞ Indications are that Bates will have the support of many Democrats, doubtless more than enough to make up the loss of some of the Back Bay Republicans who will vote for Gaston.—Fitchburg Sentinel.

HIGH VALUATIONS.

Quincy Neck people have been unable to discover any reduction in taxes this year. Those in the vicinity of the new shipyard are on the contrary very much exercised over the marked increase in their bills, and there may be a united move to secure abatements. Some say their land is taxed two and three times what it was a few years ago. They propose an indignation meeting and the employment of counsel, and a stiff fight.

THE TARIFF DRAWBACK

A Benefit Both to Labor and to Manufacturers

SHAW GIVES ILLSTRATIONS

Defines Free Raw Material and Says Our Prosperity Has Been Due to Policy of Protection—Commercial Independence Surely Attained

New Haven, Oct. 10.—The Republican state campaign was opened here last evening with a rally at which the speaker was Secretary of the Treasury Shaw. Mr. Shaw's speech was very long, but was well received. Secretary Shaw said in part: "Political campaigns should become schools of statecraft. I have come to the conclusion that they are the only times when the people study principles and problems of government carefully. I care little for partisan politics and I do not care about what is termed practical politics. But I like such discussions of issues as this occasion affords. Let me ask you what it is that divides the great parties. Is it wealth? There are wealthy men in both parties. Is it principles and measures? There was a time when the colleges taught free trade. If you know of any college that teaches free trade now, teach that college better. If you intend to legislate for the entire world free trade is correct. But if you do not so intend free trade is not correct legislation. But somehow we are called upon to legislate for this country and not for the entire world."

Mr. Shaw discussed trusts and trust legislation at length. In brief he claimed that the Republican convention of 1888 was the first to attempt to suggest a curb for the combinations and trusts. The only anti-trust bill signed by a President of the United States was signed by a Republican president, Benjamin Harrison.

Mr. Shaw said also that President Roosevelt is now doing more than any other president to enforce the laws in effect against combinations. He said that if the states would enforce laws against trusts within their own limits the national government would not need to.

Mr. Shaw then took up the tariff principles at some length. He said in part:

"Our political opponents have always urged the removal of all tariff duties from what they are pleased to term raw material. And they urge such a course because they claim it will enable our manufacturers to successfully compete with their European rivals in foreign markets. And what is raw material? Ore, in the bowels of the earth, is raw material, until man acquires title to it, but ore at the mouth of the mine is the finished product of the miner.

"Whose labor shall be protected, and whose placed in open competition with the world? The Republican party, ever ready with encouragement to the manufacturer, meets these arguments by what are known as drawback provisions. Whoever will may bring wool or silk, or hides, or iron, or wood, or any other commodity, from the cheapest market of the earth, and if therefrom he will produce a manufacture for exportation, he will be paid upon the material imported. In fact he need not pay the duty, if he will conform to certain regulations and give the necessary bond.

"In practice, the Republican policy of protection, extended to all American labor, has resulted to the advantage not only of the manufacturers who supply the American market, but also to the American exporter of manufactures. In 1860, at the close of a long period of Democratic control, when the manufacturer was given free raw material, we imported, for purposes of manufacture, a little less than $2 per capita. In 1902 we imported, for the purposes of manufacture, a little over $4 per capita. In 1860 our importations for purposes of manufacture were 17½ per cent of the total; in 1902 they were 36 percent of the total. As usual, our opponents' arguments sound well until tested by experience.

"Personally, and speaking for myself alone, I should be glad to see these drawback provisions made more liberal. Let me illustrate. If Smith imports hides from South America, and exports the leather which he manufactures therefrom, he will be allowed a drawback equal to the duty he has paid on the hides; but if he sells the leather to Jones, Jones is not entitled to any drawback even though he exports shoes manufactured therefrom. In other words, the thing imported must be made a part of a manufacture, and by the importer himself.

"Some of our European rivals offer greater encouragement to their exporters than we thus far have to ours. Personally, I believe yet more liberal provisions may be safely made without fear of fraud and without embarrassment to the public revenues. We have attained our commercial independence and every reasonable advantage should be given to him whose enterprise furnishes employment to American citizens, the product of whose skill increases our annual balance of trade."

No Lack of Subscriptions

London, Oct. 10.—The subscriptions for the Japanese loan of $25,000,000 which were opened Tuesday were closed at noon yesterday. The loan is said to have been subscribed for thrice over.

BOERS' QUEER BEHAVIOR

Has Considerably Cooled the Ardor of Their Friends In Germady

Berlin, Oct. 10.—It develops that the Boer generals declined in a telegraphic message to seek presentation to Emperor William through the British ambassador and the fact has produced an extraordinary commotion among politicians and courtiers. No later than last Monday the foreign office received a message from the generals announcing that they had not the slightest objection to applying for an interview through British government channels. The Pan-German committee in charge of the Boer reception was confident the generals would come with proper credentials and hence have an opportunity for an audience. Then, Wednesday, came a dispatch saying the generals were determined not to apply to the British government, but would leave the emperor to summon them himself. This, of course, would have put the emperor in direct opposition to Great Britain, and the announcement immediately followed that the proposed interview would not take place.

The press now attacks the Boer generals in the slashing style which it had heretofore reserved for Colonial Secretary Chamberlain. Some of the newspapers oppose the generals being allowed to come here at all and advocate the suppression of the proposed scenic reception, including girls crowning the generals with laurel wreaths.

Various explanations are given of the Boers motives. A favorite idea is that Dr. Leyds devised the whole thing so as to strike back at the emperor for refusing to receive Mr. Kruger. Official circles are very much annoyed at the Boers' behavior.

Steamers Crashed Together

Charleston, Oct. 10.—The Clyde steamers Iroquois and Apache collided in this harbor early yesterday morning, the latter vessel receiving damages that forced her captain to run her aground on Morris island to prevent her sinking. The bow of the Iroquois was badly used up. The night was clear. A mistake in giving signals is said to be responsible for the accident. No one was injured and there was comparatively little excitement among the passengers. The big ships came together with a crash that could be easily heard two miles away.

Cubans Honor Dead Heroes

Santiago de Cuba, Oct. 10.—There was a great demonstration here yesterday upon the occasion of the ceremonies held in memory of the Cuban patriots who were killed in battle fighting for the independence of the island. Four thousand school children took part in the procession, in which representatives of the insular and municipal governments, members of numerous societies and thousands of veterans also participated. It is estimated that 40,000 citizens marched in the procession, which was several miles long.

The French Miners' Strike

Paris, Oct. 10.—Information from the coal mining regions indicates that the strike is spreading rapidly, but while in some districts the cessation of work is already complete, in other regions the mines are still working at full capacity. The "yellows," as the anti-strikers are called, are preparing to offer resistance in case attempts are made to prevent them from working.

Military Guarding Trains

Laredo, Tex., Oct. 10.—A report sent out yesterday stating that the Mexican government had taken possession of the National railroad and would supervise the running of trains over the entire system was given out by Thomas Dodd, attorney of that road. He was, however, mistaken, with the exception that the military has been ordered out to guard trains and depots on that portion of the road where the strike is on.

Hunting For Stolen Cadavers

Indianapolis, Oct. 10.—A party headed by detectives went to Louisville yesterday to identify if possible some of the bodies found in a cold storage room in that city. It is thought that some of the bodies stolen from Indianapolis cemeteries, which mysteriously disappeared from the colleges here, may be found there.

MOTHER AND BABE

Sick mother—sick child! That's the way it works when a mother is nursing her infant.

Scott's Emulsion is an ideal medicine for nursing mothers. It has a direct effect on the milk. Sometimes the mother is weak; her thin milk does not make the baby grow. Scott's Emulsion changes all that. The rich cod-liver oil in Scott's Emulsion feeds the mother and gives a flow of rich, nourishing milk for the baby.

The medicine in Scott's Emulsion not only strengthens the mother but goes naturally through the milk and strengthens the child.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

SIX KNIFE WOUNDS

Inflicted Upon a Woman a Few Hours After Being Divorced

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 10.—Some time ago Charles C. Eastman assaulted his wife, and she instituted divorce proceedings. Her petition was granted and yesterday afternoon the divorce was made absolute. About 6 o'clock last evening Eastman entered a music store where Mrs. Eastman has been employed as a clerk for several years and asked her to sell him a violin string. She refused and without further words he drew a large jack-knife and stabbed her five times above the left shoulder, near the jugular vein. She fell to the floor and, as she lay prostrate, Eastman stabbed her again. Her screams attracted passersby who rushed to her assistance, but meantime Eastman gave himself up. The woman was able to walk across the street to a physician's office. While her injuries are very severe she will probably recover.

Eastman, when he reached the police station, supposed that he had killed the woman, and said that he did not want any of his friends to come to see him, and that he wanted no counsel, as he would defend himself. The couple had been married about five years. They have no children.

Overbearing Police Chief's Blunder

Moscow, Oct. 10.—General Trepov, chief of the Moscow police, was driving one recent rainy day when a man on the sidewalk opened his umbrella to protect himself from the mud scattered by the chief's carriage and exclaimed "Not so fast." Trepov at once ordered the arrest of the man, who turned out to be M. VonPleve, minister of the interior. Trepov thereupon became frightened and ordered his immediate discharge. General Trepov has ineffectually sought to reconcile the minister, and has just been given two months' leave of absence, believed to be tantamount to dismissal.

Fire In Dangerous Locality

New York, Oct. 11.—A fire which started early this morning at Park Row and Worth street swept through a lodging house in which 200 men were asleep. The firemen say they believe all the inmates escaped injury. In the rear of the burning building is a big building occupied by chemical manufacturers. Chief Croker ordered all the tenants out of the tenements nearby, saying he feared there might be an explosion in the chemical factory.

Grave Situation at New Orleans

New Orleans, Oct. 10.—The New Orleans Railway company made no attempt yesterday to resume their schedules for passenger service. The strikers and their sympathizers massed to the number of 2500 and waited patiently all day for the first car to come out. Towards evening they grew weary of the wait and set upon two strangers who were sightseeing. The strikers took them for non-union men and beat them badly.

Up to Diplomats

Washington, Oct. 10.—It is learned at the Colombian legation here that the complications at the Isthmus of Panama, growing out of the orders of Commander McLean and Admiral Casey, who succeeded him in command, regarding the transit of the railroad, are the subject of negotiations between the government of Bogota and United States Minister Hart. The officials here decline to talk about the probable outcome.

Guardsmen Did Quick Work

Fort Riley, Kas., Oct. 10.—Camp Root, where for two weeks National Guard officers from nearly every state in the union have been witnessing practical object lessons in the movement of armies, is no more. At 6:30 last night a cavalry bugler sounded the notes of "general." Instantly the 1500 tents were on the ground and within 15 minutes were ready for shipment and the first loads were being placed aboard the cars.

Fraud Charges Whitewashed

London, Oct. 10.—A blue book published yesterday contains the report of the court of inquiry which has investigated the charges brought against the remount establishment of the army. With the exception of a couple of minor cases the report not only whitewashed all concerned, but finds that the unprecedented demands on the remount establishment were met with extraordinary success.

Stonecutters' Gift to Nation

Washington, Oct. 10.—The corner stone of the proposed memorial bridge across the Potomac to connect Washington with Arlington cemetery was dedicated at a big open-air meeting in the White lot yesterday. The stone weighs seven tons and was cut by the Stonecutters' union of the District of Columbia, by whom it was designed and presented to the government.

Rioters Got Worst of It

Gibraltar, Oct. 10.—The compulsory closing yesterday of a Socialist club within the Spanish lines resulted in a riot in which five of the rioters were killed and several wounded. The mob fired upon the civil guard, who returned the fire of the rioters. The mob afterward attacked the house of the mayor and other dwellings before it was finally dispersed.

The Social Realm.

How often does the chopper of some stone,
While toiling at his task of heave and shock,
Find in the heart-space of a severed rock
The impress of some fern that once had grown,
Full of aspiring lite and color-tone,
Deep in the forest where the shadows flock,
Till, caught within the adamantine block,
It lay for ages hidden and unknown!
So many a beauteous thought blooms in the mind,
But, unexpressed, droops down into the soul
And lies unuttered in the silence there
Until some opener of the soul shall find
The fern-like, fossiled dream, complete and whole,
And marvel at its beauty past compare!

HIRES A HALL.

To Give the Representative Candidates a Chance.

To Tell Why They Should Win.

Henry H. Faxon Will Pay All the Expenses.

There will probably be nine candidates in the field this year for Representatives from the Quincy double district, and a hot contest is anticipated. Henry H. Faxon has a novel plan to get all these candidates together at a mass meeting and have them speak for a couple of hours. The letter following is self explanatory and copies were sent today to each of the nine candidates:

"In order that the several candidates for the Legislature in the present campaign may be given an opportunity of enlightening the voters concerning their views on the important issues of the day, I make the following offer:

"First.—I will pay all the expenses of a mass meeting to be held in Music hall for the purpose named.

"Second.—Each speaker to be allotted fifteen minutes in which to make one address or three addresses of five minutes each.

"Third.—Five minutes of each speaker's time to be devoted to a discussion of the temperence question and laws regulating the observance of the Sabbath.

"Fourth.—The proposition which I have made will be carried into effect if six of the nine candidates notify me in writing within one week from date that they accept its conditions and that they will be present and take part in the exercises of the meeting.

"As only two of the nine candidates named can be elected it is of the greatest importance that their attitude on matters of public policy shall be well known.

Henry H. Faxon.

First Church Workers.

In response to invitations sent out by the heads of the different departments connected with First Unitarian church, a large gathering was held in the chapel last evening. Rev. E. C. Butler presided.

Mrs. J. H. Emery spoke for the Fragment society; Mrs. George G. Saville and Mrs. John W. Sanborn for the Woman's Alliance; L. S. Anderson for the Parish Assessors and Charles H. Johnson for the Sunday school. Each spoke of the work done by their department; wherein it might be improved and be of greater benefit to the church as a whole, etc.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served in the ladies' parlor and a social time enjoyed.

This meeting has become an annual feature in the church work and is of great help in the work of carrying on the church as it is the only meeting when all the departments meet together for mutual pleasure and advancement.

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. We purchased some of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and he commenced taking them. Inside of thirty days he had gained forty pounds in flesh. He is now fully recovered. We have a good trade on the tablets.—Holley Bros., Merchants, Long Branch, Mo. For sale by all druggists.

GASTON'S ACCEPTANCE

Letter Treats of National and State Affairs

WOULD WIPE OUT TRUSTS

By General Revision of the Tariff, Which He Thinks Would Enhance Business—Reciprocity With Canada and Economical State Expenditures

Boston, Oct. 11.—In a letter to Chairman Naphen of the Democratic state committee William A. Gaston accepts the nomination for governor and approves the platform adopted by the state convention. He says:

"The principal question now occupying the public mind is that of the regulation and control of the organizations commonly known as trusts. It seems to me self-evident that existing conditions, which compel the people of this country to pay considerably more for most of the trust-controlled articles than they are sold for in foreign countries, must be remedied. We should not be subject to a tariff which operates to enable the foreigner to obtain articles of American production more cheaply than we can obtain them at home. The Democratic party is united in proposing a clear and distinct remedy, namely, the immediate abolition of tariff duties on articles controlled by trusts. This will unquestionably relieve, if not cure, the evil.

"Our tariff is now locking up in the public treasury money urgently needed in trade; duties should be reduced. A genuine revision of the tariff—not a feeble one made by the representatives of the very interests which are profiting by its terms—is greatly needed; that revision will not involve business disaster. It will in my opinion enhance prosperity and place it upon a sounder, and more enduring basis. Excessive tariff rates levied by us are already producing retaliation on the part of foreign nations, our large and profitable customers. The duties upon raw materials are particularly indefensible and should be immediately abolished. Massachusetts especially needs free coal, free iron, free wool, free hides, free lumber and free food products. The Republican members of congress from Massachusetts have not in my opinion served the needs of this state as well as the interests of other states have been served by their representatives. Huge and safe Republican majorities at home have bred political indifference and inactivity at Washington.

"The securing of reciprocity with Canada is one of the most important commercial interests of Massachusetts and New England. As the Republican state convention refused to adopt this policy, the issue is squarely drawn. We have on one side the business interests of our people, voiced by nearly all of the commercial organizations and supported by the Democratic party; on the other side, the supposed political interests of the Republican party. An unsettled boundary question, involving some miles of frigid territory in Alaska, must not prevent reciprocal trade relations with Canada.

"Present conditions have sharply emphasized the utterly unjustifiable character of the duty which Republican tariff legislation has imposed upon coal; but this duty is no worse in principle, although more oppressive in practice, than when fuel was selling at normal prices. While Republican conversions to the cause of free coal are to be welcomed, support of the Democratic ticket is the only effective method of accomplishing results.

"Years of failure in the attempt of the merchants of Boston to induce the federal government to improve Boston harbor adequately and with reasonable promptness have convinced me that if the needs of our chief port are to be provided for in time to retain its full share of commerce, they must be met, in part at least, by local action. I recommend the needed improvement of Boston harbor by the state at the expense of both the state and the metropolitan district equally apportioned.

"The business interests of Massachusetts require the enactment of wise and progressive laws, as well as the repeal of some antiquated laws, to render the transaction of business under modern methods in this state easy as well as safe. A prompt and effective revision of some of our laws would undoubtedly accomplish goods results.

"The expense attending the administration of our state affairs is enormous, far greater, I believe, than that of any state in the union in proportion to population. Greater economy in our state expenditures is demanded and is feasible. The abolition of a few commissions by consolidation has benefited the public service; but others can be dispensed with and expense to the state can be saved. I know of no reason why the governor could not and should not, with competent executive assistance, transact much business now done by commissions. I believe that if the commonwealth were a private business corporation substantially all of its work would be brought under direct executive control."

Germans' Eyes on Cuban Trade

Berlin, Oct. 11.—The cabinet has decided to establish a German legation at Havana. The reasons for taking this step appear to be largely commercial, as with the German steamship interests it is regarded as sufficient to warrant diplomatic representation of equal rank with the United States and Great Britain.

COLUMBIA ASSURED

That United States Has No Intention of Encroaching on Sovereignty

Washington, Oct. 11.—The Colombian government, on complaint of General Salazar, in command of its forces on the isthmus, has remonstrated with the United States minister at Bogota respecting Admiral Casey's reported refusal to allow troops and munitions of war to cross the isthmus. The Colombian government said it did not see how it could suppress the rebellion if it were not allowed to move troops freely in its own territory.

The officials here are confident that Admiral Casey's order has been misunderstood. They feel sure that it he stopped the transit of Colombian troops or war munitions it was only for some temporary reason. The Colombian government has been assured that the United States government has no intention of trenching on Colombian sovereignty, which has been guaranteed by special treaty provision. Admiral Casey was reminded that he must avoid any infringement of Colombian sovereignty unless he was positively obliged to do so to protect the railroad. It is presumed, therefore, that the way is again open for the transit of Colombian troops and munitions of war across the isthmus, whenever they can be transported without inviting actual battle on the line of the road.

The state department is at a loss to understand why any irritation has been caused in Colombia, on the government side at least, by the actions of Admiral Casey.

Fired From Ellis Island

New York, Oct. 11.—Commissioner Williams yesterday expelled Pastor Berkemeier and other representatives of the Lutheran Immigrants' home from Ellis island. The institution for immigrants was founded by Pastor Berkemeier's father 32 years ago. Commissioner Williams says that he has proof that instead of assisting immigrants the minister prevented peasant girls from meeting their friends and compelled them against their will to accept employment with people who have previously applied to the Lutheran home for servants.

Satisfied With Maneuvers

Washington, Oct. 11.—Assistant Secretary Sanger, who has represented the war department during the maneuvers at Fort Riley, has just returned to this city, fully satisfied at the fine showing made by the troops. Mr. Sanger was impressed especially with the perfect sanitation of the great camp. The sick report, he said, was actually lower at the end of the encampment than at the beginning, showing that the men had improved materially in health during their hard work in the field.

Campaign For Assistance

Washington, Oct. 11.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor last night decided to appeal to the business men and other sympathizers with the anthracite coal miners for financial aid for the strikers. The suggestion was made that some responsible professional or public man should take the matter in charge and begin a sympathetic campaign for assistance.

Siamese Prince Arrives

New York, Oct. 11.—The Crown Prince of Siam arrived yesterday on the steamer Fuerst Bismarck from Southampton. He left the steamer at quarantine on the navy yard tug Powhatan and later took a special train to Washington. The prince, who is but 21 years old, speaks English fluently. He said he expected to have a good time in this country.

Must Translate the Real Thing

Clinton, N. Y., Oct. 11.—The faculty of Hamilton college announces that students found using English translations in the preparation of language lessons will be suspended from college and for a repetition of the offense will be expelled. The stock of Latin and Greek literal translations on sale at the college bookstore has been confiscated.

Crisis Near at New Orleans

New Orleans, Oct. 11.—It is expected that the crisis in the street car strike will come today. Governor Heard and Mayor Capdeville sought to effect a settlement yesterday, but the proposition they presented was voted on by the union last night and it was rejected by an overwhelming majority.

Twenty Killed In Gibraltar Riot

Gibraltar, Oct. 11.—The rioting which followed the closing of a Socialist club within the Spanish lines resulted in 20 men being killed and a large number being seriously wounded. Documents seized at the Socialist headquarters showed the place was the centre of an anarchist group.

Combination In Groceries

St. Louis, Oct. 11.—The Interstate Grocer says that a combine, to include every wholesaler of groceries in the United States, is in the course of formation. The details are not yet public property, and they will not be until after Nov. 5 next.

In Honor of Dead Heroes

Havana, Oct. 11.—Yesterday was generally observed as a holiday in Cuba, and the praises of Cubans who began the struggle for independence Oct. 10, 1868, were sung throughout the island.

HEBREWS IN ROUMANIA

How They Are Treated by the Balkan Government.

WHY CONSIDERED UNDESIRABLE.

As Descendants of Romans the Roumanians Have Long Standing Prejudices Against the Jews—Would Keep Them Wandering.

Roumanian Jews, about whom Secretary Hay addressed a note to Europe, says the New York Evening Post, are among the most undesirable immigrants which come to these shores. In 1900 large numbers of them had to be denied admission to the country, and this summer Ellis Island authorities had to send back numbers of them because they were destitute or diseased. Roumania's persecutions of these people gave Mr. Hay a motive for asking that the powers which are responsible for the existence of Roumania shall persuade that government to be more liberal and not force its Jews by hard customs to flee to this country.

Jews in America approve his note because it may ameliorate conditions in Roumania. Social students approve because such immigrants are likely to become a charge upon American institutions. All the Jewries of Europe have the complaint that we have, and, excepting possibly Russia, whose tactics Roumania is copying, all the powers are expected to support the communication.

Practically what the United States is interested in is that it shall not be burdened with Roumania's outcasts. "The purposes of our generous treatment of the alien immigrant is to benefit us and him alike, not to afford another state a field upon which to cast its own objectionable elements."

Roumania helped the Russians in the Turko-Russian war in 1877, saved Russia indeed at the siege of Plevna and when peace came proclaimed herself independent of the suzerainty of Turkey and asked that the congress at Berlin give her recognition. Beaconsfield was an influence in that congress, and before Roumania's request was acceded to she was required to abrogate all her anti-Jewish enactments and agree that "in Roumania the difference of religious creeds and confessions shall not be alleged against any person as a ground for exclusion or incapacity in matters relating to the enjoyment of civil and political rights, admission to public employments, functions and honors or the exercise of the various professions and industries, as well as guaranteeing that all foreigners shall be treated, without distinction of creed, on a footing of equality."

This was imposed upon Roumania in the way that the Platt amendment was imposed upon Cuba. She accepted it and then disregarded it, until the list of her discriminations has reached large dimensions.

Jews are not admitted there to the practice of law. They are regarded, though centuries in the country, as "aliens not subject to foreign protection." To become naturalized (only 400 out of the 400,000 are citizens) each applicant has to be passed by parliament. One of the school grammars, illustrating a rule of syntax, says, "You must not believe the word of a Jew even when he is at the point of death;" another says, "Ginshops are kept by Jews, who, like leeches, suck the blood of peasants by enticing them to drunkenness."

Jewish schools were closed in 1899 because they were not kept open six days a week (that included Saturday, the Hebrew Sabbath). Jewish communities were deprived of control of the kosher meat tax on which their schools and churches largely depended. In 1887 it was decreed that Jews should be admitted to public schools only after the Roumanians had been accommodated. In 1893 they were excluded for being aliens, but could enter if there was room upon payment of a fee. The university, free to Roumanians, charged 360 francs a year to aliens. Though admitted to the army, the Jews, being aliens, did not, like others, earn pensions by two years' service, and they were not eligible to military academies.

APPEALED TO MRS. HANNA.

Senator's Wife Orders Nonunion Men to Quit Work.

Mrs. Hanna, the wife of the senator, took a hand in a labor controversy and succeeded in winning the good will of every member of the Painters' union, says a Cleveland special. A house on Russell avenue which is owned by the senator was being repainted, and a force of sixteen men employed by a contractor was at work there. The men did not belong to the union, and their employer would not recognize the union.

Union officials discussed the matter Friday night and decided to do something. It was deemed advisable to send a committee to see Senator Hanna, but as he was out of town the committee called on Mrs. Hanna instead. When she had heard the complaint, she ordered her carriage, drove to the house and ordered the painters to cease work. They obeyed her, and later every one of them joined the union, their employer signing the union agreement.

Labor Leader Mayor of Dublin.

The office of lord mayor of Dublin is to be filled in 1903, for the first time, by a representative of labor, Alderman Dowd, a member of the trades council of Dublin, having been selected as the successor of Mr. Timothy Harrington, M. P., the present lord mayor. Dublin's lord mayor receives an allowance of £3,000 a year, with residence in the Mansion House.

AN UP TO DATE HOUSE.

Dwelling That Gives Full Value For Money Expended on It.

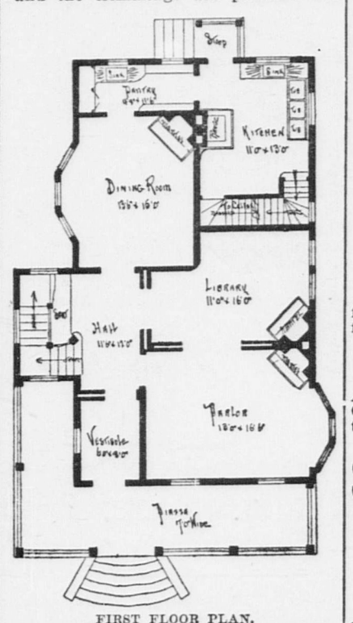
This dwelling contains eight rooms and bath, and there is room in the attic to finish three more rooms. There is a cellar under the entire house. The foundation is built of cut bluestone laid in red mortar.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

The superstructure is of frame sheathed, and the entire house is covered with cedar shingles, while the ornamentation in the gables is made of composition.

The shingles are all dipped in creosote shingle stain before being put on and the trimmings are painted with two good coats of linseed oil and white lead. The body color of the house is pea green, the trimmings are white, and the roof shingles are stained red.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

All of the interior walls are plastered and finished with a sand finish and then tinted.

The house is trimmed throughout with cypress finished in the natural wood.

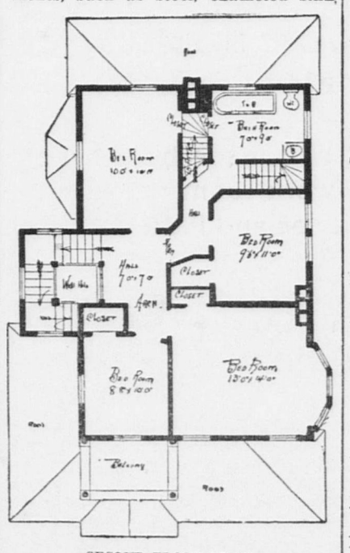
The house has all sanitary improvements, such as steel, enameled sink,



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Alberene stone tubs, ironclad enameled bathtub, porcelain bowl, washout closet, with hardwood seat, and a basin. All the exposed piping is nickeled.

The entire house is heated by steam and piped for gas.

This house can be erected in most places for $2,800.

Sundials.

Perhaps the most appropriate feature for a garden is a sundial. Scarcely a house in olden times but had one of these as the central feature of the south garden. Placed on a pedestal some four feet high, the dial stands secure in rain or sunshine. Sometimes its numerals are carved in stone and the arm is made of iron, but more often it is all of brass. The hand points to the north, the dial being placed exactly horizontal. As the sun moves in its daily course the shadow falls on the mark indicating the hour. The sundials are still used in many parts of Europe and, with the hour and half hour glass, are the only timepieces of the common people.

Tallest Building In New York.

The tallest building in New York city is the Park row building for offices. It is 309 feet to the top of the roof and 71 feet more to the top of the tower. It stands on 104 feet 2 inches by 150 feet 11 inches of ground, occupying five numbers—13 to 21, inclusive—on Park row.

There was a cry in the streets. People rushed from their doors and strained their eyes on the struggling balloonist fighting for life. Even the poor, panting sufferer in the sick room was forgotten while the family gazed breathless at this strange tragedy of the air. Then they went back to the sick room to tell of the terrible struggle for life they had just witnessed. It did not occur to them that under their very eyes a more terrible, more pathetic struggle was going on daily.

There can be nothing more pitiful than the struggle the consumptive makes against disease. The greatest help in this struggle is gained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures obstinate coughs, weak and bleeding lungs, emaciation, and other ailments which if neglected or unskillfully treated find a fatal termination in consumption.

"In 1898 one of my daughters was suffering on account of a severe cough, hectic fever, wasting of flesh and other symptoms of diseased lungs," writes Rev. Joseph H. Fesperman, of Barium Springs, Iredell Co., N. C. "I promptly gave her Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with gratifying success, and she now enjoys excellent health. This being true, I hereby heartily endorse your medicines."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

—Nantucket has seven old men whose ages aggregate 635 years, an average of 90 years and 8 months. Also seven others over 85 years.

UNION VETERANS SPLIT

First Clash on Question of Eligibility to Membership

ILL FEELING WAS CREATED

Over Effort to Restore Six Months' Service Clause—Climax Came When Commander-In-Chief Dyrenforth Blocked His Own Suspension

Washington, Oct. 11.—The sessions of the Union Veterans' union yesterday were marked by scenes of wild disorder and confusion. The proceedings at times became so heated that personal encounters seemed likely. The test began when an effort was made to amend the constitution so as to restore the six months' service clause as a basis for membership in the organization. After two hours' discussion the proposition was rejected. This action created considerable ill-feeling. A motion was then made and carried to permit sons of members of the organization to vote and otherwise participate in proceedings. An amendment also was adopted admitting to membership sons-in-law and grandsons of members and any honorably discharged soldier without regard to his services.

While the voting was going on a large number of the members of the Ohio, Illinois, New York, Michigan, Iowa and Pennsylvania delegations met in conference over a proposition to withdraw from the organization and affiliate with the Massachusetts department, which severed its connection with the union after the Des Moines convention, which struck from the constitution the six months' clause.

Before the convention met in the afternoon the executive committee heard Commander-in-Chief Dyrenforth in relation to charges which had been filed against him by the judge advocate general of the division of the Potomac, alleging the use of arbitrary power, and reflecting on his personal character. Later the committee made a report recommending that he be suspended as commander-in-chief.

General Dyrenforth was notified in open session of the action taken by General Hutchinson, deputy commander-in-chief, who had been directed by the executive committee to preside. Pandemonium followed. Every man was on his feet, chairs were overturned and an effort was made to throw Hutchinson off the platform. He, however, raised a heavy cane which he carried, and thus kept the crowd back. Dyrenforth refused to recognize the committee so that it might present its report and finally, after Hutchinson had been called on to preside, Dyrenforth refused to make way for him. Hutchinson then left the hall, as did the delegations above named, those remaining re-electing Dyrenforth and the seceders taking steps to form a new union.

The encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic for 1902 came to a close yesterday. San Francisco was chosen as the next place of meeting and the election of officers was completed. Resolutions were adopted by the encampment having in view liberal treatment of veterans in the matter of public office and pensions.

Before adjournment the encampment adopted a resolution submitted by General Torrance in his recent address, calling for assistance from members of the Grand Army for the home for Confederate soldiers at Mountain Creek, Ala., and urging on the veterans generally the adoption of an attitude of brotherly kindness towards their foes of the Civil war.

The kindred bodies to the parent organization also brought their several conventions to a close, the Sons of Veterans, Women's Relief Corps and other bodies choosing officers for the ensuing year.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Sentence Imposed Upon Michael Kilroy For Killing His Wife

Boston, Oct. 11.—The trial of Michael J. Kilroy, charged with the murder of his wife, Bridget, at their home in East Boston on Jan. 26 last, ended last night in a verdict of murder in the second degree, and the prisoner was sentenced to life imprisonment in state prison by Judge Hardy. The case had been on trial since Monday morning and a long array of witnesses for the government testified to Kilroy's drinking habits and his cruelty to his wife during their married life, and defendant's little daughter testified that on the night before her mother's death her father jumped on her and brutally beat her.

In his own defense, Kilroy swore that he did not beat his wife; that on the night before her death she was intoxicated; that she left home early in the evening and returned about midnight when he was in bed; that he was awakened by her groans and found her lying intoxicated on the floor, bleeding from bruises on her face and body and unconscious; and that when she regained consciousness she staggered and fell across a coal hod, which accounted for the injuries which resulted in her death.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic.—Fruitful or fruitless.—John xv, 1-8, 16; Mark xi, 12-14.

The purpose of the Christian's life is fruitfulness. "Ye have not chosen Me," says Christ, "but I have chosen you and ordained you that ye should go and bring forth fruit and that your fruit should remain, that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in My name He gives you." It is here declared by the Master Himself that the purpose of discipleship is service. We are saved to serve. The kingdom of Christ is to be extended in the world by the endeavors of His disciples. God might have used the angels in heaven to carry forward His work, but He has ordained that it should be carried forward by those who have been saved in Jesus Christ. We work, and He works with us. We are colaborers with God for the extension of His cause and kingdom in the world. We are not to be idlers in His vineyard; neither are we to be fruitless, but our lives are to be filled with service and with the fruits that result from the faithful endeavors of those who are Christ's to extend His kingdom in the world.

Not only is the fact of service set forth here, but in the parable of the vine and the branches we have set forth the conditions of fruitfulness. On this subject Christ says: "Abide in Me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in Me. I am the vine; ye are the branches. He that abideth in Me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without Me ye can do nothing." The branch is fruitless except it abide in the vine. So is the Christian except he abide in Jesus Christ.

If human qualifications were the prerequisites to success in Christian life and service, it is a well known fact that many would not possess them; but it is possible for every child of God to abide in Christ and to have Christ abide in him. If we accept Christ by faith and live lives of faith and devotion and of prayer, Christ will dwell in our hearts and we will abide in Him, and the requirements will be met that will make it possible for the best fruits of Christianity to be produced in our lives.

The results of being fruitful and of being fruitless should inspire us to infinitely prefer the former to the latter. The fruitless branch is cut down, cast aside and destroyed. "Every branch in Me that beareth not fruit He taketh away. If a man abide not in Me, he is cast forth as a branch that is withered, and men gather them and cast them into the fire and they are burned." This is the result of fruitlessness in Christian life and service. The possibility of such a result should warn us against neglecting to abide in Christ and the neglect to bring forth fruit in our lives. On the other hand, they that are fruitful have their capacity for fruitfulness increased. "Every branch that bareth fruit He purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit." Thus we see that the possibilities are constantly increased by the faithful performance of duties devolving upon us. The man to whom two talents were given had them increased to four; the man to whom five talents were given had them increased to ten. This is the law in the kingdom of God. To them that faithfully perform the services required of them there come increased opportunity and increased ability, and every service has its reward. "Behold, I come quickly," says Christ in the Revelation, "and My reward is with Me, to give to every man according to his deeds."

Life Values.

Life is to be understood only by taking God into it and lengthening it with immortality until all the incidents of earth and time drop into their proper relative place and value. The prevailing notion of the age, that we are big enough and wise enough to manage our own affairs and the affairs of the world, receives a rude shock when we are brought face to face with some problem we cannot solve or some force we cannot control. It is well to remember that this is God's world, not ours. Do not forget that life values are determined in eternity rather than in time. Leave God and immortality out of life, and we dwell in a fool's paradise. If that were the end, it might not be so bad, but to face the fact that some time, like the other prodigal, we are coming to ourselves must give us pause. — Universalist Leader.

Leave It to Him.

Let no thought of discouragement enter into our souls, let no doubt about final results intrude itself upon our minds, let the work be wrought in God, let faith take hold upon His promises, and let the results be left with Him.—Safeguard.

A Sunrise Somewhere.

Let us lay to heart the comfort
In this sweet reflection found
That, however dense our darkness,
Somewhere still the world around
Dews are glistening, flowers uplifting,
Wild birds warbling, as reborn,
Lakes and streams and woods and mountains,
Melting in the kiss of morn

Ne'er was night, however dismal,
But withdrew its wings of gloom
Ne'er was sorrow but a day star
Hinted of the morrow's bloom;
Ne'er was woe but in its bosom
Was the seed of hope impearled;
There is still a sunrise somewhere
Speeding, speeding round the world.

THE UNITY CLUB.

The Season of 1902--3 Auspiciously Opened Last Night.

The reception given Friday evening by the Unity club brought out over a hundred members eager to enjoy the good things and to learn of the interesting program arranged by the executive committee for the season of 1902-1903. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Frank E. Parlin, the new president. In his address of welcome Mr. Parlin spoke of the past success of the club expressing the hope that all would be workers this year and not merely spectators, thus making all happy through conscientious individual effort.

The program for the winter is miscellaneous in subject, yet there is a continuity of theme, the main idea being: "Man, and His Environment."

Thus the meetings will be devoted to talks on the physical conditions obtaining on our globe, above and below; man's being, his ignorance and fears will be treated intelligently; local history and biography will be touched upon, thus making a program full of interest for everyone.

The music consisted of songs by Miss Mary V. Hastings and a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Y. Follett. Wollaston is fortunate in possessing musical talent of high quality and the music of the Unity Club, which is this year to be taken care of by a committee at the head of which is Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, promises to be excellent as in years past.

An original feature of this year's club will be the bi-weekly appearance of the "Flashlight." The editors are men well known for their wit and veracity, as well as their business sagacity.

Before the first number was read, bulletins were put up, giving in brief the latest local happenings. The first number consisted of an editorial, several poems and special articles, all of a witty and light nature, convulsing the members at every line. The editor-in-chief promised that the "Flashlight" would appear at every meeting but when unable to do so the members would be entertained with high class vaudeville.

At the conclusion of the program for the evening the young ladies served refreshments.

The next meeting October 24 will be in charge of Mr. Charles F. Harper, last year's president, "The Internal Heat of the Earth."

Mr. William H. Godfrey of Shaw street, East Braintree, foreman at the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., accompanied by his wife, has just returned from a weeks' pleasure trip to New York and New Jersey. They visited the shipyard at Elizabethport, N. J. They went up the Hudson, saw Niagara Falls and other places of equal interest. They report having had a very pleasant time.

A socialce under the auspices of the St. Mary's society was held last evening at St. Mary's hall. The affair was largely attended and a good time was enjoyed.

Mr. Charles Newcombe and family moved this week from North Weymouth to Baxter street in this city.

Closely Contested Game With Dedham High.

Touchdown at End of Game.

The Third Victory for Quincy and No Defeats.

A closely contested game of foot ball was played at Merrymount Park yesterday afternoon, when Quincy High School defeated Dedham High School 6-0, the touchdown coming just at the close of the second half.

The Dedham eleven proved to be less formidable than in previous years, owning to the loss of some of their heavy boys. They have won games from Norwood and Needham this season.

Quincy won through good work on the part of Capt. Miller and the Saunders boys. Fenno, formerly of Adams Academy, made several brilliant tackles.

Cox of Dedham ran his team well, but had few occasions to advance the ball, as Quincy High School had things its own way most of the time, though opportunities to score were lost by hard luck and costly fumbles.

THE GAME.

Miller kicked off to Koppmann who made a long run protected by good interference. Quincy soon secured the ball, but Miller was forced to kick. By a skilful criss, cross R. Saunders made 30 yds. For a moment a touchdown was in sight, but Dedham held securing the ball on their 15 yd. line. Unable to gain, McNaught kicked 30 yds. the ball being run back by H. Saunders.

Again Quincy rushed the ball down to the 8 yd. line only to lose it. On the kick by Dedham, Miller secured the ball and made 20 yds. but lost the ball. Time was called with the ball on Dedham's 15 yd. line.

Quincy had all the best of the half, but were unable to gain when the goal was in sight.

SECOND HALF.

Dedham kicked to Miller who ran the ball back 30 yards. Desmond gained 10 and Miller brought the ball to the centre of the field. On a quarter back play H. Saunders was tackled, but his boys pushed him 10 yards. Miller then kicked to Dedham's 20 yard line. Fenno stopped a double pass and Dedham was forced to kick to Miller who gained 10 yards. Miller gained 20 through left tackle. Desmond got 10 bringing the ball within striking distance of the goal line.

After a few rushes Miller was pushed over for a touchdown just as the half ended.

A crowd of enthusiasts came over from Dedham and cheered their eleven. About three hundred saw the game, among whom were many old High school players.

Benefit Dance.

A very largely attended social dance was held at the Town Hall, Braintree, last evening under the auspices of the employes of the Old Colony street railway for the benefit of D. J. Blair, one of the motormen of the road who is at present ill at the City Hospital. Cuffe's orchestra furnished music for the dancing which was from 8 to 2 o'clock. The affair was a financial success and a good sum will be realized. W. Millar was floor director and he was assisted by E. J. Dunne and a large corps of aids.

Locked Up Two Weeks.

Last evening Officer Goodhue discovered that there was a cat locked up in the vacant store in Music Hall building, recently occupied by McConnell's grocery. With some difficulty he released the cat, which he later learned had been confined there two weeks. The cat was nearly starved, and when liberated quickly disappeared.

A young lady living just above Music Hall, had noticed the cat in the window several times during the week, and on Thursday evening stopped and looked at it, noticing how restless it appeared. She stepped to the door of the fish market, intending to call the clerk's attention to the cat, but as it was the closing hour, and the clerks were all busy, she let the "old cat go," nevertheless sympathizing with the poor thing.

Farewell Party.

The friends of Henry Pope Abbot gave him a genuine surprise on Friday evening when they assembled in large numbers and invaded his home on Granite street, on the eve of his departure for Prince Edward Island where he is to take up his abode in the future. "Pope," as he is familiarly called, is a jolly good fellow, and has a host of friends in Quincy. He was presented with a purse got up by his friends, and an address was read by W. F. Surprise Party.

A pleasant reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. Angus G. McDonnell at their residence, Madison avenue, the other evening. The event was in the nature of a surprise on Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart who are on a visit from Barre, Vt.

In behalf of the host and hostess Mr. Morrison presented Mr. Stewart with a handsome ring which was emblematic both of the Odd Fellows and order of Scottish clans; being orders to which Mr. Stewart belongs. In behalf of the company present Mr. John Kennedy presented Mrs. Stewart with a silver fruit basket, and in an able speech stated that it was a token of esteem and respect from friends and companions of Lang Syne.

An elegant supper was provided by Mrs. Stewart, after which those present indulged in dancing and were entertained by songs from Mr. J. Houston Mr. William Kelley, Mrs. McLellan, Mrs. Kennedy, Mr. McKee, Mr. Kingstree, Mrs. Raleigh, Mr. Hynes, Mr. Craig and others.

Bon Voyage.

A farewell reception was tendered Mr. Marcus E. Mahon at his home on Penn's hill by his relatives and friends Thursday evening, Oct. 2, previous to his departure for Porto Rico where he is to enter the employ of De Ford & Co., bankers and brokers, one of the largest houses of its kind in the world.

An elegant dress suit case from his friends and a gold watch and chain from his grandmother, Mrs. Ann O'Connor headed the list of many presents given.

A bounteous spread was indulged in by about fifty, after which music and dancing was enjoyed until midnight when a rousing farewell was given with best wishes for a bon-voyage.

Post Office Site.

Postmaster Hammond when seen in relation to the site selected for the proposed government buillding, said the site seemed to give general satisfaction, although there were some that would have preferred it to have been located on Hancock street. He further said that he had spoken to a number in regard to the location selected and all appeared satisfied. It was generally believed that this would mean that Maple place would be extended through to Hancock street.

Home Missionary.

President, Mrs. S. E. Barrows.
Vice President, Mrs. Daniel Higgins.

Treasurer, Mrs. T. B. Pollard.

GREAT SPEED.

Developed by Torpedo Boat Destroyer Lawrence.

Over a Knot Above Requirement.

After Fore River Plans and a Feather for Company.

Not only 28 knots, but over 29.

Her record is 29.4 knots per hour, which puts her among the swiftest of her class.

The trial was made with ordinary low grade coal, and a small steam pipe was broken during the trial, so that the Lawrence might, if required, do even better. The Herald reports the trial as follows:

The trial was held over a measured course off Provincetown, in charge of the official naval board, consisting of Capt. Charles J. Train of the cruiser Prairie, as president, Naval Constructor Joseph J. Woodward, Capt. Charles Roelker and Commander Walter C. Cowies. The members of the board said they were very much pleased with the result, particularly as the boat contained many features of construction not used hertofore, and was built from the builders' design and not from the usual navy department plans.

The Lawrence left Quincy at 8 A. M. and returned at 7 P. M. Besides the naval board the guests were: Lieut. White of the navy department at Washington, Lieut-Com. Anderson of the Charleston Navy Yard and Dr. Holloway of the Chelsea Marine Hospital.

Run.	Time.	Mean revolution.	Rate of speed.
1 south	2.384	749.5	22.727
2 north,	2.332	732.5	23.499
3 south,	2.202	757.5	25.678
4 north,	2.180	735.5	26.087
5 south,	2.120	750.0	27.273
6 north,	2.130	750.0	27.068
7 north,	2,098	752.5	27.735
8 south,	2,038	738.0	29.079

The tiny steam pipe in the boiler burst just as the Lawrence was making her sixth run over the course, and prevented her from being turned in order to make the distance in the opposite direction, as she had previously done. The difficulty was soon remedied, but it had reduced her speed sufficiently to make a perceptible difference in the figures.

The naval board, after the trial, agreed that the official figures should be 29-4 knots, although her highest run was 29.079 with the poor coal and the broken pipe.

The Lawrence is one of 16 vessels of the same class authorized by act of Congress May 4, 1898, as a nucelus for a fleet of 50 destroyers. The vessels are named for the heroes of the war of 1812, the Lawrence for Capt. James Lawrence, whose dying words, "Don't give up the ship," gave something of a glamor to the disastrous duel off Boston harbor between the Cheasapeake and Shannon. The Lawrence and her sister ship, the Macdonough, were built by the Fore River Ship & Engine Company from the design submitted by the company. The keel of the Lawrence was laid in Braintree April 10, 1899, and the vessel was launched Nov. 4, 1900.

The Lawrence is a long, hallow craft, with a high bow like a knife-blade and a low stern, flattened to prevent her from settling too deeply when running at high speed. Her four stacks rake aft very noticeably, and her conning tower forward and shelter aft present the same general outline. She stands at the head of the list in estimated horse power. Her load waterline length is 240 feet 10 inches; length over all, 246 feet 3 inches; extreme breadth, 22 feet 3 inches; mean draught, 6 feet 3 inches; depth from deck to keel, 14 feet; displacement 400 tons; full load displacement, 514 tons. Her only armor is the three-quarter-inch nickel steel, with a tensile strength of 120,000 pounds to the square inch in her conning tower.

The water tube boilers were made by the Fore River company from its own designs. The bunker capacity is estimated at 147 tons of coal, which it is calculated will give the vessel a steaming radius of 3000 miles at 14 knots, or 1000 at 30 knots. The Lawrence is equiped with a searchlight mounted on a platform 15 feet above the deck, has electric lights, steam steering gear and auxiliary machinery for condensing and evaporating plants.

BAER IS CALLED DOWN

Remarks About "Politicians" Resented by Odell

COAL MAGNATE APOLOGIZES

Operators Refuse to Entertain a Proposal Which Carried With It Recognition of Miners' Union—Settlement Apparently Far Away

New York, Oct. 11.—"What do you mean by politicians? I want you and all the other operators to understand that I am the governor of New York, the chosen representative of seven million people, and that I am here in this matter solely in that capacity and to relieve, if possible, an intolerable situation. And what is more, I intend to use every power at my command to do it."

Governor Odell made this statement yesterday to President Baer of the Reading road, in the presence of Senators Platt, Quay and Penrose. It was the culmination of a rather heated interview in the office of Senator Platt, and the result of the first meeting between Governor Odell and President Baer.

The conference was begun by a statement made by Senator Penrose that the situation was becoming so serious that some solution must be found at once. He suggested that the operators should incline to some concessions toward a settlement.

"If you mean by that," said President Baer, "that we are to recognize the existence of a labor union, I tell you right now that the operators will consider no such proposition."

Governor Odell was on his feet in an instant. White with excitement, he said: "Are we to understand that no kind of a conciliatory proposition will receive consideration at the hands of the operators?"

"I did not say that," answered Mr. Baer, "but I do say, and I reiterate it, that we will not accept political advice or allow the interference of politicians in this, our affair."

Then it was that Governor Odell made the statement attributed to him at the beginning of this article.

President Baer, evidently appreciating that he had gone too far, bowed to Governor Odell and said: "Governor, I beg your pardon. No personal affront was intended and we will listen to any suggestion you may have to make, but again I repeat that we must refuse to recognize the union as represented by Mr. Mitchell."

"I believe," said the governor, "that your position from a public view is absolutely untenable. If coal operators, railroad men and other business men can combine for mutual profit and protection, there is no reason why laboring men should not."

"What is the proposition?" said Mr. Baer, coldly.

"Just this," said Governor Odell. "I am sure that the labor organization of which Mr. Mitchell is the head desires him to be fair with the general public. If the operators will consent to give the men 5 cents a ton increase I will personally present it to the miners, and I believe they will accept it. It is a fair proposition."

"Does this mean, Governor Odell, that we are to recognize the Miners' union?" Mr. Baer asked.

"It certainly does," answered Governor Odell, "and there is no reason why you should not."

Mr. Baer and Mr. Thomas rose to go, Mr. Thomas remarking that the matter would be presented to the other operators and that an early answer would be forthcoming. Mr. Baer said: "We are to meet a committee of the Manufacturers' association on Tuesday and we may have an answer then."

The conference then broke up. Governor Odell went directly to the Fifth Avenue Hotel and during most of the afternoon received callers.

About 5 o'clock John Mitchell, accompanied by L. N. Hammerling of Wilkesbarre, called and had a long conference. When the conference was over Governor Odell refused to say what had occurred, and Mitchell was equally reticent. It is believed, however, that Odell presented his proposition for settlement to the leader of the Miners' union and that Mitchell said he would present it to the district presidents in the hope that it would be accepted.

Governor Odell said: "Mr. Mitchell was eminently fair and showed every disposition to adjust the serious situation."

Mr. Mitchell took no part in any of the conferences Thursday and yesterday, he being in New York, it is understood, in order that he might be within reach should the negotiations reach a stage where his decision for the miners would be required.

The News at Wilkesbarre

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 11.—Disappointment followed the news from New York that the conference there for the purpose of settling the miners' strike had failed to reach an agreement. It is feared in business circles that the struggle will continue for some weeks yet. The strike leaders will make every effort to hold their men in line, trusting to cold weather to bring the operators to terms. The local operators say nothing but failure was to be expected from the New York conference, as it was more of a political gathering than anything else.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Scarcity of Fuel May Cause Shutdowns and Higher Prices

New York, Oct. 11.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Favorable symptoms still predominate, and the business outlook is encouraging despite the adverse factors of labor controversies, fuel shortage and tight money. Manufacturing plants dependent upon steam for motive power are finding profits curtailed by the high prices for fuel, and, unless normal conditions are soon restored, it will be necessary to secure better quotations for products. The problem of adequate transportation is also disturbing, as there is already congestion in the coke region.

Shipments of footwear from eastern shops continue on a large scale, comparing favorably with the movement a year ago, which was considered exceptionally heavy. Manufacturers are fully maintaining recent advanced quotations and jobbers are beginning to place moderate orders for delivery next spring.

Cotton mills in New England are preparing to shut down on account of the fuel shortage and the market for goods is strong because supplies are already limited. Thus far, however, only a few quotable advances are reported.

Conclusion of the opening purchases of woolens has brought a quiet market for spring weights, and there is only a moderate demand for heavy goods for quick delivery. Complaints are still heard as to the delay in movement of sample pieces.

Weather conditions were exceptionally favorable during the past week for securing the nation's abundant agricultural yield. There is no longer any question as to the enormous quantity of grain, but in some cases there has been a decided loss in quality.

Esterhazy Wants His Money Back

Vienna, Oct. 11.—Count Eugene Esterhazy has created a sensation here by retiring from the order of Jesuits and commencing legal proceedings to recover his fortune of $175,000, which he gave to the society on joining it in 1885.

Bank Robbed of Half a Million

Prague, Oct. 11.—The death of an official of the St. Wenceslaus loan bank has been followed by the discovery of alleged defalcations amounting to $500,000. The president of the bank and a bookkeeper have been arrested.

DEFENDS SMART SET.

Mrs. Burton Harrison Thinks It Not So Bad as Painted.

ANSWER TO COLONEL WATTERSON

Regards His Attack on New York's Four Hundred as Too Scathing. From a Few Disgraceful Cases, Printed Broadcast, She Says, It Is Unfair to Judge Society.

I have no intention of attempting to break a lance against Colonel Watterson. Hundreds have tried it and bit the dust of the arena. I assume that he delivers his clarion blast in all conscience, because he believes in the truth of his assertions and desires to fight for the regeneration of the society that, rightly or wrongly, stands for an example to our land. But I have always thought that John the Baptist, crying in the wilderness against the sins of his contemporaries, must have excited among them some very rebellious sentiments.

Among my personal acquaintance with a large number of the people who make up the offending class I fail utterly to detect the habits of "licentiousness" alleged. If they exist, it is fair to suppose that all signs thereof could not be effectually concealed in daily intercourse with decent people.

One is aware of various instances where men and women notorious in defying public opinion have seen the bar fall before them here and have subsequently gone abroad and been received in elect circles, among the best. Those who have chosen to remain in the society of New York and Newport and brave the decree against them have never surmounted the obstacle of social dethronement.

I also protest against the wholesale arraignment of young girls as "exhaling their unclean lives and thoughts" in places of public resort. When I reckon up the list of fresh, charming, carefully nurtured and admirably trained young women that each year launches upon society, when I recall how their days are filled with lessons and classes and exercises of physical culture unheard of in the past generations of our country, when a girl came out "finished" at eighteen and then danced and sang her way into early matrimony, I feel convinced that our brilliant critic has been dreaming a bad dream.

It is impossible for a girl of healthy mind to part with her precious privilege when she is kept so wholesomely occupied as is customary with our debutantes.

The athletics that go hand in hand with her "accomplishments" must be a preservative of morals. At any rate, I speak truth when I say that I have never met any of those obnoxious creatures called "tough girls" in private life.

They must confine themselves strictly to exhibitions in the restaurants alluded to. Alas for the future of our civilization if such are to be the wives and mothers of our reigning set to come!

Again, as I look at the dwellers in the great houses of New York and Newport, whose names are daily recited upon the rosary of writers for the press, family after family passes before the mind's eye whose number contains no one such offender against morals and manners indicated as being among the leaders of this "voluptuous principality."

Some of them are dull, respectable people, who indeed seem quite out of place in the rush of fashionable habit—people who look as if they would like nothing so much as to yawn outright and be done with vain endeavor.

Some of them are dull, respectable people, who indeed seem quite achieved when they have built a great house and filled it with fine furniture and fighting servants who crowd the family to the wall or send them miserably wandering into other great houses where they have no topics of conversation but their wrongs at the hands of their dependents.

Others frankly live for the amassing of luxuries and such display of those belongings as shall entitle them to rank higher than the givers of the entertainment that as a record breaker went before. Many of them are utterly devoid of interest in the surroundings they have created at such a cost, wandering to and fro on the face of the earth until obliged to reoccupy the homes from which they hope soon to escape again.

Bret Harte's Last Poem.

A poem by Bret Harte, believed to be the last he wrote and found after his death, is printed in the October Harper. The poem was written at the time of Queen Victoria's death and is as follows:

When your men bowed heads together
With hushed lips,
And the globe swung out from gladness
To eclipse,

When your drums from the equator
To the pole
Carried round it an unending
Funeral roll,

When your capitals from Norway
To the Cape
Through their streets and from their houses
Trailed their crape,

Still the sun awoke to gladness
As of old,
And the stars their midnight beauty
Still unrolled,

For the glory born of goodness
Never dies,
And its flag is not half masted
In the skies.

LONG TROLLEY RIDE.

Extended With Few Breaks From Flint, Mich., to Boston.

One of the longest trolley trips ever recorded in this country has just been completed by Robert H. Darragh, the local street railway expert and publisher, says a Boston dispatch. He covered the distance between Flint, Mich., and Boston, with the exception of a few breaks in Ohio and New York state, entirely by trolley. He actually covered over 900 miles, although the air line distance via the steam roads between the points named is 853 miles.

Summarized, his trip showed exceptional street railway development in Michigan and Ohio, partial development in New York state and a break of only about fifty miles in Massachusetts.

Mr. Darragh began his trip by going from Detroit to Flint, Mich., over the Detroit, Rochester and Lake Orion Electric railway entirely by trolley. From Flint he returned over the same line and in reality began his trip eastward from there. From Detroit he went to Toledo. The direct line between Toledo and Cleveland is over the lines operated by the Northern Ohio Traction company. From Schenectady, N. Y., one of the best roads in the country runs through Troy to Albany. From Troy connection can be made with the Hoosac valley, which runs almost to the Massachusetts state line. A new company has been formed to build a line through to Pittsfield. At the present time the train must be taken a greater part of the way between Albany and Pittsfield.

From Pittsfield the lines of the Pittsfield Electric Steel railway company extend east only as far as Dalton, a distance of about six miles, but a new company has recently been formed to build a line from Pittsfield through to Springfield. From Springfield to Boston the route was a familiar one.

LOVE THAT ENDURED.

Mrs. Partridge's Death Closes Romance of Half a Century.

With the death of Miss Eliza Ann Partridge, says the New York Journal, there ended a romance which dates back half a century and has involved many prominent people in this city.

Miss Partridge was born in Pomfret, Conn., in 1814. Her father was a member of a family that traced itself back to Plymouth days.

When about sixteen years old, Miss Partridge came to this city and soon after fell in love with Henry Hall Ward, who was her cousin. The attachment was mutual, and the couple became engaged. The family on both sides, however, objected to a marriage on account of the consanguinity, and they were never united. Both persisted in maintaining the engagement nevertheless, and neither married. They saw each other daily, walked and drove together and lived almost as much for one another as though they had been one up to the time of Ward's death, which was in 1872. On his death he left his home, 23 Bond street, together with two others near by, to Miss Partridge.

Miss Partridge always regarded the home as sacred. She hired caretakers, instructing them to see that each room was dusted daily and to keep everything as much as possible in the shape in which it had been left. She visited the house almost daily for twenty years and more and refused admission to all other persons.

The other two houses were rented at constantly advancing rates, and plenty of offers were made for No. 23, but to all of them she was deaf. Finally the house was torn down to make room for a modern business building.

GAVE CLERK THE CREDIT.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon Tells Why He Didn't Write His Speech.

Writing of the possibility of Hon. Joseph Cannon succeeding General Henderson as the speaker of the house of representatives, the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press relates this incident:

"That was a mighty good speech of yours, 'Uncle Joe,'" said a friend to him a few days after Mr. Cannon's address on national finances in the house had appeared in the Congressional Record.

"Yes, Courts made a very good speech," was the response. Mr. Courts is the accomplished clerk of the appropriations committee.

"Why, did Courts compose that speech?"

"Certainly," was the response of Mr. Cannon as he lighted a cigar. "You could easily tell it was not mine, for all of the sentences were finished." The genial Cannon thus jokingly referred to his well known failing of neglecting to complete his sentences in a speech. He is usually so full of his subject that he does not take time to more than suggest an idea and then rush into another sentence without completing the first.

Unwrapped Dollar Bill In the Mail.

Strange things go through the mails every day, but it remained for a New Yorker to add one more to the list, says the New York Herald. A carrier attached to Station A was surprised to find among letters in a box a one dollar bill, bare of any wrapping, but on which a two cent stamp had been affixed and an out of town address written on a card pasted on the bill. During forty years in the postoffice service the carrier never before heard of a greenback forwarded in this manner. He believed it was unmailable in that condition, and there is a question whether the sender, if he could be found, would not be liable for defacing currency. Inasmuch as cancellation of the stamp would not deface the currency further than had been done, it was decided to forward the money.

THE EVIDENCE of AN EXPERT

By Howard Fielding

Copyright, 1901, by Charles W. Hooke

As we entered the old courtroom of Sudbury the prisoner was being led in by a door upon the other side. We were upon the east side, he upon the west, and the light of the forenoon struck full upon him. He was a lean and grizzled man with a deeply wrinkled forehead and thick eyebrows, beneath which were extremely unpleasant eyes of a distinct yellowish hue. These eyes blinked in the light like a cat's, and their appearance increased the effect of terror in his whole bearing.

The room was very still even in this moment of excitement. It filled a wing of the building and had an arched roof, giving it the look of a chapel, in which the high bench of the judge might well have seemed a pulpit.

Loren Moore was accused of sending deadly poison in a package of coffee to the house of his cousin, Mrs. Alice Holburn, with the purpose of revenging himself upon her for defeating him in a lawsuit about property of no great value, but long a subject of litigation. As so often happens in such cases, the victim of the poison was not the person who seemed to be intended. Moore stood before the bar to answer for the death of a servant of Mrs. Holburn's named Mary Dennett, a pretty girl, highly esteemed in this community, where character is more than caste.

Miss Dennett had been engaged to marry a young man who lived in the neighboring town of Durham. He was pointed out to me immediately by my companion, and I looked upon him with great curiosity, for there was a whisper that Moore's probable acquittal would place this youth in the prisoner's dock. John Norton, the individual in question, was tall and sturdy, with reddish brown hair and a fresh, ruddy skin. I saw him stare hard at Moore as the latter crossed the room between the two somber guards, gray bearded and dignified. It seemed to me that Norton's look was singularly destitute of resentment.

Following my glance, my friend Denning said to me:

"Norton was on the stand yesterday. District Attorney Barlow tried to make him swear that he had seen Moore in Sudbury on the afternoon when the poison was sent. You see, the defense is an alibi. Moore says he was in Durham, and he brings several reputable witnesses who will testify that they saw him there. Among them is Deacon Lewis, the old gentleman wiping his spectacles over there in the corner. See him? Well, his word is worth as much as that of any other man in this community. He and the other alibi witnesses were standing in a group on a street corner in Durham in the edge of the evening, and Deacon Lewis said, 'There goes Loren Moore of Sudbury,' and the others looked and saw—somebody. Was it Loren Moore? They say it was; but, between you and me, they don't seem very sure of it, except the deacon. The others, in my opinion, say so because he does."

"This will acquit him," said I. And my friend replied:

"It would except for one thing, perhaps even in spite of it. See that man over there?"

He pointed to a tall, meager, nervous old gentleman who had a very high forehead surmounted by stiff white hair. There was a clerical suggestion in his dress and manner, but yet he lacked the placidity that usually marks a country clergyman of advanced years.

"That's Professor Warren," said my friend.

"The chemist?" I inquired, deeply interested in a man of such wide repute among scientists.

"The same," was the reply. "He claims to have found in a compartment of a wallet belonging to Moore a minute quantity of the poison used in this murder. He was on the stand yesterday, and Moore's lawyer got after him with the severest cross examination I ever heard. The point of it was that this poison"—and he named it, as I shall not do in this record because I have no wish to advertise a substance of such a character—"this poison is a white powder that looks just like salt or sugar, and the quantity found in the wallet was so small that the jury can't get hold of it. If it was really in Moore's wallet, he's guilty beyond a doubt, but the jury wasn't convinced. Professor Warren's tests are a little beyond the comprehension.

Glancing at Professor Warren, I saw that he was preparing to be called immediately, and as he was gathering up his little "laboratory" I marked with some surprise that his trembling hands made the glass rattle.

"He was blown up over at the college many years ago," said my friend. "The lawyer for the defense made quite a point of that, though Warren was only a youth at the time."

The day's proceedings opened with the continuation of Deacon Lewis' testimony, after which some of those who had been with him described the scene. This made a considerable impression, having with the jury the strength of all "eyewitness" evidence. Contrasted with the invisible work of Professor Warren's chemicals—a drop of this or that substance in a little tube, a change of color caused heaven knows how, a test of something boiled out of a bit of leather from an old wallet—this plain talk about seeing a man walking along the street seemed as strong as certainty.

I saw Moore's yellow eyes shining with encouragement, and I marked increasing pallor on the face of young Norton, who the day before had thrown away his chance of avenging the death of the woman he loved; who had testified that he had seen in Sudbury at the critical hour "a man who looked like Moore," but could not be persuaded by all the district attorney's arts to say positively, "The man was Moore."

"I may be mistaken," he had said, according to my friend's report. "I won't say it was him when I ain't sure."

But upon the question whether he had really loved Mary Dennett or, being tired of her, might have wished her dead he was firm and explicit, saying that he loved her with all his heart and had been waiting only for better worldly fortune before uniting himself to her by the most sacred of mortal vows. While my friend was describing that scene of the previous day a sharp voice called:

"Professor Warren!"

And I saw the old chemist arise hastily and walk toward the witness stand, carrying his rack of tubes and bottles. It had been understood that he should be called in rebuttal of some "expert" testimony from Sudbury's leading druggist and that he would make a few experiments in open court.

This poison, which I shall call thanatine, may be revealed by many tests, of which the simplest is that by muriatic acid. Dissolve a little of the poison in a tube of water, and the liquid remains colorless. Then add a few drops of the acid, and a vivid green hue results. The professor explained this test to the jury, and, having done so, he put his hand into his waistcoat pocket and produced a small tube, from which he poured a quantity of the poison in the form of a powder upon a sheet of white paper.

"This is visible to you all," he said, but the district attorney expressed a fear that it might not be so, as both the powder and the paper were white, whereupon the professor felt in his waistcoat pocket again and then poured out more powder.

"It has been alleged," he said in the tone of one who lectures to a class, "that the quantity with which I was obliged to deal in this case was very small. Observe this little glass rod, which I wipe carefully with a silk handkerchief until it is perfectly dry. I lay it lightly upon the powder and then remove it, so. You can see none of it adhering to the glass. I place the rod in this tube half filled with water"—and he did so with a nervous hand that made the tube clink upon the glass—"and then with this dropper I add just one drop of muriatic acid. And you see the effect!"

The tube that had been clear as crystal became suddenly green as an emerald. It flashed in the light like a jewel of price, and I heard a murmur run along the jury box at the sight of this simple miracle. Glancing at Moore, I beheld a wretched spectacle. It seemed as if the flash from that tube shone especially upon his face, for he looked green with fear. And the jury saw him with eyes that seemed to comprehend.

"Always the same result," said the professor. "This green color is very distinctive to the trained eye. Even without the other tests—of which I made eleven—I should have felt convinced in my own mind that thanatine was present."

"I would ask the court's permission," said the district attorney, rising, "to have the witness perform the experiment again."

I looked at this man in amazement. It was, to my mind, a most foolish thing to do. The effect had been produced. The jury's senses could only become blunted to it by repetition. Besides, Warren, with his shaking hands, impressed me as a bad experimenter, and I was prepared to see him fail with a test so simple.

Moore's lawyer, a hatchet faced Yankee, sharp witted and quick, looked uneasily at the judge, fearing that a repetition of the experiment would not be permitted and knowing that it could not hurt the defense, but might help it. The apprehension was needless, for old Judge Harburg had a curiosity quite feminine, and he seemed anxious to see the test repeated.

Accordingly Professor Warren carefully washed and wiped the glass rod, took a clean tube, into which he poured fresh distilled water from the same flask that he had used for that purpose in the previous instance and once more laid the rod upon the small white heap. It seemed to me that none of the substance could possibly adhere to the smooth glass, yet the professor, with the utmost confidence, dipped it into the tube and added the acid from the dropper.

There was an instant of perfect silence, and then some one laughed a hoarse, jackal's laugh. It was Moore. He was smart enough to see that this failure absolutely acquitted him. And when I turned an eye upon John Norton I beheld him pale as death, his gaze fixed upon the accused.

"Well, professor," said Moore's lawyer cheerfully, "what does this mean? 'Always the same result'—those were your words."

Warren, who had seemel to me so nervous, had suddenly become calm, and, still more to my surprise, the district attorney's face was flushed as with triumph. He leaned back in his chair and whispered over his shoulder to my friend, "We've got him."

"It means," said Warren, answering the lawyer's question, "that it is easy to deceive human beings. I have here two tubes exactly alike"—and he took them from his waistcoat pocket—"one containing thanatine, the other common salt. I first poured some of the thanatine upon this paper, and then when more of it seemed to be desired I poured some of the salt, but you and everybody else here present supposed that I used the same tube and poured out the same substance as before. The result is that one half of this little heap—the half upon the right—is thanatine, a deadly poison; the other half is salt. And neither you nor any other man alive with his unaided eye can tell where the salt ends and the poison begins. With such simple trickery can human beings be deluded; to such errors their senses are liable. Whether it is a question of this heap of white powder or of a man seen in the dusk upon the streets of Durham we may all be deceived; we may all be mistaken.

"But not all the devices nor the cunning of all the men on earth can deceive one drop of this acid. It is never mistaken. Always, from the beginning to the end of eternity and under all possible conditions, it knows and speaks the truth. It cannot be deceived, it cannot lie, for its knowledge is the wisdom of God, and its truth is his truth!"

Surely I never had heard that simple fact brought home to me with such conviction before—that there is no lying in nature and no error. And I think it was the same with all there present. The faces of the jurymen changed from wonder to a stern purpose, while Moore's face was the picture of a coward in the presence of his deserts.

"One thousand times," continued Warren, "you may test the right side and the left side of this heap of powder, and until your own fallible hand shall mix the substances the result will always be what you have seen. When it shall have mixed them, though you do not know it, one drop of this acid will tell you, without prejudice, without hesitation, with absolute certainty."

Then at the judge's request the chemist proved his saying. He tested repeatedly from the two sides of the little mound of powder—always the clear fluid from the salt; always the green glow from the poison. The effect of the chemist's trick, which he had prepared as a rebuke to the prisoner's lawyer, was such that no argument of counsel could overthrow it, and a verdict of guilty followed.

But for Professor Warren I am sure a guilty man would have escaped his due. And, by the way, the difference between fallible human testimony and the evidence of nature was further illustrated a few days later by the discovery of the man whom Deacon Lewis and his friends had mistaken for Loren Moore.

ATHLETES FOR ENGLAND.

Hjertberg to Take Team, Including Duffy, Across Next June.

Ernest W. Hjertberg, trainer of the Columbia track team, has completed arrangements to take an all American athletic team of professionals and amateurs to England, Ireland and Scotland next June after the intercollegiate games, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. The team will include many of the best American performers and will be entered in the complete circuit of summer athletic meets in the British isles. The necessary financial guarantee for the team's expenses has already been obtained.

Among the prominent athletes who are counted on as sure to accompany the team are Harry Gill, the Canadian, who won the A. A. U. all around championship in 1900; Mike Sweeney, who holds the world's record of 6 feet 5⅝ inches in the running high jump; Frank M. Kanaly of Cambridgeport, Mass., who won the five mile A. A. U. national championship last year; G. Perry, a weight thrower; Edward Hobbs and Thomas Keene, the Boston sprinters, and Arthur F. Duffy of Georgetown university, who holds the world's record of 9 3-5 seconds for the 100 yard dash and who figured so prominently in the English championship meet last summer. Hjertberg himself will meet the foreign cracks in the long distance events, so that the American team will be well rounded out in the gamut of standard athletic events. Other men are expected to join in the pilgrimage for athletic honor and foreign prizes.

BOON FOR LUMBERMEN.

Advantages of a New System For Towing Logs.

A new system for towing logs has just been devised in the northwest, says the New York Evening Post. A successful raft in British Columbia is thus described: Under the new system several lengths of galvanized plow steel wire cable, each 250 feet long, were strung from the rear of the tug in one long rope. At intervals of fifteen feet "clips" were attached, to which half inch chains were made fast. The ends of the chains were passed through holes bored slantingly through the ends of the logs. It was found that this method did away with the necessity of the tug making for a shelter when a storm threatened and thus accomplished a large saving in time. The number of feet in the next raft, which will be started in a few days, will be 300,000, and if this is successfully handled the following one will contain 500,000 feet.

The logs are cut in forty-eight foot lengths and are bucked up after reaching their destination. Close observation of the raft, which was taken to Port Gamble, showed that the chains as used did not allow the logs to roll over and thus break up the tow. It was also found that the tug made better time with the same quantity under the new conditions than with logs in a boom. The special feature of the device which will appeal to lumbermen compelled to raft on the ocean is the low cost of getting the logs to tide water.

FAMOUS DEBATE SPOT.

Women of Freeport, Ill., Agree on Place Where Lincoln Met Douglas.

The women of Freeport, Ill., have finally found and have now substantially marked the spot on which took place the famous Lincoln-Douglas debate, says the Chicago Evening Post. There has been an exasperating delay of over a year concerning this matter. The old timers failed to agree as to the exact locality of the stand from which the speeches were made.

Finally the corner of Douglas avenue and Mechanic street was agreed upon, when a committee of the Freeport Women's club went to Devil's Lake, Wis., and secured a huge bowlder, which will be brought to the city and placed in position with fitting ceremonies.

New Idea In Fur Coats.

Automobiling has been responsible for many curious ideas in the way of coats, but I have seen one which is a unique example of the furrier's art, writes the London correspondent of the New York Herald. From collar to tail it is made entirely of hares' ears, cunningly joined together. Twelve hundred hares were killed to produce this astonishing garment, which took three months to manufacture, one man being employed three days in cutting the ears from the skins. It has been specially treated to render it waterproof. Considering the immense amount of labor spent on it, it seems cheap at the price, $100, which is asked for it.

Station For Signal Corps of Army.

Upon the crest of the Blue Ridge mountains, within sixty miles of Washington, the war department has purchased sixty acres of land and will commence at once the construction of a building that will be used as a station for the signal corps of the army, says the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald. It will be fully equipped and will be used for the higher scientific instruction of the officers as well as to teach the rudiments to enlisted men. The location is considered excellent, because the altitude commands a wide field in which practical lessons will be given.

Latest Airship Resembles a Quilt.

The latest invention in the way of airships, according to the New York Herald, is the vessel being constructed in Paris by M. Pardy, a Chilean, in the shape of an immense quilt. The squares of the quilt instead of being filled with eiderdown contain hydrogen. The airship will have a capacity of 1,000 cubic meters and will be held flat by a wooden framework. There will be a propeller at each corner.

The Regular Nominee.

The Norfolk County Republicans have no excuse for bolting the candidate of the party for County Commissioner this year. The nominee, William E. Badger of Quincy, was the unanimous choice of the convention, and there can be no charges of corruption brought against either the convention or the the candidate. There never was a convention more free from that which is objectionable, than the Republican county convention this year. Upon the first ballot Mr. Badger had a decisive majority, and the nomination was promptly made unanimous amid the best of feeling.

Mr. Badger is a practical and successful business man of Quincy, a member of the firm of Badger Bros., granite quarrymen, cutters and polishers, also machinists. Mr. Badger himself is an expert machinist and familiar with large contracts. He has also had a public training, serving as Councilman in Quincy for several years and also as a member of the Board of Health and in other capacities.

As an exchange puts it: "The county of Norfolk, which guards its honor with a jealous care, will be honored with William E. Badger as a member of her Board of County Commissioners. If honesty, integrity and business ability are factors which should enter into the character and qualifications of a public official, the citizens of Quincy are sure that they have a candidate in whom all these essentials are combined. If elected, the citizens of Norfolk county can rest assured that the interests of all parts of the county will be rigidly looked after by Mr. Badger. We feel certain that he will not be a commissioner of any particular part or section, but will be an official who will be alive to the necessities of all the citizens of Norfolk county.

There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative,—consumption.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The management of the Castle Square Theatre has in preparation for the coming week a production of Archibald Clavering Gunter's "Mr. Potter of Texas" which has not been seen in this city for many years. The immense popularity enjoyed by the novel, from which the play is taken, was fully equalled by its stage version throughout the country, and another success for the play may be confidentially anticipated in its coming Castle Square performances. It is a play full of current human interest and its live flesh and blood characters appeal to an audience most effectively, winning sympathy for their troubles of mind and body through the skill of the author in planning the scenes and situations in which they appear. The leading characters have been assigned as follows: Hon. Sampson Potter, John Craig; Baron Lincoln, James L. Seeley; Lubbins, Lindsay Morrison; Brackett, John T. Craven; Doctor Lampson, William J. Hasson; Lady Sarah Annerley, Lillian Lawrence; Ethel Lincoln, Izetta Jewel; Ida Potter, Mary Sanders; Martin, Alexia Durant. The usual distribution of souvenir boxes of chocolate bon-bons will be made at the Monday matinees.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

Reilly and Woods and their big company of farce comedy comedians and vaudeville artists close their engagement at the Boston Music Hall on Saturday evening of this week. Since the opening of Music Hall, under the management of Messrs. Stair and Wilbur, there have been crowded houses at every performance and the house has gained the reputation of being the "Standing Room Only" theatre of Boston. This condition of affairs has been brought about through the efforts of the management in booking only those attractions which appeal to the tastes of the theatregoing public and of presenting them at prices that are within the reach of everyone. The attraction announced for presentation next week is the sensational comedy drama of Metropolitan life, entitled: "Only a Shop Girl," which was written by Marie Wellsley Sterling and staged and elaborated upon by Charles E. Blaney, who has produced so many successes. There are said to be many bright lines in the piece and several cleverly concocted comedy situations. The action moves quickly and there is hardly a minute in the story's telling where the interest lags. In Josie, the waif, Lottie Williams, the star of the piece, has a part peculiarly suited to her capabilities and she plays with spirit and spontaneity. Miss Williams is ably supported by a strong company of artists and the scenic equipment is one of the most pretentious ever attempted.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Mlle. Milly Capell, the noted European equestrienne, will continue the special feature of the Keith show for the week of Oct. 13, in addition to another great vaudeville program, including the following noted entertainers: Will Cressy and Blanche Dayne, in their latest comedy sketch, "Bill Bliffins' Baby"; the Miles Stavordale quintet, another imported act, in "songs without singers"; the Marinellas, phenominal acrobats and equilibrists; Lester and Ayer German dialect comedians; Bob and Geo. Quigley, in an original talking act, "A Congressman at Large"; J. Evans Lloyd and Lillian Walton in a charming vocal sketch, 'Twixt Love and Duty"; Morris Alburtus, the noted club juggler, and Jessie Millar, talented cornet soloist in a novel combination act, and Elizabeth Murray, story-teller and coon song vocalist.

COAL MAGNATES SCORED

Declared Unblushing and Persistent Law Breakers

SNUB TO THE PRESIDENT

Declared to Be Hardly Matched For Sheer Audacity—Laws Violated So Long That They Think They Are Immune From Punishment

Boston, Oct. 13.—One of the features of the present state campaign was the dinner which the Democratic Club of Massachusetts tendered Saturday night to William A. Gaston, the candidate for governor. Over 250 party followers listened to speeches by Richard Olney, secretary of state in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, Charles S. Hamlin, Josiah Quincy, Congressman Thayer, Henry M. Ellis, Democratic candidate for governor in New Hampshire, as well as to Colonel Gaston.

The speech of the evening was delivered by Mr. Olney and the crowd cheered him for some minutes when he arose to speak. Many greeted him as the next president.

Mr. Olney said that the vital principle of our political institutions consists in liberty regulated by law. With the exception of the two Cleveland administrations, the Republican party has been in control of the national government for a period of more than 40 years.

"The signs of the times," he said, "are that under the regime of the Republican party, and through the national government's 40 years of partnership with the protected industries, we have come to a pass where public officials as well as private citizens deem themselves above the law.

"Witness the zealous haste with which the treasury rushes to the relief of Wall street speculators by a novel [illegible] banking law. Witness the astonishing proceeding of the same department in its instructions to subordinate officers respecting the duties to be collected on coal. But the generally lawless atmosphere in which protracted Republican reign has enveloped us is even more strikingly illustrated by the recent presidential demonstration upon the coal strike."

Referring to the coal conference at the White House, at which Mr. Baer was present, he said: "The president is our representative with foreign powers. Will it strengthen his hands that some half a dozen private citizens are found snapping their fingers in his face? The president's overture to the coal operators was prompted by the best motives and should have been treated with respectful consideration. It might have been declined courteously, even if firmly.

"But the opportunity to administer a snub to the president was too temptiug. Accordingly he was not only treated as a rash inter-meddler; he was also lectured upon the law and facts of the case, and to crown all was notified that the cause of the troubles was lawlessness, which he was sarcastically invited to suppress.

"For sheer audacity, this attitude of the coal operators should hardly be matched, and nothing could more strongly emphasize the disrepute into which the law of the land has been brought by long continued Republican domination.

"Yet who are they who were so insistent upon the suppression of lawlessness in the mining regions? Why the most unblushing and persistent of law breakers. For years they have defield the law of Pennsylvania which forbids common carriers engaging in the business of mining. For years they have discriminated between customers in the freight charges on their railroads in violation of the interstate commerce law. For years they have unlawfully monopolized interstate commerce in violation of the Sherman antitrust law. Indeed the very best excuse and explanation of their astonishing attitude at the Washington conference is that, having violated so many laws for so long and so many times, they might rightfully think they were wholly immune from either punishment or reproach.

"In these days of combination by capital on a scale and to an extent as startling as it is unprecedented, can they possibly imagine that labor is to be denied an equivalent right of combination? If they do, it is only another instance of their complete indifference to the law of the land.

"In 1894 receivers of a railroad were brought into court on a claim that laborers ought not to be discharged because of membership of a labor union. Though the court was a federal court it sat in Pennsylvania, and the petitioners got nothing from that court.

"But what followed? In a year or two, Pennsylvania made it a criminal offense to deprive a man of work, because he belonged to a labor union. In 1898 congress not only did the same thing, but, in a statute providing for the arbitration of labor disputes, expressly made labor organizations parties to such arbitration. This was in addition to previous legislation by congress, encouraging and providing for the incorporation of labor unions. In ignoring them, therefore, the coal operators simply ignore and condemn the law of the land."

"Law supreme and equal for all men is to the American people what the ark of the covenant was to the Jews of old—while we have it, we need not fear for our safety—when we lose it, we are far advanced on the high road to ruin."

SYMPATHY OF THE HUB

Extended to Striking Miners In Their Fight For Better Conditions

Boston, Oct. 13.—A largely attended meeting in aid of the coal mine strikers was held yesterday afternoon on the American league ball grounds. The two district superintendents, Thomas D. Nichols and John Fahy, came on from Wilkesbarre, and Mr. Nichols made a lengthy address, explaining with great clearness the strikers' side of the controversy. Short speeches were also made by Mrs. Martha M. Avery, Daniel Goldstein, George E. McNeil and James F. Carey, Socialist leaders, and Harry D. Lloyd. Torrey E. Wardner presided and a substantial sum was raised by charging a small admission to the grounds. It is said that the crowd would have been twice as large had the weather been more favorable or Mr. Mitchell been present.

The two leaders from the coal district were met at the station by a committee and at 2 o'clock were escorted to the ball grounds by several hundred members of local unions. The parade was through some of the principal uptown streets, but an absence of martial music detracted somewhat from its effect. Arriving at the ball grounds, the speakers were escorted to a temporary stand, and Mr. Wardner at once called the attention of the assemblage to the object of the demonstration.

Mrs. Avery, Mr. McNeil, and Mr. Goldstein each made short speeches upholding the cause of the miners and denouncing the operators. Mr. Nichols was then introduced and spoke at length on the situation, describing with considerable detail the causes leading up to the strike and the conditions now prevailing in the coal regions. Mr. Nichols said he was willing to admit that there had been some disorder here and there, but that these disorders had also that the union miners, those out on the strike, were not responsible for these disorders. Every mention of Mr. Mitchell's name brought forth applause. At the close of the speaking a set of resolutions favoring the strike were adopted.

Complaint Against Panama Road

Panama, Oct. 13.—Governor Salazar has received instructions from Bogota to send to the capital documentary proofs showing how the Panama Railroad company has not fulfilled the obligations of its contract with the government regarding the transportation of Colombian soldiers and war material. It is understood here that Governor Salazar is actively engaged in securing and preparing the necessary data for a law suit against the railroad company by the Colombian government for this alleged non-fulfillment of its contract.

Decorations For Sverdrup

Christiana, Oct. 13.—Emperor William has bestowed the decoration of the Prussian Royal Order of the Crown of the first class upon Captain Sverdrup, the Arctic explorer. King Oscar of Norway bestowed the Grand Cross of St. Claf on Captain Sverdrup last week.

Soldiers From the Philippines

Looking Toward Reciprocity

St. Johns, Oct. 13.—The fact that Premier Bond still remains at Washington encourages the hope here that he will succeed in effecting a reciprocity arrangement with the United States on the basis of the Bond-Blaine convention.

Seeing Washington Sights

Washington, Oct. 13.—The Crown Prince of Siam, who arrived in this city Saturday, spent yesterday in his apartments and in driving about the city. No visitors were announced. The second in the series of dinners in honor of the royal visitor was given last night at the Arlington. The Siamese minister was the host.

BUT LITTLE INCREASE

Looked For In Production of Coal This Week

MINING REGION IS HOPEFUL

Feeling That Move In Direction of Settlement of Strike Is Near—Operators Making a Supreme Effort to Get Men to Work

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 13.—Nothing that is new has developed in the strike situation here. The strikers and citizens are not expecting anything to develop in the strike-affected territory, but are eagerly following events in New York and Washington. There is a general feeling that some development in the direction of a settlement is near at hand. It looks as though there will be very little or no increase in the production of coal during this week. The miners are as firm today in their declarations not to return to work until they get some concessions as they have been heretofore.

The talk of calling on the federal government for troops to assist the state militia is still heard. From conversations with superintendents and military officers the calling on the national authorities is a remote possibility. National Guard officers do not take kindly to the suggestion, and say the state guard should be tried out first before thinking about national soldiers. Brigadier General Gobin does not take much stock in the proposition. If it were found that the Pennsylvania guard was not sufficient in numbers to control the situation, he says he would favor recruiting the state force up to twice its size, or to the number required to meet the situation. He says the governor under the laws can do it,

Great Test This Week

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 13.—This is the beginning of a week it is generally believed will put to a test the claim of the operators that they will be enabled to start up their collieries if given protection and the counter claim of the United Mine Workers' organization as expressed in Wednesday's resolutions that the strikers will not return to work without concessions even though the States should be here to protect them.

With a determination to prove their claim, the operators have been for the past week making a supreme effort to secure men and that they have succeeded to some extent is evidenced by announcements made with some positiveness that various collieries will resume operations in the course of a few days. Claim is also made on the operators' side that the forces at collieries already working are to be largely increased during the week.

The United Mine Workers' leaders continue to assert that the military can do nothing towards inducing men to return to work, and that all the men who could be induced to go back to work without concessions are already back.

Strike disorder is now almost wholly wanting, the soldiers having nothing to do further than their regular patrol duty, not a single call having come to any of the three regiments in this county to deal with any disorder or threatened disorder.

The Erie Makes a Move

Pittston, Pa., Oct. 13.—The Erie company last night posted notices at its collieries here requesting all striking employes to return to work today. The company assured all men who returned ample protection. This is believed to be the first move on the part of the coal companies to break the strike, under the protection of the troops.

Hurry Call For Baer

Reading, Pa., Oct. 13.—George F. Baer left here late last night on a special train for New York. His sudden departure was occasioned by a telegram reported to have been sent him by J. P. Morgan. Mr. Baer declined to state the object of his trip.

Root Confers With President

Washington, Oct. 13.—Secretary Root spent some time at the temporary White House last night in consultation with the president regarding the coal strike. Nothing could be ascertained as to what took place, the secretary declining to say anything about his visit and the officials at the White House being equally reticent, they declaring that there was absolutely nothing to say for the press on the coal strike situation.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN

Mangled Bodies of Three Boys Laid on Tracks All Night

Holyoke, Mass., Oct. 13.—George Kupsky, 18; John Kupsky, 15, and Jacob Turek, 21, Poles, whose homes are in this city, were killed some time Saturday night near Jones' Point, on the Boston and Maine railroad. The bodies were not discovered until Sunday. There is no way of telling how the accident happened nor at what time, but from the track of a bicycle that one of the party had it is evident that the boys were killed by a south-bound train. A watch found on one of the boys had stopped about 6:45 o'clock and it is supposed the accident occurred at that time Saturday night. The bodies were brought to Holyoke and taken to their homes. The medical examiner who viewed the remains said that the two older boys were evidently killed instantaneously, but the younger boy probably lived some time after the accident.

Two Burned by Exploding Lamp

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 13.—An exploding kerosene lamp so badly burned Miss Arcade Frazier, aged 17, and Chester Hunt that both are on the dangerous list at a hospital. The girl was about to retire for the night when she blew down the lamp chimney to put out the light. The flame went into the oil reservoir and an explosion followed. Her screams aroused Hunt, a lodger in the same house, and he rushed into Miss Frazier's room and smothered the flames from her night robe with a rug. In doing so Hunt was badly burned.

Terrible Case of Suicide

Guilford, Me., Oct. 13.—While temporarily insane, Mrs. Ellen Prescott, a widow, aged 50, poured the contents of a kerosene oil can over her clothing and set it on fire. Her aged father stripped the clothing from the woman and threw it into the yard. Twice the demented woman rushed out of doors and rolled her nude body in the flames until she was burned and blackened from head to foot. She was finally overpowered, but died in a short time. Her father was badly burned.

Hibernians' Complaint

Boston, Oct. 13.—For 10 hours yesterday the state board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was in session in this city and secrecy was maintained as to the matter under discussion. It is understood that the topic was the charge made that officers of the Hibernians who also are members of the Clan-na-Gael are disposed to allow their interests in the former order to become the detriment of the Irish movement.

Charged With Killing Policeman

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 13.—Edward Carter and George H. Blake, uncle and nephew respectively, were placed on trial here today on the charge of the murder of Officer Thomas Keefe at Everett in February last. The case promises to be a sensational one, as circumstantial evidence will play the important part. Carter is a middle-aged man, while Blake is a mere boy.

Stand Against Workingmen

New Haven, Oct. 13.—Rev. L. R. Streeter, pastor of a Methodist church here, created a sensation yesterday by declaring that labor unions and demands for shorter hours, if continued, will eventually carry the country back to the dark ages. He characterized labor unions as un-American and said that it took from a non-union man the right to earn a living.

A Church Dedication

Natick, Mass., Oct. 13.—St. Patrick's church, the corner stone of which was laid by Archbishop Williams 10 years ago last Memorial day, was formally dedicated by the same church dignitary yesterday, the services being elaborate and impressive.

Twelve Horses Suffocated

Ware, Mass., Oct. 13.—Fire which was caused by spontaneous combustion partially destroyed the stable of William S. Gilmore yesterday. Twelve horses were suffocated and 20 carriages destroyed.

Trouble In Belgian Fields

Charleroi, Belgium, Oct. 13.—The national committee of ministers of four of the great Belgian local fields met yesterday and passed resolutions in favor of demanding an increase of 15 percent in the wages of coal miners, the object of the demand being to create a diversion in favor of the striking coal miners in France and to prevent the supplying of Belgian coal to France.

Geneva Strikers Give Up

Geneva, Oct. 13.—The strike has collapsed, the strikers' syndicate having called upon all trades to resume work. The striking employes of the street car line resumed work last evening. There were some disturbances here Saturday night. Shots from revolvers were fired and a few persons were wounded, but there is now complete tranquility in Geneva.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. Good Afternoon.

The Union Pacific R. R. strike promises to assume big proportions unless the stockholders at their annual meeting Tuesday at Salt Lake City devise some scheme to nip it in the bud.

New Orleans is rejoicing over the settlement of the street car strike, the men resuming work this morning. The car men's union by secret ballot Sunday night voted unanimously to accept the governor's ultimatum. For two weeks no passengers have been carried on a car or a car run for any great distance much to the discomfort of the people of the city and all rejoice that the strike has ended so quickly and so satisfactorily to all concerned.

Of the many good results of the work ment association of Boston, is interesting the boys. Several clubs of boys have been formed which mean business. They propose to ask the city for brooms and to do the cleaning of the streets in their section. This means that the streets will be thoroughly cleaned and kept so as long as the boys are in charge and also will result in an improvement generally in the home as well as the street. It might work well in some sections of Quincy.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The Granite Cutters' Journal says: "The trade prospects for the fall and winter months are more than usually bright. Several large building jobs have recently been let which will help to keep a large number in steady employment during the winter.

☞We find in the columns of a staid Eastern contemporary that a Brooklyn firm has been experimenting with rosewood and mahogany as fuel, finding it nearly as satisfactory as hard coal and considerably cheaper. Don't trade your pianos for soft coal. Burn them.—Chicago Tribune.

☞Protection is the assential principle of republicanism, but competition is the eternal law of industrial life. We should, and will, enforce both; but if temporarily wealth ignores the latter and erects itself into monopoly, then the consumer has a better right to competition than the producer has to protection.—Gov. Cummins of Iowa.

☞Suggestions that labor difficulties might be all straightened out by the application of the Golden Rule usually meet with the sneer that the suggestion is sentimental and not practical. It is up to those who make the sneer to suggest something better. None of the so-called practical remedies that have been applied have yet solved the riddle. —New Bedford Standard.

☞One of the brightest things uttered for many a day was the remark of a New York Republican campaign orator, that "if Bird Coler were to be dropped from a 20-story building tied to a cotton thread he wouldn't be heavy enough to straighten out the kinks." There is no occasion now for Bird stepping on a penny-in-the-slot weighing machine. — Lynn Item.

☞The difference between primitive people and those advanced in their modes of living is marked by the number of their desires. Now, modern advertising has increased these to a wonderful extent. To get along without things is to go backward, unless it is done temporarily to discover the north pole or to explore some unknown continent, while multiplying one's wants is pushing forward the car of progress. —Fame.

☞The long-delayed crusade against the cowards and desperadoes who make armories of their hip pockets appears to have broken out simultaneously all over the south. The people who stand for law and order have reason to be glad of the fact. Our civilization has been cursed altogether too long by the prevalence of the idiotic, semi-civilizen custom of men going about every day loaded with concealed deadly weapons and ready to do murder on the simplest provocation.—Beverly Times.

☞George H. Phillips says: "Investors, buy wheat. I believe wheat will sell at eighty cents and I am happy in the belief. Sixty cents will mean $60,000,000 less for the American laborer. Eighty cents means $60,000,000 more for him to put into circulation, or a difference of $120,000,000." Mr. Phillips must be blind of one eye and see very little out of the other when he writes such shallow rot. The laboring man knows that eighty-cent wheat means probably $1.50 per barrel more for flour than sixty-cent wheat does, and no increase in his wages. As to an increase in labor because somebody gets more money, he also knows that such is largely a fallacy. The more money some capitalists or corporations get the more they contract and economize. Its the old story of a man trying to lift himself by his boot-straps. —"Constant Reader" in New York Commercial.

☞It may seem primitive optimism to hold that only the good trusts will endure and that all the bad trusts will fail. Yet we should not be without some ground for that comfortable faith. It would not be difficult to name various trusts of vast magnitude, of long standing, and evidently of enduring stability, the result of whose operations has been indisputably beneficent to the public. They have given us improved service and better goods at lower cost. Such concerns, even though they be called trusts, deserve to live and to prosper. There are others which, as Senator Doliver well says, are so bogus that without much straining of the law they might be excluded from the use of the mails as frauds. Such trusts fail because they deserve to fail. It may be that such natural processes will solve the whole trust problem, or it may be that strenuous federal [illegible] as long as the trust octopus comprises only one-tenth of American industry there is still an opportunity for us to "thank God and take courage."—New York Tribune.

An interesting game of foot ball was played at Merrymount park Saturday afternoon between the Wollaston A. A., and the Porter A. A., resulting in a victory for the home team by a score of 12 to 0.

The visitors were outgenerald in every part of the game. The frequent fumbling of Wollaston saving the Porters from an overwhelming defeat. The features of the game were the playing of Taylor, Scharnagel and Otis of Wollaston and Barrett, Drown and Drayton for Porter. The summary:

WOLLASTON A. A.	PORTER A. A.
Baker, l.e.	r.e., Drown
Gearwar, l.t.,	r.t., Rockwood

Lost Their Smelts.

Three well known Quincy young men went smelting. They went in a yacht and anchored in Hingham Bay. The smelts bit well and soon a rough estimate showed they had forty or fifty dozen and they thought they would start for home. In some unaccountable way the yacht got capsized and they not only lost their smelts but got a ducking.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

MOVE AGAINST TIPPING

Railway Porters Unite to Fight the System.

A NEW YORK LODGE ORGANIZED.

Sixty Men Met In a Private Car to Demand Living Wages—Delegates Will Be Sent to a National Convention to Meet In Chicago Next January.

One of the most surprising developments of convention week at Saratoga came near being overlooked in the excitement and interest surrounding the New York Democratic state convention, says the New York World. An association of sixty Pullman porters was organized at Saratoga the other day with the avowed purpose of abolishing the tipping system.

The porters say they don't want tips; they want living wages. The New York lodge, which was formed at Saratoga, will send delegates to a convention in Chicago next January, when the National Colored Men's Railroad association will be revived and a strong effort made to organize the porters on every railroad system in the country.

The porters seldom get such an opportunity to gather together as was afforded by the presence of so many special trains in the railroad yards at Saratoga. They took advantage of their chance, and every Pullman porter in the yards, sixty in all, assembled in ex-Police Chief William S. Devery's private car, the Elzevir, which headed his special train.

They listened to an address by William H. Green, a tall orator, who had taken excellent care of the Devery party on the trip to Saratoga from New York and who had received a substantial tip from the Ninth district leader.

"We porters must organize," he said. "In no other way can we raise the standard of our service to the traveling public and wipe out the system of tips, which makes beggars of every one of us men. We don't want tips. We want the Pullman company to pay us wages that we can live on.

"We are paid $1.23 for a trip between New York and Chicago. The company makes perhaps $200 out of that same run.

"You all know what sort of service some porters give. If a man gives one of us a dollar tip, he is very likely to get particular attention paid to him, and the rest of the passengers are neglected. The public gets the worst of it, and our profession suffers from these individual cases.

"If we raise the standard of service, we can get more out of the Pullman company, and we can do it in no other way. We must organize, and in a year or two we can force the companies to quit their tips and draw living wages."

The speech was cheered. Other porters talked in the same way. The New York lodge was organized with a hurrah, and the following temporary officers were elected:

President Green went to Devery just before the Devery special train left for home and told him about the new organization. He said the porters wanted to get announcement in the newspapers.

"Do you realize what you're doing?" asked the big chief.

"Yes," said Porter Green. "I know that I'm liable to lose my position with the Pullman company, but I'm a man, and I've got the right to express my convictions."

An Expert's Views on Tips.

The "Colored Waiters' Chesterfield," a book on the duties and responsibilities of waiters, was issued the other day, says a Chicago dispatch to the New York World. The author is John B. Goins, an old time Chicago waiter.

"A waiter should never place himself in a position of expectancy in the matter of receiving a tip," says Goins, "and should avoid approaching a guest if he sees him in the act of drawing change from his pocket. A waiter should never pose as an object of pity with a view to securing a tip. If he deserves a tip, he should let the guest feel within himself that he deserves it. Should the waiter receive a tip previous to waiting on the guest he should leave it lying on the table and then do his level best to earn it. A waiter should never make any demonstration of gratitude when receiving a tip beyond a polite acknowledgment.

For the Ledger.

Do Not Commit Yourself.

Quincy, Oct. 13, 1902.

It is my hope, as well as many others, that none of our nine candidates to the Legislature will appear upon a public stage, or before the public, at the request of any one man, and commit themselves to his one idea, whim or hobby.

There will be many measures brought before the next Legislature, that nominees are not qualified at this time to act upon; and should not declare themselves in favor or against until those measures are properly laid before them in the House.

Do not be bound down to the whim or hobby of any one man's idea. If you do you will be bound and bound to the end of your term. Cut him out if you want to be elected.

Poorest Paid Places.

A writer to Granite Cutters' Journal says: "Perhaps in my next letter I may be able to give some information in regard to what we are going to do about bettering our condition next spring, as we intend taking the matter up at our next meeting. The members all know that Quincy is one of the poorest paid places in the country, so there is good room for improvement."

"This place looks as though it was getting to be the dumping ground of all nations. We have some pretty good interpreters amongst us, but these people come here speaking a language which we can not understand, yet it seems that some of the employers readily understand them, judging by the way they extend to them the glad hand and a kit at the same time; and we also notice they can generally manage to hold their jobs when it gets a little slack, while those who can make themselves understood have to walk the streets. What we have got to get at now is the object of this, as there must be one, and the writer comes pretty near guessing what it is. We have some fair bosses who are willing to do the square thing by the men and give recognition to competency, while many others fail to do so and begrudgingly pay competent men the minimum rate no matter how good they may be."

"We have heard bosses complain that they can not touch some jobs and are also unable to compete against others who have their sheds filled with the class I referred to. Now if those employers, who are willing to do right by men, will only give us their assistance in making agreements this coming spring to reach those people they will not only be helping us but will also be helping themselves at the same time. When we can get it so that every boss will have to do the right thing then they will get a chance to secure some of the work they are unable to secure under present conditions."

"We are also up against the apprentice question in Quincy, and up against it hard. We tried, in 1900, to get the employers to regulate it, but they politely told us that the question would work out its own salvation, or words to that effect, which amounts to just the same thing. Now it is working itself in some yards to the full extent. It is no uncommon thing to meet a fellow-workman on the street and ask him how things are looking where he is working. The chances are he will say, "Pretty good for our place; they have on half-a-dozen journeymen, and, counting apprentices, that makes a gang." In a good many instances, in the winter months, you will find the [illegible] between journeymen and apprentices even greater.

"There is one thing we will have to do, and that is to have every shop steward take down the name and date of starting of every apprentice in the yard where he works and give the same to the branch secretary to keep as a record; then we will find out how long it takes some of them to serve their time. Some are not particular as to how long it takes so they have work; and there is one thing I must admit, that it is not the old-established firms that hire the most apprentices, nor those whom I referred to as willing to do unto others as they would have others do unto them."

Caucus Vote of 1901.

The Republican municipal caucuses were held last year on Wednesday, Nov. 6, the day following state election. The total vote was 2374, divided as follows:

	Bryant.	Anti-Bryant.
Ward One,	222	324
Ward Two,	140	201
Ward Three,	161	321
Ward Four,	210	141
Ward Five,	275	207
Ward Six,	45	—
Total,	1,053	1,194

This year there will be no convention but the nomination will be by direct vote as for Representatives. The candidate receiving the largest number of votes in the city will be the Republican nominee.

—The retirement of a New York police captain with a fortune of about a million dollars leads one to think that the proper advice for young men some ten or more years ago would have been: Go to New York, young man, and grow up in the force.

CUT
YOUR COAL BILLS.

The most serious problem that has faced the buying public for years, is coal selling at $15.00 per ton.

Cut down your coal bills, use an Oil Heater to heat your living rooms, cook on a Blue Flame Oil Stove, or use a Glenwood Range or Parlor Stove; they consume from 25 to 33 per cent. less coal than any other stove in existence.

Call and look over our Oil Stoves and Heaters plan your winter heating on an economical basis.

BETTER THAN COAL

A New Yorker Delighted Over Experiment.

Bricks Saturated With Kerosene.

Plan Also Tried by Northampton Y. M. C. A. Members.

Frederick Antholz, a New Yorker who has been experinenting with different kinds of fuel, has tried soaking bricks in kerosene oil, a project previously mentioned in these columns. He says they may be used in the stove like ordinary coals for either heating or cooking purposes. He is enthusiastic over his experiments and so are those who have tried the plan, for that matter. It works like a charm, they declare. Here is his idea for setting the coal trust at defiance:

"Saturate a relay of ordinary house bricks in a bucket of oil. One gallon of oil, costing 10 cents, will effectually soak 10 bricks, and each brick will burn with an intense heat for a period of time sufficient to cook the entire meal for a family of six persons. The cost lies only in the amount of oil consumed, and a gallon of oil will suffice for the day's heating and cooking."

Antholz has been using brick fuel for the past two weeks and he has come to the conclusion that he is henceforth independent of the coal trust. Besides, he declares the cost is fully 70 per cent, cheaper than with the use of coal.

Antholz says it is necessary to soak the bricks thoroughly before attempting to set fire to them. For this purpose he suggests the use of a square pan or a bucket which will contain half a dozen bricks if intended for family use, although one brick can be treated in the same manner for the first experimental test. He says:—"In half an hour the brick will be found to have absorbed considerable of the oil, if not all that has been poured into the receptacle. Lift out one of the bricks, allowing it to drain for a minute over the oil receptacle. Then place it in the empty grate of the stove.

"Now comes the next move, which must be observed if success is to attend the project. Reduce the draught under the grate, leaving just a trifle of an opening in the vents through which air may reach the burning brick. Then, partly close the damper or draught leading to the pipe or chimney.

These precautions are absolutely necessary, for as comparatively little smoke attends the blaze and fierce combustion follows the ignition of the oil, the reduction of the draught is imperative."

Secretary Bromley and some of the members of the Northampton Young Men's Christian Association, having become interested in the accounts that have been published of securing heat by the use of brick saturated with oil, tried the plan. They had secured several bricks from a brickyard, being careful to take those from the outside of a kiln, which are softer and more porous than those which have been thoroughly baked. Three of these were soaked in kerosene three hours, and then placed in the stove and lighted. They burned for an hour and 10 minutes, giving off a good amount of heat. The amount of oil taken up by the bricks was not measured, but it appeared to be very small.

Brockton Hospital Overcrowded.

Matron Beattie of the Brockton hospital in her report for September stated that the number of patients for the month averaged 31 and as there are but 27 regular beds the hospital had been taxed to its utmost and more room was needed. During the month 60 patients had been treated, 31 of whom were still at the hospital.

The Brockton hospital has been built but a few years and has been carefully run. Miss Beattie is a thoroughly competent nurse and matron, her experience as assistant to Miss Thayer in the Quincy hospital being of great assistance in her present surroundings.

The treasurer's report for September may interest Quincy people.

Had Good Luck.

Dana J. Flanders, general passenger agent of the Boston and Maine Railroad, Dr. Heber Bishop of Boston and Charles K. Fox of Haverhill returned home yesterday from a very successful hunting trip to New Brunswick. They left nearly three weeks ago for the Canaan River and Salmon River country. These rivers are located in the interior of New Brunswick and empty into Grand Lake and the St. John River.

Mr. Flanders secured one moose which weighed 1200 and had a spread of antlers of over 50 inches. He brought the head home and will have it mounted and placed in his dining room. This is his second moose; he secured one not quite as large last year.

Mr. Fox and Dr. Bishop each secured a moose, but no such fine specimens as that shot by Mr. Flanders. The moose secured by Dr. Bishop makes the 22d moose shot by him in the Maine and New Brunswick forests. He was also able to make a number of fine photographs of moose, deer and other wild animals in their native wild state.

Funeral of Mrs. Bosworth.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Bosworth was held Sunday afternoon from her late residence at 70 Howard avenue. Services were conducted by Rev. Leon H. Austin. Musical selections were given by Mrs. E. E. Morgan. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

—Those who have visited Chicago and enjoyed a drive on Michigan avenue will be glad to know that Montgomery Ward has won his suit after a long fight, for the preservation of the entire lake front for park purposes. All the land from Randolph street to Park Row and from Michigan avenue to the harbor line or breakwater is thus to be forever used for park purposes and the erection of buildings prohibited.

—We can shake hands with France as they also have a coal strike on their hands.

Metropolitan Sewer.

The sections of the Metropolitan sewer in Quincy, upon which work has been in progress for several months are nearly completed but there are some other sections not yet started.

Last week the wall of the Adams estate next to Mount Wollaston cemetery was replaced and the field cleared so that it will soon appear natural.

Work is still in progress on the Apams farm, south of Sea street and Hotel Shelton, but is nearly completed.

One of the locomotives used in carting rip-rap from the quarry on the Pawsey farm, has left town, and the work on the embankment from Quincy woods to the Willows is about finished.

Connections have not yet been made on Sea street, but the sewer has nearly reached Manet avenue on the Houghs Neck end.

Nut Island Hill is lowered and is no longer and island, even at high tide. There is some construction, however, to be done in this vicinity.

Death of Dr. Harlow.

Dr. Edwin A. Harlow a retired Boston physician died Sunday at Wollaston at the age of 89 years. His death being due to old age. Dr. Harlow was born in Boston and was educated in the public schools and Harvard college and medical school. After receiving his degree he began practice in Boston having an office at 34 Harrison avenue. Here he built up a large practice. He retired from active practice about twelve years ago and came to Quincy with his brother.

For a time the two brothers made their home with Dr. James F. Harlow at Quincy Point but of late they have been living at Wollaston. Dr. Harlow was never married. He leaves one brother Rev. Robert H. Harlow, a retired Baptist clergyman.

Lawn Tennis.

The finals game for the Quincy challenge cup was played at the Whitney road grounds Saturday. The cup has been held by Cole and Freeman the past year. The challengers were Hall and Holden.

1st set, Cole and Freeman, 7-5.
2d set, Hall and Holden, 6-4.
3d set, Hall and Holden, 6-1.
4th set. Hall and Holden, 6-2.

The next challenge game will be played June 17, 1903.

Willing to Debate.

Although it was not announced until Saturday that Henry H. Faxon would hire a hall for the nine candidates for Representative to express their views, it is understood that three of the number required by Mr. Faxon have signified their willingness to participate. The three are Peter T. Fallon, Levi H. Turner and Peter Carlson.

To be Settled.

The coal strike will be settled this week without much doubt. Probably tomorrow. President Roosevelt believes he is in a fair way to settle it. J. P. Morgan has promised to co-operate with him. The President is perfectly willing to have each individual mine dispute arbitrated separately, if the operators insist upon that.

Soft Coal in Abundance.

Large quantities of soft coal are arriving in Boston daily. During the week nearly 100,000 tons came in. Yesterday 5,921 tons more arrived in three consignments.

Four long trains of hard coal equal to 6750 tons passed over the Reading road Saturday night. The heaviest shipment since May.

THE EQUALITY OF MAN

Europe Becoming Acquainted With Real Americanism

A FEELING OF CYNICISM

Respecting Arbitration Is Beginning to Be Overcome Through the Influence of the Hague Tribunal, Thus Exceeding Our Liberal Spirit

Paris, Oct. 13.—Judge Penfield of the United States state department, Archbishop Riordan of San Francisco and others who were present at The Hague during the recent sessions of the International Court of Arbitration which heard the arguments in the pious fund case between the United States and Mexico, have arrived here.

Judge Penfield says the court's decision in the matter will be rendered within the present month. To a representative of The Associated Press Judge Penfield said:

"Although the decision of the court is still doubtful, I feel confident of a favorable result. The court practically narrowed the issue to a question of res judicata, and inquiries made by members of the court indicated a tendency favorable to our position on this issue. If this assumption proves correct, it is then only a question of figures to ascertain the amount due, which is something over $1,000,000.

"The court commented upon the thoroughness of the American presentation of the case. The United States furnished practically the entire evidence, transcripts, etc. Mexico furnished practically nothing. As a result of these facts the American record was all the court had and Mexico relied upon a generalized argument."

Commenting upon the broad international aspects of The Hague organization, Judge Penfield said:

"The Hague tribunal is accomplishing important results for America. Arbitration is not taken as seriously in Europe as it is in the United States. We observed an undercurrent of cynicism respecting arbitration, which is regarded as sentimental and ideal. The American idea of treating international arbitration seriously is beginning to exert its influence; it promises to overcome European prejudice and to lead to a general acceptance of this principle. Another important influence of The Hague tribunal is that it is acquainting Europe with real Americanism. In Europe they are slow to understand our idea of the equality of man; the individual counts for little here. The International Arbitration Court gives us our first opportunity of presenting to the publicists and jurists of the old world our exalted ideals concerning the rights of the people and that the function of government is the protection of the individual. The Hague tribunal is thus performing the important mission of extending the liberal spirit of the American institutions."

Peary May Undergo Operation

Philadelphia, Oct. 13.—Robert E. Peary came to this city today to undergo treatment for his feet, which were injured in the far north. It may be necessary to have an operation performed. Although the extent of Commander Peary's injuries is not known, it is said they were due to his feet being frozen four years ago, soon after he started upon his last expedition. It was then necessary to amputate several toes.

Bogus Dollars In Circulation

Manila, Oct. 13.—Counterfeit American silver dollars are being made in China and circulated here extensively. The dollars are of silver and of standard weight. The low price of silver ensured to the makers of this counterfeit money a profit of 100 percent. American silver circulates as gold in the Philippines.

RAILWAY STRIKE SETTLED

Long and Effective Tieup at New Orleans Is Brought to an End

New Orleans, Oct. 13.—The street car strike begun by the dissatisfied employes of the New Orleans Railway company was settled last night, the Carmen's union unanimously accepting the governor's ultimatum.

The basis of settlement is that the men will go back to work at once at 20 cents, 10 hours to be a day's work, with a minimum of 7½ hours a day, no discrimination to be made against any of the men under charges and as many to be taken back as are needed for the operation of the company's lines.

There is widespread rejoicing in the city over the settlement of the strike, which began Sunday morning two weeks ago, and has been the most effective tie-up attempted in this city. Not a single passenger has been carried on a car since it began and not a passenger car has gotten more than five blocks from a barn.

Vienna, Oct. 13.—The retirement of Count Eugene Esterhazy from the Order of Jesuits was occasioned by a love affair with the Marchioness de Raynac, a French woman, whom the count has since married. Count Esterhazy's retirement from the Jesuits created a great sensation here, especially as he commenced legal proceedings to recover his fortune of $175,000, which he gave to the society on joining it in 1885.

Armour Baby In Plaster Cast

Chicago, Oct. 13.—The operation which Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Armour hope will cure their daughter, Lolita, who has been a cripple since birth, was performed yesterday by Professor Lorenz of the University of Vienna. Lorenz pronounced it a complete success and said he had not the least doubt that the child would be able to walk as well as the healthiest children when the plaster cast shall be removed next spring.

Barred From French Course

Paris, Oct. 13.—The Jockey club yesterday withdrew the licenses of the American jockeys, Milton Henry and J. Reiff, excluding them from riding on any French race course. This action is the outcome, says Le Soir, of very careful investigation made by the detective department, which secured proofs that Henry and Reiff, upon several occasions, have prevented favorites from winning.

Tornado In Illinois

Quincy, Ills., Oct. 13.—A tornado struck this city last evening, destroying much property in the city and in the county. A large number of houses and barns were destroyed and great damage was done to orchards and standing corn. One man was killed. The smokestacks of the electric light power house were blown down and the city was in darkness.

Government Troops Repulsed

Port au Prince, Oct. 13.—The revolutionists at Montrouis were attacked by forces of the government yesterday. While a government steamship bombarded the rebels' positions the government troops attempted to effect a landing. The rebels resisted with energy and succeeded in repelling the attack. There were many casualties.

"Touched" For a Million

Prague, Oct. 13.—Further investigation into the affairs of the St. Wenceslaus loan bank, in the funds of which a shortage of $500,000 was discovered, shows the amount stolen to be $1,000,000 and that the peculations had been carried on for 20 years.

THE BUYER OF BEEF.

He Is a Man of Consequence About the Stockyards.

The buyer occupies a position of consequence in the stockyards community. He is an expert, usually a man of middle age, who has obtained his education and technical ability partly in the packing houses and partly on the ranch. An experienced buyer is likely to receive a salary of $4,000 to $5,000 a year, and he is worth all of that, for on his ability to tell by a moment's inspection what quality of beef will be produced by a steer that he never before laid eyes on depends primarily the excellence of the product issued by his house and hence the increase of its business.

The buyer's work is not arduous, and to all appearance his task is a simple one. He walks along the flat board laid along the top of the fence, glancing keenly at the cattle in the different pens. Some he passes by without a pause, others he stops to inspect more closely, and occasionally he displays his interest in a group by asking a question or two of the man in charge.

Long experience enables him at a glance to distinguish between a grass fed steer and a corn fed steer, to decide whether an animal is entitled to be classed as "fancy," "good" or "common" and to guess within a few pounds of an animal's exact weight by glancing at him. The buyer makes his purchases "on the hoof," paying the market price ruling for the day for the grade in which it is decided each group of cattle belongs. In a few words the transaction is completed, and the buyer's interest in the affair is ended.—Leslie's Monthly.

An Anecdote of Bach.

The Duke of Saxe-Weimar once invited John Sebastian Bach, the Nestor of German music, to attend a dinner at the palace. Before the guests sat down to the feast Bach was asked to give an improvisation. The composer seated himself at the harpsichord and straightway forgot all about dinner and everything else. He played so long that at last the duke touched his shoulder and said, "We are very much obliged, master, but we must not let the soup get cold."

Bach sprang to his feet and followed the duke to the dining room without uttering a word. But he was scarcely seated when he sprang up, rushed back to the instrument like one demented, struck a few chords and returned to the dining room, evidently feeling much better. "I beg pardon, your highness," he said, "but you interrupted me in a series of chords and arpeggios on the dominant seventh, and I could not feel at ease until they were resolved into the tonic. It is as if you had snatched a glass of water from the lips of a man dying of thirst. Now I have drunk the glass out and am content."

Falcons In Japan.

In the olden times in Japan all the daimios (similar to the old English lord) had great sport with falcons, as they went out to the field to catch other birds with falcons. The falcons were tamed well and used to catch large birds, mostly cranes. When people now go out hunting with falcons, the men in charge hold them upon their fingers. As soon as one sees any bird he lets the falcon rush at the bird; as soon as the falcon reaches the bird he bites at the throat and throws the bird down to the ground. Meanwhile the holder runs to the place where they are and catches both of them.

Falcons are not large birds; but, as they belong to the eagle family, they are strong and brave and never afraid to go at any bird to kill it, but the men in charge of falcons of course take great care in feeding and taming them.

Why He Laughed.

Rylands, who had purchased a new horse warranted to be quiet to ride and in harness and a good trotter to boot, had invited a friend to accompany him for a trial drive.

They had not gone very far when the horse bolted, ran against a heap of stones lying in the road and pitched both occupants violently into the lane. When they recovered, the horse had disappeared, leaving the buggy shaftless and a heap of wreckage. Rylands began to roar.

"What on earth are you laughing at?" dejectedly inquired the friend.

"Why, the fellow who sold me that horse lent me the buggy!"—New York Times.

Wellington as an Art Connoisseur.

In his "Reminiscences" Frederick Goodall tells a story of Wellington as an art connoisseur. He paid Wilkie 600 guineas for his "Chelsea Pensioners" and laboriously counted out the amount in cash. When the artist suggested that it would be less trouble to write a check, the great duke retorted that he would not let his bankers know "what a blank fool I have been to spend 600 guineas for a picture."

Acquired Greatness.

It is the saying of a great man that if we could trace our descents we should find all slaves to come from princes and all princes from slaves. Give me blood acquired in preference to blood inherited—"to be born of oneself," as Tiberius said of Curtius Rufus.

Condensed.

Sideshow Man—See here, your paper said the biggest snake in my state fair show was twenty feet long when it's really thirty-one feet.

Editor—Sorry, but we were crowded for space yesterday and had to cut everything down.—Indianapolis News.

A Change of Heart.

When a man first loves, he feels unworthy for no particular reason. Later he acquires the reason and forgets to feel unworthy.—Smart Set.

EFFORTS OF MORGAN

Exerted Toward Ending the Great Coal Strike

SETTLEMENT SEEMS NEAR

Statement From Operators Agreeing to Appointment of Commission by the President, to Whom Shall Be Referred All Questions at Issue

Washington, Oct. 14.—By authority of J. Pierpont Morgan, who with his partner, Robert Bacon, and Secretary Root, were in conference with President Roosevelt at the temporary White House last night for an hour and a half, a statement was given out by Secretary Cortelyou in which the presidents of the coal-carrying railroads and mine operators propose a commision of five persons to adjust the differences and settle the coal strike in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania.

The proposition is believed by the administration to be satisfactory to the miners, as it covers the proposition made by President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers' union with additional conditions which it is believed that the miners will accept.

The statement recites that there are in the anthracite regions about 75 operating companies and firms, and 147,000 miners and workmen (of which 30,000 are under age) comprising some 20 nationalities and dialects. Of these workmen possibly one-half belong to the United Mine Workers' union. That organization was originally formed in the bituminous coal region, and three-fourths of its members are miners of bituminous coal, and bituminous coal is sold in active competition with anthracite coal. The remaining workmen in the anthracite fields either belong to no union whatever or do not belong to the Mine Workers' union.

The statement further declares that since May 10, 1902, many men have been prevented, by violence and intimidation, from working, and alleges that Mr. Mitchell either cannot or will not prevent the reign of terror. The coal companies believe that the wages paid in the coal regions are fair and full, and all that the business in its normal condition has been able to stand if the capital invested is to have any reasonable return.

Continuing, the statement says: "It will be remembered that at the conference in Washington, Oct. 3, we made the following offer: That we would take up at each colliery any alleged grievance, and in the event of a failure to make satisfactory adjustment the question at issue to be submitted to the final decision of the judges of the court of common pleas of the district in which the colliery is located. This offer was made by us in good faith and we desire here to reaffirm it.

"The coal companies realize that the urgent public need of coal and the apprehension of an inadequate supply for the approaching winter calls for an earnest effort to reach a practical conclusion which will result in an increased supply, and the presidents of the companies desire to make effort to that end which does not involve the abandonment of the interests committed to their care and of the men who are working and seeking to work in their mines. This responsibility they must bear and meet as best they can.

"They therefore restate their position: That they are not discriminating against the United Mine Workers, but they insist that the Miners' union shall not discriminate against or refuse to work with non-union men; that there shall be no restriction or deterioration in quantity or quality of work, and that owing to the varying physical conditions of the anthracite mines each colliery is a problem by itself.

"We suggest a commission to be appointed by the President of the United States (if he is willing to perform that public service) to whom shall be referred all questions at issue between the respective companies and their own employes, whether they belong to a union or not, and the decision of that commission shall be accepted by us.

"The commission to be constituted as follows:

"1—An officer in the engineer corps of either the military or naval service of the United States.

"2—An expert mining engineer, experienced in the mining of coal and other minerals, and not in any way connected with coal mining properties, either anthracite or bituminous.

"4—A man of prominence, eminent as a Socialist.

"5—A man who, by active participation in mining and selling coal, is familiar with the physical and commercial features of the business.

"It being the understanding that immediately upon the constitution of such commission, in order that idleness and non-production may cease instantly, the miners will return to work and cease all interference with and persecution of any non-union men who are working or shall hereafter work. The findings of this commission shall fix the date when the same shall be effective and shall govern the conditions of employment between the respective companies and their employes for a term of at least three years."

While no official statement was made at the White House after the operators' address was made public by Secretary Cortelyou, the opinion was expressed that the way is now open for a complete settlement of the strike and that the mines would soon be in operation once more.

The proposition of the coal operators was a result of the visit of Secretary Root to New York and his conference with Mr. Morgan on Saturday. Mr. Morgan at that time expressed a keen interest in the situation and a desire to bring about an adjustment if possible. Following this talk with Secretary Root there was a conference in New York yesterday at which the proposition of the coal operators was agreed to and Mr. Morgan was delegated to bring it to the president, in the belief that such would be the courteous course and the best way of promulgating the offer of settlement.

The next move will be the presentation of the matter to the miners and it is probable that President Mitchell will be invited to Washington to consult the president. It is believed here that he will at once accept the proposition.

Mitchell Wouldn't Get Up

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 14.—President Mitchell, when shown a synopsis of the statement issued from the White House early this morning, in which the operators agree to arbitration, refused to make any comment and immediately retired. A few moments later a full copy of the statement was brought to strike headquarters, but he refused to get up to see it. The correspondents talked with him through the transom of his bedroom, and in answer to further questions he said he knew about what the statement contained.

No Trouble In Coal Fields

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 14.—What was looked upon as an important day in the matter of resumption of work in the coal mines passed without any serious trouble, and each side to the controversy is claiming a victory. Reports received here from coal companies all over the region are to the effect that at least 12 collieries and four washeries started operations yesterday. President Mitchell asserted that reports received by him from his lieutenants in the field showed fewer men at work yesterday than last week.

Work of a Mob

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 14.—Orlando Schooley, who was taking a crowd of newly recruited men to work at the Edgertown colliery in Jermyn yesterday afternoon, was set upon by a mob of 100 and beaten so badly with clubs and stones it is feared he will not live. His back was broken. The crowd of recruits who were with Schooley were allowed to go unmolested upon their agreeing to take a train out of town.

Soldier Responsible For Death

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 14.—The coroner's jury in the case of William Durham, who was shot and killed on Wednesday night last by Private Arthur Wadsworth of the National Guard, yesterday returned a verdict placing the responsibility for the death upon Wadsworth, expressing the belief that the shooting was hasty and unjustifiable, and recommending that the matter be placed in the hands of the district attorney for investigation.

Necklace Valued at $20,000 Lost

Islesboro, Me., Oct. 14.—No little stir has been made here by the recent posting of a notice of the loss of a diamond necklace valued, it is said, at about $20,000, the property of Miss Pauline Biddle of Philadelphia. A large reward is offered. Dr. A. W. Biddle and his daughter, Miss Pauline, who have a summer cottage here, have just left Islesboro for their home. They declined to discuss the loss of the jewel.

Boers Have Lost Friends

Berlin, Oct. 14.—Herr Von Wildenbruch, who is called the court poet, owing to Emperor William's special favor, was going to deliver the welcoming oration to the Boer generals here. But since the generals have forfeited official countenance Wildenbruch has announced that he is going on a trip to the Tyrol for his health and has asked the Berlin public not to wave their hats, but to give money to the Boers.

Railroad Engineers' Demand

Augusta, Ga., Oct. 14.—The Georgia railroad engineers, claiming to have the support of engineers on 9000 miles of railway in this section, have given public notice that if a petition by them for mileage wage scale instead of per diem is not granted by Oct. 23 they will strike, intimating that the engineers on connecting roads will go with them if necessary.

TEACHINGS OF WESLEY

Influenced by Crowd of Ignorant Followers

DOCTRINES "A LIBEL TO GOD"

Methodists Must Break Away From Them If They Would Have the Church Regain Some of Its Lost Greatness—A Minister's Estimate

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 14.—Rev. James D. Mudge made an address before the monthly meeting of the Methodist preachers of Worcester and vicinity at the Webster Square church yesterday, which considerably stirred up those who heard it. His subject was a review of John Wesley's book, "Christian Perfection."

Mr. Mudge said that he did not think anyone could have realized the value of the labors of John Wesley, but much as he was eulogized, he was not infallible. That he made mistakes could not be denied, and some of his mistakes were very serious ones. Mr. Mudge said Wesley never apprehended clearly, as is done now, the accurate definitions of theological terms. He was, Mr. Mudge continued, surrounded by a crowd of ignorant followers, and he was obliged to listen to many of their ignorant ideas, which influenced his teachings and doctrines.

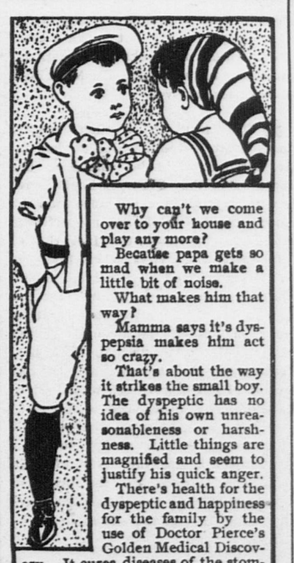
Mr. Mudge said that all through Wesley's book of sermons and letters he contradicted himself every few minutes, and that he thought Methodism had fallen back by tying itself so completely to his teachings. He said some of Wesley's doctrines were "a libel to God," and that his works were a mass of inconsistencies and confusions.

Mr. Mudge thought that the Methodist church would regain some of its lost greatness if it would only break away from the rules and teachings set down by John Wesley. In closing he said that he thought that Wesley's book should be consigned to the scrap heap as an antiquated and reverenced relic to be looked over occasionally. Mr. Mudge said he thought Wesley was an unsafe and unsatisfactory leader, and said that he should protest against following his teachings, and should constantly protest, no matter how many enemies it made for him. In conclusion, he said that if Methodists continued to stick to Wesley they would stick in the mud.

Rev. Dr. G. W. King of Trinity church replied to Mr. Mudge, and said that he did not think Mr. Mudge really meant what he said, but was dealing with the ethical side of the question. The subject was discussed further at some length

Historical Relic Discovered

New York, Oct. 14.—After lying buried for over a century the famous English prison ship Jersey, in which several hundred Americans were martyred while the British held New York in the days of the revolution, has been accidentally discovered at the Brooklyn navy yard by workmen who are putting up launching stays for the battleship Connecticut. The half-burned hull of the ship is lying under 14 feet of dirt and water and is in perfect condition.



Why can't we come over to your house and play any more?

Because papa gets so mad when we make a little bit of noise.

What makes him that way?

Mamma says it's dyspepsia makes him act so crazy.

That's about the way it strikes the small boy. The dyspeptic has no idea of his own unreasonableness or harshness. Little things are magnified and seem to justify his quick anger.

There's health for the dyspeptic and happiness for the family by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and restores perfect health and strength, by enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food.

"I have taken one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for indigestion and liver complaint," writes Mr. C. M. Wilson, of Yadkin College, Davidson Co., N. C. "Have had no bad spells since I commenced taking your medicine—in fact, have not felt like the same man. Before I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I could not eat anything without awful distress, but now I can eat anything I wish without having unpleasant feelings."

Good Afternoon

Since occupying our new offices on the street floor a bouquet has ornamented the counter but that of Monday bears off the palm. It is a bunch of the handsomest dahlias we have seen this fall and were given by Mr. N. B. Furnald. He said he cut over two bushels of dahlias on Monday. Mr. Furnald is a most successful grower of flowers.

One of the oldest and most honored men in the newspaper fraternity is Editor J. I. C. Cook, senior proprietor of the Daily Journal, Milford Mass. On Monday he reached the eighty-fifth milestone in his life's journey, and the event was observed in the evening by a family gathering at the home of his son. We extend congratulations and wishes for many more years of usefulness and happiness.

It is safe to say that at least one church, the First Independent Baptist, of Boston, will have very few vacant seats in the future, for dinner is to follow the service. Last Sunday chicken soup, ham, roast chicken, celery, tomatoes, sweet and white potatoes, bread, tea and coffee, and fruit were served free. It would not be surprising if that church had to be enlarged before long. If generally adopted what a cinch it would be for the housekeeper and maid of all work.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ News from Wilkesbarre, Pa., on Monday states that twelve collieries and four washeries started operations that day. A superintendent in speaking of the situation as it exists said: "The number of men who returned to work today was not very large, but the movement in that direction was gratifying. The companies did not make a great effort to break the ranks of the strikers, preferring to wait until the New York conferences are over.

☞ The bill to abolish capital punishment, without which no legislative session would be complete, has appeared in the Vermont Legislature. It will, perhaps, receive more than the notice accorded to similar propositions in other States from the fact that in thinly settled districts where there is no lack of law and civilization, human life is regarded with more reverence than in crowded centres where it is given and taken almost hourly by the despairing and the criminal. Then, too, Vermont people remember a legal execution of a few years ago which afterward proved to have been a mistake. It is not likely, however, that the bill will have any effect, except to leave those in the lawmaking body of that State who object to the extreme penalty with clear consciences for having made the effort.—Evening Transcript.

REV. W. B. BARR.

Sketch of New Pastor of United Presbyterian Church.

Rev. W. B. Barr, who will tonight be installed as pastor of the United Presbyterian church on Pleasant street was born near McAlevys Fort, Pennsylvania, Nov. 11, 1851. He attended the district school until 15 years of age and then entered the Stone Valley Academy. In 1870 he entered Westminister College, at New Wilmington, Pa., from which he was graduated in 1875. He then attended the theological seminary at Allegheny, Pa., from which he was graduated in 1878. He also took a course of study at the Xenia, O., theological seminary.

In April, 1878, he was licensed to preach by the Big Spring Presbytery, and on June 10, 1879, he was ordained and installed by the Butler Presbytery as pastor of the Springfield United Presbyterian church, with the understanding that he would be permitted to start a mission at Pine Grove, now known as Grove City. He had already commenced work at Pine Grove when he received the call to the Springfield church. A church was established at this mission Sept. 1, 1879, and Mr. Barr, served as its pastor in connection with the church at Springfield. During his settlement here he practically rebuilt the church at Springfield and built a new church costing $6,000 at Pine Grove.

In May, 1885, he accepted a call from a church at New Brighton, where the church had recently been made two separate charges. He was installed at this church by the Beaver Valley Presbytery July 14, while settled here he built a new church costing $15,000 and another at Fallston, for mission services. He was also chairman of a building committee appointed to build a new church at Ellwood City, which was built in 1891, at a cost of $28,000 and dedicated free from debt,

He resigned his pastorate at New Brighton, Oct. 1, 1891 to accept a call to the First United Presbyterian church at Xenia, O. He remained here a little over a year, resigning to engage in evangelistic work. He carried on this work until the fall of 1893, holding meetings in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Oregon, Washington and California.

While holding meetings at Los Angeles, he reluctantly assumed charge of the First Presbyterian church of that city, which had been split. He remained here twenty-one months and was successful in building up and reorganizing the church.

He also succeded in reorganizing a a Chinese mission in that city.

In 1895 he came east and in September 1896 became pastor of a new church at Middletown, O. He remained here until Oct. 1, 1898 when he went to the First church at Hoboken, N. J., remaining there until he came to Quincy. He has been twice married. His first wife died in 1893. In June 1895 he married his present wife at Riverside, Cal. They have had three children, two of whom have died.

Highly Amused.

The Boston Journal of Monday says, among the passengers who arrived on the steamer Merion from Europe yesterday was Judge E. C. Bumpus of Quincy and Boston, a well known lawyer. Mr. Bumpus is the father of the young Lieutenant who was massacred in the Philippines. The Judge goes to England every summer to visit a friend in Surrrey, and always takes a trip down through Switzerland, Germany and Austria before he returns home. He spent some little time in Budapest this summer. When asked what the Englishmen thought of the coal strike in the United States, the Judge replied: "They are highly amused, and laugh over it because the United States Government can be held up in such a manner by four or five individuals. They regard this strike as the supreme test of our republican government, at a time when capital and labor have met for the death struggle. Some in England have a vague idea that the President ought to settle such a terrible situation as now exists in short order, and in this way they regard the helplessness of the Government of free institutions as bordering on the ridiculous.

"The conditions in England are not materially affected by this coal strike, and a friend over there told me that he had just got his winter's supply in at $5.50 a ton.

"Nor are the Welsh dealers asking fancy prices for shipments to this country, as many American coal dealers claim."

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. We purchased some of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and he commenced taking them. Inside of thirty days he had gained forty pounds in flesh. He is now fully recovered. We have a good trade on the tablets.—Holley Bros., Merchants, Long Branch, Mo. For sale by all druggists.

Mr. George W. Stebbins of Bromfield, street, is visiting friends in Worcester.

On Tuesday afternoon of this week instead of Friday the W. C. T. U. will meet at Mrs. Fenton's on Beale street. Reports will be made by the delegates who attended the New Bedford Convention.

The second regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance, connected with the Wollastan Unitarian church, will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 15th at 2.30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Dr. Fred C. Merrill, 283 Fayette street, near Brook street.

The ladies of the Methodist church are to give a harvest supper in the vestry on Wednesday evening at 6.30 o'clock.

Next Sunday evening at 6 o'clock there will be a harvest concert at the Methodist church. All are invited to attend.

Republican Caucusse.

The Republican caucus to nominate a candidate for mayor, candidates for councilmen, school committee and elect ward committees will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 5, the day following the state election. That the caucuses will be lively there can be no doubt. As far as now known there will be but two Republican candidates for mayor, viz: Charles M. Bryant the present mayor and ex-councilman Elisha Packard. It has been rumored that ex-councilman Frederick L. Jones the regular party nominee last year would again be a candidate, but he informed a representative of the Ledger that if Mr. Packard had decided to become a candidate he should not.

Wants No Debate.

Edward J. Sandberg, one of the Republican candidates for Representative, will not accept Mr. Faxon's invitation to take part in joint debate. He does not see the necessity of it. Every one in Quincy he says knows the candidates, and if Mr. De Normandie had been nominated, as Mr. Faxon had a running mate for him, he would not be trying to have a joint debate. Mr. Sandberg did not believe any of the candidate would accept Mr. Faxon offer, unless it was the two socialists.

Want Bail Raised.

Frederick E. Betts, who was convicted on nine counts for defrauding customers through the United States mail, and who appealed his case, was in the United States district court this morning when the matter of raising his bail from $5,000 to $10,000 was argued. The U. S. authorities ask that the bail be raised.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Macdonald are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby boy born Oct. 14th, weight nine and a half pounds.

Where Do They Stand?

Editors Daily Ledger:

In the Ledger of yesterday I notice a communication, entitled "Do not commit yourself," in reference to the proposition of Mr. Faxon for a public meeting where our candidates for the legislature should express their views upon the important questions of the day. Now I think Mr. Faxon's idea is an excellent one. Here we have nine candidates. Where do they stand and what do they represent? Why should we vote for one any more than another?

I think that each candidate should state his position on all the important questions that concern the people of the State, and in doing so he is not obliged to commit himself to any particular measure or act that may come before the General court.

As for the temperance question, that is no one man's "whim or hobby," but one of the great issues of the day, and as Mr. Faxon asks that each speaker shall devote only one-third of his time to that question, I consider that he is not at all unfair.

This idea of supporting a candidate for office because he is a "good fellow," and all that, does not always result in the most good for a community. The voters have a right to know the views of any candidate upon public questions, and a candidate who is unwilling to state his position, is unworthy of the support of any man. A.

Big Haul of Herring.

Some of the shore boats which had their nets off Braces Cove were surprised on going to them yesterday, to find them sunk. They soon learned that the cause was the immense amount of herring which they had caught. The crews found it impossible to do anything with them, and a lighter which went out could also do nothing, but after much labor, the nets or part of them, were secured one by one, and picked, the catch of three boats amounting to 125 barrels.—Gloucester Daily Times.

☞Rev. L. R. Streeter, pastor of a Methodist church at New Haven, Conn., created a sensation on Sunday, by declaring that labor unions and demands for shorter hours, if continued, will eventually carry the country back to the dark ages. He characterized labor unions as an un-American and said that it took from a non-union man the right to earn a living.

—Colonel William H. Oakes of the Fifth Infantry, M. V. M., widely known in military and business circles, was knocked down and run over by a fire engine in Charlestown, Sunday evening, and his left collar bone was broken in two places.

—An example of how money easily got is easily spent may be seen in the case of Tod Sloam, once king of jockeys. At one time he made in one season in England $375,000 and now is in Paris without a cent.

☞Now is the time to use printer's ink on the elm and apple trees, before the heavy frosts. opl

TOYS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Some Novelties of the Christmas Season's Trade.

ATHLETIC GAMES IN BIG DEMAND

Fully Equipped Gymnasium, on a Small Scale, Can Be Bought For the Children—Large Output of Pingpong Accessories—Imitation Billiards For Youthful Players.

Although it wants some time of Santa Claus season, Christmas toys are already on the market, says the New York Times. All summer long the creators of children's novelties have been at work, and the retailer is laying in his stock. The keynote this year is to be sensibleness in the matter of toy selection. Santa Claus has been at work on a variety of things intended to promote the health of the child as well as to amuse him; hence athletic games are in the majority.

You will be able to buy a complete gymnasium on a small scale for the use of the child this year, including everything that goes to make up the paraphernalia of muscle development. There are patent reversible wall sets, the weights of which are dumbbells and may be detached and used separately. There are punching bags that may be used either on a bracket or on a floor and ceiling rope. There are parallel bars that may be converted into vaulting horses. There is even a punching bag and football combination.

There are geographical puzzles which take in our new oversea possessions, teaching the names of cities and towns therein. There are maps which, when placed together, form themselves into miniatures of Manila, Porto Rico and Cuba, but they are not affairs which are easily pieced together, so that the child will need to have at least a smattering of the topography of these countries before he will be able to construct the maps thereof.

Most of the leading novelties this year are intended to furnish amusement for the elders as well as the youngsters. So, while a child will undoubtedly be fascinated with some of the games planned on the order of billiards and pool, so also will be the older members of the family, for some skill is required to manipulate many of the games. One of these games has even attained to the dignity of composition balls and chalked cues for shooting them into the pockets at the corners of the table. The game is different from that which is played in public halls, however. The balls are placed differently on the table, and the counting is not the same.

Games generally are in demand, and, judging by the fact that one firm alone has placed orders for 100,000 sets of pingpong, or table tennis, that game is to be the popular indoor innovation this winter. Another dealer whose orders are nearly as large as those of the dealer just mentioned says that there has been no falling off in the popularity of the game and that it will be in even greater vogue this winter than it was last year.

The classic building block is to be sold in even greater variety than ever before, and there are specimens of stone, cement, wood and other construction. Kites are also to be awarded the good little boy—not the old fashioned affairs that have to be adjusted with long tails, but great box kites, like those used by the United States weather bureau, to which the youngster may attach Leyden jars and do some experimenting on his own account. Malay kites are also on sale, some of them seven feet high, but so easily handled that a boy under ten may fly them from the housetop without danger of being pulled from his perch.

For the little girls there are dolls—the mothering instinct is always assertive—rag dolls that will not break. The chief novelty in this line includes two dolls in one. It is planned to enable the child to practice a little magic, to the great surprise of her friends. For instance, she shows them a doll dressed in blue. Placing it behind her back, she brings forth instantly a black pickaninny dressed in red. In either case she has apparently only one doll.

How does she manage it? Under the skirts of the white doll, which has no legs, there are the head and bust of the pickaninny doll. By catching hold of the head of this black doll the skirts immediately fall down over the white doll's head, the arms hanging down beyond the covered head and making the necessary feet.

Freak toys are not to be in vogue this winter. Those that are sold are in the hands of the fakirs and will be obtainable only on the sidewalks. The leading novelty in this line is a rubber case, which, when inflated, looks like a monstrous Frankfurter sausage and which, when allowed to leave the hand, flies swiftly up into the air, pursuing a gyrating course.

It loses air as it flies, however, and soon comes down again near where it was set off. A curious feature of the sale of this toy is that the fakir having it in charge employs a corps of assistants to chase the recalcitrant balloons and bring them back to him. The crowd that gathers also loves to chase the things on its own account, and there is consequently a great deal of excitement in the immediate neighborhood of the balloon seller.

Quite a Fullback.

The 250 pound student from Iowa who is being talked of as a probable center for Harvard's football eleven looks in the newspaper pictures of him to be broad enough, says the Boston Transcript, to play center and both ends at the same time.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

Tennis Tournament.

The first annual tennis tournament, open to all the girls of the Quincy High School Athletic Association, was held on the grounds of the Association from Oct. 6 to Oct. 13. The grounds contain two grass courts and the basket ball field, which, through the kindness of Commissioner Knowlton, were put in good condition by the steam roller. Much interest was shown in the game, and the opportunity now offered, will, it is hoped, develop many good players before the next meeting.

Scrofula

It is commonly inherited.

Few are entirely free from it.

Pale, weak, puny children are afflicted with it in nine cases out of ten, and many adults suffer from it.

Common indications are bunches in the neck, abscesses, cutaneous eruptions, inflamed eyelids, sore ears, rickets, catarrh, wasting, and general debility.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Eradicate it, positively and absolutely. This statement is based on the thousands of permanent cures these medicines have wrought.

"My daughter had scrofula, with eleven sores on her neck and about her ears. Hood's Sarsaparilla was highly recommended and she took it and was cured. She is now in good health." MRS. J. H. JONES, Parker City, Ind.

CAR BECAME DETACHED

Caused the Death of Two Daring Aerial Navigators

DE BRADSKY'S EXPERIMENT

Appears to Have Been Successful Until Wires by Which Car Was Suspended to Balloon Gave Way—Inventor and Engineer Crushed

Paris, Oct. 14.—DeBradsky, the aeronaut, and a companion, M. Morin, were killed by falling from a dirigible balloon yesterday. The catastrophe sent a thrill of horror through Paris, following the disaster to the Brazilian aeronaut, August Severo, who was killed May 12 last, and whose balloon started from the same shed in a southern quarter of Paris as did De Bradsky's balloon yesterday.

The principle of the latter's ship had been warmly discussed and its ascent was awaited with the keenest interest. A number of aeronauts, friends of De Bradsky, and the latter's wife were present at the start. Mme. De Bradsky, though anxious that her husband should demonstrate the success of his invention, witnessed his departure with considerable emotion, especially as the conversation of the spectators turned on the fatal ending of Severo's experiment.

De Bradsky first tried the ascentional screw situated below the car, and the airship, held by ropes, rose easily and maintained its equilibrium. De Bradsky was satisfied and said he would maneuver over the drilling ground opposite the Trocadero. A whistle was blown, men released the ropes, the propelling screw behind was set in motion and the airship was pointed in the proper direction.

But suddenly a southwest wind sprang up and the airship swerved to the northeast instead of to the northwest. Crossing the main boulevards the airship executed a number of evolutions, but continued northward with the wind, eventually disappearing over the great white basilica of the Church of the Sacred Heart on top of the hill of Montmatre. The aeronaut's wife and their friends waited at the shed from 8 till 10 o'clock and grew anxious at his prolonged absence.

When the balloon was perceived at an immense height this increased the anxiety, as it was known the airship was never intended to rise to such a point. It was, however, merely the inflated envelope which drifted back across Paris after the accident had relieved it of the weight of the car. A few minutes later a telegram arrived with the news of the disaster.

An eye-witness named Aubert gave the following account of the accident: "I was standing on the steps of my building yard when I heard a voice calling. I looked up and saw an airship 100 yards in the air. Morin was leaning out of the car and asked through a megaphone where was a suitable spot to descend. I indicated a place in the neighborhood and the airship proceeded in the direction I had indicated. A few instants later I saw the balloon turn sharply and at the same moment I heard a noise like the tearing of cloth. The piano wires attaching the front of the car to the balloon had broken. Other wires followed suit, the car became detached and it fell to the ground 200 yards distant. The balloon itself bounded up in the air and disappeared. I hurried to the spot and found De Bradsky dead and terribly bruised beneath the motor. Morin was lying under the remainder of the car. He lived but a few moments."

M. De Bradsky was a Hungarian baron, 36 years of age, rich and clever, and had been in the diplomatic service. He made his first ascension in 1901. Morin was his engineer. He leaves a widow and three children.

Lachambre, the constructor of the airship, says he had no confidence in the mechanical part of the airship, but says the balloon had perfect stability and constituted real progress, inasmuch as there was no pitching or sudden shocks. The defects were that the car was too light and that the motor and guiding screw were too weak.

Siamese Prince at Annapolis

Annapolis, Oct. 14.—The Crown Prince of Siam and suite arrived here yesterday and were driven to the naval academy, where they were formally welcomed. A salute of 21 guns was fired in honor of the nation's guest, who reviewed the battalion of midshipmen. Subsequently the prince and his party were taken through the academy buildings. The party returned to Washington last evening.

Herbert Presents Credentials

Washington, Oct. 14.—Sir Michael Herbert, the new British ambassador, was presented to the president yesterday by Secretary Hay. The presentation took place at the temporary White House, and this was probably the first occasion since the White House has been occupied as the presidential mansion that the credentials of an ambassador or minister have been received outside of its doors.

Railroad Buys Coal Lands

Chicago, Oct. 14.—The management of the St. Paul railroad has just completed the purchase of 25,000 acres of rich coal lands in Illinois at an expense of nearly $2,000,000 and is still holding options on several thousands more. The purpose of the management is to provide the St. Paul system with fuel for all time to come.

A WASTE OF ENERGY

For Colombia to Seek Judgment Against the Panama Railway

Washington, Oct. 14.—It is stated here that in the event that the Colombian government succeeds in obtaining judgment against the Panama Railway company on account of its failure to carry Colombian soldiers and munitions of war that the railway company undoubtedly would have the right of reclamation against the government of the United States, as it was by the orders of our naval officers that the company acted as it did. The United States in turn would look to the government of Colombia for repayment of the judgment, holding that the action taken was in strict accordance with the treaty stipulation by which the United States is bound to maintain free transit across the isthmus, and this right of reclamation on the part of the United States would be exercised.

The Macedonian Revolution

London, Oct. 14.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Volo, Greece, says 22 villages in Macedonia are in complete revolt and that half a battalion of Turkish troops has been annihilated by insurgents, in the Krezna defile.

This news, continues the dispatch, emanates from sources which have hitherto minimized the trouble. The situation consequently appears suddenly to have grown worse.

Berlin, Oct. 14.—A dispatch from Sofia announces that the Macedonian insurgents have been victorious along the left bank of the Struma river and that they have seized the mountain pass between Melnik and Serres.

Peculiar and Terrible Accident

Binghamton, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Charles B. Smith, a bricklayer employed on the new Kilmer building, yesterday fell from a scaffold erected at the sixth story which was wrecked by some stonework falling on it from above. In his descent, Smith's neck came in contact with the telephone and electric wires about on a level with the fourth story, completely severing his head from his body, the spring of the wire throwing the head up on the roof, a floor higher than the scene of the accident.

Cholera Invasion Unlikely

Washington, Oct. 14.—The army medical officers say there is little danger of the bringing of cholera to this country by the army transports from Manila. The Sherman, which arrived at San Francisco last Thursday, reported that she had seven cases of cholera since leaving Manila. The last case occurred 21 days before the transport arrived at San Francisco and the disease died out before the ship arrived in quarantine.

Two Big Mills Remain Out

Huntsville, Ala., Oct. 14.—Several Huntsville cotton mills have signed the agreement to enter the Southern Textile company which has been formed recently in the south. The Merrimack Manufacturing company, which expects next year to spend more than $1,500,000 on new mills here, and the Dallas mill, that has spent $600,000 recently in additions, it is said, have refused to become parties to the merger.

Cars Guarded by Military

Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 14.—The official statement of Sheriff Gill in connection with the strike on the Hudson Valley railway, in which he said that he would not require the withdrawal of the National Guardsmen until the strike is over, has served to add to the determination of the strikers to protract the struggle. Cars were operated yesterday under military protection at different points.

Monarch of Her Class

New York, Oct. 14.—The new oil tank steamer New York, which is the largest vessel of that type in the world, arrived in port last night from Shields after a quick maiden voyage of 13 days. The vessel, which was built for the American Petroleum company of Rotterdam, has a carrying capacity of 8800 tons on 25 feet draft. She is 428 feet long, 54 feet 6 inches wide and the depth moulded to the upper deck is 32 feet.

IT'S THE TRUTH

Tell a man it's a food and he doesn't want to pay for it. Tell him it's a medicine and he says it doesn't look like it. Then tell him it's both a food and a medicine and he thinks you're playing some game on him.

Yet these are the facts about Scott's Emulsion of pure cod-liver oil. It is the cream of cod-liver oil, the richest and most digestible of foods. The food for weak stomachs. The food for thin bodies and thin blood.

But that's only half the story. Scott's Emulsion is also a good medicine. It gives new life and vigor to the whole system and especially to the lungs.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

Motorman May Lose His Life as Result of Collision of Trolley Cars

Newburyport, Mass., Oct. 14.—A head-on collision took place on the Plum Island division of the Citizens' railway last night. Motorman Edward J. Brown was perhaps fatally injured, while three passengers received severe bruises. Brown was running a large vestibule car at a high rate of speed, when he suddenly discovered another car coming rapidly towards him. The motorman of the second car managed to get it under control, and stopped it, but the brakes on the vestibule failed to stop its speed, and it plunged with terrific force into the other car.

The entire front platform and vestibule were demolished and Brown was pinned in between the cars. After considerable work he was removed, and it was found that he had one leg fractured and several other severe bruises about the head and body. It is thought that he is also internally injured. All four of the injured people were brought to a local hospital for treatment.

It is said that the vestibule car was on time at one of the turnouts, but instead of waiting there for the other car, it continued on for another turnout. It had not gone 400 feet before the other car showed up and the collision resulted.

Witness Knew Nothing of Bribery

Woburn, Mass., Oct. 14.—The committee appointed to investigate the charges of bribery brought by President Beady of the board of aldermen against Alderman Greaney held its third session last night. Charles F. Remington was called as the first witness, but denied that he had ever heard C. S. Cummings offer Alderman Greaney $1000 for his vote on the street railway franchise. Counsel tried to make Remington admit that he had heard an offer of some kind, but it proved unsuccessful. The committee will continue the hearing tomorrow evening.

Endeavorers Gather at Boston

Boston, Oct. 14.—Ten thousand Christian Endeavorers of New England are expected to be in attendance at the All-New England convention at Tremont Temple today. Not since the great convention of 1895 has Boston had an influx of so great a body of Christian workers. As a wind-up to the deliberations the visitors will take a side excursion Friday to Concord and Lexington. The Christian Endeavor chorus gave an entertainment in Tremont Temple last night.

The Republicans will support Senator Dillingham, and his re-election is assured by the Republican majority in both branches.

He is making a tour of the United States, investigating various industries, with a view to introducing modern systems into India.

Makes Cripples Walk

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Before an audience that crowded the amphitheatre at the college of physicians and surgeons yesterday, Professor Adolph Lorenz of Vienna performed seven operations for congenital dislocation of the hip. All the patients were children and all were suffering from the same affliction which Professor Lorenz came to America to treat in little Lolita Armour.

No Earthquake Casualties

Washington, Oct. 14.—The navy department is in receipt of many anxious inquiries from relatives and friends of persons on the island of Guam, in regard to the recent earthquake there. The department wishes it to be known that none of its advices to date tell of a single casualty as a result of the shock.

REJECTION IS LIKELY

Operators' Proposition Does Not Meet Approval

MITCHELL'S PRIVATE VIEWS

Not Yet Made Public, but It Is Considered Certain That He Will Not Sanction It—No Prospect of Immediate Raising of the Coal Embargo

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 15.—From a thorough canvass of the situation as it now exists there is every indication that the new arbitration plan proposed by the presidents of the coal companies for ending the miners' strike will not be accepted in its present form.

There is a division of opinion among the strikers, but there is no doubt a majority feel that the offer to have President Roosevelt select an arbitration commission along the lines suggested by the operators is not fair and that it unduly limits the president in making up the board. The miners, it is safe to say, however, will abide by the advice of their national president, in whose judgment they have the utmost confidence. President Mitchell declines to say how he personally looks upon the proposition, but last night he gave to the press the following statement:

"I fully appreciate with what anxiety the people of our country are awaiting the end of the coal strike. The coal operators have not addressed the Miners' union or its officers in making their public statement. It is, therefore, impossible for me to state the attitude of the miners at this time. I am now, as I have always been, deeply solicitous of the interests of the public and the welfare of the mine workers who have been on strike for the past five months. A formal statement defining our position and intentions will be issued just as soon as we are in possession of the full meaning of the proposition of the operators."

This statement was made by him at 8 o'clock, after a silence lasting all day. He had no intention of making it until the correspondents representing the newspapers all over the country called on him in a body and informed him that the general public desired to have an answer to the proposition of the operators. After giving it he was asked many questions regarding the attitude of the men and the probability of the acceptance or rejection of the new offer, but he had no reply to make to any of these questions.

His attention was called to the fact that most of the information from Washington indicated that the proposition would be accepted and that the strike was near an end, but he maintained that neither his officers nor the rank and file of the men had done anything to cause such an impression to go out.

There will be a conference today between Mitchell, the three district presidents and Secretary-Treasurer Wilson. It is expected that the sentiment of all the strikers will be known today and that action will be taken accordingly. There is talk of a convention being called, but there is nothing definite on which to base this talk. When Mitchell was asked if he and the district officers had power to end the strike, he said that it is a rule of the organization that no settlement can be made by the officers of the union without the consent of a delegate convention. It is practically certain that Mitchell's advice will be followed in the conference. While he has not said a word as to what he will do, it is freely predicted by those who understand the situation that he will advise a refusal of the proposition.

The situation around the collieries was partially lost sight of because of Monday night's developments, but there was no material change from that of Monday. The arbitration talk has acted as a check upon the movement of men returning to work and it is probable there will be no great movement in this direction until some definite conclusion is reached in the arbitration scheme. The prospect for a coal supply to meet the rapidly approaching cold weather is by no means bright. If the miners should accept the arbitration plan of the operators it would take at least two weeks before the details of sending them back could be worked out. As the outlook for arbitration is rather dark, it can be safely said that there will be little more coal on the market for some time to come than there is at present.

It developed here last night that Nathan Strauss of New York, with the assistance of J. P. Morgan, has been endeavoring for the past few days to end the strike. Strauss had received the assurance from Morgan that if the men would return to work that he (Morgan) would see justice was done the miners, but he did not care to have anything to do with the union. The proposition was laid before Mitchell and he refused it on the ground that he would not advise the men to return to work on the hope that Morgan would do something for them. The representatives of Strauss received the final answer yesterday and they gave out the information last night.

Washington Officials Mum

Washington, Oct. 15.—All efforts to ascertain at the White House whether President Roosevelt has communicated to President Mitchell the proposition of the mine operators with a view to the resumption of work are unavailing. The officials there decline absolutely to say anything on the subject at this time for publication.

Manufacturers Have a Plan

New York, Oct. 15.—The regular weekly meeting of the coal operators yesterday was preceded by a conference with a committee of the National Association of Manufacturers and at the conference the salient points of a plan to settle the anthracite coal strike were submitted by the manufacturers. A member of the manufacturers' committee said that he knew the association's plan would be acceptable to Mr. Mitchell. The same member of the committee said that the manufacturers' plan would be considered by the operators if the mine workers reject the plan submitted to the president.

Indemnity Halved by Mexican Coin

The Hague, Oct. 15.—The arbitration court in the "pious fund" case has condemned Mexico to pay the United States $1,820,000 in Mexican currency.

This verdict is in effect a compromise. The United States claimed upwards of $4,000,000 and its representatives argued that it should be paid in gold. The award is for only $1,820,000 and this is further halved by the provision that payment shall be made in Mexican silver worth only 50 cents on the dollar in any gold standard country.

Fulfilled Requirements of Law

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Since the operation upon the child of Ogden Armour last Sunday for a congenital dislocation of the hip, Dr. Lorenz of Vienna has been besieged with appeals to operate on others afflicted with the same disease, and the state board of health yesterday notified the professor that he should take out a license if he intends to remain here and practice his profession. Dr. Lorenz later appeared before the state board of health and secured a license to practice his profession in Illinois.

American Generals Entertained

London, Oct. 15.—Generals Corbin, Young and Wood visited the British camp at Aldershot yesterday as the guests of General French and inspected all the soldiers' quarters, witnessed evolutions by a light horse battery of artillery and an interesting exhibition of setting up drill, exercises in athletics and swimming competitions. The visiting generals dined with War Secretary Brodrick last evening and met Lord Kitchener.

Madrid, Oct. 15.—A cabinet council has considered a petition presented by residents of Bilbao asking for the dismissal of the charges against Sabino Arana, which arose from his having sent a congratulatory cablegram to President Roosevelt last spring on the granting of Cuban independence. The ministers decided not to interfere in the case and that it must be judged by the courts of justice.

Voluntary Increase In Wages

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 15.—A notice was posted in the general shops of the Norfolk and Western railway here yesterday announcing an increase of 2 cents an hour in the wages of all machinists, machinists' helpers and all laborers. This increase affects about 2000 men and was made voluntarily. The wages of the trackmen of the company were recently increased materially.

Another Commoner Convicted

London, Oct. 15.—John O'Donnell, Nationalist, M. P., has been sentenced by the crimes act court at Birr to three months' imprisonment at hard labor and to an additional three months in default of bail for good behavior. O'Donnell was convicted of intimidation and inciting to boycotting.

Sewell Succeeds Schroeder

Washington, Oct. 15.—Orders have been issued by the navy department directing Commander Sewell to proceed to Guam and assume the duties of commandant of the naval station at that place, relieving Commander Schroeder, ordered home to await orders.

More Disorder at Geneva

Geneva, Oct. 15.—There were renewed disorders here last evening on the part of the street car line employes who had not been reinstated in their positions. Troops restored order and the ringleaders were arrested.

GREAT CORPORATIONS

Their Prosperity No Reason For Their Destruction

ABUSES DOUBTLESS EXIST

Attorney Knox Discusses Commercial Clause of Trust Problem—Should Be No Discrimination In Prices and No Preferences In Service

Pittsburg, Oct. 15.—Attorney General Knox addressed the members of the Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Schenley here last night. There were 700 guests present. The subject of his address was "The Commerce Clause of the Constitution and the Trusts." Mr. Knox spoke in part as follows:

"These great combinations, now numbering thousands, are the instrumentalities of modern commercial activity. Their number and size alone appall no healthy American. No right thinking man desires to impair the efficiency of the great corporations as instrumentalities of national commercial development. Because they are great and prosperous is no sufficient reason for their destruction. If that greatness and prosperity are not the result of the defiance of the natural rights or recorded will of the people, there is no just cause of complaint. That there are evils and abuses in trust promotions, purposes, organizations, methods, management and effects none questions except those who have profited by those evils. That all or any of these abuses are to be found in every large organization called a trust no one would assert who valued his reputation for sane judgment.

"The conspicuous noxious features of trusts existent and possible are these: Overcapitalization, lack of publicity of operation, discrimination in prices to destroy competition, insufficient personal responsibility of officers and directors for corporate management, tendency to monopoly and lack of appreciation in their management of their relations to the people, for whose benefit they are permitted to exist.

"Corporations and joint stock or other associations, depending upon any statutory law for their existence or privileges, trading beyond their own states, should be required to do business in every state and locality upon precisely the same terms and conditions. There should be no discrimination in prices; no preferences in service. Such corporations serving the public as carriers and in similar capacities should be compelled to keep the avenues of commerce free and open to all upon the same terms and to observe the law as to its injunctions against stifling competition. Moreover, corporations upon which the people depend for the necessaries of life should be required to conduct their business so as to regularly and reasonably supply the public needs. They should be subject to visitorial supervision, and full and accurate information as to their operations should be made regularly at reasonable intervals. Secrecy in the conduct and results of operation is unfair to the nonmanaging stockholders, and should, as well for reasons of state, be prohibited by law.

"The extent to which legislative control over commercial activities should be exercised is, of course, a question for legislative wisdom. We have the experience of the other nations to guide us in determining how far the delicate and mysterious rules of trade can be interfered with by positive statutes without injury. That experience teaches us that the least interference consistent with the preservation of essential rights should exist. Arbitrary regulations that restrain free intercourse are usually found to be unwise.

"Primarily it is for the congress to decide whether it has the power, and whether and to what extent it will execute it. The time never was when the English-speaking people permitted the articles necessary for their existence to be monopolized or controlled, and all devices to that end found condemnation in the body of their laws. It is difficult to improve upon the great unwritten code known as the common law. Under its salutary guaranties and restraints the English-speaking people have attained their wealth and power. It condemns monopoly, and contracts in restraint of trade as well. The distinction, however, between restraints that are reasonable in view of all the circumstances and those which are unreasonable, is recognized and has been followed in this country by the courts. This distinction makes a rule that may be practically applied, and preserves the rational mean between unrestrained commerce and the absolute freedom of contract."

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

The Training of Children is, naturally, the most absorbing, as it is the most important of a mother's duties.

We do not wish to shock, but are not most children brought up much as if they would develop of themselves all the nice qualities that are hoped for them?

"Just get The Delineator"

If you cared very much about training fine animals you would read the authorities and study the thing.

Isn't it taking things for granted when mothers think they are born child-trainers?

Much of wisdom has been written on the subject.

Grace Peckham Murray knows a good deal about it. She has written a series of articles for THE DELINEATOR that every mother may read with profit.

Good Afternoon.

No candidate need be backward in accepting Mr. Faxon's offer. As he says no person will be permitted to ask questions; and the candidates and the presiding officer will be the only speakers at Music hall.

In view of the large majority for no-license in this city last December, 1288, the several candidates for the legislature should have no fear in declaring themselves in favor of local prohibition whenever an opportunity is offered them.

It is announced that Judge Dewey, one of the best known judges of Boston, is to resign in November and resume his law business. His reason is [illegible] judge in recent years has been more discussed than Judge Dewey because of his startling decisions and criticism of certain police methods.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Reports from the strike region as to mining conditions vary so greatly that it is difficult for the average outsider properly to judge of them. For instance, the miners contend that, taking the year together, the average wage does not exceed $1.10 per day. On the other hand the operators claim that the wages of the miners amount to $6.00 per day, out of which they pay their helpers $2.00. If that is the case the general situation is befogged by associating the ordinary lumpers with skilled miners. At any rate $1.10 a day is not enough for any man who has a family to support, whether he be a skilled or an unskilled employe.—Waltham Free Press.

☞ To the most of the people of Vermont the bill introduced in the Legislature last week by Representative Porter of Wilmington will commend itself at once. The bill is for the increase of the taxation on railroad, telephone, telegraph and express Co.'s and other corporations. The provisions for the proposed enactment are for an increase of 1 to 7 per cent. on these corporations and the experience of the past few years had led others besides Mr. Porter to believe the corporations are fully capable of standing the increased taxation, without injustice. If the bill should pass as it now stands there would be a general increase of corporation taxes amounting to about 33 1-3 per cent. The move is toward the abolition of the direct state tax and is along the same lines as proposed by Gov. McCullough in his inaugural address. A similar measure passed the House two years ago but was slaughtered in the Senate. There is a better chance for it this year.—Barre Times.

☞ The experiment introduced in the Onondaga academy (Syracuse, N. Y.,) of taking the Herald as a textbook for teaching lessons in what we may call the art of intelligent newspaper reading is worthy of attention. In its higher utility the press is a daily register of contemporary history — the only history that multitudes of people read. It is also a cheap and convenient text book of science, for it records great scientific discoveries and explains in untechnical language their bearing and meaning. It is a practical guide to the study of geography, for with the telegraph as its servant, the entire globe is embraced in its field of operation, and in a single week it "connects" its readers, to use a telephonic phrase, with a coronation in Madrid, a revolution in Hayti, a prodigious catastrophe in Martinique, the visit of a French president to a Russian czar and the attempted assassination of an Austrian emperor. To the business man it is invaluable, for without it he would be sadly ignorant of the latest developments in industry, trade and finance, which mark this as the age of commercial wonders. In teaching the pupils in his charge to treat the newspaper as an aid and stimulent in daily studies Principal Bailey has sent an excellent example, we think, to other instructors.—Syracuse Herald.

☞ The occasional copies of the New York Journal to which our attention is called are treating President Roosevelt with the same shameless and lying indecency which the same publication displayed toward President McKinley just prior to his assassination; a course which brought upon that infamous publication universal execration.—Waltham Tribune.

☞ The coal fields in Pennsylvania will be good for only fifty years more, and if they lie unworked this year it will simply defer the date of their exhaustion one year. If the present coal strike should last 5 years the coal that now underlies certain sections would not depreciate in value nor disappear. On the contrary, it would become more valuable year by year and the cessation in mining would have to stop anyway. The men, therefore, who own the coal fields are entirely indifferent as to the outcome of the strike. Their coal is still there. Its value appreciates from year to year when it lies in the earth. They are not needing the money it represents. They can afford to wait until conditions for digging it are favorable, secure in the knowledge that as time moves on it will be turned into cash." — Congressman Lacey at Red Oak, Ia.

Offer Accepted.

Mr. Henry H. Faxon:

Dear Sir: In replying to your generous and public spirited offer to secure at your own expense the use of Music Hall and invite the nine representative candidates of the fifth Norfolk district to attend, with an equal division of time that they "may be given an opportunity to enlighten the voters concerning their views on the important issues of the day," one third of each speaker's time to be devoted to the subject of temperance and Sabbath observance:

In behalf of the Socialists party of Quincy, we heartily thank you for this most generous proposition, and we cordially accept. We vote also that you add a condition, viz: That to insure the realization of this plan six of the nine candidates must notify you in writing of their acceptance, within one week from date of invitation.

We sincerely trust that this condition will not prove to be a hindrance to the execution of this unique and meritorious plan. We would respectfully suggest that in the event of any unforeseen obstacle or in case this condition is not wholly complied with, that it would be agreeable to us if you would allow an equal division of time among such candidates as may report on the platform at the stated hour of opening the meeting.

We feel constrained to make this suggestion to prevent the possibilities of failure or cancellation of this timely and important meeting, as such an opportunity would be very acceptable to us to state briefly our position on the temperance question, believing as we do, that the Socialists have the only philosophical and complete solution of the liquor problem.

Yours respectfully,
Peter M. Carlson,
Levi H. Turner.

DIVISION 18, A. O. H.

Opens a Five Days' Fair at Hancock Hall.

A fair under the auspices of Division 18 was successfully opened at Hancock hall Tuesday evening and will remain open every evening this week.

Booths for the sale of useful and fancy articles and refreshments were arranged on both sides of the hall. They were very prettily trimmed with bunting, green being the prevailing color. The American and Irish flags occupied prominent positions about the hall. These tables were in charge of the ladies from the several Auxiliaries who proved themselves excellent sales ladies. So well did they set forth the merit of their wares that many were disposed of the first night.

The ladies in charge of the several tables were as follows:

Auxiliary 5—Mrs. John O'Brien, Mrs. James Collins.

Auxiliary 8—Mrs. William E. Brown, Mrs. John Lyons, Mrs. Michael Hartrey, Mrs. John Connors, Miss Cecelia Kelgan, Miss Margaret Keegan, Miss Annie Keegan.

Auxiliary 10—Mrs. Thomas Cotter, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Powers, Mrs. Doherty, Mrs. Pratt, Mrs. Tanner.

Refreshments—Mrs. McClusky, Mrs. Powers, Mrs. Murray.

The City band was present and gave a concert in front of the hall and later in the hall.

The fair was formally opened by Mayor Bryant who spoke briefly wishing it success. Other speakers were State President, John A. Ryan; Hon. William S. McNary;

State Chaplain,—Rev. Fr. Chittick; and Matthew Cummings, Court President of Suffolk county.

An entertainment will be given each evening under the direction of the several auxiliaries.

Wollaston Unitarian Club.

The Wollaston Unitarian club opened the new year most auspiciously at its meeting last evening. A large number were present and every one went home with the feeling that if this first meeting is a sample of the meetings which are to follow, the members of the club are going to have an instructive and inspiring year.

Rabbi Fleiher and the Rev. Mr. Dole spoke upon the subject of Democracy in a way that held the attention of all, emphasizing not only the glories of [illegible]

No meeting of the Unitarian club is complete without the informal discussion of the subject by the members. This was participated in by Mr. McKay, Supt. Parlin, F. W. Pratt, Rev. Mr. Shepard, Dr. Willard, Mr. Bishop and Mr. Page.

President Hatch announced a concert which is to be given under the auspices of the Unitarian club, in the church, Wednesday evening, Oct. 29.

The next meeting of the club will be held Nov. 11th, when Mr. Michael Murray will speak on Citizensbip. It is hoped that the Rev. E. A. Horton will also be present.

Interesting Sketch.

At the Wollaston Congregatioal church Sunday morning, the Rev. Mr. Chase gave an interesting sketch, historical and descriptive of the mountain district of eastern Tennesee, making a plea for a special collection for the American Missionary Association. A goodly sum was contributed.

The vesper service was well patronized and the singing by the choir was very good. These services will be given regularly through the winter.

Bail Increased to $15,000.

Frederick E. Betts appeared before Judge Lowell in the United States district court Tuesday morning and was held in $15,000 for further appearance. All other bail in cases against him was discharged, John H. Dinegan became his surety. J. M. Fisher was held in $5,000 his personal recognizance being taken and his bail discharged.

—Pretty soon women will have to stay at home nights or stop wearing bags or carrying purses for the thief is abroad in Boston and its suburbs. A particularly bold robbery was that of Sunday evening on Newbury street, Boston. A Providence man and his wife were walking quietly along when a young man stepped up to the lady, seized her hand bag and was off before either realized what had happened.

—Counterfeit American silver dollars are being made in China and circulated in Manila extensively. The dollars are of silver, and of standard weight, but the stamping of the word "liberty" on the goddess is not in accordance with the genuine dollar.

—Gen. Fred Grant who returned Monday from the Philippines reports everything peaceful and quiet on the island. As the people become educated there is less trouble and Americans can now venture out without arms. As a whole the natives seem contented under the new rule.

Wollaston Glee Club.

The Glee club had its first rehearsal of the season on Monday evening, Oct. 13 of this week. The club counts itself fortunate in having for its director Mr. William Lester Bates, who gave such satisfaction last year. A number of names were proposed and the club bids fair to have an increased membership and as the number is limited it would be well for those who are desirous of joining to do so as soon as possible.

The concerts were so successful last season that they will be looked forward to by the music loving public. Much enthusiasm was manifested over the two new pieces taken up Monday evening.

Coal at Wollaston.

A large lump of coal weighing several pounds was found on South Central avenue yesterday afternoon. The coal was tied up with a piece of window cord, leaving enough for a handle. Evidently some one had stolen the precious nugget, but on the way home, becoming frightened, had left his prize by the wayside. The black diamond has been photographed and copies may be obtained by the payment of fifteen cents each. These pictures will grow in value, being mementos of the coal famine of 1902.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

—The coal companies of Boston have been marshaling their forces and today started teams out to peddle coal to the poor people under the direction of the Relief committee. The coal is put up in bags containing a hundred pounds each and two men accompany each team, one to drive and the other to deliver the coal which is to sell at 45 cents a bag.

Royal Arcanum.

John Adams Council, Royal Arcanum, held its regular meeting Monday night. A large number was present to welcome the District Deputy Grand Regent Reynolds of West Somerville.

After the regular exercises were gone through with, a pleasurable entertainment was indulged in. It consisted of speeches, songs and musical selections. The speech of the Deputy was along the line of instruction as to the condition of the order, and he showed how it is steadily growing in numbers and also in influence. Other members spoke of the pleasure they got in meeting R. A. brothers in all parts of the country. A light collation was served after which the brothers wended their way homeward, saying that it was the banner meeting of the year so far.

POSTOFFICE CHANGE.

Wollaston Gets Another Delivery by Carrier.

Postmaster Hammond announces that by a new order which has gone into effect Wollaston was allowed another carrier and that the main part of the ward will hereafter have three deliveries per day instead of two. This necessitates a slight change in the departure of the direct mail from the central office at Quincy.

This change is on the noon mail which formerly closed at 12.30. It now closes at 11.30. The new carrier appointed for Wollaston is John A. McGowan.

The Torpedo Boats.

When congress meets in December, it will be asked to appropriate something like $2,000,000 for the relief of the men who have been building the new torpedo boats. This can be stated positively.

Usually the public resents such a claim as this from a man who has gone into contract with the government and asks relief simply because he has got the little end of the bargain. The story in this case is such, however, that it is certain that Sec. Moody will not go out of his way to fight this claim.

It is true that the men who will ask for money made contracts with the government to build the torpedo destroyers at a certain figure. But as the navy department looks at the matter, the men who went into this business were considering patriotism as well as dollars and cents.

Such was the view of Sec. Long and such is his view today. Sec. Moody takes about the same view of the matter. It seems that the reason that the builders took these contracts was that they were urged to such action by navy officials, who believed that the time had come for a type of torpedo boat that would outclass anything to be found elsewhere in the world. The navy department now thinks that it is in a fair way to get such boats, but because the field was entirely new and untried, each builder had to grope his way along in the dark.

To take a single instance, this new torpedo boat destroyer, the Lawrence, just tried out here by the naval board, embodies certain improvements which are expected to revolutionize the rules of naval architecture, as regards what is technically known as "torsional vibrations"—that is, the vibrations which come from regular motion and which, if continued long enough, will break the most powerful steel ever forged. This discovery will explain why the main propeller shafts in many first class steamships have broken down in mid-ocean after having stood every test that could be devised. But to make that discovery took perhaps years of experimenting and study.

What Sec. Long began and what Sec. Moody is carrying out is to get in the navy a "seagoing" class of torpedo boats—boats that can act as scouts away out in the ocean, that can keep away from the swift cruisers and can carry the news of an arrival of a hostile fleet faster than the swifest cruiser can, while at the same time, under cover of night, they can put a battleship on the bottom of the ocean. This thing has been kept as quiet as possible, because the idea has been to let out as little as possible to the naval intelligence bureaus of other countries.

But as all the work was new, as no such boats were ever built elsewhere, and as the navy department itself only knew what it wanted and not what it should cost, some of the 14 big and little establishments, scattered all over the United States have been pretty badly "let in" for heavy losses in this work. Having started in to build the boats and finding that it was going to cost much more than they dreamed, they went to Sec. Long and asked him to pledge his word that the government would at least pay what these boats would actually cost. Sec. Long naturally said that he had no power to make any such pledge, and that it rested with congress alone to restore the money that the builders laid out.

The navy officers who know most about the whole matter say that the builders have acted pretty heroically and patriotically in spending $2,000,000 out of their own pockets, trusting to the chance that congress will see the matter in the same light that they themselves do. Probably congress, in turn, will refer the matter to the navy department for a report, so that Sec. Moody will really have the adjudication of the whole matter.—Boston Advertiser.

The state road on Quincy avenue will be completed this week.

THE WOMAN WHO WENT FOR A GLASS OF WATER

[Original.]

When the Pacific railroads were new, a great deal of the property along the lines was a wilderness. It was often many miles between stations, and a station was frequently merely a place for people to come from a distance to get aboard the cars.

One evening in December a train approaching one of these sheds—for that is all it was—was flagged with a bandanna handkerchief by four men. The engineer pulled up at the platform, and the men got aboard. They were for a time very well behaved, looking about them evidently with a view to observing their surroundings. The train consisted of a locomotive, a baggage car and a coach. The only passengers were two men, peaceable looking farmers, and two women, apparently their wives.

"See here, Mr. Conductor," said one of the party, "I'm the president of this company jist now, and you're to look to me for orders. I'll trouble you to increase this funereal pace and snake us along to the next station across the divide. You go tell the engineer that I'll give him three hours to make the 112 miles."

"Who are you?" asked the conductor.

"Who am I? I'm Simms."

There was a grim silence. The two farmers cast glances at each other, and their wives got down under the seats. Simms and his gang had terrorized the region for months without being molested. No one either dared or felt disposed to make it his business to hunt them down. A few days before they had entered a town, plundered a bank in broad daylight and taken to the desolate region through which they were traveling.

"Now, we don't want nothing," continued Simms, "but to git on. There's no plunder aboard this train, and we don't want it if there is. Git us to B—— by 9 o'clock, and neither you nor your passengers will be molested."

"All right," said the conductor. "I'll get you through without fail."

One of the gang went forward with the conductor to take position on the locomotive, another stationed himself in the baggage car, while the other two remained among the passengers. The train proceeded on its way as if nothing had happened. Simms at first remained in the coach, but soon got up and went forward, but not until he had called a man to take his place. He was very sharp with his men, cautioning them not to relax their vigilance because they had everything their own way, but they seemed to dread nothing, at least within the train, and indeed there did not appear to be anything to dread. The few train hands aboard moved about at their usual duties, while the farmers and their wives seemed to be dreading every moment that they would be murdered. Darkness came on, and one of the hands lighted the lamps. Simms came into the coach and talked in a low tone with the two robbers there. One of the farmers heard him say: "If this luck holds, we'll be where we can go either of five directions. In this dreary region we'd git starvation sure." Then he went forward again.

It was about 8 o'clock. The two robbers in the passenger coach were sitting talking together. They had taken a position where they could keep the party of farmers before them. The farmers occupied two seats facing each other, the men facing the women and the robbers, the women with their backs to the robbers. The latter had quieted down. One of them got up and walked past the outlaws to the rear of the car. They followed her with their eyes till they saw that she had gone to get a glass of water, then ceased to pay any attention to her. Suddenly two words rang out sharp and clear above the rattle of the train:

"Hands up!"

The order was shouted within a foot of the two robbers' ears. At the same moment the farmers each whipped out a revolver. The robbers' first impulse was to look back. They saw a woman with a revolver in each hand, the muzzles within a few inches of their heads. Then the two farmers approached and disarmed the robbers, while the two women threw off their outside apparel and appeared in men's attire. One of the two robbers gave a yell as a signal for his fellows, but his voice was drowned by the rattle of the train.

Two of the farmers now proceeded to the baggage car. One of them threw open the door, while the other stood with a revolver pointed into the car. The robber there was on the lookout and fired as soon as the door was opened, but as the man who threatened him stood beside instead of before the door he was uninjured. Simms at the time was on the locomotive. Hearing the shot, he was climbing over the coal in the tender to go to the baggage car when the engineer shot him dead. The robber in the baggage car, not receiving assistance, soon yielded to an order to throw up his hands. In five minutes from the time the supposed woman went to get a drink of water three of the gang had been captured and their leader killed.

A vigilance committee had for some time been trying to stop the depredations of Simms and his men, but had failed. The cashier of the bank they had last robbed, a very energetic man, attended to following the gang himself. He tracked them into a region from which he felt sure their quickest and surest plan of exit was to capture a train. This one was purposely prepared. The engineer, conductor and all train hands were armed, and the farmers and their wives were picked men disguised. The leader of the posse was the woman who went for the glass of water. A Pertinent Question

London, Oct. 15.—The Irish Times asks what has become of the $30,000 which Mr. Redmond, M. P., collected in America for the erection of a statue of Parnell in Dublin? "Dublin," says The Times, "is paved with the foundation stones of monuments to patriots which have never got further for lack of funds, but in Parnell's case the money was collected, and no account was ever given to the American subscribers or the Irish public."

Murderers and Robbers

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 15.—Detectives have identified Cary Whitney and Claude O'Brien, held here as suspects for the murder of A. B. Chinn, as the men who did burglary jobs in Louisville and Nashville. Whitney admitted he was guilty of three of these jobs and gave O'Brien away, who denied all.

Another writes: "My little boy 7 years old has been a sufferer for several years, sometimes so bad off that we could not hold him in bed, expecting any moment for him to breathe his last. Doctors did him no good and we had almost given up in despair, when through accident we heard of Schiffmann's Asthma Cure, tried it and it almost instantly relieved him." Mrs. D. C. Harris, Elbow P. ENDEAVORERS GATHER

Delegates From Six States at Boston Convention

A CHRISTIAN COMBINATION

Gave to the World the First Written Constitution Drawn Up For Self-Government—Existence of Present Society of Vast Benefit to All

Boston, Oct. 15.—Four largely attended meetings began yesterday the three days' convention in this city of the Christian Endeavorers of New England. Two of the meetings were held in Tremont Temple, while the other two, devoted to junior work and a congress of workers, took place in smaller halls. But all were enthusiastic and showed that the body had not lost any of its energy. The first meeting in Tremont Temple was in the nature of a welcome to Boston and the state, Rev. A. C. Dixon and Lieutenant Governor Bates being the principal speakers. Rev. H. N. Lathrop, president of the Massachusetts union, presided, and as usual the special feature was the singing by the convention chorus, composed of selected singers, and under the leadership of H. E. Washburn.

The inaugural meeting was started as usual with a praise service which was conducted by Percy S. Foster. A devotional service and singing followed, after which Rev. Dr. Dixon welcomed the delegates from six states to Boston. Then came the state's welcome by Lieutenant Governor Bates, who said:

"Massachusetts owes much to Christian Endeavorers. It was a colony of Christian Endeavorers who in Provincetown harbor gave to the world the first written constitution drawn up by a people for their self-government. It was a band of Christian Endeavorers who landed on Plymouth Rock and, resisting savages and sickness and famine, stayed there and successfully laid the first foundations of this commonwealth.

"This organization is not banded together to run railroads, to mine coal or to make dollars. It is a vast combination of Christian energy, but it is not a monopoly, and it welcomes competition. Through it no man has lost employment, the price of the necessities of life has not been increased, and no man has lost a dollar. It is always anxious to work and places no obstacles in the pathway of others. It never goes on a strike, and never refuses to operate because it cannot have its own way. It has never added to darkness, but has always brought light.

"The old Bay State is richer in truth, in honor, in charity, in lofty ideals, in rugged principles, in noble manhood, and gracious womanhood because of the existence of your society.

"On behalf of the commonwealth, I extend to you her kindest greetings. Your efforts are for the common weal. As Endeavorers, welcome to a state whose people have ever been strugglers; as Christians, welcome to a state where church and state are completely separated, but where government and Christianity are indissolubly joined.

"I congratulate you on the achievements of the past, and on this magnificent convention. From it may your society receive a fresh impulse, that shall strengthen it for the great work in its broadening sphere of usefulness."

The response to these two speeches came from Rev. Russell T. Hall, president of the Connecticut union, while Miss Ella M. Weatherley of London brought words of greeting from the British Endeavorers. The balance of the meeting was devoted to the singing and two short addresses by Rev. Artemas J. Haynes of New Haven and Rev. J. W. Chapman of New York.

The two smaller meetings of the day were then held, Miss Margaret Koch of Waterville, Me., leading the school of methods of junior workers in the vestry of Park Street church, while William Shaw presided at the congress of workers in Lorimer hall. At this latter meeting valuable suggestions were given by George E. Copeland, Rev. James Alexander, George W. Coleman and Rev. Russell T. Hall.

Thousands flocked into Tremont Temple for the evening meeting and long before it began the great edifice was filled to overflowing. Rev. C. D. Crane, president of the Maine union, presided, and as usual the first half hour was devoted to the praise and devotional service. Two excellent addresses were made by Rev. P. S. Henson of Brooklyn and Rev. Russell H. Conwell of Philadelphia. Dr. Henson's subject was "Stick" and strongly did he urge his hearers not to falter in the work, while Dr. Conwell pointed out some mistakes made by young people. The usual singing closed the day.

Auto Went Back on Him

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Prince Henry's new automobile, in which he started from Hamburg for Darmstadt, where he will spend his vacation with the princess and their children, broke down in the country before he reached Dusseldorf and the prince was compelled to stop all night with the proprietor of a repair shop.

Siamese Prince's Movements

HARMLESS AS MILK

Look out what you put into the child's stomach! Children are especially sensitive to the action of medicine. But you need never fear Scott's Emulsion. That is one reason why it is so popular as a children's medicine.

"As harmless as milk"—that is saying a good deal. But we may go even further and say that Scott's Emulsion will stay on the child's stomach when milk will not.

A little added to the milk in baby's bottle and a little after meals for older children is just the right thing for the weak and sickly ones.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.
SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl street, New York.

ECONOMIC INTERVENTION

Is What the Boers Will Now Appreciate the Most

Paris, Oct. 15.—The Boer generals attended a meeting of pro-Boers in the Nouveau theatre last evening. The house was crowded and the appearance of the generals on the stage was greeted with an ovation. Senator Pauliat introduced the generals in a laudatory speech. General Botha spoke in the name of his people and thanked France for its generous encouragement and for the aid she had given the Boer wounded. He said the losses of the Boers amounted to $500,000,000. The Boers, he said, do no ask for political, but for economic intervention. The general's allusions to the concentration camps and farm burning were received with hoots from the audience.

Generals De Wet and Delarey followed General Botha in making speeches. At the conclusion of the addresses a collection was taken up which realized $1178. The generals were presented with medals.

A General Freezeout

Berlin, Oct. 15.—The government is discouraging the Boer reception committee in various ways. The police will not permit the proposed procession to pass through the Brandenburger gate, doubtless because it is near the British embassy. The bill posters have broken their contract and refuse to put up any more placards advertising the reception of the Boer generals. The government seems determined to prevent the slightest demonstration that might be construed as offensive to Great Britain.

Unique Wedding Ceremony

Colorado Springs, Col., Oct. 15.—Eleanor G. Stephens of Boston was married here last night to Dr. Herbert E. Peckham of Brooklyn. The ceremony was composed by the groom and took half an hour in its performance, the contracting parties doing practically all the talking. At its conclusion the minister officiating declared the contracting parties man and wife. No ring was used, the bride presenting to the groom a pink rose and receiving a white lily. The bridal party numbered 15 persons and all faced the assembled guests while the service was in progress.

Railroad Run to Ruin

Pekin, Oct. 15.—Chinese officials are indignant at the condition in which the Shen Hai Kwan New Chwang railroad has been restored to them. In many places everything portable has been removed. The rolling stock was left in extremely bad condition, only three locomotives out of 26 being fit for use. The plant everywhere testifies to rough handling and general neglect. The railroad was held by Russia.

Many Forgetful Letter Writers

Washington, Oct. 15.—The annual report of the dead letter office for the last fiscal year shows total receipts of 9,300,351 pieces of mail matter of all kinds. Of the letters and parcels opened, 50,869 were found to contain money to the amount of $48,498 and 50,874 commercial papers with an aggregate face value of $1,399,926.

Animated Debates Likely

Paris, Oct. 15.—The chamber of deputies reassembled yesterday under the presidency of M. Bourgeois. The session promises to be stormy, in view of the interpellations before the house attacking the government for employing troops against strikers and also for using the military in the case of the school troubles in Brittany.

WANTS $20,000 DAMAGES

Miss MacKinnon Says She Was Jilted After Sixteen Years' Courtship

Boston, Oct. 15.—On the complaint of Miss Annie MacKinnon of Newtonville that he was going to leave the state, John A. Birch, a coachman, employed at that place, was arrested at the North Union station here yesterday. It is asserted that Miss MacKinnon has instituted a civil suit against Birch for alleged breach of promise of marriage, the figure of financial damage set forth being $20,000. Miss MacKinnon, in stating her troubles, said:

"I have been keeping company with Mr. Birch for nearly 16 years and I have always considered that an engagement existed between us. I have always been true to him and thought that he was true to me. A short time ago I learned that he had been paying attentions to Miss Snow of Augusta, Me., and that they were engaged. I felt that a terrible wrong had been done me and on that account have taken steps to bring the man to justice."

Bad Effects of Boiler Accident

New Britain, Conn., Oct. 15.—The bursting of a tube in a boiler at the power station of the Connecticut railway and lighting power station yesterday fatally scalded two men and factories receiving power from the company were compelled to suspend operations. The electric light service of the city was also crippled for two hours and trolley cars were stalled for the same length of time. One of the evening papers in the city was unable to publish a paper.

Unyielding Delegates

Boston, Oct. 15.—Eleven ballots cast last night, without the fluctuation of a single vote from the figures of the six ballots taken during two previous sittings of delegates, illustrated the completeness of the deadlock in the Ninth congressional district Democratic convention. Congressman Conry and J. A. Kelliher each held 54 votes, and J. A. Dennison 50. Adjournment was taken until tonight. The nomination must be made by Thursday night.

Verdict In Hawkins Inquest

Providence, Oct. 15.—Coroner Wood yesterday filed the testimony and the finding therefrom in the inquest held by him on the body of Henry F. Hawkins, which was found in a garden patch near his home in Scituate, a fracture of the skull having caused death. Hawkins was 80 years old. The conclusion reached was that the victim "came to his death at the hands of some person or persons to him unknown."

Connecting Trolley Link

Northbridge, Mass., Oct. 15.—The new electric line from Linwood in this place to Millville has at last been accepted by the railroad commission and cars are running. The length of the line is eight miles and forms the connecting link in the through trolley service from Worcester to Providence. Six changes are required in making the trip and the distance of about 45 miles is covered in about 3½ hours.

Electric Plant Short of Fuel

Bucksport, Me., Oct. 15.—The town was in partial darkness last night owing to the lack of fuel for the electric light plant. The coal supply is exhausted and none can be obtained except at prices which will entail a heavy loss in operating the plant. The boilers are steamed on wood and the service limited to a few hours in the evening.

Coroner's Decision Reserved

Providence, Oct. 15.—The inquest on the death of Abraham Camac, who died Oct. 5, after being wounded by bullets from a revolver held by Charles J. Quigley at Pawtucket, was concluded yesterday. Coroner Babcock reserved his decision. Quigley is in jail on a charge of murder to await the action of the grand jury.

Pair of Jewelry Thieves

Providence, Oct. 15.—Joseph P. Theros, 19, and Peter Peloquin, 22, were arrested last night. They had jewelry worth about $400. They confessed that they had broken into the jewelry store of John Williams at Fall River, and that the jewelry was the booty secured there.

Coal at Wholesale Rates

Boston, Oct. 15.—The coal companies sent out their teams today laden with 100-pound bags of bituminous coal to be sold at 45 cents a bag, which is at the present rate by the ton. This is in furtherance of the plan to relieve distress among the poor.

Bonds Raised to $15,000

Boston, Oct. 15.—Frederick E. Betts was again before Judge Lowell yesterday and his bail of $5000 was increased to $15,000, on one of the nine indictments under which he was found guilty on Oct. 4, and his bail was discharged on the remaining eight. He was convicted of using the mails with intent to defraud. His co-defendant, J. M. Fisher, who was likewise convicted, was yesterday released on his own recognizance of $5000. He turned state's evidence at the trial.

LONG STRUGGLE ENDED

Happy Ending of the Conference at Washington

A COMMISSION OF SIX

With Carroll Wright as Recorder Named by the President to Adjust Differences Between Operators and Miners—Resumption of Work In Mines as Soon as Possible

Washington, Oct. 16.—The great anthracite coal strike is settled at last. A commission of six persons, with a seventh, Carroll D. Wright, as recorder, will adjust differences between operators and miners. President Mitchell of the Miners' union will take the necessary measures to call the strike off. The president will urge immediate resumption of mining and operations are expected to begin next week.

Announcement that the great strike was off was made by Secretary Root with exuberant good humor at the White House shortly after 1 o'clock this morning. Organized labor has a representative on the commission in the person of E. E. Clark, grand chief of the Order of Railway Conductors, named as a sociologist. The president added Bishop Spalding of Illinois to the list of five members suggested by the operators.

As named the commission is perfectly satisfactory to both miners and operators. Assent of the miners was given through President Mitchell and Mr. Sargent, commissioner of immigration, and of the operators through Messrs. Robert Bacon and George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co.

The final outcome followed a series of conferences beginning with two during the day with Mr. Mitchell and two during the night with Messrs. Bacon and Perkins. Events moved quickly at the last, the president being determined on a speedy settlement. The commission will assemble in a few days and choose a chairman, probably General Wilson. It then will arrange for sessions and testimony.

The following official statement announcing the close of the strike was issued at the White House at 2:20 a. m:

After a conference with Mr. Mitchell and some further conference with representatives of the coal operators, the president has appointed the members of the commission to inquire into, consider and pass upon all questions at issue between the operators and miners in the anthracite coal fields:

Brigadier General John M. Wilson, U. S. A., retired (late chief of engineers, U. S. A.) Washington, D. C., as an officer of the engineer corps of either the military or naval service of the United States.

E. W. Parker, Washington, D. C., as an expert mining engineer. Mr. Parker is chief statistician of the coal division of the United States geological survey and the editor of The Engineering and Mining Journal of New York.

Hon. George G. Gray, Wilmington, Del., as a judge of a United States court.

Mr. E. E. Clark, Cedar Rapids, Ia., grand chief of the Order of Railway Conductors, as a sociologist, the president assuming that for the purposes of such a commission the term sociologist means a man who has thought and studied deeply on social questions and has practically applied his knowledge.

Mr. Thomas H. Watkins, Scranton, Pa., as a man practically acquainted with the mining and selling of coal.

Bishop John L. Spalding of Peoria, Ills. The president has added Bishop Spalding's name to the commission.

Hon. Carroll D. Wright has been appointed recorder of the commission.

Mr. Mitchell indicated formally yesterday to President Roosevelt that the Mine Workers' union dissents from the restrictions placed by the operators on the choice of the proposed arbitration tribunal and desired the president to have an absolutely free hand in the selection of members of the commission to be charged with an adjustment of future relations between the employers and employed. He laid special stress in stating his objections on the proposition that one of the commission should be a judge from the eastern district of Pennsylvania. He was very insistent in some of his objections, which he voiced in what might be termed a counter proposition to that of the operators.

President Roosevelt, having ascertained the views of Mr. Mitchell, at once communicated with the operators and initiated efforts to reconcile the differences developed and to have the operators make some further concessions, his aim being to reach a common accord between miners and operators whereby the labor dispute may be finally composed and mining of coal resumed.

When the last conference had been concluded, Mr. Mitchell left the White House and, after a brief conference with President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and some other local labor leaders, departed for Wilkesbarre.

Mr. Mitchell's visit to Washington was by invitation of President Roosevelt in order that they might discuss the terms of the proposition submitted to the president last Monday night by the anthracite coal and railroad presidents, in the hope that the miners and the operators might be brought into agreement as to the appointment by President Roosevelt of a commission to arbitrate existing differences between them.

The discussion of the situation was entirely amicable. Mr. Mitchell was in a conciliatory mood and the president was very zealous in his efforts to promote a settlement of the prolonged strike.

Mr. Mitchell assured the president of his anxiety to end the strike, but said that the miners were firm in their position and that he could not afford to sanction any proposition that would sacrifice their interests at this time. He was willing, however, to dispense with minor details and indicated his intention to demand only an arbitration board which should be selected fairly with respect equally to the interests of both parties to the controversy.

Campaign Oratory

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 16.—The opening Republican rallies of the campaign were held in Holyoke and Chicopee last night with Senator Lodge, Lieutenant Governor Bates and Curtis Guild, Jr., as the speakers. Senator Lodge discussed the coal strike at the Holyoke rally and Curtis Guild talked at the Chicopee rally on the tariff. At the Chicopee rally Mr. Bates replied to the address of Colonel Gaston, delivered the previous evening.

North Adams, Mass., Oct. 16.—W. A. Gaston, Democratic nominee for governor, held a reception at the Wilson House last night and addressed a meeting of the town committees of Adams, Williamstown, Clarksburg and the city committee of this city. His subject was "Party Organization."

Alleged Scheme to Defraud

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 16.—Postoffice Inspector Gorman yesterday caused the arrest of the four principal officers of the Alt F. Clark company, which conducts what is known as the Correspondence Institute of America, with offices here. The warrant upon which they were arrested charges them with using the United States mails for the purpose of defrauding. They were held for a hearing.

Why Insurance Companies Fail

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Fire insurance was the principal topic of discussion at a banquet given here last night by the Illinois Manufacturers' association. Several of the speakers declared that the reason for so many failures among fire insurance companies was legislative restriction and state taxation.

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 16.—The formal sale and transfer of Beauvoir, the home of Jefferson Davis, by Mrs. Davis, to the Sons of Confederate Veterans was consummated yesterday. The home will be used as a home for indigent Confederate veterans. Mrs. Davis received $10,000 for the home.

Danger of a Lynching

A SEVERE ENCOUNTER

In Which Venezuela's President Led His Forces

BOTH SIDES LOSE HEAVILY

Timely Aid Saved Government Forces From Defeat—Revolutionists Retain Their Positions, With the Ultimate Result of the Conflict In Doubt

Willemstad, Oct. 16.—News from Caracas is to the effect that the battle near La Victoria between the forces of President, which were said to number 4100 men with 15 guns, and the Venezuelan revolutionists, which began Monday morning, has so far been without definite result.

The only rebel generals engaged were Guevara, Torres, Crespo and Antonio Fernandez, who had with them about 3100 men, representing the advance guard of the revolutionists.

President Castro twice led a charge in person and showed great courage and coolness. His lieutenant, General Alcantara, who was at one time at West Point military academy, was mortally wounded. The government forces had 247 men killed, while the revolutionists lost 310 men. Among the latter was General Guevara.

The arrival at the scene of battle at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon of Vice President Gomez with 800 men and a large amount of ammunition saved the situation for the government. At that time the odds were greatly against President Castro. Monday night the revolutionists still retained their positions.

The fight started again Tuesday, and at 10 o'clock in the morning President Castro retired to La Victoria. At 1 o'clock the fighting ceased on both sides.

News of the engagement having reached Generals Matos and Mendoza, they hastened to the scene and arrived at a point near La Victoria Tuesday with the rest of the revolutionary army, which now numbers about 8000 men. The reinforcements under Matos and Mendoza intend to take part in the renewal of hostilities.

President Castro now appears to be surrounded by his enemies. The town of El Consejo, near Victoria, is occupied by the revolutionists.

Valencia is believed to be doomed. The town was attacked by General Riera on Monday and Tuesday.

The government cannot receive reinforcements from Caracas, as the railroad from there to Valencia is held by the rebels.

Those who were wounded in the fighting are still without medical assistance or care. They lie on the battlefield as they fell, and the scene there is one of great horror.

Will Avoid Bloodshed If Possible

Manila, Oct. 16.—It will be possibly three weeks before the American expedition against the Sultan of Bacolod will leave Camp Vicars, Mindanao. General Davis is anxious to avoid bloodshed in Mindanao, and has directed General Sumner to refrain from fighting until forced into active combat. When the expedition reaches Bacolod the sultan will be given another chance to accept peace. General Sumner will not attack unless the Moros take the aggressive.

Christian Villages Destroyed

Sofia, Oct. 16.—A report has been received here from the frontier that in the vicinity of Dubnitza 60 women and children have fled into Bulgaria to escape Turkish troops. They report the destruction of the Christian villages of Stamer, Drenove, Serbinovo and Pirine, and that the village of Oranovo has been burned and its inhabitants massacred. The Macedonian committee are to send telegrams to the capitals of Europe, praying European statesmen to protect the Christians of Macedonia against Turkish atrocities.

Must Be Settled Today

Boston, Oct. 16.—The deadlock in the Ninth congressional Democratic district continued during the 18 ballots taken last night and the candidates remain in the same position as they did on the first ballot, namely, Joseph A. Conry 54, Joseph A. Dennison 50, and John A. Kelliher 54. Adjournment was taken until noon today. This will give the delegates only five hours in which to decide upon a nominee, as the nominations must be filed at the state house by 5 o'clock.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

The oil fields of Beaumont, Texas, are burning again. Really, we know Texas has oil to burn, but we had hoped to get it up this way before it got in contact with the fire.

A New Jersey police justice recently fined a young man $10 for kissing his sweetheart in a public park, and a similar fine was collected from the young lady. Jersey justice is peculiar.

Just about ten people disapprove of President Roosevelt's action in settling the coal strike. They have already expressed themselves, but the rest of the voting population will have their say later on.

President Roosevelt is himself a sufferer from strikes. He will be kept out of the white House two months longer than necessary because of a number of incipient strikes among the workmen who are doing the renovating and those who are preparing the material.

President Roosevelt made the statement that there were three parties affected by the coal strike. He might have said four, for besides the owners, the strikers, and the people, there is the non-union man who is denied the oldest and the Divinest right in the world, the right to work.

Washington is the place for Grand Army reunions. It is the city they protected, it is the city they made, it is the city that embodies the idea of a great, powerful, progressive, free country. Washington belongs to the people at large and the residents are glad to receive their old defenders as guests.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The store which advertises is the best to trade at because the merchant who advertises is the one who has enterprise enough to keep his stock of goods up to the fashions and he is the man who takes enough interest in his business to figure out how he can sell goods cheaper than his competitors.—Barre Times.

☞Two new colleges were dedicated in this state last week, and it is generally agreed that there is a field for each. The old colleges report increased attendance and want larger endowments to furnish accommodations for still others. And yet somebody will bob up and tell us of the degeneracy of the times.

☞Revenues and expenditures of the postal service, according to the latest reports, come nearer balancing each other than ever. In due time, apparently, the service will pay for itself, and then will come the people who think that a two-cent stamp really doesn't carry a large enough load of letter paper.—Budget.

☞It is very foolish to make the Cubans angry with us. The good will of any country in our neighborhood, however small it may be, or however incapable in our estimation its people may be, is a good deal better for us to have than its ill will. Little countries and backward peoples can be very annoying, when they set out with a general determination in that direction. Sometimes they can be positively injurious.—Hartford Courant.

☞Dr. Christian Fry, a school inspector out in St. Paul, may not need any coal at all this winter. There are many thousand women throughout the country who will take great pleasure in making it hot for him as fast as they hear that he has officially declared that women's clubs are not educational institutions, and that little, if any, useful knowledge is to be gained by attendance at their meetings.—Providence Journal.

☞The report comes over seas that a Russian doctor has succeeded in reanimating a heart that has ceased to beat some twenty-four hours previously, and has kept it going for a full hour. The modest application, which the doctor hopes to make of his discovery, namely, to use it as a means of resuscitation in cases of drowning, looks very much as if the seeming miracle had been actually accomplished. Such reports are usually accompanied by the statement that those who can afford to do so will soon be able to live forever.—Boston Budget.

☞The Grand Army veterans at Washington might well have let the pension matter pass by without such prominence as was given it. Whatever their feeling may have been against ex-Commissioner Evans, he had retired from the office and had been succeeded by an official who is, up to date, supposed to be satisfactory to the Grand Army interests. There has been plenty of demonstration that the country at large had faith in Commissioner Evans and his absolute honesty toward his old comrades as well as toward the government, and that while there is no sentiment in any quarter of the country against full and generous treatment for the veterans, there is no attitude in which the veterans appear to less advantage than when they agitate this pension business. The American people are generous, and they don't like to be told that they are not.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞Practically every country in the world uses soft coal exclusively except the United States. The United States uses it exclusively except for a small strip of territory on the North Atlan- coast. Nearly all Pennsylvania, the State in which anthracite is mined, burns bituminous fuel westward from the Susquehanna river. We could use it, and would use it, also in Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Baltimore, if the strike should last long enough for us to make arrangements for conveying it hither in large enough quantities. That anthracite is a necessity, is a wholly mistaken idea.—Philadelphia North American.

That anthracite is not a necessity is unquestionably true, in that we could get along without it, but so long as it is available it is far preferable to soft coal for domestic consumption, and where will you find a cleaner city than Boston and other New England cities where anthracite is used.

STRIKE SETTLED.

On this beautiful October day when Nature is full of its warmth and blessings, it is pleasant to learn that the terrible conflict between the miners and the operatives in the coal mines has been settled by the indefatigable labors of President Roosevelt.

After a long session at the White House last night, Secretary Root, about one o'clock this morning announced that a common ground of agreement had been reached. The President has appointed a commission of six prominent persons to do the final work of settling the differences between the miners and operators.

President Mitchell has called a meeting of the executive committee, and the strike will be called off at once.

AS INDEPENDENTS.

Three Candidates File Papers With Registrars.

There is probably no doubt but what there will be three independent republican candidates for Representative from Quincy at the coming election. The time for filing nomination papers expires Friday night at 5 o'clock and the papers must be filed before that hour with the Secretary of State at Boston. The names however have to be certified to by the local Board of Registrars. Wednesday John P. Bigelow, Eugene F. De Normandie and John McKnight filed their papers with the Board of Registrars for that purpose.

Brown—Jacobs.

A very pretty though quiet wedding took place last Friday evening at eight o'clock at the home of the bride in Natick, when Miss Helena Jacobs was united in marriage to Mr. Lloyd Brown, of Cleveland, Ohio,, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Brown of Wollaston.

The maid of honor was Miss Caroline Brown, sister of the groom and Mr. Ray Brown, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

A reception followed at which Mr. and Mrs. Brown were assisted in receiving by the parents of both bride and groom.

A BANK STORY.

An Incident That Startled the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street.

Some years ago the directors of the Bank of England were startled to receive an invitation to meet an unknown man in the strongroom of the bank at midnight. "You think you is all safe hand you bank his safe, but I knows better. I bin hinside the bank the last 2 nite hand you nose nuffin about it. But I am nott a theaf so hif yer will mett mee in the great squar room, with all the monelys, at twelf 2 nite, He explain orl to you, let only thor 2 cum down, and say nuffin to nobody." The strongroom was guarded the next night in spite of a disposition to regard the letter as a hoax by police and—nothing happened.

The next phase of the mystery was more astonishing than ever. A heavy chest of papers and securities taken from the strongroom arrived at the bank, with a letter complaining that the directors had set the police upon the writer, and that he had therefore not appeared as he promised, but to prove that he was neither a thief nor a fool he sent a chest of papers he had taken from the bank. Let a few gentlemen be alone in the room, and he would join them at midnight, said the writer, and to cut short a long and strange chapter of bank history, a man with a dark lantern burst into the strongroom of the bank at midnight after calling from behind the stone walls for the directors to put out the lights. He was one of a strange class of men who gained a living by searching the sewers at night, and through an opening from a sewer he had found his way into the richest room in the world.—St. James Gazette.

The Strain on Parents.

"What is mohair, mammy?" asked Sally Peterson Jones, looking up from her slow perusal of the newspaper and keeping her place on the page with a dusky forefinger.

Mammy Jones began to rock faster. "You know w'at hair is, I s'pose, don' you?" she inquired.

"Oh, yas'm," responded Sally promptly.

"Well, den, does you know w'at a mo is?" asked her mother rocking still faster.

"No'm," admitted Sally with great reluctance.

"Well, chile, you can't 'spec' me to take de place ob a natchel hist'ry ob animals fo' you," said her mother calmly, allowing the rocking chair to slacken its speed. "W'en you've hunted up de mo in one ob your schoolbooks an' know jes' what he looks like, come to me, an' I'll 'splain de rest. But chillen mus' und'take some work on dere own eddication, shorely. 'Tain't right fo' payrents to do it all."

ATHLETES FOR ENGLAND.

Hjertberg to Take Team, Including Duffy, Across Next June.

Ernest W. Hjertberg, trainer of the Columbia track team, has completed arrangements to take an all American athletic team of professionals and amateurs to England, Ireland and Scotland next June after the intercollegiate games, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. The team will include many of the best American performers and will be entered in the complete circuit of summer athletic meets in the British isles. The necessary financial guarantee for the team's expenses has already been obtained.

Among the prominent athletes who are counted on as sure to accompany the team are Harry Gill, the Canadian, who won the A. A. U. all around championship in 1900; Mike Sweeney, who holds the world's record of 6 feet 5⅝ inches in the running high jump; Frank M. Kanaly of Cambridgeport, Mass., who won the five mile A. A. U. national championship last year; G. Perry, a weight thrower; Edward Hobbs and Thomas Keene, the Boston sprinters, and Arthur F. Duffy of Georgetown university, who holds the world's record of 9 3-5 seconds for the 100 yard dash and who figured so prominently in the English championship meet last summer. Hjertberg himself will meet the foreign cracks in the long distance events, so that the American team will be well rounded out in the gamut of standard athletic events. Other men are expected to join in the pilgrimage for athletic honor and foreign prizes.

BOON FOR LUMBERMEN.

A new system for towing logs has just been devised in the northwest, says the New York Evening Post. A successful raft in British Columbia is thus described: Under the new system several lengths of galvanized plow steel wire cable, each 250 feet long, were strung from the rear of the tug in one long rope. At intervals of fifteen feet "clips" were attached, to which half inch chains were made fast. The ends of the chains were passed through holes bored slantingly through the ends of the logs. It was found that this method did away with the necessity of the tug making for a shelter when a storm threatened and thus accomplished a large saving in time. The number of feet in the next raft, which will be started in a few days, will be 300,000, and if this is successfully handled the following one will contain 500,000 feet.

The logs are cut in forty-eight foot lengths and are bucked up after reaching their destination. Close observation of the raft, which was taken to Port Gamble, showed that the chains as used did not allow the logs to roll over and thus break up the tow. It was also found that the tug made better time with the same quantity under the new conditions than with logs in a boom. The special feature of the device which will appeal to lumbermen compelled to raft on the ocean is the low cost of getting the logs to tide water.

FAMOUS DEBATE SPOT.

Women of Freeport, Ill., Agree on Place Where Lincoln Met Douglas.

The women of Freeport, Ill., have finally found and have now substantially marked the spot on which took place the famous Lincoln-Douglas debate, says the Chicago Evening Post. There has been an exasperating delay of over a year concerning this matter. The old timers failed to agree as to the exact locality of the stand from which the speeches were made.

Finally the corner of Douglas avenue and Mechanic street was agreed upon, when a committee of the Freeport Women's club went to Devil's Lake, Wis., and secured a huge bowlder, which will be brought to the city and placed in position with fitting ceremonies.

New Idea In Fur Coats.

Automobiling has been responsible for many curious ideas in the way of coats, but I have seen one which is a unique example of the furrier's art, writes the London correspondent of the New York Herald. From collar to tail it is made entirely of hares' ears, cunningly joined together. Twelve hundred hares were killed to produce this astonishing garment, which took three months to manufacture, one man being employed three days in cutting the ears from the skins. It has been specially treated to render it waterproof. Considering the immense amount of labor spent on it, it seems cheap at the price, $100, which is asked for it.

Station For Signal Corps of Army.

Upon the crest of the Blue Ridge mountains, within sixty miles of Washington, the war department has purchased sixty acres of land and will commence at once the construction of a building that will be used as a station for the signal corps of the army, says the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald. It will be fully equipped and will be used for the higher scientific instruction of the officers as well as to teach the rudiments to enlisted men. The location is considered excellent, because the altitude commands a wide field in which practical lessons will be given.

Latest Airship Resembles a Quilt.

The latest invention in the way of airships, according to the New York Herald, is the vessel being constructed in Paris by M. Pardy, a Chilean, in the shape of an immense quilt. The squares of the quilt instead of being filled with eiderdown contain hydrogen. The airship will have a capacity of 1,000 cubic meters and will be held flat by a wooden framework. There will be a propeller at each corner.

COAL FOR THE POOR.

Mayor Bryant Names Relief Committee of Twenty.

Mayor Bryant has completed his list of gentlemen whom he will ask to serve on the committee to collect funds that the poor may be supplied with fuel at cost.

The committee will meet at the Council chamber Friday evening to arrange plans for distribution.

That is, distributing coal in bags containing one hundred pounds.

There are certain poor families which the city always furnishes with coal and these he would supply in bags under the direction of the Overseer of the Poor. As to the others he would have them supplied from teams, the parties obtaining it to pay cost price. This he also thinks could better be done under the direction of the Overseer of the Poor, as by his position he would be better able to judge who were able to pay for it.

He is also in favor of having some well known gentleman, such as R. F. Claflin of the Granite bank, act as treasurer of the fund and that the contributions be published every day in the Ledger. In this way the public would be kept well informed of how the relief was progressing.

Pleasing Promotion.

Albert F. Shedd, government inspector of machinery at the works of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., has been appointed as chief of the civilian government inspectors of New England. This position has always been held by a naval officer but owing to the scarcity of naval officers, Secretary Moody has ordered all such officers to vessels and placed that department in charge of civilians. It is to this position that Mr. Shedd has been appointed. His office is at present at South Boston but will eventually be located in the Federal building, and Mr. Shedd will make his home in Boston. Since he came to Quincy he has made many warm friends who congratulate him upon his promotion, although they feel sorry to lose him.

Belonged in Quincy.

A Boston paper reports that William S. Varney of Quincy, Mass., a seaman on the four-master Shenandoah, fell from the rigging to the deck, breaking both legs and fracturing his skull. The accident happened July 27, while the vessel was on the way home from San Francisco. Varney lived until Aug. 9, when he died and was buried at sea. He was 27 years of age.

LOCAL OPTION LAW.

Henry H. Faxon Contributes $50 to That Cause.

Henry H. Faxon is a firm believer in the local option law which he says is the only method of dealing with the temperance question in large cities like Boston. Mr. Faxon is a large owner of real estate in South Boston and to help along the cause in that section he has sent his check for $50 to the president of the Local Option Association at South Boston. The letter which accompanied the check was as follows:

Hon. Joseph D. Fallon, President of District Option Association, South
Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir: As an owner of real estate in South Boston I am fully aware of the rum-cursed condition of the district. Property is almost worthless and poverty exists on every hand owing to a multiplicity of saloons.

All the natural advantages of the section as a place of residence are blotted out by the licensed liquor pestilence.

Attempts which have been made to secure relief through the licensing powers have not met with any permanent results.

I am satisfied that the saloons will never be driven from the residential portions of the city of Boston until the system of home rule is applied to the several districts of the municipality and honest police are appointed to enforce the law. For this reason I am strongly in favor of the acceptance of the District Option Law by the voters of Boston at the State election, November 4, 1902, as the first step in securing the much needed reform. I inclose check for $50 to aid the campaign in behalf of the measure in South Boston.

Very truly yours,
Henry H. Faxon.

MILTON.

An important parish meeting was held by the East Congregational church Monday evening at which it was decided to remodel the church. A building committee was appointed consisting of Albert A. Brackett, L. M. Kelsey, Rev. A. H. Mulnix, E. E. Carlton and W. H. Doherty. They will consider plans and report at an adjourned meeting to be called by the committee. It is proposed to expend between $3,000 and $4,000 on the church.

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. We purchased some of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and he commenced taking them. Inside of thirty days he had gained forty pounds in flesh. He is now fully recovered. We have a good trade on the tablets.—Holley Bros., Merchants, Long Branch, Mo. For sale by all druggists.

GOLF CLUB.

To Consider Proposition to Buy Land now Under Lease.

A special meeting of the Wollaston Golf Club is to be held on the afternoon of Oct. 22, at Young's Hotel, at which the business to be considered will be a proposition to purchase the equity in certain parcels of land, now under lease, to authorize the purchase of additional land of 1 1-2 acres, by the issue of interest bearing notes, secured by second mortgages on the land; and to make provision for the payment of interest and principal by regular appropriations from the initiation fees, or otherwise; all as more fully set forth in the notice, dated July 7, 1902, issued by Theophilus King and Elbert H. Brock, a committee appointed by the board of directors to secure provisional subscriptions and formulate plans.

Seventeenth Birthday.

Miss Ruth Burnham of Washington street, celebrated her seventeenth birthday Tuesday night by receiving a number of her young friends. Although Miss Burnham is not a Quincy girl, having come from Augusta, Maine, only a year ago, she is very popular with the young people of Quincy.

She proved to be a very gracious hostess and dispensed ice cream and cake, not to speak of little courtesies toward her guests in a manner that would do credit to her mother.

Among those present were: Miss Polly McConnell, Gertrude Barnicoat, Olive Smith, May and Margaret Little, Lulu Crowley, Miss Roach, Masters Denney, McGregor, Dunston, Elcock, Miller and Skinner and many others.

Large Registration.

The board of Registrars were in session Wednesday from noon until 10 o'clock. During that time 189 new names were added to the voting lists and 36 restored, a total of 225. This is the largest one day's registration in the history of the city.

The total number of names added during the present registration was 572 which will probably bring the total number of names on the lists up to 5000. The exact figures cannot be determined until the Registrars have had time to revise their lists. The number on the lists a year ago was 4497 and at the municipal election 4630.

Funeral of Dr. Harlow.

The funeral of Dr. Edwin A. Harlow was held Wednesday from his home on Lincoln avenue. The services were conducted by Rev. C. B. Webber assisted by Rev. Preston Gurney. During the services a quartette composed of Miss May Hastings, Mrs. D. A. King, C. F. Wild and James E. Boyd sang "Lead Kindly Light," "There is a Land of Pure Delight" and "My Heavenly Home is Bright and Fair." The burial was at Mt. Auburn.

It costs $30,000 to be a Tammany candidate for a judgeship. That looks outrageous—and so it is. But in principle it is not greatly different from charging a fee for going on a Republican ticket in New Bedford.—Standard.

TODAY'S COURT.

Harry M. Morrow was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Case continued one week.

The Departure of Si

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

When I was recruiting in 1861, Si Jackson presented himself for enlistment. He was as homely and slab sided as if he had been cut out of a swamp log with a wabbly saw. I tried to get rid of him, but couldn't, and he became a soldier.

Then began the struggle between Si Jackson and the United States of America. The United States demanded obedience on the part of Si, and Si demanded that he be allowed to paddle his own canoe as he thought best. He was reprimanded, sent to the guardhouse, bucked and gagged and punished in various other ways, but he called the bluff every time. They were ready to court martial him when we marched away to fight the first battle of Bull Run, but he escaped from arrest and joined us on the field and was the only man in the regiment to reap any honor. Single handed and alone he captured the only Confederate prisoner taken in that fight and marched him back to the Potomac. Our captain tried to make Si believe that he had done his whole duty and could go home with flying colors, but Si wasn't on the go. On the contrary, he was in the guardhouse again the day after turning his prisoner over.

It has always been a mystery to the thousand men of the Fourth infantry how Si Jackson defied the United States and held his own. In the two years he was with us he put in nine-tenths of his time in the guardhouse. Four different courts martial sat on him and sentenced him to prison, but for some reason the findings were always revoked. A hundred different times he was threatened with being drummed out, but the threat was never carried into execution. He was examined by the surgeons and his discharge recommended, but he beat them at the game. He was sent into the enemy's country with the hope that he would be captured, but he always squeaked through. He was sent with the teamsters with the hope that the mules would end his career with their hoofs, but not a foot ever reached him. He'd fight, and fight well, but he would not obey orders. During those two years he never drilled a single time or had a spade in his hand. He never stood sentry for an hour, and if he remained on picket it was because he preferred to.

When Si had been defying the United States for two long years, he became discouraged. The load was becoming too heavy for him. There were also rumors to the effect that the next court martial would land him at the Dry Tortugas to drag a ball and chain behind him. Obstinate and mulish as he was, he realized that one man couldn't hope to beat military discipline forever. He hadn't been worsted yet, but it might be a good thing to quit while honors were even. Si Jackson's first decision was to quit and his second to leave the service in a blaze of glory not soon to be forgotten. Those of us who were watching him noticed that he had something on his mind, but were far from suspecting what a programme he was mapping out. To the west of our camp of 6,000 men was a corral holding 3,000 mules and horses. The 6,000 men were occupying about 2,800 tents. The guards about the corrals afterward remembered seeing Si hanging about for two or three days, but his plans were not suspected. At the western side of the inclosure were hundreds of bales of hay and bags of oats and corn for use of the animals, and the hot sun had dried the bushes until they were like tinder.

One night Si was ready for his farewell. It was a moonless night, with the wind blowing strong from the west and signs of a storm at hand. He had no goodbys to exchange and very little to pack up. It isn't at all likely that a kind word at the last would have altered his plans in the least, but no kind word greeted his ear. On the contrary, the captain, who happened to run across him, squared off and said:

"See here, Si. I've got mighty tired of all this, and I'll give you the straight tip that if I can't get you out of my company I'll throw up my commission."

Si only grunted in reply, and half an hour later he was preparing his surprise party. He dodged the guards of the western side of the corral and brought up among the hay, and five minutes later a big flame was rising from the bales. It needed but the smell and sight of fire to stir up a panic among the horses and mules. In three or four minutes they were circling around the inclosure in a mad mob, with shouts of alarm from all the guards. Twice the mob tore around the big field, squealing, kicking and neighing, and then it headed for a spot on the eastern side, and the fence went down with a crash that could be heard a mile away. The fire caught the bushes and followed the horses, and the horses dashed straight upon the camp. A thousand tents were knocked down and a thousand men injured, while two or three hundred of the animals came to grief. This was only half of Si's plan, however. The fire swept up to the corral fence, and the flying sparks set the first tents on fire. It was like touching fire to powder. In ten minutes the 6,000 men were tentless, with the great heaps of commissary stores burning, and more than 500 soldiers were singed and blistered in fighting their way through the flames.

"There, darn ye, I'm ready to go!" said Si Jackson as he looked down upon the scene of the calamity he had brought about, and he went. Whether he went north, east, south or west no man knows to this day, as he was never heard of after that night.

Monument For Historical Spot.

There is a movement on foot to erect a monument on the outer point of Cape Cod to commemorate the adoption of the pilgrim compact of government, says the New York Tribune. The pilgrim compact was probably the earliest charter of a democratic government adopted by the people known to the world. A rugged obelisk 200 feet in height placed upon an eminence on the outermost point of Cape Cod, where all passing and repassing at sea may see it, will be, it is thought, a fitting memorial of such a landmark of history.

—The remains of five fossil horses have been discovered in the far west by the exploring party sent out on the William C. Whitney fund for the American Museum of Natural History in New York. These are of the three-toed horses, doubtless the hipparion, found in Dakota pilocene by Hayden, Marsh, Cope and others. The species has only been known from fragments of the skull and legs, but this new find includes one nearly complete skeleton, besides several skulls, five forelegs and 10 hind legs.—New Bedford Standard.

PROHIBITION IN MAINE

Sheriff Cummings Says There Are Too Many Resolutions and Too Little Prosecution—Endeavor Movement Continues to Show Growth

Boston, Oct. 16.—A Christian Endeavor good citizenship meeting which filled Tremont Temple was presided over last evening by Rev. J. J. Dunlop, vice president of the Massachusetts union. Governor Jordan of New Hampshire was the first speaker. Governor Jordan said:

"This land is rapidly coming to lead the world in all good things, but there is still a chance for improvement here. All who claim to be good citizens should attend the caucus, the election and the church; we should bear our share of the public burden and responsibility."

Rev. Dr. D. N. Beach of Denver welcomed the Endeavorers to their next convention city, and gave a glowing description of the situation of the chief city of Colorado. He then spoke on "What Christian Endeavor Has Accomplished."

Rev. Dr. Crane of Worcester spoke on "Civic Righteousness." He said wealth consisted not in things, but in men; not in the material, but the spiritual. Some countries with rich men are poverty stricken in law and the spirit of humanity. He declared that trusts were the greatest scheme ever invented for the restriction of trade. When we cast out slavery, we accomplished great work, but we are face to face with a race problem as great as that of slavery.

The Maine delegates held a meeting in the evening in Park street church. Rev. C. S. Cummings, sheriff of Androscoggin county, gave a lecture on "Enforced Prohibition." He said that of late in Maine there had been too many of resolutions and too little prosecution. Whether the law was to be repealed or not depended on the good people of Maine. It is were repealed, he said, it would be evidence of degeneracy in the moral fibre of the state.

Notwithstanding that the unions of five New England states were holding meetings in as many churches of the city, the gathering in Tremont Temple which had been assigned to the Massachusetts union, was large and enthusiastic yesterday.

Secretary Robinson reported that there has been an increase of five societies during the year and a large increase of members in many. One society reports as high as 60 percent. As showing the international character of the Christian Endeavor movement, there is a society in Fall River composed exclusively of Chinese. It consists of two active and six associate members, and during the year they have contributed $60 for foreign missions. There is also a flourishing Italian Christian Endeavor society in Boston.

Favorable reports were received from the superintendents of the departments. W. D. Stearns, for the press department, described the great interest shown by the newspapers of the state in obtaining and publishing news regarding the Christian Endeavor movement.

Miss Nettie S. Kellogg, for the correspondence department, told of the endeavor to bring Endeavorers together by furnishing little notes of introduction to Endeavorers who go from one place to another.

S. E. Eberman, for the junior department, said that many of the societies which had disbanded have been reorganized and more actively displayed.

R. H. Magwood, for the temperance department, said that moral suasion without legal coercion as a theory is somewhat worse than useless.

Mrs. A. A. Stebbins, for the Sunday school department, told of what had been accomplished in inducing little children to take an active interest in Christian work.

Eyes Need Attention

New York, Oct. 16.—Commissioner Lederle of the health department reports that he has examined, with the aid of two eye experts, thousands of school children in the city and found that 18 percent of them were afflicted with trachoma, a contagious disease of the eyelids. It is estimated that there are 600,000 children of school age in the city and that 100,000 are afflicted with the disease.

Insanity Plea Entered

New York, Oct. 16.—In the case of Harry Rose, the stage manager, who was indicted for the murder of his wife a few weeks ago, A. H. Hummel entered the special plea for Rose yesterday that his client is insane, and was insane at the time of the commission of the crime. The court directed that the tombs physician examine Rose and make a report to him on the subject.

Unusual Transfer of Coal

Boston, Oct. 16.—For the first time in the history of the port of Boston coal was transferred yesterday from the hold of one foreign steamship directly into that of another. North Wales steam coal brought on steamship Kansas from Liverpool was taken from that liner and dumped into the bunkers of the steamship Vancouver, for use on the coming voyage to Italy.

As to Lawyers' Advertisements

Springfield, Ills., Oct. 16.—Willard C. Smith, an attorney of Chicago, inserted, so it is alleged, the following advertisement in daily papers of that city: "Loyal, wealthy attorney, guarantees family freedom in month; no advance costs; witnesses quietly volunteered." The grievance committee of the Chicago Bar association thought this advertisement sufficient grounds for the disbarment of Smith and proceedings to this end were instituted in the supreme court yesterday.

Molineux Again In Court

New York, Oct. 16.—The second trial of Roland B. Molineux, for the murder of Mrs. Katharine J. Adams, was begun yesterday before Justice Lambert. The proceedings were marked by the unusual rapidity with which jurors were obtained, six talesmen having been accepted and sworn before the court adjourned. The prisoner was represented by former Governor Black, W. M. K. Olcott, B. S. Weekes and G. G. Battle.

Stranger Asphyxiated Himself

Lexington, Mass., Oct. 16.—The police are unable to establish the identity of the man who committed suicide by inhaling gas in a local boarding house Tuesday night. In a diary was an entry showing that the suicide was at one time in the Thirteenth infantry in the Philippines. The man was about 26 years old.

Receipt of Lipton's Challenge

New York, Oct. 16.—Sir Thomas Lipton's third challenge for the America's cup, sent by the Royal Ulster Yacht club, arrived by the steamer Oceanic yesterday. It was delivered in the regular mail at the New York Yacht club and will be read before the members at a meeting tonight.

Railroad Wreck In Indiana

Indianapolis, Oct. 16.—A passenger and accommodation train collided at Reelsville yesterday, killing a mail clerk and seriously injuring three trainmen. The wreck is said to be due to the failure of the agent at Harmony to deliver an order to the accommodation train.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

ADMIRAL SELFRIDGE DEAD

Was the Oldest Naval Officer of That Rank In the World

Boston, Oct. 16.—Rear Admiral Thomas O. Selfridge, U. S. N., retired, died yesterday at the McLean asylum in Waverley. He was probably the oldest living officer of that rank in any navy in the world, and there is no other navy which had two admirals, father and son, both retired. Rear Admiral Thomas O. Selfridge, Jr., was born Feb. 6, 1836, and joined the navy at the age of 15. The second eldest son is Commander J. R. Selfridge, born July 11, 1849, and in the navy since 1864.

The elder admiral was born in Massachusetts, and appointed to the navy on Jan. 1, 1818, at the age of 19 years, 9 months, and was 81 years, 3 months and 24 days in the service. During his earlier days he made some voyages in merchant vessels, as our navy was considerably reduced in ships for many years after the war of 1812, and there was but scant employment for the officers. He took an active part in the Mexican war and was severely wounded in the attack by the Mexicans at Gugamas, necessitating his return to the east.

When the rebellion broke out Commodore Selfridge was too far advanced in years to accept active duty at sea, and he was assigned as commandant of the Mare Island navy yard, 1862-4, and again in 1873. In the latter year all retired officers were retired from active service and he resided at Georgetown, S. C., but for many years he paid an annual visit to San Francisco, where he had two sons residing.

Death of Editor Dillon

Bar Harbor, Me., Oct. 16.—John A. Dillon, journalist and leading editorial writer on the New York Evening World, died at Chatwold, the summer home of Joseph Pulitzer, last night. About five weeks ago Dillon was thrown from a horse. At that time two ribs were broken and other internal wounds received. Pneumonia later set in, and this was followed by heart affection. Mr. Dillon was born in St. Louis 69 years ago. He leaves a widow, two sons, five daughters and a sister, the Countess De La Caulx, of Paris.

Attendants Not to Blame

Dedham, Mass., Oct. 16.—Justice Hutchinson yesterday filed his inquest report on the death of Sarah McCormick, finding that she was killed by Mary Geary on Sept. 11, an insane inmate of the Medfield insane asylum. The attendants were in the exercise of due care, concerning the custody of these patients, and it does not appear that the deceased came to her death from the unlawful act of any other person.

Result of Craig Inquest

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 16.—That the "unlawful act" of Motorman Euclid Madden and Conductor James T. Kelley "contributed to the death of William Craig," United States secret service agent, who was killed here during the visit of President Roosevelt, last September, is the finding of Justice Hibbard, after an inquest into the accident. The report of the special justice was filed here yesterday.

Boston's Big Voting List

Boston, Oct. 16.—The voting lists for the state election, which were closed last night, contain a total of 112,252 names, the largest registration in the history of the city. Otis had been town treasurer for nearly 25 years.

Satisfactory Increase In Wages

Somerville, Mass., Oct. 16.—A 10 percent increase in their wages was the surprise in the pay envelopes of nearly 700 workmen of the American Tube company last night. Some time ago the workmen made a demand for 15 percent increase, giving the company until Oct. 17 to answer. The 10 percent given is satisfactory.

Obstruction to Navigation

Nantucket, Mass., Oct. 16.—Portions of the wreck of the five-masted schooner Arthur Seitz, which went ashore on Mutton Chop shoal last spring, are now adrift in Muskegat channel. Fisherman Drowned

FROM PARIS TO 'FRISCO

Santos Dumont Building Machine For Wonderful Aerial Journey

London, Oct. 16.—Ex-Mayor Phelan of San Francisco, who arrived in London last night from the continent, said to a representative of The Associated Press, in an interview, that Santos Dumont, with whom Mr. Phelan dined Tuesday evening, is about to make an offer to travel from Paris to San Francisco by airship.

"Santos Dumont," said Mr. Phelan, "asks that a prize of $200,000 be put up; this sum, however, will only be paid over in case the trip is successful. The aeronaut undertakes to pay all his own expenses and he is already at work building a new airship for this purpose. He seems entirely confident of achieving his object. He poohpoohs the difficulties of such a lengthy trip, and not only believes he has got a chance of completing this trans-oceanic and trans-continental air journey, but that there will be found a sufficient number of contributors to make up the purse that he asks as a reward."

President Discards Crutch

Washington, Oct. 16.—President Roosevelt went out socially last night for the first time since the operation was performed on his leg at Indianapolis. His leg apparently has recovered a large measure of its strength and he no longer has to use a crutch. No limp is observable. The president walked over to Secretary Hay's, where he had accepted an invitation to dine informally with a few friends. The president remained at the secretary's until nearly 10 o'clock, returning afoot. Apparently there was no difficulty in his movements, though his pace was not rapid, as is customary with him.

Army to Be Reduced In Size

Washington, Oct. 16.—Orders were issued by the war department today directing that the regular army be reduced to the minimum size authorized by law, 59,600 men. With the practical cessation of outbreaks in the Philippines, it is believed that this can be done safely. The present size of the army is about 67,000 men. The cavalry and artillery will be reduced to the minimum basis except around Fort Leavenworth, where the commands will be kept of full size for educational reasons.

Old Official Resigns

Washington, Oct. 16.—J. C. B. Davis, who has been reporter of the United States supreme court for nearly 20 years, has resigned. He is nearly 80 years old. He desires to spend the rest of his life in leisure.

Nurses and Dentists Needed

Washington, Oct. 16.—The first annual report of Surgeon General Rixey shows that the health of the navy and marine corps was good throughout the past fiscal year. The most important recommendation of the report, perhaps, is that congress provide for the establishment of a women's nurse corps for the navy. The surgeon general also makes a strong plea for the appointment of dentists for the navy.

Defense Claims Insanity

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 16.—Charles C. Eastman, the musician who attempted to kill his wife on the evening of Oct. 9, will be taken to an insane asylum on an order issued by Judge Peaslee. NOT A "PACKED COURT"

Highly Judicious Selection of Strike Arbitrators

OPERATORS HAD TO RECEDE

From Position Taken In Initial Proposition—Men Chosen by President Could Hardly Fail to Please Both Parties to the Controversy

Washington, Oct. 17.—The key to the settlement of the coal strike through Mr. Morgan's arbitration proposal has rested in the willingness of the operators to grant some elasticity of interpretation concerning the definitions prescribed for membership of the board. The definitions themselves were a blunder, except as they may have been intended as something to receive from. They certainly gave the miners of the anthracite belt, and labor unionists everywhere, the impression that the operators had agreed to submit to a court packed in their favor.

This was unfortunate. Mr. Roosevelt would never have consented to be a party to anything of this sort, bearing the name of arbitration, and he brought this fact out plainly to Mr. Morgan at the Monday night conference. Mr. Morgan, while maintaining that he was not authorized to modify the terms which had been put into his hands, gave a strong hint that the compromise need not come to naught on account of these definitions, although in the main the interests he represented would insist upon having the court made up of the men of solid character which the formulator of the definitions had in view.

The president felt that, left to himself, he would have selected men of essentially as substantial a type. There was, however, no objection on the part of Mitchell to having an engineer officers, or an expert mining engineer; and it was assumed by those on the inside that General Wilson and E. W. Parker would be the men chosen. The difficulty in reaching a settlement on the Morgan basis came further down on the list. Mitchell felt that there were indicated representatives of the capitalistic side quite distinctly without any corresponding representation of labor as such, and particularly of organized labor. A way was suggested of removing this difficulty by giving the place which had been intended for Carroll D. Wright (and he was wholly acceptable to both sides of the controversy, and his presence on the commission deemed necessary) to an organized labor man instead, and a new position created in which Mr. Wright's expert knowledge could be utilized.

For this purpose the selection of E. E. Clark of Cedar Rapids, Ia., was remarkably felicitous. He was known to Baer and the other railroad men just as well as to Mitchell, for in his service of 12 years as grand chief of the Order of Railway Conductors he has come into close relation with the railroad presidents. Clark, while having the reputation of maintaining vigorously and successfully the interests of the members of his union, has always succeeded in doing it without strikes or disagreeable complications. He thus becomes, from all present appearances, an ideal arbitrator.

There is also a pleasant little concession to the miners in the selection of Thomas H. Watkins of Scranton as the man "practically acquainted with the mining and selling of coal." It had been widely proclaimed by the critics of the Morgan plan that no men answering this requirement could be found who was not under obligations to the railroad operators, and whose business or professional future did not depend upon "standing in" with them. The president intended to appoint no man on either side who needed to "stand in" with either interest. So he found a retired independent operator, who possesses large means. It is not suggested that he could be controlled by railroad favor; and as a former independent operator he represents an interest which it is well to have considered.

Bishop Spalding is regarded as a broad-minded and progressive man; his recent utterances on the coal strike have shown a deep interest in the subject. Most of the miners are of his religious faith, and the priests of the anthracite belt have, from the start, been influential factors in the controversy.

Both sides thus seem to be assured of fair play in the interpretation of the conditions presented in the Morgan proposal as fundamental, chiefly the recognition of the rights of non-union labor.

The other members of the board, about whose heads the controversy did not rage, seem to meet with exceptional favor. Judge Gray was for many years a Democratic senator from Delaware, and was also a member of the Paris peace commission, and appointed to the federal bench by President McKinley. He has no political aspirations to serve and is regarded as an ideally judicious arbitrator.

General Wilson has served on many special assignments. He is a man of integrity and vigor.

Edward W. Parker is pre-eminently a coal expert. A year ago he was made editor of The Engineer and Mining Journal, a position which he says he will now resign. His exhibit of the coal resources of the south, prepared for the Atlanta exposition, is well remembered.

The World's Coal Product

Washington, Oct. 17.—The United States geological survey estimates the world's production of coal in 1901 at 866,165,540 short tons. The three great coal producing countries of the world are the United States, Great Britain and Germany. Austria-Hungary comes fourth, France is fifth, Belgium sixth and Russia seventh. The last country, notwithstanding its vast area, produces only about 6 percent as much coal as the United States. The United States has made such remarkable increases in coal production that it now stands far in the lead of all competitors, with a production in 1901 exceeding that of Great Britain by 47,965,938 short tons.

THE AWFUL SOUFRIERE

Cannonading Accompanied the Latest Outbreak

ERUPTION FOR MANY HOURS

Sound of Boiling Caldron Still Audible In Vicinity of Volcano—Governor of St Vincent Denounced For Alleged Maladministration

Kingstown, B. W. I., Oct. 17.—A terrific eruption of the Soufriere volcano commenced Wednesday night. During the preceding day earth tremors, apparently too slight to be considered important, were experienced in the central and northern parts of the island.

At 8 o'clock Wednesday night there were indubitable indications of an eruption. Rumbling noises were heard and they increased until 9 o'clock, when the roaring volcanic giant belched out its deadly contents. This eruption was followed by a brief lull. Then, from 10 o'clock until 4 o'clock yesterday morning, the upheaval continued.

The outbreak was accompanied by an incessant and confused cannonading; there were incandescent clouds and sparkling matter was ejected. After 4 o'clock the disturbance gradually decreased, but the noise of the boiling cauldron is still audible in the districts neighboring the volcano.

Both craters of the Soufriere were apparently active and they are still steaming. Sand fell heavily everywhere from 1:30 until 2:30 yesterday morning. At southern points the sand is half an inch deep. The depth gradually increased towards the volcano cone, where there were showers of large stones, pebbles and cinders.

Kingstown and other southern points of the island have not been damaged. Reports from the windward district are awaited.

This eruption caused darkness at Bridgetown, island of Barbados, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. There was a fall of volcanic dust there.

The sand ejected during the eruption has a stronger sulphurous odor than any previously thrown out.

The public meeting held here on Wednesday to discuss alleged misgovernment and maladministration of relief ly. Thousands of persons of all [illegible] including Carib Indians and other sufferers from the recent volcanic eruptions, were present. The following resolution was unanimously carried:

"That this meeting protests against the compulsory emigration scheme contained in the governor's minute to the administrator as a monstrous violation of the rights and liberties of these loyal subjects to King Edward; as an inequitable attempt to deprive them of their rightful share in help from the relief fund, thereby frustrating the intentions of the generous contributors of this fund. This meeting flatly contradicts the governor's statement in the minute above referred to, namely, that 'the government cannot find homes for these people.' The government is holding in trust for these people a very large sum of money, etc., sufficient not only to acquire the lands necessary but to assist in restoring the industries of the colony, and,

"Resolved, That this meeting hereby calls upon the imperial secretary of state for the colonies to intervene between these people and the obstinate, cruel and arbitrary policy of the governor of the islands, and to direct that the sufferers be located in their own colony and homes without further delay."

The meeting further appealed to the colonial secretary to relieve Sir Robert Llewellyn of the government of this colony.

Old Diplomat to Depart

Washington, Oct. 17.—J. B. Pioda, for many years envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Switzerland to the United States, yesterday presented to the president his letters of recall. DEADLOCK UNBROKEN

Three Boston Democrats May Run For Congress on Nomination Papers

Boston, Oct. 17.—No nomination for congress was made by the Ninth district Democratic convention yesterday, and the proceedings wound up in hurly-burly fashion, physical encounters among the delegates alone being stopped by the energy of the police. As the time for filing the convention nomination expired at 5 o'clock the Democrats must resort to nomination papers, to be filed before 5 p. m. today. This district is so overwhelmingly Democratic that Charles H. Witt, named by the Republicans, will have only a fighting chance even if three Democrats run. The Democratic aspirants are Conry, Kelliher and Dennison.

In the final proceedings yesterday there rose above the conflict the voices of Martin Lomasney, a stalwart leader of ward eight, and Congressman Conry, trying to be recognized. As they worked their way toward the chairman's table the delegates began moving that way. Finally both Lomasney and Conry were placed on the chairman's table, a beautiful piece of furniture prior to this, and above them also towered Police Sergeant Fessenden, a giant in size, as he strove to keep both men from Chairman Driscoll. The table was upset, but the chief figures in the struggle then took the platform. By this time the delegates, for the most part, had lost their heads, and a wilder scene has not been recorded here for some time. The police officers had the situation well in hand, however, and while they were holding back those with combative tendencies the clock struck 5 and the end came.

End of "Waddingham's Folly"

New Haven, Oct. 17.—Fire laid in ruins the magnificent residence recently bought by Thomas H. Linahan of this city from the executors of the estate of the late Wilson Waddingham. It was by many called "Waddingham's Folly" and is said to have cost Mr. Waddingham $354,000, exclusive of furnishings and the land and stables. The structure was of stone and brick, and throughout was lavishly decorated with fine woods and stone carvings. Spontaneous combustion among some painters' materials is believed to have started the fire.

End of Endeavor Convention

Boston, Oct. 17.—The final Christian Endeavor sessions were held last evening. Among the resolutions adopted was one "gladly appreciating the patriotic services of the beloved president of our country for his persevering [illegible] the coal operators and their employees." The closing message to the convention was delivered by Rev. Francis E. Clark and the services ended with a few moments of silent meditation and resolve concerning the work of the coming year.

Will Purge Trust Evils

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 17.—A meeting addressed by Senator Beveridge of Indiana opened the Republican campaign here last night. Senator Beveridge spoke chiefly on trusts and pledged the administration to purge them of the evils which are not being removed by natural causes. Senator Beveridge made only a passing reference to the coal strike, speaking of it as one of the problems successfully solved by a Republican president.

Rhode Island Town Stirred Up

Scituate, R. I., Oct. 17.—On last Sunday night Town Clerk Potter was summoned to answer a call at the door of his home and upon his appearance a stranger fired point-blank at him, the bullet rending his hat. The assailant then fled. Potter, previous to the assault, had received a number of threatening letters. The demand for the arrest of the culprit has become so general that the town council has offered a reward of $500 for his capture.

Blaze In Fort Ethan Allen

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 17.—For the first time in its history fire visited Fort Ethan Allen last evening, and one of the stables was burned to the ground and several horses killed. The blaze started in the hay loft. The fire quickly brought troops to the spot, but owing to insufficient water supply it was impossible to save the building. Much hay, straw and grain were also burned. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Good Afternoon

Large quantities of coal are arriving in Boston daily. On Thursday some twenty thousand tons were brought in in steamers, schooners and barges. There will be no need of suffering in that city this winter for lack of coal.

As there is plenty of coal in Quincy, enough to last until January, so our local dealers say, there need be no worrying in this city for want of fuel. Large quantities will arrive before one-half of the present stock is consumed, and prices should not be over seven or eight dollars a ton, if it is sold at the mines at $4.65; as an operator announces.

Secretary Wilson promises a fall in beef prices to their normal level before December 1st. We notice that one of the dealers in this city is now advertising sixteen cents.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The French coal strike is not so old as ours and is only a little one at best, but it is getting along pretty fast. The troops are already on the scene and several bloody conflicts have occurred, and coal contracts are being placed in England. The miners' organization over there has as little regard for the public as do the operators here, and have enlisted the aid of the dock workers at the ports so that they refuse to handle English coal.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞The determination of the government at Washington to keep American troops in Cuba until a treaty with that island is made will give satisfaction to the American people. Only a few United States soldiers are in Cuba, chiefly at one or two ports. President Palma has asked that they be withdrawn. It is the intention of President Roosevelt, however, to let them remain until the treaty is adopted which was provided for in the Platt amendment, and which was to embody the provisions of that stipulation. The sooner Cuba frames or accedes to a treaty of that sort the sooner the American soldiers will be taken away from the island.—Milford Journal.

☞Roumania has been engaged in the enslavement or the extermination of the Jews. Under the treaty of Berlin, the Balkan states are prohibited from discriminating against religious doctrines, but Roumania has made it practically impossible, by a series of laws, for a large number of her subjects, who happen to be Jews, to gain a livelihood. The United States, through John Hay, secretary of state, has called the attention of the world to this barbarous condition. Mr. Hay's famous letter in behalf of the Roumanian Jews is a fine mark of American diplomacy. Instead of being considered an interference, it has been upheld by the best of the European press.—Success.

☞At the recent convention of the joint committees of the Women's Republican clubs of Colorado, the president of the State League said some significant things and one of them was this: "We must not work under the direction of men. We will work with them, welcome their advice, but we must work under women and only good women." The "machine" politicians cannot be expected to favor equal suffrage when the women talk like that, or like the Democratic Women's club who said: "We must have our own money and be independent of professional politicians." Pretty soon we will be favored with another batch anonymous opinions from "prominent" men declaring that women suffrage in Colorado is a failure,—Ida Husted Harper in New York Sun.

☞From Chicago comes the proposal that the suburban dweller shall breakfast upon a trolley dining car in order that he may save the half hour (or is it only ten minutes in Chicago?) lost in breakfasting at home. By this plan the coming millionaire jumps out of bed and, boarding the trolley car, finds that his previously-ordered breakfast is ready for him, and by the time he has eaten it he is landed at the office ready for business. But the physician and the ordinary human ruminant must in amazement ask, Why have any home at all? What is the use of marriage and children, all the old-fashioned ways, and all the ridiculous old things such as health, religion, ethics, poetry, love, peace, and the rest? Why not have meals served in the office, and supply one's self with a patent desk which, at the end of the business day, by the push of a button is transformed into a bed? If sleep is slow in coming under such circumstances "the hypodermic man" is at the command of the telephone. When digestion fails, as it is likely to do after a few years of machine feeding, chemistry will probably supply all foods in a predigested state, and any way by that time the great physiologist, Death may have an important question to ask. — American Medicine.

☞The truth seems to be that in Massachusetts at least—however it is in other Eastern States—there is a very distinct revolution of feeling as regards the tariff among business men. On no other ground can the extraordinary utterances of various congressional candidates be explained. Although they express a perfunctory saving belief in the soundness of a protective policy, it is clear that they are more concerned with the exceptions than with the rule, and that no economic theory has a ghost of a show before the plain fact that their constituents are demanding relief from undue tariff exactions. They are actually, though not professedly, standing almost where the Democratic candidates stood when seven of them were sent to Congress from Massachusetts. It is not strange that the party leaders are dismayed. But it will be strange if their desperate appeals have much effect. The tide is [illegible]rs. Partington will have to retreat before it.—Providence Journal.

☞Some person unknown entered a police station in Worcester and stole a dog that was tied there. The funniest part of the incident was that the officials allowed news of the theft to escape.—Globe.

Great Activity.

The Reading Railroad Company are making great preparation to supply coal promptly. They have 23,000 cars. About one-half of this number has been in use in the bituminous trade, while the remainder are lying idle on the Reading's new belt line in Philadelphia. All of these cars will be hurried to the mining regions. When the strike began nearly 5000 car handlers were laid off, and these will be re-engaged as rapidly as possible.

The company also has thirty barges lying at its wharves in Port Richmond, with a capacity of 1450 tons each, which are ready for immediate use. Their tugs, which have been in use in the soft coal trade, are being hurried back.

Foot Ball at the Park.

The Wollaston Foot ball team will play Hyde Park A. A. on Saturday afternoon at the park. As usual Hyde Park has a very strong team and a hard game is expected.

Last week the Wollastons were crippled by the absence of two good linemen; Connell and Kemp at guard and Ripley at tackle will strengthen the line this week.

Police have been engaged and the spectators will be kept behind the side lines thus giving everybody an equal change to see the game to good advantage.

G. R. Kent, Assistant Manager.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Col. A. B. Packard Passes Away.

Was An Example of Self-Made Man.

Was Colonel of 4th Regt. During the Civil War.

It was a shock to the community at large this morning to learn that Col. Abner B. Packard, one of Quincy's oldest residents had passed away during the night. The shock was all the more sudden when it was known that while not in the best of health, he had been about as usual and on Thursday was at his office in Boston.

He spent the early part of the evening at home and retired at his usual hour. Sometime near midnight he got up and watched the eclipse of the moon.

Shortly after he complained of a pain near his heart and got up and sat in a chair.

Mrs. Packard prepared a hot drink for him but it did not appear to give any relief and before aid could be summoned he had passed away.

Col. Packard was born in Quincy Nov. 21, 1821 and was a son of William and Lucy (Turner) Packard.

After completing his education in the public school he went to Boston where he was employed as a clerk for two or three years. He subsequently engaged in mercantile pursuits with his brother for two or three years and then started his present business. With a team he went through the country purchasing lead until his money was exhausted, then returning with his load of about a thousand pounds he unloaded it in a corner, mentally wondering if he was ever to get his money back. One day while in Boston he entered the old Dickinson Type Foundry and finding that they would purchase lead, he returned home, warded it to the foundry. From this small beginning he soon had two other large foundries among his customers.

Afterward he engaged in the manufacture of type metal and now supplies nearly all the linotype and stereotype metal used in New England and New York.

He was also associated in business with his two sons, Frank C., and Walter M., and with his nephew Elisha. This firm was the first to make ink for shoemakers' use.

In his younger days he manufactured boots for a few years, employing twenty men.

He also took a great interest in military affairs in early life.

In 1855 when the Hancock Light Guards was formed out of the know-nothing organization, or "Guards of Liberty," he became its captain. This company was attached to the 4th regiment being known as Co. H. A year later he was made lieutenant-colonel. Two years later on July 10, 1857, he was commissioned colonel.

At the breaking out of the war in 1861 this regiment was one of the first to respond to the call of the President. At that time means of communication was extremely limited so that Colonel Packard was obliged to dispatch men on horseback to the eight different towns from Dorchester to Plymouth and Taunton to notify the several companies.

The following day, an hour ahead of the 6th Regt., they embarked for Fortress Monroe. Shortly after arriving the regiment was sent to Newport News and with other troops advanced into the enemy's country as far as Big Bethel. Here a portion of his regiment took part in the first pitched battle of the war. Later it was sent to Hampton, where it remained until the expiration of its three months' term of enlistment, when it was mustered out.

In 1862 it was again called out and waited in Boston three days when they were discharged.

Colonel Packard married Elizabeth, daughter of Lewis Newcomb, in November 1849. They have had six children, of whom Frank C. and Walter M. are living.

Colonel Packard's residence is among the most attractive in Quincy. It is situated on Hancock street and runs through to Chestnut street. The metal foundry and other manufactory buildings are in the rear. Adjoining the residence is a large conservatory and many plants from here have been used in beautifying the premises.

He was a director of the Mt. Wollaston Bank and the Quincy Electric Light Co. and was one of the vice-presidents of the Minute Men's Association.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Many sat up late Thursday night to see the eclipse of the moon and were well repaid for their trouble.

The city offices which have been located in the old French house on Washington street have begun to move back to City Hall.

The harvest supper at the M. E. Church on Beale street, Wollaston was a success. A large number was present and later in the evening games were participated in.

A Curse to the Country.

James H. Torrey of Scranton, Penn., a member of the Board of Trade of that city, says: "There are a number of varieties of labor unions. Many of them deserve and receive the encouragement of employers. But the union whose underlying principle is unreasoning suspicion of and hostility to employers; whose motive is the arbitrary control of every branch of the business; whose officers are selected for their effectiveness as agitators; whose weapons are dynamite, the boycott and the bludgeon; whose videttes are walking delegates inspired by the motto, 'Find a grievance or make one'; whose effect is the reduction of efficiency to the lowest level, and whose ultimate end is communism, is an unmitigated curse to employer, employed and the common weal. In the opinion of the business interests of the anthracite region, which through the Scranton Board of Trade I represent, such an union is the U. M. W. A. In resisting its demands the anthracite coal operators are fighting our battle and yours, and their defeat will mark a long step in the direction of fastening upon this country the grip of this class of unions, which would in the end stifle its industrial life and end its commercial progress."

Price of Coal.

In the monthly statistics of the treasury department average prices for export of a number of articles are given. These show that in October of 1901 the price for anthracite coal at the mines was $4.57 a ton, declining to $4.56 in November and advancing to $4.69 in December. In the present year the price opened in January at $4.67, falling in February to $4.65, recovering in March to $4.67, then falling off to $4.55 [illegible] the price which an operator now quotes. Surely, if the mine owners set the wholesale price of coal at the same figure that they asked last May, they can fairly claim that they are not trying to get back from the public as soon as the strike is over all that they lost by their mines being closed.

Preparations have been made by the coal carrying roads to bring coal to the seaboard with the greatest possible speed. Dealers say the stringency in supply in Boston will be passed in two weeks and that almost normal conditions will prevail in another month. As an earnest, the retail coal dealers' association has informally decided to reduce the price of hard coal next Monday to $10 a ton. Prices of bituminous coal have already broken.

—Brigadier Gen. Funston, in his annual report for the department of Colorado, makes a strong plea for the reinstatement of the army canteen. It seems to be the general opinion among army officers that the canteen system was in the interests of temperance and morality in army camps.—Gardner Journal.

No other medicine acts like it; no other medicine has done so much real, substantial good, no other medicine has restored health and strength at so little cost.

"I was troubled with scrofula and came near losing my eyesight. For four months I could not see to do anything. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I could see to walk, and when I had taken eight bottles I could see as well as ever." SUSIE A. HAINSTON, Withers, N. C.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

MERE MEN.

It is said that Thomas A. Edison has never owned a watch. "The one thing I want least of all to know," says he, "is the time."

John Saint Loe Strachey, the editor and owner of the London Spectator, will make a flying visit to this country in November.

William Edmond Curtis, assistant secretary of the treasury under President Cleveland, has been appointed by Mayor Low a member of the aqueduct commission of New York.

Camille Flammarion, the astronomer and social reformer, has introduced a bill in the French chamber of deputies for the rationalizing of the calendar. He wants the year to start with the vernal equinox and to consist of 364 days.

Admiral Schley recently celebrated the thirty-ninth anniversary of his wedding at Laconia, N. H., and the village folks presented to him a French clock and candelabra of ornamental design wrought in bronze to express their gratitude for the commander's personal service to New Hampshire.

Lord Francis Hope has finally settled with his English creditors on the basis of a cash compromise of $2.50 on the pound sterling. The claims amount to $109,100. In addition to this amount a claim was lodged by his former wife, May Yohe, who asked for $45,935, but her claim was repudiated by the debtor.

Colonel Hardy W. B. Price of Clayton, Ala., is one of the few still surviving who took part in the battle of San Jacinto, which decided Texas independence, is hale and hearty and remembers the battle as though it happened but yesterday. He is eighty-five years of age, having been born in Edgecombe county, N. C., on May 6, 1817.

General Ottolenghi, the military instructor of the present king of Italy, was a great favorite of King Humbert and Queen Margharita. He is an orthodox Hebrew, and while he was military commander in Turin he never neglected to visit the synagogue. His example induced several officers of his race who had given up their faith to return to it.

THE WRITERS.

It has leaked out that Laurence Housman, a literary man of London, is the author of "An Englishwoman's Love Letters."

Henryk Sienkiewicz, the author of "Quo Vadis," has a somewhat peculiar habit. He invariably uses red ink when writing his manuscripts and cannot be induced to use ink of any other color.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale has the distinction of being the oldest prominent American author since the death of Thomas Dunn English. Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, who [illegible] will be eighty in December.

Paul du Chaillu, kindest and most cheerful of travelers, has been living in Russia for the last year, busied in the collection of material for a book dealing with that country. He means to devote three or four years more to this preparation, perfecting himself in the language, of which he already has an excellent knowledge.

LAW POINTS.

Previous notice is held in Bagley versus Reno Oil company (Pa.), 56 L. R. A. 184, to be indispensable to render valid a change at a regular annual corporate meeting in the bylaws of the corporation increasing the number of directors.

A tenant for life in possession of real estate is held in Hanna versus Palmer (Ill.), 56 L. R. A. 93, not to be able to obtain an absolute title to the property, either directly or indirectly, by suffering it to be sold for taxes and then acquiring a tax title.

A prosecution, maliciously and without probable cause, of a civil action in which there has been no restraint of the person or seizure of property is held in McCormick Harvesting Machine company versus Willan (Neb.), 56 L. R. A. 338, to entitle the defendant therein to damages.

TALES OF CITIES.

The new city directory of Chillicothe, Mo., gives that town a population of over 8,000.

The two American cities in which the number of colored inhabitants is increasing most largely are Washington and Philadelphia.

Manchester, England, is an exceptionally noisy city. It has no smooth roadways, no asphalt or wood blocks, and rubber tired vehicles are unusual.

The per capita debt of Boston is $30 more than that of New York city. After New York, with a per capita debt of $115, come Cincinnati with $82, Baltimore with $78, Pittsburg with $68, Buffalo with $45, Philadelphia with $48, Cleveland with $31, St. Louis with $33 and Chicago with $10.

COLLEGE AND SCHOOL.

Pembroke college, Cambridge, does not believe in young presidents. It has elected as its master Sir George Gabriel Stokes, the great mathematician, who is eighty-three years of age.

Dr. Simon Newcomb, professor emeritus of mathematics and astronomy in Johns Hopkins university, has just had the honorary degree of doctor of philosophy conferred upon him by the Christiania university.

A GENEROUS ACT.

Mayor Bryant Gives Salary for Charitable Purposes.

When Mayor Bryant assumed the office of Chief Executive last January, he informed his friends that it was his intention to give his salary for charitable purposes. This promise he has now fulfilled. Of his salary of $1000, he gives $500 to the committee having in charge the furnishing of fuel and $500 to the city hospital.

Editors of the Ledger:

Gentlemen: I enclose copy of letter received from His Honor the Mayor. The need of a contagious ward at the hospital, for which he contributes so liberally, is so urgent that I hope his example may induce others to realize the great benefit to the city which would arise if we possessed such a ward.

Very truly yours,
Timothy Reed, Secretary.

Mayor's Office,
Quincy, October 14, 1902.

Treasurer Quincy City Hospital, Quincy Mass.

Dear Sir: It is my desire to turn over my salary as mayor to public charities, and realizing the good work that the City Hospital is doing in Quincy, I enclose herewith my check for $500. I am perfectly willing that the trustees should use this money for any purpose that they see fit in connection with the hospital. I should be pleased however, to have them start a fund for the erection of a contagious ward, and, if they were so minded, this $500 might be set aside as a beginning for such a fund.

In my official capacity as mayor of the city I have discovered that there is need of a contagious ward in the hospital. There are many poor people, or people of limited means, who can ill afford to have their houses closed up and the inmates not allowed to attend to their work or business because of the quarantine restrictions, particularly in cases of diphtheria, scarlet fever, etc. If there was a contagious ward at the hospital, it would afford many people who could ill afford the expense of conducting a quarantined hospital in their own premises to have the patients attended at the hospital.

I am yours very truly,
C. M. Bryant, Mayor.

Coal for the Poor.

To the Editor of the Ledger:

If the meeting called by Mayor Bryant to take action concerning the scarcity of coal had not been diverted from its purpose, suggestions concerning the distribution of coal would have been considered at the last meeting; and the suggestion of Mayor Bryant as given in yesterday's Ledger, would not in my judgment have been approved.

The community do not wish the distribution of coal to those suffering from the high prices to be in any way under the care of the Overseer of the Poor. This Citizens Aid society is not formed for the purpose of aiding paupers. The city is bound to do that, and can obtain its coal at market prices. This society is formed to help those who would otherwise suffer from want of coal who are not, and never have been, dependent upon the city.

Let it have no suggestion of pauperization about it. Let any scheme be considered but this.

A Helper.

The Eclipse.

Harvard's astronomical authorities observed the eclipse of the moon on a big scale last night. From 8 o'clock in the evening until 4 o'clock this morning the scene at the observatory was one of bustle and excitement. Lights flashed on every hand, telescopes ranged the sky, and automatic, self-regulating cameras kept up a continuous clatter as they clicked off the seconds after an electric clock. The conditions for observing the eclipse were unusually favorable—the night proved cold and clear—just the right kind for visual and photographic observations, although threatened slightly at the start by light, fleecy clouds.

—Bradstreet is of the opinion that the anthracite coal trade has suffered a blow that it will not readily recover from, in the substitution of other fuel, as a matter of necessity, which will be continued as a matter of choice. When the country was forced to it, the discovery was made that it could get along quite comfortably without anthracite.

TWO CELEBRATIONS.

Two Important Church Events Observed.

The second anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. James Todd, D. D., of the Water street Presbyterian church, and the fifteenth anniversary of the rededication of the church were celebrated Thursday evening in a fitting manner.

James Joss was chairman of the committee of arrangements and presided. He was assisted by Miss Jennie Joss, Mrs. James Milne, Mrs. Alex Emslie, Thomas C. Cantley, Alex Howie, John McLennan and Forbes Craig.

Rev. Dr. Todd gave a brief history of the work of the church in which he said during the fifteen years 743 had been united with it, 55 of whom were during his pastorate. Other brief addresses were made by Hon. E. M. McPherson of East Boston, Henry H. Faxon, John D. McKay and Alex. Clark.

There was also singing by the choir, vocal solos by Louis Griffiths and Harry Phillips, clarinet solo by Alex. Raleigh, vocal duets by Alex. Raleigh and John Garmory and Miss Maggie Esson and Emmet Marr, cornet solo by John Garmory. A supper and a general good time closed the exercises.

Hewitson Association.

The Edward Hewitson Associates are going to resume their music practice with Mr. H. Y. Follet next Tuesday evening, at the Baptist vestry at 7.45 o'clock. All young men who sing are cordially invited to be present.

The first regular meeting will occur on Saturday evening, Oct. 25.

They are to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Simmons of Central avenue. A varied and interesting program has been prepared and a good attendance is hoped for. A leading feature of entertainment will be a talk by a Harvard student, the son of ex-Gov. Black of New York. Subject: "How Elections are conducted."

The club will miss some of its members who are at present engaged in business or attending college. It is hoped however that the ranks will be kept filled by others coming in who have reached the age of seventeen years.

An unique entertainment by the club is proposed in the near future.

Harvest Festival.

A very successful harvest festival was held at the Washington Street Congregational church Thursday evening by the Ladies' Aid society. Tables containing a large variety of fruit and vegetables were arranged about the church. These were presided over by Mrs. Stone, Mrs. M. E. Wight, Mrs. R. H. Newcomb and Mrs. Webster Newcomb.

A vegetable supper was served at 6.30 o'clock a large number partaking of it. At 8 o'clock Miss Emma Hayden and Miss Margaret Mills gave a pleasing entertainment. Miss Hayden, who is an accomplished musician, gave several pleasing piano solos. Miss Mills, who is a graduate of the New England Conservatory, contributed several readings. Miss Mills has appeared before Quincy audiences before and her work this evening only cemented more firmly their friendship.

Ice cream was served after the entertainment and then Mr. Pitcomb sold at auction what vegetables remained unsold.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued case of William Hanrahan for violation of the liquor law at Houghs Neck was heard. He was fined $50 and sentenced to three months in the house of correction.

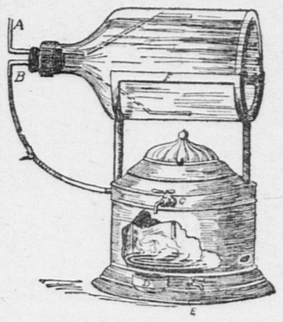
HYGIENE

In these days of sanitary precautions there is an increasing demand for pure drinking water. Physicians have succeeded in teaching the general public the evils of the ordinary ice water cooler, and as a consequence a number of improved coolers have been put on the market. Among these, says the Scientific American, is one invented by Mr. Charles F. Conover of New York city. The construction permits of conveniently drawing off the liquid and cooling the same without bringing it into direct contact with the cooling medium.

The cooler is provided with a bracket (F) extending upward, on which the water bottle or demijohn is supported.



SANITARY WATER COOLER.

The stopper of this bottle is provided with an air vent pipe (A) and a siphon pipe (B), the latter being connected by a flexible tube with the outer end of the coil resting on the bottom of the cooler. The inner end of this coil leads to a faucet (G), through which the water may be drawn off into a tumbler, supported on the drip pan (D).

Ice is placed on the coil to cool off the water circulating therein. The cooler is provided with a bottom pan, into which the drainage from the ice and from the drip pan flows. The faucet (E) connects with this pan and affords the means through which the waste water may be drained off. The flexible connection on tube (B) is preferably provided with a device by which it may be closed whenever it is disconnected from the siphon pipe at the time an empty bottle is being replaced by a filled one. As soon as proper connection with the coil has been made the siphon action begins, for the level of the liquid in the bottle is above the highest point of the siphon pipe.

This form of water cooler embodies many excellent advantages. Primarily, of course, the water is cooled without being contaminated by contact with the ice. Again, only a small amount of water is cooled at a time, so that when a fresh bottle has been connected up one does not need to wait until its entire contents have been cooled before obtaining a glassful of cold water. Mr. Conover's cooler will further be found economical in its consumption of ice.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

A New York brewing company is operating an automobile for delivering its product which is said to have the greatest capacity of any similar machine yet constructed. Its motive power is an ingenious combination of gasoline and electricity, the gasoline engine alone carrying the burden of the load on level stretches and at the same time accumulating the electric current, which is available on hills or for any other unusual demands.

The truck is capable of carrying eighty-three half barrels of beer, representing a load of nine tons. In one instance a seven and a half ton load was hauled twelve miles, one-third of which distance was up a hill of about 15 per cent.

This truck carries a complete central station equipment. The gasoline engine drives a twelve horsepower dynamo, which in turn supplies current to two electric motors of eight horsepower each. The overload is taken care of by means of a storage battery of forty-four cells. The average speed of this vehicle is forty-five miles an hour with a full load.

METALS AND MINERALS

New remarkable properties of aluminium are still being discovered. Its lightness, ductility and strength are well understood, but even these qualities are being constantly developed and enlarged.

Mixed with a small quantity of gold, a beautiful ruby tinted metal is produced that can be used for decorative art. It is said that a comparatively thin sheet of the metal will turn a bullet. Wire has been drawn from it as fine as and not much heavier than a fine silk fiber. In violins it produces a tone as fine as the most perfect Stradivarius.

The racing shells of it are constructed of sheets only one-nineteenth of an inch thick and are as strong as an inch board and less liable to break. It does not tarnish, and acids have no effect upon it. Race horses are shod with it. Wounds are sewed up with the wire.

An aluminium alloy is now used as a substitute for copper in the manufacture of nails and tacks. The white metal is much cheaper and in every way as durable and desirable as copper.

"Address as Above."

There is one lawyer in Brooklyn who will never again make use of Latin phrases in writing business letters. A short time ago he had to write a letter to a client in a neighboring city regarding an important lawsuit that was to come up before the court in the course of a few days. The information he solicited was highly essential to his case. In writing this epistle he made use of a letter head with his printed address at the top. In closing his letter he signed himself thus, "John Langdon, address ut supra."

After waiting several days for the reply, which did not come, he again wrote his procrastinating client and asked why he had not sooner answered his first letter. The next day he received a reply in which the client said that he had answered the letter and addressed it to "John Langdon, Ut Supra, N. Y."

She Will Keep Her Word.

When Grandmother Pettingill makes up her mind, she is as firm as a rock. Nothing can move her. Perhaps it was on this account that when she returned from the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the settlement of Shrubville and made such a determined declaration nobody attempted to influence her.

"I've been there, and it's over with," she said, "and now I'm home safe after all the noise and bands and scared horses and crying children and men making speeches, I want to tell you one thing. I shan't ever go to another centennial in Shrubville, no matter what the circumstances are and no matter who asks me. You children may as well bear that in mind."

Maidens Sold by Auction.

A singular custom obtains to this day in some of the towns on the lower Rhine--namely, that of "selling" maidens at public auction. For nearly four centuries on Easter Monday—auction day—the town crier or clerk of St. Goar has called all the young people together and to the highest bidder sold the privilege of dancing with the chosen girl, and her only, during the entire year. The fees are put into the public poor box.

A Serious Matter.

"So he's trying to live on other people's brains," said the publisher indignantly.

"What's the trouble? Has some one been stealing the ideas from your books?"

"I suppose so. But that's a minor matter. They're trying to coax away the man who writes my advertisements."—Washington Star.

His Conscience.

First Bohemian (to second ditto)—I can't for the life of me think why you wasted all that time haggling with that tailor chap and beating him down when you know, old chap, you won't be able to pay him at all.

Second Bohemian—Ah, that's it! I have a conscience. I want the poor chap to lose as little as possible!—Punch.

Violated Liquor Law.

William Hannahan, who is said to be the proprietor of the Shakespere Inn at Houghs Neck, was before the court this morning for violation of the liquor law. As this is the second time he has been convicted for the same offence this year the court imposed a fine of $50 and a sentence of three months in jail.

—In Brussells, Malines, and other Belgian towns a novel method of not only getting rid of smoke, but turning it to good account, has recently been employed. The smoke is driven by a ventilating fan into a filter filled with a porous material, over which a continuous stream of petroleum, alcohol, benzine or some fluid hydrocarbon flows. The result is that the smoke is entirely suppressed, while the filter yields a gas of great heating power, which can be used for domestic purposes and for driving gas engines. The filtering material itself also becomes a good combustible during the process.

TO MINERS' CONVENTION

Mitchell Will Submit the Modified Proposition

WILL URGE ITS ACCEPTANCE

Objections May Be Raised to It, but Union Officials Expect All Opposition to Disappear—General Resumption of Work Next Week

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 17.—The executive board of the three anthracite districts of the United States Mine Workers of America, in joint session yesterday, unanimously decided to recommend to a delegate convention of striking miners the acceptance of the arbitration proposition submitted by President Roosevelt and it is reasonably certain that the advice will be followed and the great struggle brought to a close.

The convention will be convened in this city Monday, and it is the hope and the belief of the officers of the union that the mining of coal will be resumed before the close of next week, after a suspension of more than five months. The citizens of the entire region are much elated that the strike is almost over, because business in the coal fields has been practically paralyzed since the strike began.

From the time the news was received late Wednesday night until about 10 o'clock yesterday morning there was some doubt as to how the miners would receive the modified plan. President Mitchell was asked to make some expression on the proposition, but he steadfastly refused. He was pressed by the correspondents for a statement and finally at 10 o'clock he cleared up the situation by issuing a bulletin in which he said he was willing to accept the modified plan, and from that time on there was no doubt that the strike would be brought to a speedy close.

It is expected that some objections will be raised on the floor of the convention, but the officers are confident that the opposition will disappear when Mr. Mitchell explains all the features of the modified proposition to the delegates.

If the plans of the strike leaders are not disarranged a general resumption of mining will take place about next Thursday. It is expected the convention will last two days and that there will be an interval of one day from the time the convention adjourns until the time set for the men to go back to the mines.

The coal companies, anticipating the ending of the strike next week, are busily engaged in preparing for resumption. Tens of thousands of coal cars are in the regions ready for loading and extra efforts will be made in moving them to the large distributing centres once mining is resumed. It is estimated that more than 200 of the 350 collieries will be in operation by the end of next week and will produce enough coal to relieve the situation. An authority in coal mining says the coal companies, as a result of the strike, are 30,000,000 tons behind.

There is considerable talk heard that the withdrawal of troops will begin in a day or two, but this cannot be confirmed. Soldiers are spending their time quietly in the camps.

President Mitchell has notified President Roosevelt of the action of the three executive boards. He will not give out the text of the message.

President Set Fine Example

London, Oct. 17.—"The president's triumph" is the subject of long dispatches and editorial articles in all the morning newspapers, and in some cases congratulations are also extended to J. P. Morgan. The opinions expressed are that President Roosevelt's action is a great lesson for British statesmen.

Ten Men Probably Drowned

Cleveland, Oct. 17.—J. C. Gilchrist, owner of the wrecked steamer C. B. Lockwood, has received a message from Ashtabula that the yawl boat which put off from the steamer when it was sinking Monday evening has been found bottom side up in the lake. There was no trace of the 10 men who left in the boat and it is believed they were drowned.

Divorce Suit's Bloody Sequel

Mount Pleasant, Mich., Oct. 17.—As the sequel of a divorce suit, Archie Woodin, 23 years old, is under arrest here. Mrs. Woodin's parents and the prisoner's 18-months-old daughter were shot and killed. Woodin was overpowered just as he was about to turn the weapon upon himself.

Lipton's Challenge Accepted

New York, Oct. 17.—The New York Yacht club last night sent a cablegram to Sir Thomas Lipton, accepting his challenge for the America cup on the same conditions for which it was raced for the last time. Lipton's challenge is almost identical with that sent by him in 1900.

Convicted of Double Murder

Bridgeton, N. J., Oct. 17.—Job M. Williams, a negro, was last night convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of John S. Holmes, a farmer, and Catherine Shute, his housekeeper. Robbery was the motive.

Denmark Orders War Material

Berlin, Oct. 17.—Denmark has ordered from the Essen works 128 Krupp field guns and 192 ammunition wagons.

HIS ONLY REGRET.

The Great Sorrow That Consumed Bichat When He Was Dying.

One century ago died Xavier Bichat, the famous physician and anatomist, author of "L'Anatomie Generale." He probably dissected more human corpses than any other man in the world's history. He established a record when he opened 625 bodies during one winter. He was not a vivisectionist and was wont to say, "I would rather dissect two dead people than kill one chicken."

Of his nerve a tale is told. When he lay on his deathbed, he called his colleagues to him and said: "Dear friends, I am done, but what comforts me is the fact that my case is a remarkable one. I have had unusual symptoms for some days which I have analyzed. They have greatly surprised me." The doctors sought to reassure him. He answered that he was under no illusion with regard to himself. "I shall die fairly satisfied with my life and go to the grave with only one regret, one great sorrow."

"What is that?" he was asked. "I am distressed that after death I cannot dissect my own body. I could, I am certain, have made some beautiful scientific discoveries." Then he sank back, murmuring: "I must not think about it. It won't bear thinking of."

Birds' Nests and Poetry.

Birds' nests have attracted the attention of inquisitive genius from the days of Aristotle down to the present time. This is not wonderful, because the nests are invariably curious and often beautiful, besides offering a cradle, as it were, for a host of romantic speculations and poetical theories. Imagination has taken hold of birds and their nests with singular affection, drawing forth meantime some beautiful legends to enrich romance withal and to add to the sum of what is most persistent in the song of mankind.

The ancients told that the halcyon, a beautiful aquatic bird, had its nest on the sea's breast, a little floating palace around which the water was always calm and sweet. Halcyon, or alcyon, was the kingfisher, it is supposed, but we now know every species of this bird, and none of them builds its nest to drift about on the sea. Indeed, as if to make the contrast of fact with fancy as great as possible, most of the kingfishers dig deep holes in the ground for their homes.

How to Prolong Life.

The following rules for warding off death have been compiled with great care for the Modern Miller by experts, and meet with the indorsement of the most competent medical authorities in the world:

Never step into an elevator hatchway when the car is not there.

Do not permit yourself to be run over by a street car or railroad train.

Under no circumstances allow a brick to drop from the top of a building on to your head.

Be careful not to be in a place when a bolt of lightning strikes it.

Never fall from the top of a high building.

Do not take hold of a live electric wire. Both you and the wire cannot remain alive.

Training Is Necessary.

The time has come when, to be master in any line, it requires long years of careful training and preparation. It is true that the opportunities open to young men are greater today than they ever were before; but, on the other hand, there never was a period in the world's history when the qualifications requisite for success in any line of worthy endeavor were of a higher character, says Success. The artisan, the farmer, the business man, the clergyman, the physician, the lawyer, the scientist, each in his various rank must prepare to reach up to ever enlarging ideals if he would attain his full height.

Negro's Kicking Hair.

A boy big enough to have reached the subject of races of men—not horses—in his geography class was asked to describe the negro. His answer, "The negro has kicking hair and producing lips," showed that he had at least heard the teacher when she spoke of the "kinky" hair and "projecting" lips characterizing his dark skinned brother. His answer really was not so funny as the remark made by a woman who in speaking of her sister said feelingly, "Oh, she's all misconstrued, so we had to take her to the hospital for a performance."—New York Herald.

Her Saving Way.

Mrs. Scale Downie—I will have to get another girl, though only temporarily, perhaps a month or so.

Mr. Scale Downie—Three dollars more a week and board! What do you want an extra girl for?

Mrs. Scale Downie—I have found out how to make just the loveliest little hanging cabinet you ever saw at a cost of only $2, but it will take me several weeks to do it.—New York Weekly.

A Discouraging Position.

"Do you think a literary woman ought to marry?"

"Not if she is a novelist. Her ideas of manly perfection as depicted in her books would be enough to make any conscientious husband give up in despair and leave home to look for work as a truck driver."—Washington Star.

Time.

Time is the most paradoxical of all things; the past is gone, the future is not come, and the present becomes the past while we attempt to define it.

When a man has difficulty in finding a chance to propose, he can make up his mind that the girl doesn't want him.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Crowds Cheered Boer Generals Upon Their Arrival In Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 17.—The Boer generals arrived at the Tiergarten station here from Paris yesterday and were welcomed by Herr Lueckhoff, president of the reception committee. They were driven to the Hotel of the Four Seasons where they were received with great enthusiasm. Herr Trojan, an editor, greeted them by reading a sonnet. In his reply to the editor, General Botha emphasized the non-political character of the mission of the Boers, the only purpose of which, he said, was to alleviate the unspeakable misery of their people. The generals responded to the calls of the immense crowds in front of the hotel by appearing on the balcony of the building and each addressing a few words to the people. Their remarks were of the same tenor. General De Wet said the Boers had been defeated in war and submitted to their fate.

Crowds lingered in front of the hotel until after 10 o'clok at night. An unusually strong detail of police remained in the adjacent streets in readiness to suppress any political demonstration. The visitors received an ovation from large crowds of people along the route from the railroad station to their hotel.

Federals Had No Show

San Juan, P. R., Oct. 17.—The election registrations have been a complete farce. The Federals were shut out in a majority of the precincts of the island, due to an order of the executive council placing a majority of Republicans on each board. At Vieques eight insular policemen guarded the booth, no Federals were admitted and none registered. In many towns the Federals formally retired from the elections.

FEEDS ONE—STARVES OTHER

Feeds the body—starves the microbes! That is what Scott's Emulsion does in consumption.

We can't expect to understand all about these germs and microbes the doctors talk of. They say that one kind causes consumption. Consumption microbes feed on weak lungs. Perhaps that's so.

At any rate we know that Scott's Emulsion has a peculiar action on the lungs which gives the lungs new life and vigor. Healthy lungs starve the microbes out.

Life for the lungs and flesh for the body, that is what the consumptive has a right to expect from Scott's Emulsion. An ideal food and tonic for any form of wasting disease.

"I have been fairly active in national elections since 1876, and in state elections since 1888, and I never saw Col. Caston on a platform nor in a committee.---HON. JOHN E. RUSSELL. August 13, 1902.

"I am Carrie Nation," she said, "and was never known to leave a saloon hell until I got good and ready." Davis stepped from behind the bar and, upon Mrs. Nation's record refusal to vacate, he caught her by the back of the neck and one arm and threw her bodily into the street and her satchel immediately followed her.

The Social Realm.

Ah, love and love alone at last will solve
All the vast, threatening questions that distract
Mankind; that fellow-men in strife array,
And the whole world with fierce contentions rend.
Still keep your idle millions under arms—
Fed on the borrowed substance of the poor—
Still watch each other with keen jealousy,
Still slaughter thousands on the field of war,
Or strive with statesman's craft to arbitrate;
Thread thy sly mazes of diplomacy,
Try communistic cares for every ill,
And when all fails at last for lack of love,
Try love—the mightiest of them all—and win!
—Henry Nehemiah Dodge.

ASSAULTED OFFICER.

August Peterson and John Bjornson Given a Hearing.

Affair Took Place Last September.

Officer Bradley After Being Injured Shot One of the Men.

The cases against August Peterson and John Bjornson for assault on Officer Bradley on the morning of Sept. 9 were heard in the district court this morning.

This was the case where Officer Bradley after being struck on the head with a rock drew his revolver and fired three shots one of which took effect in the body of Bjornson.

Peterson was also arraigned for assault on Joseph McLaughlin. Upon request of counsel the men were tried separately.

City Solicitor Blackmur appeared the government, W. W. Jenness for Peterson and Charles O. Engstrom for Bjornson.

Joseph McLaughlin testified that he saw the two men under the railroad bridge on Granite street. He shook hands with both. Bjornson asked if I knew John Anderson. I replied that I did and upon that Peterson struck him a blow which knocked him down. He then told Peterson that he would get an officer who would take care of him at which he replied. If you do the fellow will get the knife. I then started to go home. When I arrived at Gass place I saw Peterson and Bjornson in my front yard.

A rock was thrown at me and I went after Officer Bradley. We came up Whitwell street but found no trace of either men. Officer Bradley then left me as it was thought the two men had gone home. I then started home and when I arrived near my home the rocks began to fly and I shouted to the officer. He returned and a number of stones were thrown at him. I saw the men rush at the officer and I saw Bjornorn who had something done up in a white cloth with which he struck Officer Bradley on the head.

Officer Bradley corroborated the statements of McLaughlin and that he recognized the defendants as the parties who threw them. He also testified to drawing his revolver and firing at them.

Chief Hayden testified that Peterson told him that he was on Gass place the night in question and that Bjornson was with him.

Peterson testified that he was a stone cutter. On the night of Sept. 8 he met McLaughlin on Granite street. McLaughlin brushed up against him and he pushed him off the sidewalk. After this he started down town. That was the last seen of him.

At 12.30 an adjournment was taken until 1.30 for dinner.

At that time the evidence was being heard in the case against Bjornson.

A large number of witnesses had been summoned and it will be late this afternoon before the case is completed.

From the evidence of the government thus far it would appear that the men did not recognize the officer at the time of the alleged assault. Officer Bradley in his testimony stated that when he saw Bjornson on the night of the affair, after he had been shot, that he expressed surprise that he had done the shooting and inquired of the officer why he did not say who it was. He also said that Bjornson shook hands with him and said he was sorry and asked to be forgiven.

WHEN Mlle. Ninette snatched the packet with Mr. Reynolds Van Schaick's name on the card attached, she caught up her manicure scissors, the nearest thing at hand that could cut except her tongue—and that would not cut string even if it might knots—in a fever to get at the contents.

The young American had hinted at "a present worthy of her genius, her charms and his regard." He seemed to be tremendously epris and to have plenty of money. This box might contain a riviere, a tiara, a string of oriental pearls! Her tapering fingers went unconsciously to her round white throat. She looked immensely pretty with that glow of childlike avarice in her sapphire eyes, expectation and impatience parting her humid scarlet lips.

Snip, snip, snip—the tearing of paper, then the soft crushing of tissue folds that still protected the precious gift, a box of ebony with a pretty picture of a naked lady set in the lid, whose nude children, with wings, were trying to protect their poor undraped mamma! She opened it with the tiny silver key in the lock, panting.

Bonbons!

Mlle. Ninette uttered a yawp of indignation. This was a wealthy American's idea of "a princely gift!" And he in love! She had five pound boxes of bonbons sent her every week. She shared them with her maid and Blackie, her tiny Pomeranian, who was getting wabbly fat on the diet.

"Sapristi! Imbecile! Cochon!" She rushed to the window and hurled the box and all into the street. Then she bounded to her escritoire and wrote a white hot note of thanks to Mr. Reynolds Van Schaick.

So kind of you to send me the pretty picture box and the bonbons. It is such a unique tribute to a Parisian actress of my standing! Blackie, my little dog, joins me in my gratitude to monsieur for his princely gift. Chocolate almonds are his favorite sweet, and my friends have for years seen that he never lacks them.

I chanced to hear the other day that my name had been coupled with yours in the senseless chatter of Paris boulevardiers. That anything so banale should rise from your childlike admiration of my art, expressed by a pound of bonbons, your first, as it must be your last, generous tribute! The slander does injustice to my common sense and your restrained nature. We are incapable of such betise. I have regard for my reputation as—not a fool! Henceforth avoid even such trivial attentions as a box of chocolates for Blackie, even if they are in a box with a pretty picture on the lid and a silver key. Adieu, M. Reynolds Van Schaick!

The chocolates and their dainty receptacle fell on a young Englishman thoughtfully approaching Mlle. Ninette's hotel, the box striking him sharply on the shoulder. He said something in his native tongue natural to the occasion and was about to kick the fallen box venomously in further appreciation. Instead he picked it up, looked at it, glanced up at the open window and, shaking out a bonbon still sticking in it, thrust the box inside his waistcoat so that it was concealed.

* * * * * * *

"But it is a most unfavorable moment to see mademoiselle," expostulated Marie, her maid, to the young man when he presented himself at the door of the actress. "She is in a terrible chagrin."

"What's the row, Marie?"

"Oh," a shrug of the shoulders, "the young American who has been for weeks trying to gain her favor vexed her by a stupid present—a box of bonbons, vraiment, with a picture on the lid, and, c'est drole, a silver key! As if a silver key could make a five franc gift imposing!"

"Or a twenty-five thousand franc one," he laughed softly. "I should have thought she would have pitched it out of the window without a look at it," he added sympathetically.

"That is exactly what she did!" cried Marie.

Mr. Reynolds Van Schaick was surprised to find his father with him one morning at the Hotel du Rhin. They exchanged friendly greetings and went for a drive in the Bois.

"How is your French getting on?" inquired Van Schaick pere, glancing innocently at the leafage of the Alles des Acacias.

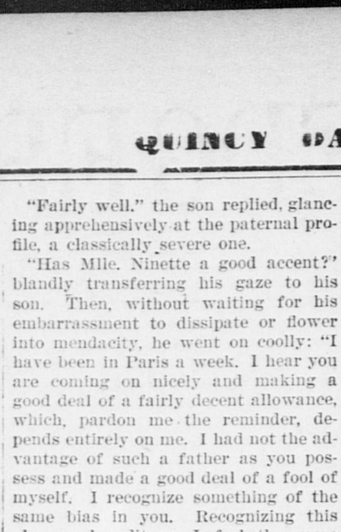
"Fairly well," the son replied, glancing apprehensively at the paternal profile, a classically severe one.

"Has Mlle. Ninette a good accent?" blandly transferring his gaze to his son. Then, without waiting for his embarrassment to dissipate or flower into mendacity, he went on coolly: "I have been in Paris a week. I hear you are coming on nicely and making a good deal of a fairly decent allowance, which, pardon me the reminder, depends entirely on me. I had not the advantage of such a father as you possess and made a good deal of a fool of myself. I recognize something of the same bias in you. Recognizing this also as hereditary, I feel the more bound to correct it. From all I hear you have been as conventional an idiot as possible over this Ninette woman. Perhaps it could be worse, but it is quite bad enough. I think you had better come home with me."

"My dear father, you have heard the fool talk of the clubs and the American colony. I have tried to cultivate Mlle. Ninette as a friend because her French is wonderfully pure"—

"Her French!" murmured his father.

"And her accent perfect; but, although there was never much between



"HAS MLLE. NINETTE A GOOD ACCENT?"

Mlle. Ninette and me, there is nothing now, I assure you. I gave her a present in furtherance of my scheme, which she disdained and sent me about my business. She may go to the devil for all of me now."

"I have no doubt he would appreciate her 'pure French.' Reynolds, is this a bluff?"

His son thrust his hand into his breast pocket and drew forth a sadly crumpled note. "You will kindly remark the date and the postmark—a week before you came to Paris."

"Perhaps you had better stay awhile longer," observed his parent benignly as he returned Mlle. Ninette's choice missive after enjoying its pungent warmth. "A box of bonbons was a little—Strephonic. I should like to meet Mlle. Ninette. Even in a picture box yours was not the dazzling offer likely to conquer."

"I would advise you to cut art out if you ever meditate a present to her yourself," said his son dryly.

"Elsie will be here in a few days with Mrs. Northwick. She will help to keep us both good. We shall have to take them about."

* * * * * * *

"You adorable rival of Rachel!" Spencer Cross burst forth to Mlle. Ninette at the close of a most delightful evening. "If you will only get my play on and create the leading role, I will be your obedient slave, and you shall have a present that will make Paris talk."

"I will do it!" she cried, giving him both her hands. "Not for a present, but," with a ravishing smile, "because you have made me forget myself as no Englishman ever did before."

* * * * * * *

"I should like to meet this clever young Spencer Cross, whose name is in everybody's mouth," said Elsie Van Schaick to her father one morning. "His play is such a success! All Paris is talking about the lovely Meissonier he gave to Mlle. Ninette, who created the principal role. They say it cost anywhere from 25,000 to 50,000 francs."

"They say she is madly in love with him," remarked Mrs. Northwick innocently.

"I should like to meet him," repeated Miss Van Schaick, looking at her calmly.

"Do you know anything of him, Mrs. Northwick?" inquired Papa Van Schaick. "He is an Englishman and, I suppose, a Londoner."

"I can't say that I do," replied Mrs. Northwick, "much. He is quite a young man, and I hear that he has lived in Paris a good deal. They say"—Mrs. Northwick was a woman who could impart to her proclamation of an on dit the authoritative force of a warrant for arrest—"that he is admirably connected, though dreadfully poor—the sort of young Englishman who is likely to marry some"—

She hesitated awkwardly.

"Most of the clever ones do, I believe," Miss Van Schaick interjected with the blandest promptness. "The nicest are the poorest, I think, in your happy tale, Mrs. Northwick."

"I do not see," resumed Mr. Van Schaick, with his calm, calculating air, "how a poor young man could give a Meissonier to a Parisian actress. Doubtless the price is exaggerated. Prices always are. But it must have some intrinsic worth to have made the woman use her influence to get his play on, unless, as you say, Mrs. Northwick, they are very much in love with each other."

"Oh, really, I didn't say that! I merely repeated what I have heard here since the play was brought out, that she is in love with him. That is quite a different thing, isn't it?"

"So different that it seems improbable. I always fancied that a Paris actress was content to have the men love her. It was certainly wise in the young man, whatever his aim, not to have restricted his offerings to the lady to bonbons. By the way, Reynolds, didn't you tell me—ahem—that Mlle. Ninette had no appreciation of art?"

"Not exactly, governor," replied his son dryly. "You do not seem to reflect that a painting by the most celebrated of French artists is negotiable goods. I dare say I can find out something about this fellow, Elsie. I was introduced to him at the Auto club one evening. I think I will look him up," her brother added with much deliberation.

"That's awfully nice of you, Reynolds!" she exclaimed, pulling his mustache. "I wish you would. Is he as handsome as they say?"

"He is well put together, tall, not as haw-hawy as some of them are, with clear skin and good color. I am beginning to wonder if he hadn't the most beautiful cheek I have ever seen."

"Oh, how like one of your droll American expressions!" laughed Mrs. Northwick.

* * * * * * *

Six weeks later the Figaro had a paragraph announcing the engagement of the newly risen playwright, M. Spencer Vane, to "Mlle. Elsie Van Schaick, fille d'un milliardaire Americain, jolie et tres distinguee."

One evening a few days later Reynolds Van Schaick was in the apartment of his brother-in-law elect, near the Park Morceau, to which Vane had transferred himself from the other side of the Seine after his play made a hit.

"Now that you are almost one of the family, Vane"—the young American began drawlingly.

"Thanks to you, dear boy, in presenting me to your charming sister," interrupted the other quite effusively for even a Parisianized Englishman.

"Possibly. I am inclined to think I was an instrument of Providence in bringing you two together. But tell me, now that we are almost brothers, what did you pay for that Meissonier?"

The other turned, thrust his hands in his pockets and stood looking at him quizzically for a moment.

"You feel that such a costly present to an actress from a beggar like me needs a little explanation? Elsie merely said she thought it was in exquisite taste. I will not say that the picture got Ninette to take my play in hand, but her doing so has made me."

"My dear boy," remonstrated Van Schaick, "you misapprehend my motive entirely. I don't care if you gave $50,000 for it if you didn't steal it. The family rather admire you for the 'lordly style' of the thing. The question was one of simple curiosity on my part. Let it go."

"My dear fellow," the young Englishman returned quickly, placing his right hand on the other's shoulder and smiling, "the price I paid for that Meissonier was a slight pain in the shoulder and a quick sum in mental arithmetic. The pain was nothing. The inspirational leap to the conclusion was great. It was the cornerstone of my fortune. Some poor unfortunate idiot with more refinement of feeling than knowledge of human nature—at least of Ninette's nature—had this Meissonier set in the lid of a plain ebony box filled with 5 francs' worth of bonbons. The conception on his part showed a thrilling blend of the fool, the poet and the lover. Ninette hardly glanced at the picture and threw box and all out of the window when she opened it. I had the painting framed gorgeously, put in a shadow box and 'Meissonier' in very legible letters painted on a little strip attached to the frame. She was tickled to death with it. Voile tout! But I have often thought I would like to shake the fellow that gave it to her by the hand."

"Shake!" said the other lugubriously, extending his right hand. "It cost me $5,000. It was cheap at that, considering all it has done."

Progress In Siberia.

For many years Russia has been deporting to Siberia its men of the most active intellect and turning them loose in a new country to make a livel'hood for themselves and for their families. It is not strange, then, to note that universities and museums are springing up in Russia's eastern possessions nor that many of the men of science and teachers on the staff are exiles. There is scarcely a town of 10,000 inhabitants in all Siberia but has a public museum under the care of a learned and competent curator.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 19—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Self mastery.—I Cor. ix, 25; Gal. v, 16-26. (Temperance meeting.)

Self mastery is necessary to success. The man who would control human enterprises or destinies must first learn to control himself. He must be moderate and temperate in all things. This was true of the athlete in the Grecian games. Using the contestants in these games as an illustration, Paul says, "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." Necessity was laid upon a man under these conditions of life to be temperate. The least indulgence in that which was harmful would weaken the one who strove for the crown. It would deprive him of his powers of endurance, and who could expect to win without strength to endure? Temperance is just as necessary in the mightier battles of life. The glutton and the drunkard have little chance in the race of life. The evils that accompany and flow from excessive indulgence in food or in drink unfit a man for the duties and responsibilities of life. Like the weakling in the race, he is soon left behind, and when the crown is awarded it does not rest upon his brow. To master life we must first master ourselves. We must be temperate in all things.

But, though self mastery is so important and necessary in the race of life, it is not so easily attained. Solomon declares that the man who controls himself is greater than the one who takes a city. It must be easier, therefore, to capture a fortified city than to be complete master of one's self. And it is. Many great generals who have been most successful in winning battles have lost in the greatest conflict of life—the conflict with self. One of the world's greatest conquerors died a victim to his lack of self mastery. If we expect to master and to control ourselves, let us not imagine that we are to engage in an insignificant contest. Battles are lost by underrating the strength and resources of the enemy. Let us not lose the battle of life in this way. The human passions are strong and powerful and can only be overcome by trust in God, by prayer, by constant vigilance and the exercise of all the power that God has given to us.

No matter what the cost, we should by the grace of God be masters of ourselves. In the end it will pay. Gladly the Grecian contestant practiced self denial and sacrifice, and for what? A laurel wreath! A mortal crown! Yet we strive for an immortal crown—the crown of eternal life! Shall we be less willing to endure hardness and to deny ourselves seeing that such a glorious goal and such a splendid prize are before us?

BIBLE READINGS.

Prov. xx, 1; xxiii, 20, 21, 29-32; Isa. v, 11, 12; Matt. xxvi, 41; Rom. vii, 18-25; Gal. v, 1; vi, 7, 8; Eph. vi, 10-18; Rev. ii, 10.

Faith In Immortality.

Faith in immortality is not unreasoning. It rests on an intellectual conviction. One believes in God for a reason, possibly no more reason than the good one of the authority of wiser people or for a combination and multiplicity of good and sufficient reasons. Faith in immortality depends on belief in an eternal God, in the immateriality of the soul and in the teachings and the resurrection of Jesus Christ. These reasons well thought out or felt, but not analyzed, will convince most people that we shall live beyond the grave, or at least that the balance of evidence not mathematical, but probable, settles that way. Then let it settle. Rest in it.—Independent.

A "Working Clothes" Society.

One time Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, the famous author of "In His Steps," began his address before a state Christian Endeavor convention in these words: "I come in my working clothes because your train failed to bring my Sunday-go-to-meetin' ones, but it isn't necessary to apologize to a Christian Endeavor convention for coming in working clothes, for work is what we are here for." And therein he sounded a great truth concerning the whole Christian Endeavor movement. It is a "working clothes" society.

Power of Christian Endeavor.

The power of Christian Endeavor is the power of an idea. The idea C-E-zed upon Dr. Clark first, and then he C-E-zed the rest of the world with it—yes, all the world, for if you had hands big enough to grasp the globe you couldn't take hold anywhere without being pricked by a Christian Endeavor pin.—Professor Amos R. Wells.

A Way to Banish the Blues.

No "nameless sadness" or "unaccountable discouragement" can live an hour in the person who puts on his hat and hunts up some one who needs help and cheering and who goes to work like a man with a smiling face to relieve somebody's real difficulty.—American Friend.

The Place to Make Missionaries.

I believe the place to make missionaries and the missionary spirit is in our Sunday schools and our young people's meetings.—Rev. Robert F. Y. Pierce.

Miners' Convention Will Surely Accept Arbitration Plan

WILL BE SOME OPPOSITION

But Mitchell and Other Union Leaders Are Confident of Ability to Overcome It—Operators Preparing to Rush Supplies of Coal to Market

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 18.—In accordance with the call issued by order of the executive boards of the anthracite districts of the Miners' union, all "locals" throughout the coal fields began electing delegates yesterday to the convention which will be held here on Monday to consider the acceptance or rejection of the arbitration plan submitted by President Roosevelt. Most of the local unions held their meetings last night. They all will have been held by tonight.

It is practically certain that a majority of the delegates will come to the convention instructed to vote in favor of accepting the arbitration scheme. The prominent officials of the union say there is no fear that the opposition will be strong enough to defeat the efforts of those who favor ending the strike by arbitrating their differences with the operators. President Mitchell does not care to anticipate the action of the convention, but from his manner it is taken that he has not the slightest doubt as to the result. He will go into the convention and make a strong speech for the acceptance of the arbitration scheme.

The indications are that the convention will last two days and that there will be much debate on various features of the arbitration plan. The principal question to be discussed before the plan is accepted by the miners will be that of taking care of all the men.

The conditions of the mines are such that all workmen cannot be given work immediately and some will have to wait for weeks before the companies can take care of them. The operators will not dismiss the non-union men in order to give employment to a returning striker. It is understood the union will take care of all such men who fail to find immediate employment. This will be done by drawing funds from the relief fund, which is said to be still growing.

The coal companies will do all in their power to meet the public demand for coal. Preparations for resuming as soon as the miners call the strike off are going on apace. It is estimated that 25 percent of the collieries will be in operation on the first day after the suspension is over.

The railroads are also making every effort to have enough cars on hand to carry the freshly mined coal to market and are sending thousands of cars into the regions and placing them on sidings at the collieries.

The state troops are having an easy time of it and are expecting to hear of the withdrawal of a portion of the division at any time.

The Stationary Firemen, affiliated with the Stationary Firemen's association of Pennsylvania, who went on strike June 2, along with the firemen belonging to the Mine Workers' union, met last night and decided to abide by the decision of the United Mine Workers' convention.

About the Commission

Washington, Oct. 18.—The following authoritative statement is made regarding the commission to arbitrate the anthracite coal disputes: "The commission is so constituted that it will require a two-thirds vote to settle any point upon which there is a dispute."

That means that Commissioner Wright, the recorder, is not to be regarded as a member of the commission in passing upon questions at issue before it. Colonel Wright will keep the records, summon witnesses, carry out the orders of the commission, and, perhaps, prepare its report under instructions.

Roosevelt Can Be Trusted

London, Oct. 18.—The Spectator, commenting upon the termination of the coal strike in the United States, says: "The American people clearly are going to trust President Roosevelt as they trusted Washington and Lincoln, and their trust will not be misplaced."

Fate of Famous Yacht

Hartford, Oct. 18.—Commodore Caldwell H. Colt's noted yacht, the Dauntless, once the flagship of the New York Yacht club, and the winner of many races, has been laid up at Essex ever since he died on her, eight years ago. Now his mother, the widow of the inventor of the revolver, is to have the yacht made into a houseboat for humanitarian purposes.

Cheers Don't Bring Money

Berlin, Oct. 18.—The Boer generals are sorry they did not go to America first for money, instead of making a canvass of the continent. Their experience so far has been rather disappointing. There have been plenty of cheers, but little money has been contributed for the relief of the Boers.

The Law Acted Quickly

Nacogdoches, Tex., Oct. 18.—Jim Buchanan, the negro murderer of the Hicks family, was tried here yesterday. A plea of guilty was accepted by the judge and the negro was legally hanged within two hours after sentence had been passed.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Settlement of Coal Strike Assures Speedy Restoration of Prosperity

New York, Oct. 18.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Settlement of the coal strike removes the only serious handicap to industrial progress. Savings have been exhausted and much money has gone out of the country because of this struggle, but the nation's remarkably strong position assures a speedy restoration of prosperous conditions. Transportation is now the worst feature. While the grain crops are being moved the supply of rolling stock and motive power will prove insufficient.

Footwear shops are actively engaged, many producers having added to their long lists of orders, and while practically all the New England manufacturers are assured full time up to the end of the year, they are also taking orders for deliveries in March. Prices are easily maintained.

In cotton goods the feature was a purchase of about 250,000 pieces of print cloths. While quotations were not altered, the tone became decidedly firmer.

Foreign commerce was much larger during September than was indicated by the preliminary weekly reports. Exports of merchandise rose to $115,521,984, exceeding every month this year except January and surpassing September, 1901, by $8,532,058.

A Chicago Sensation

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Two city detectives, a lawyer and a first ward politician are under arrest, charged with conspiring to levy blackmail upon the family of a young man whom they had caught in the meshes of the law, on a charge of burglary. The denouement came in the court room of Judge Neely yesterday, when the alleged victim of the plot, William Hickey, was arraigned for trial. Police Inspector Lavin placed the accused men under arrest and stripped the police officers of their stars and weapons.

No Postponement of Wedding

New York, Oct. 18.—A great deal of heroism and perhaps just a little bit of womanly superstition not to break a wedding date once made prompted Miss Nellie B. Smith, 21 years old, to leave her bed where she had been ill of pneumonia to wed Ralph C. Davidson, editor of The Railway Gazette. So, instead of a brilliant church wedding, at Netherford, N. J., as had been planned, with several hundred friends as witnesses, the wedding was celebrated in the parlor of the Smith home. Only the families of the two were present.

Echo of Stone Kidnapping

Washington, Oct. 18.—Representatives of the missionary societies have formally requested the state department to make a demand on Turkey for repayment of the amount of ransom paid on account of the release of Miss Ellen Stone. The requests assume the liability of Turkey as settled, but the state department thinks that the responsibility still lies between Turkey and Bulgaria, with perhaps the weight of evidence against the latter country.

Zeigler Parts With Baldwin

New York, Oct. 18.—As a result of the investigation made by William Zeigler, who supplied the funds for the Baldwin-Ziegler polar expedition, Mr. Ziegler announces that the business relations between Evelyn B. Baldwin and himself have been severed. Mr. Ziegler declines to give any details, but announces that he intends to continue his efforts to reach the North Pole.

Boy Sued For Breach of Promise

New York, Oct. 18.—Michael Beck, 19 years old, is locked up in default of $2000 bail on the complaint of Matilda Wood, who is suing him for $10,000 for breach of promise. Beck insists that Miss Wood is 24, but she takes oath that she is but 20. According to the plaintiff's affidavit he won her affections in a manner that showed he was an experienced Lothario.

Riotous Conduct of Students

Glasgow, Oct. 18.—At the opening yesterday of the campaign for the election of a rector for Glasgow university, Unionist students tried to wreck the Liberal committee rooms and attacked the police and their opponents with sticks and a fire hose and pelted them with flour. A large body of police finally restored order.

Indicted For Pulitzer Murder

New York, Oct. 18.—The grand jury yesterday found an indictment for murder in the first degree against William Hooper Young, who is under arrest in connection with the killing of Mrs. Anna Pulitzer, whose body was found in a canal near Jersey City. Young will be arraigned Monday.

Denial of Dictatorship

Washington, Oct. 18.—Replying to an inquiry from the Colombian legation here, Governor Salazar of Panama says the report that General Fernandez has declared himself dictator of Colombia is without any foundation in fact. Similar reports, he says, have been circulated heretofore.

"Little Bobs" Coming to America

London, Oct. 18.—Generals Corbin, Young and Wood have tendered Earl Roberts an invitation to visit the United States and the latter has practically decided to accept their invitation and go to the United States in 1903.

FEMININE CHAT.

Mrs. A. S. Forbes of California originated the plan for strewing the sea with flowers in memory of the sailor dead.

Mrs. Florence Spicer Kirkpatrick has been appointed as one of the five trustees to build and manage the new Carnegie library at Oneida, N. Y.

Miss Mary Morton, youngest daughter of Levi P. Morton, devotes most of her time and income to caring for the unfortunate children of New York city.

Mrs. Celia B. Whitehead and Mrs. Mila Tupper Maynard were nominated for the Colorado state senate by the Socialists of Denver at the Arapahoe county Socialist convention.

Miss Maggie J. Walz of Calumet, Mich., is the only woman Finnish journalist and newspaper publisher in America. She came to America in 1881 and located at Hancock. After paying for the trip from Finland she had only $7 left, and it was necessary for her to accept a position as a domestic servant.

The names of two women are still on the British pension list dating from the time of George IV. One is Lady Barrow, the adopted daughter of John Wilson Croker, Lord Macaulay's "bad, very bad man, I fear." The other is the mother of Sir William Anson, M. P. for Oxford university and warden of All Souls'.

Miss Minnie Schenck of Williamsport, Pa., is declared to be champion woman rifle shot of the world, having just established a record of twenty consecutive bullseyes at 200 yards. Miss Schenck, who uses a .32 caliber rifle, is a terror to sparrows. Out of fifty-six shots she did not miss once, using a .22 caliber rifle.

ROYAL ROBES.

It has been settled beyond a doubt that King Leopold will visit the St. Louis exposition. He will be the first monarch of Europe to set foot on American soil.

Queen Maria Pia of Portugal has just ordered from Paris a twelve horsepower automobile, with which she intends to make extensive tours through the country.

Princess Victoria, the only unmarried daughter of King Edward, is understood to love where she may not wed and therefore will probably end her days in spinsterhood.

The new king of Saxony is chiefly known for his military tastes and considerate treatment of private soldiers. He was commander for thirty years of the Twelfth army corps, which is Saxony's contingent to the imperial armies.

The empress dowager of China intends establishing a girls' school in the palace at Peking. Ten daughters of princes will be the students. A female teacher will instruct them in English. The reason is that the empress needs interpreters when entertaining the wives of foreign ministers.

CURTAIN CALLS.

Wilson Barrett is to have a play by his son, Arthur Barrett.

Lester Lonergan is leading man with the Melville-Baldwin stock company of New Orleans.

The prolific Theodore Kremer is preparing for production "The Triumph of an Empress."

Mrs. Robert Osborn has engaged Burr McIntosh to play an important line of parts in her stock company.

Lew Dockstader will next year head a troupe of 100 performers, under the management of Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger.

Henry Miller is to appear this season as an independent star, portraying the famous actor Mehun in a drama of the Cromwellian period.

George Arliss' farce called "There and Back" will be acted in this country by an American cast. Hawtrey tried it last season in London.

Mrs. John Wood's role in the new Drury Lane melodrama will be that of a circus strong woman reduced by age to the necessity of training parrots.

STATE LINES.

The assessed value of real estate in the state of New York, according to the board of equalization, is $5,169,308,070.

Georgia fruit growers are claiming that the peach crop of their state yields more money to the producers than does the cotton crop. The area devoted to fruit is now large, and these assertions are likely to cause it to be increased.

The state of Minnesota has no valid inheritance law on its statute books. Judge Bunn of the Ramsey county court holds that the law of 1901 is unconstitutional and invalid, and decisions of other courts have already found irreparable flaws in the laws of 1897 and 1902, so that there is no inheritance law whatever.

PINFEATHERS.

Fowls in confinement to do well need a variety of food.

Breeding birds should be kept in thrifty condition, neither too fat nor too lean.

Hens require grain and something else as well. They should not be surfeited with one kind and deprived of the others.

When the comb of a fowl is large and bright colored, showing it to be full of blood, and it shakes with every movement of the body, it shows it is in a healthy condition.

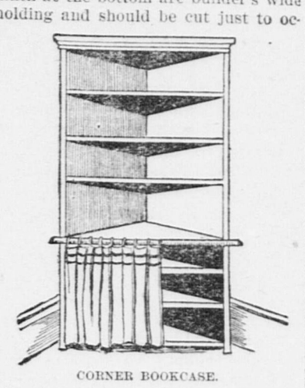
Geese are very hardy, easily raised, require much less care and expensive food than any other fowl, but they require good pasturage and plenty of water.

A CORNER BOOKCASE.

One That Is Useful and Effective and Economical In Space.

A corner cupboard has the advantage of being useful and effective and at the same time exceedingly economical in the matter of space it occupies.

The one shown in the illustration is a cupboard and bookcase combined and can easily be made by a home body. The cornice at the top and the plinth at the bottom are builder's wide molding and should be cut just to occupy the angle. The ends, where they come against the wall, will have to be beveled or cut like the miter of a frame so that they fit close to the wall, which they would not do if the molding were cut square. The cornice and plinth will keep the uprights in position when nailed to the wall. The shelves should be got out of half inch deal. They will be triangles, with the two ends which come against the uprights cut off, and all the shelves will be the same shape.



CORNER BOOKCASE.

They will be held up or rest upon three blocks, one in the inner angle at the wall and one at each upright. The blocks against the uprights could be glued to them and screwed as well, and the sides of the blocks coming against the wall could be nailed to the wall, thus forming not only supports to the shelves, but keeping the uprights in position. Settle how far the shelves are to be apart, and then carefully measure the spaces off on both uprights, so that when the shelves are put in they will be horizontal. The blocks in the angle of the wall can be nailed on, having carefully marked the width of the spaces, so that these blocks correspond with those against the uprights.

The projecting shelf from which the curtain is hung is contrived by getting out a piece of wood to fit in front of the shelf and round the two uprights. The corners must be cut to the angles of the wall, to which it might be nailed. A small rod should be fastened underneath this projecting shelf to carry the curtain, which takes the place of a door. It can be weighted at the bottom, and if it runs at the back of the plinth the dust will be kept out.

Diet For Young Mothers.

The best thing to keep up the strength of both the mother and baby is milk itself, good cow's milk, and foods made from milk. If one will drink enough, drink it hot and cold, at table and between meals and at bedtime, she will have no trouble in keeping up her health and flesh, and she will be sure of a strong child. The usual objection to this diet is that it makes one bilious, and so it does if it is not taken intelligently. Milk should be usually taken as hot as possible, though not scalded, and with plenty of salt; cold milk should be mixed with vichy, and both may be taken alternately with malted milk for the change. Cocoa should be freely used, made from milk and water and chocolate, which is not too heavy. The mother should remember that while tea will make milk in quantities, yet it will be only poor stuff and will keep the baby hungry and make it nervous. As to the rest of the diet, eggs are excellent raw beaten in milk and cooked, and hot soups with rice and barley, beef juice, creams of vegetables, ice cream, custards, milk toast, broiled meats, fish, chicken, vegetables and fruits.—Harper's Bazar.

A Flower In the Hair.

One long discarded custom is being brought into favor, that of wearing a flower in the hair. Had woman realized to what an extent the pretty custom was admired and even loved by the majority of the opposite sex it never would have fraternized with the spinning wheel, the blue dishes and the lace mitts in the dim and cobwebbed garret of things past.

To man, and that man a sweetheart, this little art, for such it is, of putting a flower in the hair is a signal to all the sensitive sentiment within him. If you doubt this, look to the voicings of the poets. There you will find holding sway and running riot as roses on an old wall such phrases as "a blossom in her tresses," "a flower to bewitch me in her hair" and "that rose above her ear was my undoing."

Whether the hair be black or brown, red or gold, the charm of primeval femininity remains the same.—Exchange.

Proper Furnishings.

If bedrooms are properly furnished with rugs or matting, well aired and sunned every day and cleaned weekly, there will be no need of any great tearing up for housecleaning.

The old fashioned heavy furniture, almost impossible to lift about, often harboring a year's deposit of dust, gave rise to a very necessary yearly cleaning, attended with great exertion and much discomfort to the whole family.

The bathroom, with its tiles or washable varnished walls, its easily removed rugs, the daily polish of faucets and basins, the weekly flushing of pipes with disinfectants, will need but little extra housecleaning.

STREET DIRT AS FUEL.

Ingenious Invention of a Well Known Baltimore Chemist.

A new artificial fuel has been discovered by Dr. Jacob Mellinger, the well known Baltimore chemist, says the Baltimore Sun. The basis may be ordinary street dirt, and Charles A. Zipp, who has tried it at his tanning establishment, says the fuel does all that is claimed for it. In discussing his discovery Dr. Mellinger said recently:

"The basis may be matter of any kind, the use of which is a carriable vehicle only, chemical compounds being virtually the heat producing factors. A chemical test shows that the fuel has 7 per cent of moisture, 82 per cent of organic and combustible matter and 11 per cent of inert matter or noncombustible residue.

"While it is true that the fuel contains 7 per cent of moisture and the best of hard coal hygroscopic water to the amount of ½ per cent, it should be understood that in the evaporation of the moisture in this fuel the action of the chemical compound on the moisture is such that it evaporates it without diminishing the heat, while on the other hand even the best hard coal absorbs from the heat just as much percentage as the contents of the percentage of the moisture in the coal.

"It is to be considered that in this fuel the quantity of ashes is not influencing in any way the capacity of the heating power, as the chemicals of themselves are the heat producers. In natural coal whatever residue there is is to be deducted from its heating power, not overlooking such weight as ashes, cinders, slag and soot. In this new fuel the consumption is well nigh complete.

"The high temperature so necessary to attain any given degree of heat requires a draft or current in similar ratio to bring about combustion. Necessarily the loss through drafts is great, while with this new fuel such is not the case. Once combustion has taken place the heat and energy need not go as so much waste up through flues and chimneys. Highly satisfactory experiments have been made with the new compound as an illuminant.

"The fuel gives off no smoke, is not affected by damp storage, and during its use the doors of furnaces and stoves may be closed or open, as desired. The residuum of the fuel may be utilized almost endlessly in its repeated manufacture, which process is simple, and for that reason the cost of production would be very low.

"It is not injurious to health, and no asphyxiation can result from its use. It is nonexplosive and nonspontaneous, and it contains no fatty or resinous substance."

FLOUR MADE OF FISH.

Norwegians Have Discovered New Food of Great Value.

Fish flour is the name of a new variety of prepared food that the ingenious Norwegians are making and shipping abroad in large quantities. The center of the industry is Bergen, the old headquarters of the codfish and cod liver oil trade. The United States consul at that point in a recent letter to the state department says:

A great deal is done in Norway to improve and preserve the provisions produced in that country and to procure a market for them abroad. The fisheries represent one of Norway's chief industries, and quantities of fish are sold at very low rates, particularly during the summer. One way in which these are utilized is by means of an invention which quickly dries and pulverizes the flesh of fresh fish. The resulting product, called fish flour, is easy to transport from one place to another and has great nutritive value. A new and profitable branch of industry might be established in America by utilizing fish in this way.

The story of the discovery and perfection of the industrial manufacture of artificial indigo is one of the most fascinating in the whole range of commercial chemistry, says a writer in the Washington Post. Though known in the laboratory since 1867, it was not until twenty years later that a commercial process was evolved.

In the early days the product was made from toluol, a coal tar derivative, the supply of which was not sufficient to meet the world's demand for indigo. Later it was discovered by Professor Karl Heumann of Zurich that naphthalene, also a coal tar derivative, could be used to better advantage for the raw material, and fortunately the supply of this material is ample for the world's consumption of the famous dyestuff.

Notwithstanding the apparent success of the work the problem has really been a will-o'-the-wisp for investors. The goal has always been in sight and apparently just beyond reach, and it has only been by the investment of millions of dollars in experimental investigations and equipment that artificial indigo is today commercially available.

It is asserted on good authority that the principal manufacturer of this product at Ludwigshafen, in Germany, has spent $4,200,000 in developing his process, which of course is kept secret. The optimist asserts that it is only a question of time when the artificial product will be used to the exclusion of the natural product, the cultivation of which has been greatly curtailed during recent years.

☞ Throwing rice at a bridal couple in Athol the other day started a pair of horses in the cab; they ran away and the groom is now nursing two broken ribs, the bride has several painful bruises and the honeymoon is postponed. All of which wouldn't have happened if they had engaged an automobile.—Lynn Item.

☞ The juvenile court out in Indianapolis has purchased a new rawhide and is seeing that the parents of the youthful offenders brought before it make use of the article in a way that Solomon would have enthusiastically approved. The rawhide savors somewhat of corporal punishment, and to this extent rather grates upon the sensibilities of some of us, but it cannot be successfully denied that it has a wonderfully restraining effect upon the evil propensities of the average youngster.—Newark News.

☞ That was a brilliant scene at Newburyport when the town was invited to witness the work of the new horses bought at heavy expense for the fire engine. The crowds turned out, the doors of the engine house opened, the red fire was set off, the band struck up, and amid the tumultuous cheering of the excited populace—the horses refused to budge one inch. Altogether, it must have been one of the most impressive scenes ever witnessed in that lively metropolitan burg. Boston Advertiser.

☞ No good reason can be seen why the Boer appeal to the world for assistance in their distress should be resented by the British people. No question can possibly exist of the terrible destitution which prevails in the late Boer republics. No question exists that the money promised by England will be totally inadequate to rebuild the destroyed properties. It is not easy to see how a people with a spirit of humanity can object to other people's doing a good thing to the Boers, if they want to do so. It must be remembered that the British promise is not yet fulfilled, but the Boer distress is a present fact.—Fitchburg Sentinel.

☞ Frederick W. McKee, a member of the Chatauqua assembly, has filed a bill asking for the dissolution of the various Chatauqua institutions and the appointment of a receiver for them, declaring that they are heavily indebted to an extent beyond all possible assets. If there has been mismanagement, as alleged, a receivership is undoubtedly necessary, but a mite from every person who has been helped by the Chatauqua institutions would be enough to relieve all financial embarrassment.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Registration in New York city shows an alarming falling off in Republican districts. We don't know the local causes in New York city for this situation, but we do know that in many a city and district in Massachusetts the greatest danger of the Republican party is the apathy—or, rather, worse than that, the dissatisfaction with existing conditions—that will cause many a Republican to stay away from the polls, a dissatisfaction that hasn't got far enough to turn the votes to another party, but is, nevertheless, near the danger point.—Haverhill Gazette.

NEW TIMETABLE.

West Quincy will be Benefited.

Will Have Two Express Trains Each Way.

Minor Changes at Other Stations in Quincy.

The new timetable on the New York, New Haven and Hartford, which goes into effect at midnight tonight has quite a number of changes that are of importance to Quincy people, more especially those who take the train from the West Quincy station.

There has always been a demand for an express train from this station but all efforts to obtain one have failed up to the present time.

Some time ago Rev. A. F. Roche started in to see what he could do, and now, mainly through his efforts, West Quincy has two trains each way, running express from East Milton.

This necessitated some changes in the trains on the main line. Some of the Quincy trains will make stops at Pope's Hill and other trains will leave a few minutes later than now.

There are also a number of changes from the Atlantic station.

The changes in detail are as follows:

QUINCY.

The train now leaving Boston for Quincy at 4.45 P. M. will leave at 4.50 P. M. and make all stops from Popes Hill, arriving in Quincy at 5.16.

The 5.15 P. M. train from Boston does not stop at Atlantic.

The 5.45 P. M. train will make all stops from Popes Hill.

SUNDAY.

The train now leaving Quincy at 6.16 P. M., will leave at 6.03 and arrive in Boston at 6.30.

The 8.50 P. M. inward train is discontinued.

New trains will leave West Quincy at 8.01 and 9.01 A. M. and running express from East Milton, arriving in Boston at 8.20 and 9.20.

A new train leaving Boston at 4.40 P. M. running express to East Milton and arriving in West Quincy at 4.59.

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. We purchased some of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and he commenced taking them. Inside of thirty days he had gained forty pounds in flesh. He is now fully recovered. We have a good trade on the tablets.—Holley Bros., Merchants, Long Branch, Mo. For sale by all druggists.

GOLF TOURNAMENT.

Notable Event of the Wollaston Golf Club.

The annual fall tournament of the Wollaston Golf Club at Montclair Thursday, a medal handicap, was not only the largest open event in the club's history, but brought out some of the best golf seen about Boston for some time. Of the 67 players who competed no less than 27 made the course in less than 90, and 11 were 78 or better. J. G. Thorp of the Oakley Country Club and the present Massachusetts champion, was the star performer of the day, winning the gross prize with a fine 76, which beat the bogey of the course by two strokes. C. L. Perkins, of the home club, was only two strokes behind and, with a handicap of eight, easily won the net prize with a score of 70. The rest of the field was well bunched, although some distance behind the two prize-winners. It was a beautiful Indian summer day, with a soft westerly breeze which proved more of an assistance than a detriment. The fair green was like velvet and the putting greens as smooth as billiard tables, so that there was nothing to prevent good scoring. Three of the players made holes in two strokes, while threes and fours for the other holes were quite common.

Pale Girls

Weak, Nervous Children

Given a Healthy Color, Made Well and Strong, by the new Iron Tonic

Pept-iron

Which has been made with special reference to the needs of all pale, weak, nervous sufferers, of either sex at any age. It cures anemia—from which so many girls suffer in their early teens—restores vitality and strength, cures all degrees of neurasthenia, nervous weakness, whether congenital or acquired, strengthens the brain, and permanently benefits the whole system.

In Pill or Liquid Form

Peptiron is both medicine and food and is therefore in full accord with advanced science as to the proper treatment of all anemic and neurasthenic conditions, in which the need of more and better nourishment is so obvious. It combines iron and manganese with the phosphates and other tonics and nutrients; supplies the deficiency of red corpuscles in anemia; repairs the waste of nerve tissue in nervousness; gives color and stamina. It helps the young, of either sex, through delicate (often critical) periods; tones the stomach, perfects digestion, creates appetite and promotes natural sleep. Peptiron is readily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, nor leave any inky or metallic flavor in the mouth, nor cause constipation. In pill or liquid form, it is agreeable to the taste and acceptable to the most sensitive stomach.

A Lady Stenographer, holding a responsible position in a private office in Lowell, writes: "I have now been taking Peptiron for about a month, and am sure it is doing me good. There is no question about it, for the pallor of countenance has changed to the more healthful tint. I am not so nervous, and work seems to turn off more easily."

Peptiron Is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50 cents or $1 per box. By

The committee appointed by Mayor Bryant to take charge of the collection of funds and the distribution of fuel to the poor, met last night at the City Council chamber.

Mayor Bryant presided and after an informal discussion as to the best method of distributing coal and wood a committee consisting of Theophilus King, R. F. Claflin and W. T. Shea was appoidted to interview the coal dealers of Quincy to see if arrangements could be made with them to distribute coal at current prices in bags containing 100 pounds. The committee will meet again next Wednesday.

Quincy Mansion School.

Mrs. Ellen Richards of the Mass. Institute Technology and her friend was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Horace M. Willard on Thursday. Her talk to the pupils was in connection with domestic science. A large party of the girls of the Quincy Mansion school went to Plymouth last week and from there to Duxbury where they were entertained by Mrs. Magee.

Mrs. Mary Alden Ward will continue her talks on current events every fortnight at the Mansion. Mrs. Ward is a most fluent and interesting speaker and it is a great privilege for any one to listen to her.

The Best of Good Reading

There may be some who think that because THE DELINEATOR is the standard of authority on matters of dress that its reading matter is all about needles and pins.

There are more than a million American women who know better.

THE DELINEATOR is all sorts of good story-books rolled into one—a veritable circulating library, for each copy is handed from one to another until the next number comes to take its place.

There are stories of love and stories of labor—life-stories of real people, great because they have done things, and others of every-day folks who have learned better ways to dress a room, or a child, or a salad.

Would you like to try them?

Silver Wedding.

The most brilliant social event that has taken place in South Braintree for many years occurred last evening, Friday, October 17, at the residence on Pond street of Mr. and Mrs. N. Gleason Torrey, commemorative of the completion of twenty-five years of married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Torrey, assisted by their only son, Thurlow, received in the music room, which was tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and other potted plants and bunches of red carnations. The glare of electrics from chandeliers was subdued by pretty red shades in the semblance of tulips while the softer lights from candelabra shone roseate through simulated red tulips.

Mrs. Torrey, who is still a beautiful brunette despite a quarter of a century of married life, received in a decollete gown of black silk net with jet garniture. Upon the rippling masses of her dark hair rested a red velvet bow and she carried a bunch of red poppies.

Throughout the evening soft music was rendered by Cuff's orchestra of eight pieces. And from eight until eleven, the hours of receiving, over three hundred guests offered congratulations to host and hostess having been ushered into their presence by five charming young ladies dressed in white mousseline, cut decollete, and wearing in the corsage a bunch of red carnations. The five ladies who added interest to this happy anniversary were: Florence L. Hallett of Brookline, L. Louise Clark of Dorchester, C. Gertrude Barnicoat of Quincy, H. Corinne Curtis of Lynn, Louise T. Severance of Cambridgeport.

After the customary good wishes had been extended to the receiving trio, the guests passed into the banquet hall. This hall was an immense tent, fifty feet long, in the rear of the house and attached to it in a manner permitting access from the house without exposure.

Within the tent fairyland stood revealed. Forty-eight lights wearing red tulip caps branched from three candelabra while on the long glittering table stood twelve single lights also red capped. Caterer T. D. Cook excelled expectations, especially in the color scheme which extended to the dishes which were also red with an ivy vine pattern in gold. The viands were beyond criticism. The ices and sherbets were in the form of melons, fruits of various kinds, bouquets and flowers typical of the harvest season.

The waiters, who were white, wore dress coats, with collar, lapels and cuffs of green velvet with gilt trimmings.

Mr. and Mrs. Torrey were recipients of many costly presents, among them tokens from the South Congregational choir, Philergian club, the Hollingsworth & Whitney Co., and Braintree Fife and Drum Corps.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Hollingsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Cox, Mr. J. N. Terry, Mr. R. L. Paizee, Miss A. C. Merrill, Mr. M. L. Wadden, of Boston; Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Davis, Dr. J. A. Gordon, Miss Mary Elcock of Quincy; Mr. J. Homer Karnes, Mr. A. E. Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Fales, Captain and Mrs. S. C. Wright, Miss Edith Wright of Roxbury; Mr. and Mrs. George Hopkins, Miss Mary Hopkins, Miss Ethel Senior of Weymouth; Mr. and A. H. Hartwell, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Pfeiffer, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Emerson, of Watertown: Mr. B. Parker Babbridge, Miss Moody, of Salem; Mr. and Mrs. Abbott Jones of Plymouth; Miss Myrtis Baker, Miss Helen Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Anglim of Brockton; Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Keith of Cambridge; Mr. W. G. Lus, Wellesley Hills; Mr. Alton Newcomb, Mr. Clarence Humphrey, Hingham; Mr. Harry Pray, Mrs. George F. Quincy High vs. Dorchester.

At Fields Corner Friday afternoon the Quincy High School eleven met with the first defeat of the season, losing to Dorchester High school 21-0. The latter team outweighed the local boys, man to man, and used their weight to good advantage in line plays. Capt. Tucker or Woodhead taking the ball. Capt. Miller worked like a trojan for his team but his linesmen gave him no show to get started. He made one 25 yard run unassisted, and got away a few good punts. In the second half he was injured and taken from the field. He will be able to play in a few days.

Fenno played strongly as usual making many hard tackles and gaining the ball three times on fumbles. Desmond and R. Saunders played pluckily and Forrest and Morrison worked steadily.

If the team is to continue its good work the left side of the line must be strengthened and some heavier men must be found A good coach is needed. to teach the boys some of the fundamental principles of the game. High tackling was seen Friday all too frequently and the boys with few exceptions seldom got under the plays.

Dorchester scored twice in the first half and twice in the second, though Quincy made a plucky stand in the latter half and held their opponents on the goal line.

The game was free from disputes, but Capt. Tucker and Fischer failed to remember that the football field is not a boxing ring.

Next Tuesday Quincy High plays Volksman at Quincy.

Quincy Historical.

The Ann Bass house, as it has been known to the older Quincy people, is the one to be moved away to make room for a Government building.

This, is the large double house opposite our Public Library. It is to be placed near the corner of Washington street and Temple place. It was built by Miss Bass about the year 1855, and while she occupied the east half, Mr. Charles A. Howland, then a new comer, occupied the other half with his family.

Mr. James Edwards' family then made their home in this house; after whom Mr. Louis Congdon the first cashier of the Mt. Wollaston Bank with his wife and a family moved there.

Mr. Jewell and family lived in the east side a term of years.

Mr. Wilson Tisdale and his family made their home in the west side.

Mr. Perry Lawton and Mrs. Mary F. Lawton occupied the west side, as did also, the late Mrs. John C. Randall and Miss Randall.

It has shelterd many more well known Quincy people.

During late years, it became a boarding and lodging house.

Mr. Samuel Copeland, brother of the late Mr. John Briesler, opened the Maple Place tract of land which was owned by Francis Jackson of Boston. Mr. George L. Gill built the first house on Maple Place.

The Unity Club.

The Wollaston Unity Club will meet Friday evening, Oct. 24, at 8 o'clock. The following program will be in charge of Mr. Chas. F. Harper, Master Quincy High School.

1. "The origin and formation of the earth,"—Mr. M. B. Smith, Sub-Master Quincy High School.

2. "Volcanoes,"—Mr. Chas. Sampson, Principal of the Quincy School.

3. "Earthquakes,"—Miss Beatrice Smith of the Wollaston School.

There will be readings from "The Flashlight" and Music. All are welcome.

No Doubt of the Result.

There is no doubt that the mine'rs convention which meets at Wilkesbarre on Monday will end the coal strike; and it is estimated that 25 per cent. of the colleries will be in operation on the first day after the suspension is over.

There are a few ugly customers in the Scranton district who are bound to kick; they want all the non-union men at work in the mines discharged at once, but a majority of the delegates elected by the local unions are instructed to accept President Roosevelt's arbitration plan.

Clotho Club.

Miss Mary E. McDonnell of Bridge street entertained the Clotho Club at home Tuesday evening. During the evening recitations, and vocal and piano solos were rendered by the Misses Babe, Mary E. Dunn and Miss Nellie McDonald. The club will hold its next meeting Thursday at the home of Miss Emma Healey, Adams street.

HUGHES IS CONVICTED

Jury Finds That He Killed Police Officer Keefe

MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE

The Verdict Returned Against Defendant, Who Had a Previous Criminal Record—Young Nephew Discharged by Order of the Court

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 18.—George W. Hughes was found guilty in the second degree and George F. Blake not guilty of the murder of Patrolman Thomas Keefe of Everett, by a jury in the Middlesex superior court, at 10:50 last night. The defendants were uncle and nephew, and the verdict as given on Blake was found by order of Judge Harris in his charge to the jury, as he said the evidence was not sufficient against the lad.

Officer Keefe was shot and killed during the night of Feb. 20 last, and the circumstantial evidence adduced during the four days' trial showed that both the defendants were out that night with the intent of doing some uniawful act, presumably burglary, and that Officer Keefe stopped and questioned them. The officer was shot in the back and it was shown that Hughes discharged a revolver while the weapon was being held in his coat pocket.

The jury retired at 5:26, and came in for information at 10:30, Foreman Soule asking the court for instructions on first and second degree murder and manslaughter. This was given by Judge Harris and the jury retired, returning just before 11. Foreman Soule gave the verdict and the jury was polled. Blake immediately was liberated, but sentence on Hughes was deferred, as his counsel has exceptions to argue and law points which may be taken to the full bench.

While the jury was in the court room for instructions, court officers saw James Blake, father of the younger defendant, making signs which they thought were threatening, towards the court. He was warned, but, persisting in his threats, he was forcibly ejected from the building. Young Blake was very weak on being discharged, but Hughes took his conviction with some show of strength.

The evidence was entirely circumstantial and the witnesses mostly were police people who knew something of the past life of the defendants.

Hughes has several aliases, that of Carter being the one he used mostly. When the trial began the government elected to try the man as George W. Hughes. He has served time in a Maine prison, formerly living on the St. Croix river. His personal appearance was unprepossessing. The lad, Blake, showed that his bringing up had been neglected.

But One Irish Vote Recorded

London, Oct. 18.—With the exception of Timothy M. Healy, who voted to support the government, all the Irish members of the house of commons abstained from voting in yesterday's division on the education bill. A majority of them advocate returning to Ireland immediately, but no action in this direction will be taken until it is seen whether Premier Balfour is inclined to grant a day for the discussion of Irish affairs.

From Training Ship to Cruiser

Boston, Oct. 18.—The first naval officer of the Massachusetts nautical training ship Enterprise to be detached and ordered to duty in the regular navy is Lieutenant Bradshaw. He received orders yesterday to report to the U. S. S. Machias, which is now at the Boston navy yard, and to be her executive officer.

The commissioner granted his request, and gave out a statement that he had failed to find that the inspector has been in collusion with gamblers or other forms of vice in his district.

Trenton, Oct. 18.—The United States Packing company, which is understood to be the beef combine, was incorporated here yesterday with an authorized capital of $1,000,000. It is understood that this amount will be subsequently increased to probably $500,000,000.

IRISH LAND QUESTION

Will Soon Be Settled and Then Will Come National Self-Government

Boston, Oct. 18.—On the steamship New England, which arrived from Queenstown and Liverpool yesterday, were John E. Redmond, M. P., chairman of the Irish parliamentary party and president of the United Irish league; John Dillon, M. P., and Michael Davitt. Their arrival has been long looked forward to by Irishmen, as they are to address the members of the United Irish league, which holds its national convention in this city, beginning Sunday night.

Mr. Redmond, in speaking of the present condition in Ireland and of matters relating to the United Irish league, said: "The United Irish league is the ruling power in Ireland today as truly as ever the land league was. The government played into our hands by the commercial policy and now the country is aroused. We are on the eve of a settlement of the Irish land question, and after that national self-government will speedily come to Ireland.

"The Irish party now in the house of commons is the only real opposition in the English parliament, and I believe the day is near at hand when it will have the controlling influence in Great Britain.

"Hundreds of the Irish are imprisoned under the coercion act without receiving any trial by jury. But nobody cares for imprisonment under these circumstances. The more the people are attacked the higher their spirits rise."

Hard Times In Hawaii

Washington, Oct. 18.—"A great many people in Hawaii are today bemoaning the annexation of the islands by the United States," said John I. Grace, an influential sugar planter of Hilo, who is now in Washington. "At present, times are exceedingly bad in Hawaii. Our plight is directly caused by the application of the immigration laws of the United States. Labor is scarce and high. If we could get Chinamen, as in the old days, we would not ask for anything better. If congress will give us relief along this line, Hawaii will come to the front as one of the most prosperous regions on earth; otherwise, the chances are good that our whole population will go broke."

Deputies Endorse Government

Paris, Oct. 18.—Premier Combes replied in the chamber of deputies yesterday to the opposition's attacks on the government on the subject of the manner in which the law of associations had been enforced. He added: "We have reached a turning point in our history. The country would perish if we yielded to the congregations. We wish to arrest the monastic invasion and depend on the support of the chamber." The debate resulted in a vote of confidence approving the acts and attitude of the government.

Shaw's Action Endorsed

Washington, Oct. 18.—The action of Secretary Shaw in offering to buy bonds for the sinking fund to relieve the present stringency in the money market is favorably commented on by financiers here. The $15,000,000 fours which the secretary expects to obtain under this offer will result in putting into circulation about $20,000,000, which at this late date in crop moving will carry the country safely over the crisis which is annually experienced at this period.

"High Priestess" Kills Herself

New York, Oct. 18.—Miss Ida Craddock, high priestess and pastor of the "Church of the Yoga" in Chicago and missionary here of her peculiar belief, committed suicide by inhaling gas. She was to have appeared in court yesterday to be sentenced under a conviction for sending obscene matter through the mails. Fear of this sentence and also that her mother was planning to have her committed to an asylum, led to the suicide.

WORK OF COAL MINERS

Light on the Conditions In the Mines.

ALLEGED CAUSE OF THE STRIKE.

Scranton Editor Says It Was Precipitated by the Miners to Prevent Laborers From Revolting—Miners Earn From $60 to $100 a Month. One of Their Jokes.

A Boston business man recently wrote to the editor of the Scranton Tribune, the leading paper of northeastern Pennsylvania, asking him for some light on the conditions of the work of the coal miners, says the New York Times. The following is the reply:

"Replying to your inquiry of Oct. 1, I will try to explain mining conditions to you as briefly as possible.

"The miner drills the hole in the coal seam, inserts the powder, fires the blast which knocks the coal down and then takes a rest, while his helper pulls the coal out and loads it into the mine car. A miner in four to six hours, with easy work, can ordinarily knock down enough coal to keep his helper busy for eight to ten hours or longer. The miner is paid by the car in this region, averaging about a dollar a car, and the usual day's work is six cars, holding about 3,000 pounds of lump coal, rock 'bony' and slate.

"Of this $6 gross earnings the miner pays $2 to the laborer and keeps $4 for himself, out of which he must pay for the powder he uses, oil, wicks, fuses and the sharpening of his picks. In some places the unit of pay is the square yard of coal in the seam and in others a weight unit of 2,750 pounds, it being claimed by the operators that on an average it will take from 2,700 to 3,000 pounds of gross coal—that is, coal as it comes from the seam—to net one ton of 2,250 pounds of coal as prepared at the breaker for market.

"The miners claim that where the unit of payment is the mine car the car of today is bigger than in years gone by and continually growing. One of their jokes is that the mine car is made of live oak.

"However this may be (and my personal belief is that there is just about as much honesty on one side as on the other), it is a fact that the industrious miner averages, net, per month, for about twenty days' work of from four to six hours a day all the way from $60 to $100 a month and could make twice as much if he would blow enough coal to keep two laborers employed instead of one. Today miners who are 'scabbing' work as high as ten chambers apiece and earn in some cases $20 a day. But it is a peculiar fact that under normal conditions the miner does not seem to be ambitious to do more than one chamber at a time or to work beyond five or six hours a day.

"The real cause of this strike was that the miners' helpers, who are mostly foreigners, had got it into their heads that the miners were not making a fair divide. They were organizing a mine laborers' movement to force the miners to divide even. The operators have nothing to do with hiring the helpers. They are hired by the miners themselves. To avert a substrike among their 'butties,' as the laborers are called, the miners swung the general strike, ostensibly for the points set forth in their published demands, but in reality to enable the union to control discipline and thus put it beyond the power of the laborer to revolt.

"In the mines also are many 'company hands,' men paid by the month to run engines, act as firemen, attend to the pumps, etc. The union's demand for an eight hour day was to enlist them in the strike. They are getting good wages—engineers, $60 to $80 a month for long hours, but light work, and others in proportion. Nine-tenths of these men were entirely satisfied, and many of them refused to go out.

"When the coal in big lumps comes from the mine or pit, it is passed through a high structure called the breaker, where it is broken by steam machinery into the various sizes and the impurities are picked out. Much of the labor in the breaker is done by boys, who average 75 cents a day. They have no complaint, for their pay is better than that of the average lad in a city office. But they belong to the union and have votes in the calling of strikes, and the idea of striking has developed among them rapidly. Last year in this end of the coalfields there were a hundred odd local strikes, mostly over the pettiest conceivable things, and the breaker boy and barroom loafer element had a good deal to do with declaring them.

"I have lived in the anthracite region fourteen years, and I know that in the year 1901 the miners earned more money than ever before during my time. Our banks are full of their savings, very little of which has yet been drawn out, in spite of their five months' idleness. There is no similar grade of labor in the country which is better paid than the anthracite coal miner, and no workman more independent, because the law of the state practically gives him a monopoly of the labor of mining by forbidding any but a licensed miner to work at mining in the mines. To get a license, or certificate, as it is called, he must first have worked at least two years in the mines as a laborer and then pass an examination to show that he knows enough about the peculiar requirements of mining to be a safe man to admit to a chamber."

NEW WHITE HOUSE CHINA.

Service of 1,356 Pieces Made In England to Cost About $10,000.

The magnificent china service for the White House which is being designed at the Wedgwood potteries at Stoke, England, will arrive some time in December, says a Washington special to the New York World. The design and pattern are of Mrs. Roosevelt's selection. The president and Mrs. Roosevelt commissioned Charles M. Van Heusen of Albany to visit all the famous china manufacturers and place the contract. This china will be the first service of English manufacture to be used at the White House. The famous $25,000 service purchased by Mrs. Hayes was from the Haviland firm of France.

The new service is plain white, with a gold border, with the great seal of the United States in colors on each piece. The shapes are colonial. This is the first time that the arms of the United States have been used for the decoration of White House tableware. The design and shapes have been copyrighted and may not be duplicated except by permission of the president.

The set consists of 1,356 pieces. There are fifteen dozen dinner plates, ten dozen breakfast plates, ten dozen tea plates, five dozen bread and butter plates, ten dozen soup plates, eight dozen after dinner cups and saucers, ten dozen oyster plates, ten dozen fish plates and twenty-four platters.

Mrs. Roosevelt has been much annoyed by exaggerated statements concerning the cost of this service. It is stated that the china will cost less than $10,000. Thirty thousand dollars was allowed for the purchase of china, silver and glassware for the repletion of the White House closets.

The new glassware will consist of 144 pieces of the finest cut crystal. Each piece will bear the great seal. Tiffany is now engaged in designing about 500 pieces of colonial silver, which will complete the presidential dinner service. The old silver was in much better condition than the china, and the new pieces consist mostly of oyster and other odd forks, which have recently become requisite for a well appointed table.

Last winter Mrs. Roosevelt renewed the White House napery with the daintiest creations to be found in the Philippines and Porto Rico.

KIPLING'S NEW BOOK.

Object of His "Just So Stories" For the Nursery.

The object of Mr. Kipling's new nursery book, "Just So Stories," for which he has drawn the droll and original pictures as well as written the tales they illustrate, seems to be to provide patient nurses and anxious young mothers with ready made answers for questions they cannot always evade, says the New York Times. Thus they may now learn how the camel got his hump, how the leopard got his spots and various other important matters relating to the animal kingdom which have long been perplexing, though Mr. Oliver Herford and other philanthropists have tried to answer some of them satisfactorily.

The new book is funny, even amazing, but it is hardly one of Mr. Kipling's master works, scarcely the stuff we might look for if we chose to be exacting from a highly praised writer aged thirty-seven who published "Plain Tales From the Hills" in his twenty-third year and "Seven Seas" at the age of thirty-one.

VENETIAN CANAL FOR PARIS

American Engineer's Great Scheme to Beautify the City.

Sidney Watkins, the American engineer, has been expounding a gigantic project to the Paris municipal council, says a Paris cable dispatch to the Philadelphia Press. It is said to be backed by a powerful American syndicate, and he offers to take the old fortifications, now disused, and demolish the walls at his own expense.

On the 500 foot belt of ground thus provided all around the city he would excavate a grand canal communicating with the Seine river, build an automobile speedway, a horse and riding track and a bicycle path unrivaled anywhere.

These would occupy only one side of the strip, and all Watkins' syndicate wants in return for the tremendous cost is the privilege to build, sell and rent luxurious residences and hotels right at the water's edge, making the other side like the Venice grand canal. It also wants a perpetual franchise for the gondola service.

Jewelry Novelty For Women.

The "pickup" is the popular name of a new idea in jewelry. It is an ornamental buckle designed to hold up the skirt while walking. It may also be worn in front, with a ribbon, or to keep the bodice, the belt and the skirt in proper relations at the back.

An October Song.

Crackin' of the teamsters' whips 'long the country roads;
Neighin' of the horses as they draw the heavy loads;
A shiver in the woodlan's, where the leaves the green have lost,
An' a whisper on the hilltops of the comin' of the frost!

Light the cabin fires;
Summer sweet has fled;
Goldenrod is bloomin'
Near the holly berries red.

Up from many a cabin now the blue smoke curls,
An' the boys have brought the wagons for a brisk ride with the girls.
Glad sounds in all the woodlan's; faint echoes from the town,
An' the barkin' of the squirrels as the hick'ry nuts fall down.

So light the cabin fires,
For summer sweet has fled,
An' the goldenrod is bloomin'
Near the holly berries red.

SENSATIONAL TRAGEDY

In the Offices of a New York Firm of Lawyers

TWO MEN ARE SHOT DEAD

Murderer, Who Had Been Former Partner of His Victims, and Whose Accounts Were Short, Then Takes His Own Life

New York, Oct. 18.—William C. Turner, former president and treasurer of the Climax Bottling company, yesterday shot and killed W. J. Mallard, secretary and treasurer of the company, and Robert Hamilton, its president, and then killed himself with the same weapon. A second revolver, loaded in every chamber, was found in Turner's pocket and it is believed he planned to take more lives than he did. The shooting was caused by a quarrel between the three men over an alleged shortage in Turner's accounts, for which he was threatened with criminal prosecution.

The tragedy occurred in the offices of the law firm of Cantor, Adams & McIntyre. Turner, who was 45 years old, was a cousin of Governor Odell.

All the principals in the tragedy were married. Mallard was 36 years old, a native of Atlanta. He had been in this city about four years. Hamilton lived in Pittsburg, where he was president of the J. T. & A. Hamilton glass factories. He was about 60 years old. He arrived in this city Thursday in response to a telegram from Turner.

Turner retired as president of the Climax Bottling company last April, when he was bought out by Hamilton. After the sale it was discovered in examining the books of the concern that there was a shortage of $5100 in Turner's accounts. The Climax company engaged John F. McIntyre and M. Goodman, both of the firm in whose offices the shooting occurred, to effect a settlement with Turner, and he engaged Edgar Loventritt to represent his interests. Some difficulty had been met with in the negotiations which followed between the lawyers, but it was finally agreed to accept $2700 and give Turner a release in full. The settlement was to take place in the offices of Cantor, Adams & McIntyre yesterday at 11 o'clock.

At the appointed hour yesterday Turner, with his lawyer, entered the law offices. Goodman ushered Turner and his lawyer into the private office of Mr. Adams. Loventritt, it is said, told Turner to remain outside. Turner refused, saying that he wanted to close the matter at once. Turner immediately after entering asked for McIntyre and showed anger when told he would not be at the conference.

Negotiations for a settlement began at once, Hamilton, Mallard and Goodman and Adams being present, besides Turner and his attorney. The conference at first was in the firm's general offices, but later Mallard asked to see Adams and Hamilton in Adams' private office, Turner having refused certain propositions. While the conference in the private office was going on, Turner walked in. His lawyer asked him for his check to be used in the settlement and Turner said: "Yes, I'll let you have it."

Then Turner closed the door of the office. He was facing Mallard, who had asked him for the check. An instant after he had shut the door he drew a revolver and, pointing it at Mallard, said: "I'll kill you, you ——." Then he fired two shots at Mallard. Instantly there was a wild scramble on the part of the others in the room. All but Hamilton dashed for the door, but Hamilton, when Turner fired, sprang at him to grapple. Turner was too quick for him, however, and dropping his weapon to a level with his victim's breast, fired. There is no witness to what followed. Mr. Leventritt, at the first appearance of the revolver, rushed out of the room. Goodman followed Leventritt and Adams jumped to his feet as soon as Mallard was shot, brushed past Turner and got out of the office. As they left the room more shots were heard, followed by two heavy falls. There was consternation in the office among those present. Clerks, boys and several women employes were for a few minutes too frightened to do anything.

When persons connected with the law offices ventured back into the room they found the three bodies lying close together.

On Turner's body was found an unsigned telegram reading: "Telephone message received. Will accept $2700 either from Hamilton or Mallard."

On Turner's corpse the coroner also found a certified check for $2700. The latter they regarded as throwing a peculiar light on the case, for they thought it indicated that Turner went to the offices with the probable intention of paying the sum of money which was to have settled the difficulty. If he did intend to pay, they argue, he changed his mind suddenly and decided to kill.

Canadian Jealousy Feared

St. Johns, Oct. 18.—It is reported here that Premier Bond has concluded a reciprocity treaty with Secretary Hay in Washington. The United States government is said to be only awaiting the authority for Ambassador Herbert to affix his signature to it. It is feared here that Canada will adopt now the same policy she did in 1890, when she protested against a former treaty and secured its abrogation.

HOTEL BADLY DAMAGED

Early Morning Fire Compelled Guests to Hustle For Safety

Greenfield, Mass., Oct. 18.—Fire and smoke unceremoniously made the guests of the American House leave their apartments early this morning, while the wooden part of the structure, five stories high, was completely gutted. The damage to the hotel is placed at from $15,000 to $20,000, and the dry-goods store of John Wilson & Co., which was a tenant, had heavy damage to stock. There were about 43 guests in the hotel, and all escaped unhurt, although there were narrow escapes from suffocation. Two employes were overcome by smoke and were carried out, recovering later.

The fire started by accident in the coal bin near the kitchen stove. The firemen had a hard task, but they fought the fire at close quarters, and prevented what promised to be a conflagration. The entire hotel has just been renovated and refurnished, and the work will have to be done over again.

Educational Disappointments

New Haven, Oct. 18.—President Eliot of Harvard university addressed the annual convention of the Connecticut State Teachers' association yesterday. In enumerating some of the disappointments connected with popular education, he spoke of the persistence of gambling, the task of the development of any successful method of dealing with the vice of intemperance, the frequent failure of universal suffrage to produce good government in large cities, the quality of the popular theatres of today, the nature of daily reading matter supplied to the American public, the tenacity of the spoils or patronage system in the civil service, and the increasing frequency of labor strikes.

Buried With Simple Ceremonies

Boston, Oct. 18.—There was little in the simple services held over the remains of Rear Admiral Selfridge, at the chapel of Forest Hills cemetery yesterday, to indicate the rank and eminent services of the deceased in the navy of the United States. Eight marines acted as body-bearers and escorted the remains to the grave. The coffin was draped with the national flag and it was almost covered with a bank of white flowers. The exercises were confined to the reading of the burial service and prayers for the dead of the Episcopal church.

Papers Filed In "Fighting Ninth"

Boston, Oct. 18.—Before the time limit for filing independent nomination papers in the office of the secretary of state had expired at 5 o'clock last night, the three Democratic contestants in the deadlocked Ninth congressional district had each filed such papers, those of Joseph A. Dennison being first to make their appearance. A few minutes later John A. Keliher handed in two sets of papers. The papers of Joseph A. Conry, the present congressman, who is seeking re-election, were the last of the trio of candiates to be filed.

Threw Knife at Girls

Cambridge, Mass. Oct. 18.—Thomas Simmons, a negro who was arrested on the suspicion of being the man who threw a knife at two young women, was in court yesterday on the charge of simple assault. The case was continued until Oct. 25, and he will be examined as to his sanity. When taken to the police station Simmons acted like an insane man, and was finally placed in a straight jacket, although it took four men to do it.

Temperence Women In Convention

Portland, Me., Oct. 18.—The work of the 29th National Women's Christian Temperance Union, which opened here yesterday, is well in hand. A feature of yesterday was the arrival of Lady Henry Somerset, president of the World's W. C. T. U., and Rev. Henry S. Sanders of England. Little business was transacted, the day being devoted to the president's address, reports of officers, organizers and branches.

To Auction Squire Shares

Boston, Oct. 18.—As agent for the shareholders of the Broadway National bank, John W. Weeks has been authorized by the United States district court to sell by auction 1527 shares of preferred stock of the John P. Squire & Co. In his petition he represented that he has tried to sell them at par, but without success. These shares had been taken by the bank in exchange for notes.

Gets $100,000 For Patent Rights

Fitchburg, Mass., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Edmund Rice, wife of Colonel Rice, who commanded the Sixth Massachusetts, U. S. V., in the invasion of Porto Rico in 1898, has been allowed $100,000 by the court of claims for the use the government has made of a patent tent he designed. Colonel Rice has made over all interest in the claim and patent to Mrs. Rice.

Brothers Fell From Scaffold

Boston, Oct. 18.—Two brothers, Albert Brigham and George Brigham, were painting the building at 10 Middlesex street when the ropes which held the scaffolding broke. The men dropped 20 feet to the ground. Albert's skull was fractured, while George got off with a sprained ankle. The doctors say that Albert cannot live.

Held on Poison Charge

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 18.—Philip H. Clark was placed on trial here yesterday on a charge of having placed poison in the well of Frank A. Barrows at Assonet on the night of Sept. 27, with intent to kill. At the conclusion of the testimony Clark was held in $10,000 bonds for the next term of the superior court.

Woman's World

MRS. T. B. SHEPHERD.

The Splendid Success of a California Woman In Floriculture.

Mrs. Theodosia Burr Shepherd of Ventura, Cal., has for twenty years and more lived a life unceasingly given to the unfolding and evolution of floral plant life, adding vigor and grace to the older types and producing yet other charms in foliage and fragrance and shades of color in her new creations.

Angus Hall, a forceful Iowa lawyer and congressman, afterward chief justice of Nebraska, was the father of Mrs. Shepherd. Her mother she lost when but three years of age. Her father named her Theodosia Burr because of admiration of the domestic heroine of the Revolution, whose filial devotion won the admiration of the whole country in spite of the unpatriotic career of her father. Judge Hall was a fond flower lover and led his daughter to study their nature and love them as he did. Her school education was received at Ruth Bryan's seminary in Batavia, N. Y. The dream of her girlhood was of a conservatory "all her own," and her frail health induced her to come after her marriage to California. Her husband found a home for them in Ventura, where her dream has long been more than realized.

MRS. THEODOSIA BURR SHEPHERD.

On the land purchased for her by her husband Mrs. Shepherd began the cultivation of flowers in a scientific way, gradually broadening out until she was exchanging California plants, seaweeds and curios with eastern and European florists in furtherance of her desire to add all the beautiful things obtainable to her groups of garden treasures. She was aided in her daily task by the ready help of her children, a son and three daughters. She soon established a good business and in a few years gained an honorable name as a flower evolutionist of great ability. The honor of being the pioneer florist of southern California belongs to her.

Begonias are Mrs. Shepherd's favorite flowers, and twenty-one new creations of this beautiful plant now stand to her credit, some of them marvels of beauty and vigor, her Marjorie Daw ranking as a wonder in the floral world, while her new tree begonias, six to ten feet high, even the leaves of which seem to be illuminated with brilliant colors, command like admiration.

Her work in the evolution of nasturtiums has resulted in the giant flowered Sunlight, the giant Moonlight and Caprice, bought by William Atlee Burpee, the great Philadelphia florist, who visited her place and made generous recognition of her work in his catalogue for 1900. She has also other marvels in nasturtiums. Her new creations in geraniums number twenty-four, in chrysanthemums twelve, in poppies three, one of which cannot be described without seeming exaggeration.—Los Angeles Herald.

The Skin and Massage.

There is no reason whatever why a good skin should not be retained until well into middle age. The reason it is not is because few women realize the efficacy of arresting the natural process of decay by artificial means, or, rather, of counteracting the withering effect of our artificial living, in time. During youth all sorts of abuses may be indulged in with impunity. The natural health of youth defies them, but when this growing time is past and nature no longer supplies the body with multiple force there must be deterioration unless we take some measures ourselves to preserve the beauty of youth and to arrest the advance of age tokens. One of the best means possible for this, where the skin is concerned, is massage. This supplies the skin with the blood which in youth is supplied unconsciously, and it preserves the tissues and texture as long as it is employed. Such massage as this need be but little else than pressure, to call the blood to the surface of the skin and to keep it alive and active. With the tips of the fingers, at least once a day, every inch of the space on the face and neck should be gently but firmly pressed and kneaded, not so as to cause a soreness, but so that the blood is called to the very surface and every smallest cell is flooded. It may be done in bathing the face, if no wash cloth be employed, by rubbing the soap into the skin with the finger tips and then rinsing all this off.

All Women Have Beauty.

Every woman that exists has some point of beauty, possibly lying dormant, which can develop. It may be a cultivated intellect, an inspired soul, sweet nature, fine presence, lovely form or beautiful face, and somewhere on this great round globe somebody has recognized that fact or will. So it behooves all womankind to look well into themselves and endeavor to improve the good points, to ameliorate the unfortunate ones and entirely forget that they have any bad ones.

There is nothing so farreaching as self forgetfulness, either where beauty exists or does not exist.

A famous statesman on being asked what he considered the greatest type of beauty in women replied, "The woman who is beautiful and does not know it and the homely woman who by her intelligence and graceful bearing makes you forget it."

Life is too short to be constantly regretting the lack of some type of form or face we do not possess. The sighing for gray eyes when we have blue and longing for black tresses when ours are golden will only bring wrinkles and discontent, thereby making others unhappy. But there are ways and means provided both by nature, exercise and discipline whereby we can wonderfully improve, eradicate and change many of the unhappy conditions of life.—Pilgrim.

Well Conducted Household.

On the door of the linen, china, glass and silver closets should be placed a list of their contents. When new articles are added, a record should be made and the same done when they are lost or worn out. Copies of the lists should be kept in the housewife's own housebook, which should contain in addition recipes for cleaning silver, mending china and doing other useful things.

Once a year the efficient housekeeper will take stock of her belongings and will replace missing china and linen. Her maids will soon come to understand that nothing about the household escapes the attention of its mistress or is too small for her to take note of, and in time the establishment will move in as well oiled grooves as a well conducted mercantile concern.

Exercise For the Neck.

To develop the neck the first movement consists in allowing the head to drop gently upon the breast as far forward as it will without straining. Next raise the head and throw it as far back as possible, then forward again, etc., until the movement has been performed twenty times. Next the head is turned as far to the side as possible, the body remaining motionless, the head bent toward the shoulder as low as it will reach without an actual strain of the muscles and tendons. This movement should be practiced also twenty times, the neck first turned to the right and then to the left, ten times on each side; the same movement with the chin raised as high as possible, repeated the same fashion, first toward the right, then the left.

Chicken Custard.

The next time you want to tempt the appetite of the gentle convalescent who has refused your gruels or porridges try a chicken custard. To a cupful of cream add a cupful of clear chicken stock. Put it in the double boiler and add the beaten yolks of three eggs and a pinch of salt. Cook until the mixture thickens to the consistency of custard, then pour into cups and serve cold. If the appetite is capricious and needs something hot, still use your chicken stock—a cupful—and add two egg yolks, beating the mixture with an egg beater. Cook in double boiler, and when done add two teaspoonfuls of sherry and serve in a cup, piping hot.

Unique Workbag.

A pretty workbag is made of a Tam O'Shanter cap of gray Scotch frieze. It is lined with pale rose silk fitted neatly to the band headpiece, and its own weight of crown keeps it properly open for quick service when placed top downward on the table. A scarlet one lined with scarlet silk, its crown held with a loop of strong whalebone as sailors' caps are flattened, was suspended by ribbons from the dark oak newel post of the staircase in the same house to do duty as a card receiver.

A Window Retreat.

With little expense an ordinary window can be made a delightful retreat. Festoon the upper part of the window with yellow china silk having rosettes to match. A thin brass rod and rings hold the little half curtain of white silk scattered with yellow flowers. In the recess before the window place a settee upholstered in yellow and white cretonne with cushions to match.

High Chair.

If an ordinary dining chair needs to be made higher to accommodate a small child, try an expedient that is almost equal to having rubber lifts and is a vast improvement on using the dictionary. This is simply to procure four of the glass insulators such as are used on telegraph poles and set the chair legs into them.

Mint Bags.

Mint bags for the linen closet are liked by some persons. Put into little silk bags a mixture made of a pound of dried lavender, an ounce of thyme, an ounce of mint, an ounce of ground cloves and caraway seeds and a tablespoonful of dry salt.

Iron and stone utensils may be repaired by using a cement in the form of a paste composed of litharge and glycerin. This cement is not affected by changes of temperature.

Hang an old eiderdown quilt in the sun for a few hours to restore it to all the elasticity and life it had when new.

Fish fins are more readily removed if a pair of old shears are used for the purpose instead of a knife.

Fresh bread is easily cut if the bread is heated first.

☞The Brookline Chronicle has come to the conclusion that "the nomination of Mr. William E. Badger in the convention makes it the duty of Brookline Republicans to support the party candidate. Had Mr. Wright received the party nomination, which would have been possible only by earnest agitation in his behalf, the situation would be quite different."—Hyde Park Gazette.

Hofheins—Rodgers.

A pretty chrysanthemum wedding was solemnized at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Rodgers of Buffalo, N. Y., when their daughter, Florence Lucy, became the wife of Mr. Walter Franklin Hofheins.

The house decorations were all in green and white, a profusion of long-stemmed white chrysanthemums and palms being used throughout the rooms. The window where the bridal party stood was banked with tall palms and was festooned with ropes of wild smilax and laurel extending from the chandelier to the corners of the room. The music of a harp and violin in the hall added to the effectiveness of the service, the approach of the bride being heralded by the singing of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin by Mrs. Edwin F. A. Kurtz. The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. She was preceded by the two bridesmaids, Miss Pearl Warren of Rochester and Miss Mary Lindsay Wright of Buffalo, and by the maid of honor, Miss Anna Clapp of Boston. The bridal gown was of white crepe de chine over soft silk, the skirt finished with an accordion-pleated flounce of chiffon edged with tiny ruffles and cut with a long train. The waist was embellished with handwork in French knots and fagot stitching and with garnitures of duchesse lace. The yoke and sleeves were of shirred chiffon. A pearl and diamond sunburst, the bridegroom's gift, was worn. The long tulle veil was fastened to the hair with a simple cluster of white rosebuds. The bride carried a white leather prayerbook, which she exchanged after the ceremony for a bouquet of white chrysanthemums carried by the maid of honor.

On their return from an extended Southern wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Hofheins will be at home after January 1st at No. 417 Lafayette avenue.

Among the guests were Mrs. Edwin Bowker, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burgin and Mrs. George Pfaffmann of Quincy.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

There seems to be no cessation in the business which the Boston Music Hall is enjoying, and at nearly every performance the theatre is crowded to the very doors. The patrons of the theatre are finding out that they can see the very best kind of attractions at this theatre at prices lower than anywhere else in town and the subscription list is steadily increasing. Lottie Williams and her excellent company in "Only a Shop Girl," has been the attraction which has served to draw large audiences this week.

Melodramatic conventionalities are fully observed in "A Kentucky Feud," a new and thrilling domestic play by William T. Keogh and James R. Gurey which comes to Music Hall next week. The dramatic critic of the Evening News of Newark, New Jersey, after witnessing the first performance had this to say: "Although the authors have constructed it along familiar lines, yet the result of their joint labors is a piece which will become popular."

The story is so cleverly told that interest in its recital is quickly aroused and is firmly maintained during the developments of the progressive action until the fall of the curtain.

PARK THEATRE.

The attraction at the Park Theatre for the week beginning next Monday, October 20, will be "My Kentucky Home," a play of Southern life and character by J. K. Tillotson. Its plot deals with the incidents of love and war, and its characters are some on the one side and some on the other of the great struggle between the North and the South. The War itself, however, merely serves as a background for the development of a light and breezy story, which is full of love, pathos, passion, humor and emotion. The general Southern atmosphere will be well preserved and there will be ample opportunity for picturesque scenery and costuming. The cast will bring out the full strength of Mr. Payton's excellent stock company.

The matinees given daily at the Park Theatre are rapidly becoming more and more popular, and the subscription list of regular weekly patrons is steadily growing. At the close of the performance next Tuesday afternoon, the weekly reception and tea will be held, all the ladies and children in the audience being cordially invited to attend and to meet Una Abell Brinker, the leading lady.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The attraction at the Castle Square theatre next week will be the play "Catherine," by Henri Lavedan, originally produced at the Comedie Francaise, Paris, a few seasons ago, and seen here at the Boston Museum early in 1899. It had the endorsement of the Director of the Theatre Francaise as one of the most successful plays brought out there in recent years, and its original American production at the Garrick theatre, New York, and subsequent presentations in the large cities of this country confirmed this estimate of its dramatic value. The play is so constructed that it weaves a variegated web of well contrasted scenes showing the hopes and sorrows, mirth and trouble, levity and seriousness of domestic life in a most fascinating way. It is distinctly French in its characteristics and the characters are those of Paris social life. The plot deals mainly with the unfortunate results of an ill-advised marriage and the story has a sustained interest until the final curtain. The usual distribution of boxes of chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The only entertainers who will hold over at Keith's for the week of Oct. 20 are Will M. Cressey and Blanche Dayne, who will revive their charming comedy sketch, "A Village Lawyer," which is one of the best short plays ever done in vaudeville. Among the newcomers, the most prominent are Charles J. Ross and Mabel Fenton, who have been for half a dozen years past with Weber and Fields. They will be seen in a burlesque sketch entitled "Cleopatra," a line of work they had made familiar in variety houses before entering the "legitimate." Others in the bill are: Johnson and Dean, colored singers and dancers; Yamamote brothers, Japanese acrobats; Zimmer, a skilful juggler; Les Frasettes, musical artists; Hedrix and Prescott, dancing specialists, and Delmore sisters, in spectacular specialty "The Bridegroom's Reverie."

Don't Procrastinate.

There is, after all, only a little time left to attend the great Mechanics Fair now being held in Boston. Don't by any possible error let anything prevent every one going.

Beside the instructing and interesting exhibits in the manufacturing line, there may be seen this year at Mechanics building, every day, many attractive and novel features. There is continually going on the most unique of entertainments. Every day there are lectures being given by prominent women under the auspices of the Women's Department. There are wonderful and beautiful scenic reproductions to be seen and if the Fair was a genuine circus the different entertainments that are presented continually, as well as the continual performances of vaudeville, to say nothing of the concerts by the best bands that can be procured, make it the best show on earth. Remember twenty-five cents admits one to everything.

A Good Hearted Man,

or in other words, men with good sound hearts, are not very numerous. The increasing number of sudden deaths from heart disease daily chronicled by the press, is proof of the alarming prevalence of this dangerous complaint, and as no one can foretell just when a fatal collapse will occur, the danger of neglecting treatment is certainly a very risky matter. If you are short of breath, have pain in left side, smothering spells, palpitation, unable to lie on side, especially the left, you should begin taking

TO FOLLOW MITCHELL

Miners Have Sincere Faith In His Judgment

NO HITCH IS LOOKED FOR

In Acceptance of President's Arbitration Proposition—Question of Strikers Getting Their Old Places Will Come Before Convention

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 20.—Many of the delegates to the anthracite mine workers' convention, which will meet in this city today for the purpose of accepting or rejecting the proposition of President Roosevelt to end the strike and submit all grievances to the arbitration commission appointed by him, are instructed in various features of the settlement, but a majority of them will follow the advice and judgment of President Mitchell. There is nothing on the surface that gives the slightest indication that the convention will not vote to send the men to work this week, with the probability in favor of Thursday as the day of resumption.

It is quite evident to observers that they are glad to get together and decide to return to work after the weary idleness of more than five months. All the delegates who were spoken to regarding the action of the convention appeared to have no fear that a hitch might occur which would disarrange the present peaceful trend of affairs. A good many of the delegates say they have instructions on certain matters, which they will place before the delegates.

The principal question outside of the great question of accepting or rejecting President Roosevelt's proposition will be that of strikers getting their old places. A large number of the men fear that in the general rush to return to the mines some of them may fail to get work. They want some assurance from the convention that they will be able to get the positions they occupied before the suspension was ordered. It is likely this element from the three districts will join forces and make a concerted fight on the floor of the convention for some specific action. In the face of the fact that the operators are on record that they will not dismiss one man who stood by them during the struggle, it is going to be a serious problem to solve. The debate, it is believed, will take up a great deal of the time of the convention, which is expected to last not more than two days.

The meeting in all likelihood will be held behind closed doors after formal organization is affected. President Mitchell will be elected chairman, and during the first session he will lay the plan of arbitration submitted by President Roosevelt before them for action. He will recommend that it be accepted and the men return to work as quickly as the coal companies can provide work.

The military camp in West Side park, across the Susquehanna river from this city, again attracted a large Sunday crowd. There were no reports of violence at the general's headquarters from any part of the region affected by the strike.

Police Must Have Been Asleep

New York, Oct. 20.—Two men were stabbed and a number of people more or less injured in a fight yesterday between factions from the East and West side. While the affair lasted only 10 minutes it threatened to be serious. About 40 men and women took part and a number of the women were seriously beaten. The police have no report of the affair, which occurred a short distance from a police station.

Town In Possession of Negroes

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 20.—Three white men and eight negroes are dead at Littleton as a result of a race riot. The negroes in the place outnumber the whites 10 to 1 and are in complete possession of the town. The negroes have captured a powder magazine belonging to a coal company. A reign of terror exists.

SAFE ROBBERS CAUGHT

Gloucester Policemen Lands Two Bad Men Behind the Bars

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 20.—Police Officer O'Maley is receiving much commendation for his bravery early Sunday morning in capturing Henry Pitzold, 25, and Peter Lawson, 18, while they were in the act of robbing the safe in the office of M. M. Johnson's bakery on Washington street. Passersby heard suspicious sounds and notified O'Maley, who, upon investigation, found the back door open, went into the building, locking the door after him, and surprised the two burglars at their work.

Pitzold, who is a powerful man, at once grappled O'Maley, and the latter, realizing that if both men attacked him he would be over-matched, drew his revolver and fired at Lawson, thus intimidating the latter. O'Maley finally got the masfery over Pitzold and took him to the station house, after requesting some citizens present to watch the place and see that Lawson did not escape.

O'Maley returned with the patrol wagen in a few moments, but Lawson succeeded in escaping from the building and led the officer a chase for several blocks before he was captured. He offered no resistance. The men had evidently been at their work but a short time when they were interrupted and had secured no booty.

Jim Younger Kills Himself

St. Paul, Oct. 20.—James Younger, formerly a member of the notorious Jesse James band of outlaws, which infested the western country a quarter of a century ago, committed suicide yesterday by shooting. He left a letter to the press in which he said despondency over continued ill-health and separation from his friends caused the act. Younger, since his parole from the state penitentiary in July of last year, has led an exemplary life. He was 54 years of age.

Corpse In a Doorway

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 20.—When Mrs. Martin Glynn opened her door yesterday morning to take in her milk she found a man lying upon the floor with blood oozing from his eyes and nose. Her screams alarmed the household and it was found that the man was dead. He was later identified as John C. Sullivan, 50 years old, a well known character. The medical examiner pronounced death due to heart disease, brought on by alcoholism.

Jump Cost Him His Life

Wichita, Kas., Oct. 20.—A young Englishman jumped from the top of a Santa Fe freight car while crossing the Salt Fork bridge near Ponca City, O. T., yesterday, saying the momentum would carry him to the bank and making a bet to that effect. He fell short, however, striking a rock in the river and was instantly killed. He was a nephew of the Earl of Lonsdale and had served in the British army in India.

Bodies Turned to Stone

New York, Oct. 20.—Nine petrified bodies have been found in the cemetery attached to the New York infant asylum at Mount Vernon. The asylum was closed recently and it became necessary to remove the bodies in the cemetery. While the work was going on the workmen exhumed nine bodies that have the appearance of white marble and are as solid as a rock.

Talked to Boston Socialists

Boston, Oct. 20.—"Mother" Jones, as she is known among the Pennsylvania miners, spoke to 4000 people under Socialist auspices at a grove in Roxbury yesterday. Her address was in the main a rehearsal of incidents at strikes previous to the present one. She made several perorations, and these awakened great enthusiasm.

THE REBELS RETREATED

After a Seven Days' Fierce Battle In Venezuela

LOST THREE THOUSAND MEN

Government Forces Led by President Castro In Two Attacks—A Rebel Leader Claims That Government Troops Also Lost Heavily

Washington, Oct. 20.—In a telegram to the state department Minister Bowen states that the revolutionary army has withdrawn from near Victoria. He also states that the government troops still hold Valencia. A later dispatch, dated 10:45 yesterday forenoon, from the same source, stated that the battle had ended with no decisive result.

La Victoria, Venezuela, Oct. 20.—A messenger has arrived here from the scene of the engagement near this place between government troops and revolutionists, bringing news that after seven days of terrible fighting 9000 rebels, under General Mendoza, had abandoned the field, having retired from their last position, six miles from La Victoria, Friday night, retreating in the direction of Villa de Cura. According to President Castro the killed and wounded number 3000.

During the last days of the fighting the temperature rose to 116 degrees and a visitor to the scene of the engagement declares he never saw such a terrible spectacle as was presented by the battlefield.

The victory of the government troops, which is said to be due to the personal courage of President Castro, who twice, with a mauser rifle in his hand, charged at the head of his soldiers, is considered a serious setback for the cause of the revolutionists.

Willemstad, Oct. 20.—One of the leaders of the Matos' revolution in Venezuela, who is at present in Curacao, has furnished details and explanation of the retreat of the revolutionary army from La Victoria. He says: "The rebels only abandoned the fight after being convinced that La Victoria was impregnable, and after President Castro had refused to come out and attack the revolutionists outside of La Victoria. Twice did the revolutionary general attempt to force President Castro to take the offensive, and twice the president refused.

"When the rebel reinforcements arrived at La Victoria last Thursday, President Castro and his forces were located at a point on the German railroad. The rebels made a detour of the city and cut off the only road of retreat open to the government forces. They were then short of ammunition, and without the arrival of a train bringing them 500,000 cartridges we believe that Castro's forces would have been annihilated. Preparations for their retreat had already been ordered.

"The revolutionists stationed near Caracas, some 1200 men under the command of General Ramos, are alone responsible for the retreat of General Mendoza, as they permitted the train carrying ammunition to the government to leave Caracas and reach La Victoria. This train had an escort of only 100 men. The men under Ramos did not attack it nor did they destroy one of the 80 bridges between Caracas and La Victoria over which the railroad runs.

"An added proof that the government suffered terribly in the La Victoria fight from the repeated attacks of the rebels, is found in the fact that President Castro does not pursue General Mendoza. The latter's plan withdrawing from La Victoria is to oblige President Castro to abandon the positions he holds there.

"The rebels suffered losses, but the government did also. President Castro's forces are reduced to 3100 men, while General Matos still has 9000 men in the field. It was not a rout, but a methodical retreat."

In conclusion the rebel officer said that the revolutionists within a few days would be found near Caracas.

Wu May Remain With Us

Washington, Oct. 20.—Referring to reports that have been circulated that he was to remain in Washington permanently, Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister, said last night: "I was notified that my successor was appointed. Later I was notified that I am to remain in Washington temporarily. Further than that I know nothing of the plans of my government relating to this post."

BOY DEAD IN WOODS

A Suspicion That He May Have Met With Foul Play

Ashfield, Mass., Oct. 20.—In the woods, scarcely half a mile from his home, with the face upturned, the body of Roland Wylie, aged 14, was found yesterday afternoon by searchers under direction of State Officer McKay. The lad disappeared on Sept. 23 after having been reproved for misbehavior by his teacher, Miss Amy Stetson, which reproof also was seconded by his foster father, Alec Wylie. The boy threatened to take poison, but his words were not taken seriously for the time being. In the searching party were 150 men. The body was found about four feet from a woodland path, which ran irregularly for half a mile from the Wylie farm.

There are certain things about the case which need explaining, so District Attorney Malone last night ordered an inquest on the body, and the internal organs will be sent to a chemist to see if poison is to be found in them. The question is raised whether the lad died of poison or was killed and the body taken to the place at which it was found. The lad was a state ward.

Fatal Shooting In Connecticut

New Britain, Conn., Oct. 20.—Three young men, all Poles, went into the woods yesterday looking for chestnuts. At 4 o'clock one of the party hurried into town for a doctor, saying that his brother had been shot. Two physicians found a young man lying in a pool of blood with a bullet wound over his right eye. He died two hours later. The man who is supposed to have done the shooting evidently disappeared as soon as the wounded man's brother left for help. The disappearance of the man who is supposed to have done the shooting leads the police to suspect murder.

Slugger Not Yet Caught

Watertown, Mass., Oct. 20.—Residents of this town are somewhat frightened at the frequency of assaults upon unprotected women, as have terrorized neighboring cities for three months past. Last evening Jane Ladelle, 14 years old, while walking with her younger sister on Coolidge avenue, was struck down by a man whom she describes as well dressed and apparently of middle age. He sprang from behind a clump of trees. Her screams brought assistance, but the miscreant escaped.

Polanders In Stabbing Affray

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 20.—Paul and Albert Pinkus were badly slashed about their heads and arms by a knife in the hands of Andrew Chesla, as the result of a drunken quarrel last night. It was feared they would bleed to death before medical assistance could be secured. Chesla escaped, but was later captured. Nine other Polanders were arrested in connection with the stabbing.

Trolley Cars Collided

Ware, Mass., Oct. 20.—Twelve persons were injured, two perhaps fatally, in a trolley collision here, a heavy double truck car slipping on a heavy grade and coasting down hill into a car ahead. William E. Swindell and James Fleming are considered in a serious condition. Leaves on the track are supposed to have been the cause of the accident.

Probable Double Drowning

Salem, Mass., Oct. 20.—Duck hunting in a frail canoe probably has proven a fatal sport for John E. Foster and Frank W. Wilson. They left on their trip at 4:30 a. m., Saturday, and have not returned home. Evidence of an accident that befell them is found in splinters of a green painted canoe and a paddle picked up at Beverly cove.

Officer Used His Gun

Boston, Oct. 20.—During a sidewalk fight at the South End yesterday, following an assault on Patrolman Gallagher, Peter J. Cantion, one of the alleged assailants, was shot in the arm by the officer, who claims to have used the weapon in self-defense. The other men mixed up in the affair were arrested.

Salem Loses Honored Citizen

Salem, Mass., Oct. 20.—Arthur L. Huntington, mayor of Salem in 1885, is dead at a private sanitarium at Norwalk, Conn., after an illness of three years. He was 54 years of age, a native of this city, a graduate of the city schools and of Harvard, class of 1870. He was a lawyer.

Might Have Been Worse

Waterbury, Conn., Oct. 20.—An electric car was struck by a train on a crossing here and about 20 passengers were slightly injured. The car, with one side crushed in, was thrown from the track and many of the passengers were injured by splinters and flying glass.

Ex-Mayor's Bad Fall

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 20.—Ex-Mayor Elihu B. Hayes was seized with a dizzy spell while descending a flight of stairs at his residence Saturday night and fell to the bottom, fracturing his skull. It is thought, however, that he may recover.

Football Caused Death

Hartford, Oct. 20.—Charles R. Gager, 17 years old, who had his spine broken while playing football three weeks ago, died last night. Up to within a few days young Gager's recovery was expected, despite the serious nature of his injury.

Good Afternoon.

There is not seventy-five cities in the United States that has a population as large as the number of school children in the city of Boston—86,288. There are 879 more boys then girls.

Drift of Opinion.

☞It is reported that Brewery Workers' Union 29 has refused the applications for membership of the non-union men employed during the strike, in spite of assurances given to the State Board of Arbitration that they would be admitted. This action is likely to be followed by the other unions concerned, and may precipitate another strike. In this event public sympathy will not be so strongly with the workmen as heretofore.—Boston Transcript.

☞A correspondent writes:—"The sad death of a young girl, by a lamp explosion, seems to furnish a fit occasion to call attention to the importance of a proper care of lamps and oil stoves. Too many neglect to refill, each day, and thus leave a space for the accumulation of the explosive mixture of gas from the oil and the air. Care should be taken that the wick be not too narrow to fill the tube. Wicks of full width should be easily procurable. Another thing:—Never blow down the chimney. The wick turned low can be easily extinguished by a light puff at the base, or at the top, of the chimney."

☞Men who accumulate millions do not always retain health. Within the easy reach of memory are two striking proofs of this truth—Messrs. Charles M. Schwab and John W. Gates. Both are on the verge of nervous collapse. Mr. Schwab recently journed to Europe with his physical organization shattered and only the other day Mr. Gates, who had been traveling on the continent, returned to London in a serious condition. How true it is that the millions these men own can not give them health, nor can they give them happiness without it. They made money at the expense of health. It is not probable that either feels that he gained by the transaction. Still there are a few million well men who have had no experience with millions, who would like to see for themselves which is better.—Providence Telegram.

☞It is noted that Secretary Moody is opposed to government ownership of the coal mines and he has some very practical reasons for his opposition. In his present position he knows about what it costs the government to make repairs on its ships and realizes how much less private enterprise could do it. He served on the congressional committee on appropriations and knows how extravagant and costly is the characteristic of every branch of government work. He was a member of the congressional committee to investigate the postal system of the country and its needs and knows just how money is wasted in that government enterprise. The experience of the past is the warning of the future. Of course it need not be so,—that is if men were perfect and unselfish. But it is not so, and if men were unselfish and perfect, private ownership would be relieved of all its evils.—Haverhill Gazette.

HEAVY FINES.

August Peterson and John Bjornson Sentenced.

The hearing on the cases of August Peterson and John Bjornson for assault on Officer Patrick J. Bradley was not completed until nearly five o'clock Saturday afternoon the case having occupied the attention of the district court all day.

Judge Avery in summing up the case said the crime was a serious one and might carry with it a sentence to jail, but as Bjornson had already suffered severely by reason of being shot by the officer during the affair he would only impose a fine. Bjornson was fined $100 and Peterson $25. Both men paid.

The cases against the two men for assault on Joseph McLaughlin were dismissed.

During the trial Bjornson admitted that he tied a stone in a handerchief when he saw three men coming toward him but did not know that one of the three was Officer Bradley.

He supposed all three were bent on attacking him as he heard one say "Here they are Joe, come on and let's give it to them." He did not see the officer's badge or buttons, but remembered seeing a revolver pointed at him.

Quick Work.

The frequent complaints of the laggardness of justice could not be applied to the authorities of Nacogdoches, Tex., who Friday put on trial, sentenced and legally executed a Negro for the murder of a farmer and his wife and daughter. The entire proceedings occupied only about two hours. The murderer himself helped to expedite proceedings. He confessed his guilt, and when he heard the howling of the mob outside the court house and realized what his fate would be if he fell into its hands, he waived the thirty days allowed by law between sentence and execution, and consented to be hanged at once. Up to the point of his conviction five companies of State troops had protected him, but the mob would probably have found some way of reaching him and exploiting upon him that new Southern institution of which the stake and the faggot are the leading features. It was an almost even race between the law and the mob, and only expedition saved the day for the former.—Boston Transcript.

Greater Boston.

The Greater Boston Association is reported to have found that public sentiment in favor of annexation to Boston is strong in Chelsea, Revere, Somerville and Watertown, and to have determined to take definite action at the State House at the next session to have a Greater Boston bill passed. This bill contemplates the submission of the question to the voters of the communities concerned, and was referred at the last session to the next General Court. We are not familiar with the text of the bill, but if it contemplates any such action as that proposed by the commission appointed under chapter 446 of the Acts of 1894, we should hesitate to condemn plan which has received such an unqualified indorsement by the Boston Associated Board of Trade, and by many other men of sound judgment. While the formation of a city of Greater Boston would be undesirable, the organization of a new county government comprising the cities and towns of the metropolitan district might produce much benefit to the communities concerned, and need not involve, in any case, a sacrifice of local independence.—Brookline Chronicle.

To Be Rebuilt.

Although the birthplace of John G. Whittier at Haverhill was almost totally destroyed by fire last Friday, enough of it remains to raise above the charred embers, timbers and walls another structure that will still commemorate the first home of the Quaker poet.

The building is owned by the Haverhill Whittier Birthplace Association, which organization took possession of the same about ten years ago, and already plans are being made to rebuild this noted landmark which has attracted thousands of persons from all over the country.

Mrs. J. M. Ela, the heroine of the fire, who performed such a brave deed in saving the Whittier relics, regardless of the danger, is deserving of much praise.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

WITH HONOR.

Funeral of Col. Packard Largely Attended.

The funeral of Col. Abner B. Packard was held Sunday afternoon from his late residence on Hancock street. Rev. Ellery Channing Butler conducted the services which were largely attended. During the services the Appolo male quartette sang "Eternal Goodness" "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Sleep on Beloved."

Among those present were representatives from the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, Massachusetts Minute Men's Association, 4th Mass. Infantry Association, Paul Revere Post 88. G. A. R., John A. Boyd Camp, Legion of Spanish War Veterans, the Woman's Relief Corps and the directors of the Electric Light and Power Co. and Mt. Wollaston bank.

At the conclusion of the services the remains were escorted to the old Hancock cemetery by the Grand Army, who performed their burial ceremony and fired three volleys at the grave.

The bearers were from the Minute Men's Association and were: Col. George W. Mason, Capt. Henry S. Braden, Capt. James Leonard, Capt. Franklin Curtis, Lieut. Elisha N. Pierce, Lieut. James T. Stevens, Sergt. George A. Edson, Sergt. James E. Bates.

On the casket was the American flag and the sword worn by Col. Packard when he took command of the 4th regiment.

Among the floral tributes were a wreath of begonia leaves from the family, wreath of ivy tied with purple ribbon from the children, pillow of roses, carnations and ferns from grandchildren, a spray of chrysanthemums and ferns from the Woman's Relief Corps, a wreath of ferns and carnations from the Spanish War Veterans, a wreath of roses, chrysanthemums and ferns from the directors of the Electric Light Co. and a pillow of chrysanthemums, carnations, gladiolus, asparagus vine and ferns from Salberg Rathbone of Boston.

Young People's Union.

A large number was present at the Wollaston Unitarian church last evening, when the Young People's Religious Union was formed. Mr. John H. Holmes addressed the meeting and explained the purposes of the Union.

Miss Viola Bicknell rendered a solo. The constitution was adopted and the following officers were elected:

President,—Mr. Rollins.

Vice President,—Miss Almira Simmons.

Secretary,—Mr. H. Houghton Schumacher.

Treasurer,—Miss Helen Sprague.

Advisory Committee, — Rev. Frank W. Pratt, Mrs. Gurney, Mr. J. Q. Litchfield, Miss Helen Barnes, Mr. Percy Hull.

Music Committee,—Mrs. J. Q. Litchfield, Miss Eugenia Hatch, Mrs. George Collyer.

Written Ballots.

The county convention which nominated W. E. Badger of Quincy was unique in one respect at least. Badger was the only man talked of openly for the nomination, and yet on the day of the convention, when it came to voting, it was discovered that while everything possible had been done to bring voters into line for him, his supporters had forgotten to have any ballots printed. Thus the convention, just after starting, had to be held up for about 10 minutes while his friends went out into the lobby to write his name on slips of paper so they could be cast.—Practical Politics.

WANT IT ABATED.

Residents of Station Street Petition Police for Relief.

The building on Station street formerly used for church purposes, has become a source of nuisance to the residents of that vicinity, owing to the crowd that gathers there, more especially on Saturday nights. On these nights drunken rows are frequent. This place was raided by the police once but that did not break up the joint. Recently the residents applied to Henry H. Faxon for relief and upon his advise they have presented the following petition to Chief of Police Hayden:

To Joseph W. Hayden, Chief of Police, Quincy, Mass.

We, the undersigned, residents of Station Street, Quincy, respectfully represent that we are disturbed and severely annoyed by the carousals of parties occupying building numbered 16 said street and pray you to abate the nuisance without delay.

For the Ledger.

Saturday Night at the Fair.

We went to the fair in Hancock hall and we had a fine time. Things had the turned over look that they always have at the close of a bazar but we didn't care. We went only to give up our stray ten-cent pieces and drink lemonade and things.

There was a big crowd, all our own set, and of course that made it nicer. John McAnarney and Dr. McSweeney poked their heads in at the door but that's all, but the rest of us came right in and we stayed until the very last.

The entertainment was good, that is there was some very good specialties; with some Jennie Weston danced the Butterfly dance, Master Dougherty recited very well, some little Kaplan maids danced the Tambourine, and altogether it was good. John Phelan did stage honors announcing in sonorous and lengthy discourse the various numbers.

In the middle of the floor a man with a megaphone kept up a loud racket concerning a wheel of fortune, and the women persistently followed us for dimes on dolls, beds spreads, etc.

A thing that often comes into my poor little head is why they always have elderly women at the tables. There's nothing will bring a young man around quicker than a girl and what does a fellow want trading with his best girl's mother, when he might just as well have the girl herself to trade with. Poor mothers they looked tired too. We had a great time though.

The Choral Union.

There will be a meeting of the Wollaston Choral Union in the vestry of the Unitarian church, on Wednesday, 22 Oct., at 8 o'clock P.M., for the purpose of reorganizing the Union on a permanent basis; to adopt a constitution and by-laws, to choose officers for the ensuing year and to arrange for a series of rehearsals for the coming winter.

It is hoped that every one who loves good music will join and be present, as well as take an active interest in the business matters referred to above.

—The first and only Eskimaux newspaper in Laborador, the Aglai Illunainortut, is edited by M. Martin, a Moravian missionery among Greenlanders. Its printing and publishing office is at Nain. In June all the subscribers hurry off upon their fishing and seal hunting and get far beyond the the reach of the distributors of the newspapers.

WITHDRAWS NAME.

Bigelow Fails to File Papers for Representative to General Court.

There will be but eight candidates for Representative from this district instead of nine as was expected. This is due to the fact that John P. Bigelow did not file his papers as an independent as was expected. The time for filing papers expired last Friday at 5 o'clock and but two independent papers were filed from Quincy. These were John McKnight as Republican Citizen and Eugene F. De Normandie as Republican Independent.

The official ballot will therefore have eight names for Representative but two of which can be elected.

A Word from the Street.

Was standing on the corner, didn't mean no harm; was only thinking of the number of pretty girls there are in Quincy. Usually in a city like ours, pretty girls are few but we have so many they are a torment to us mere men.

Personally the girl I think is the belle goes by the name of "Mollie," but others may possibly differ. Anyway there are types for all tastes. There's the fragile girl, the vivacious girl, the demure, the stately, the little aristocrat, and, ah, me! a girl with flaunting dreamy eyes. All with more than average share of beauty. If it isn't the face its the form; if it isn't the form its the manner; usually its all these.

In a contest for beauty who would win? My pen would like to attach a name to each of the above qualities but a woman's wrath, etc., you know, and a natural dislike for riots makes me discreet.

One regrettable thing is that they have no common ground of meeting, no club or society of any kind, not even an assembly. If a young man wants to see a pretty girl he has to go to church, but a fellow can't do all the churches in one day.

A would be husband.

NO TARIFF REVISION.

No Reciprocity Features, Except Possibly with Cuba.

The Boston Daily Advertiser of this morning states positively that there will be no tariff revision at the coming winter session of congress.

This statement is made on the authority of those who are admittedly in control of tariff legislation, at Washington, and the source from which it comes makes it as positive as if the statement were made by a vote of the ways and means committee.

From a canvass made among the men who can speak with positive authority on this matter it can be said that

1. No general tariff bill will be passed.
2. No reciprocity treaties will be authorized, except possibly with Cuba.
3. The appointment of a tariff commission will depend on the elections.
4. The consideration of a bill for free coal will depend upon events connected with the elections.

As to the general tariff bill, The Advertiser is fully authorized to say, in as positive language as can be framed, that whether the republicans win or lose in the coming election, the passage of any general tariff bill will be fought in the house by leading men on the ways and means committee, and that even if the house should pass a bill, it will not be allowed to pass the senate, even if it should be necessary to talk it to death.

INVITATION REFUSED

Joint Debate of Representative Candidates will Not Take Place.

The joint debate at Music hall by the several candidates seeking election as Representative to the General Court as proposed by Henry H. Faxon will not take place. When Mr. Faxon made his proposition it was stipulated that the debate would not take place unless six of the candidates accepted within a week. The two socialist candidates and Peter T. Fallon were the only ones who agreed to take part. Mr. Faxon has therefore called the debate off.

McCartney and Turner.

Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock in the Town hall, Braintree, there assembled about 300 citizens to listen to Frederick O. McCartney of Rockland and Levi H. Turner of Quincy on Socialism. Mr. McCartney explained his views to the entire satisfaction of his hearers, of the existing trusts and the labor situation. He said "The Democratic party are trying to go back to the platform of fifty years ago, the Republicans are looking at the present, but Socialists are looking into the future."

Mr. Turner was hardly able to speak on account of addressing an open air meeting in Quincy Saturday evening and contracting a severe cold. He warmed up however in speaking of Quincy's coal situation and Quincy's mayor. The audience were very much amused at Mr. Turner's description of a meeting, called by Mayor Bryant to find relief for the poor on account of the coal strike.

Mr. Turner asked the mayor, the presiding officer, if the gathering assembled was a mass meeting or a meeting of the few. This took Mr. Bryant by surprise and he replied after considerable hesitation that it was a mass meeting. Then Mr. Turner considered that it was his turn to address the people and ask questions. He claimed that Mayor Bryant did all in his power to check Mr. Turner from speaking. His belief was that Mayor Bryant was not the right man to be Quincy's chief magistrate.

REFORMING THE STAR

[Original.]

John Chrystie, president of the Star mine at Pine Hill, Nev., knew silver from copper if he did live in the east, and the general opinion was that he was level headed on all other matters as well. He not only shared in this opinion himself, but he knew that he was a philanthropist in his way and ready to do anything to make mankind better, except to increase the scale of wages at the Star mine. That couldn't be done without injustice to the stockholders, of whom he was one, but it was the duty of his fellow beings to be good on the wages of a dollar a day. The laborers at the mine, according to frequent reports from the resident superintendent, were not bubbling over with goodness. They swore and gambled and fought and went on strikes. So did the citizens of Pine Hill; likewise the cowboys who rode into Pine Hill to paint the town red.

The Star superintendent had included these facts in his reports, and there finally came a day when President Chrystie took a serious view of the social situation and mentally resolved that something ought to be done. Had it been a case of African heathen, missionaries and Bibles would have filled the bill, but the Star and Pine Hill were not Africa. Mr. Chrystie didn't care for the town, which was a mile from the mine, or for the cowboys who rode up from the plains five miles away, but he did sigh for some better influence among the shacks and shanties surrounding the Star. One day a bright thought came to him, and he rubbed his hands in glee. The remedy was woman. That's what ailed those 200 cussing miners—the lack of woman's influence.

Among his Sunday acquaintances, so to speak, was a young woman who had passed her thirtieth birthday without getting married because she was busy with a "mission." This was to lift up and better general humanity. She was interviewed and departed almost by first train, bearing a letter to the resident superintendent in which he was instructed to give her welcome and afford her every opportunity for fighting "cuss" words and whisky with sentiment. It is due him to report that, being a practical man, a driver and a profane official, he swore vigorously and wrote out his resignation and consigned Miss Amelia Wright to Jericho. It is also due him to add that, being a man of sense, he finally tore up his resignation and found as comfortable quarters as circumstances would permit for the woman with a mission.

Her advent at the Star created greater excitement than if all the hoisting machinery had suddenly fallen into the shaft and wages had been raised to $3 a day. At her home in the east even Miss Wright's best friends had criticised her nose, mouth, hands and feet and eyes, but on the slope of Wolf hill she at once became a goddess. Pine Hill was early on the ground to give its opinion. The whole town, Chinese laundrymen and all, marched over, with banners flying, to size up the new arrival, and the conclusion was that she was a "peach." News went down among the cowboys, and they came up by sixes and dozens to swing their hats and cheer and declare she was a "Jim Dandy." Taken all around, it was a grand welcome, and it seemed to Miss Wright as if the soil was ready and waiting for her missionary work. On the fourth morning when the night shift came up not a man of the day shift would go down. They were cutting and combing their hair, washing their red shirts and blacking their red boots, and as one of them put it to the superintendent:

"We've got a lady in camp, and dash our eyes if we don't show her that we are gentlemen and know how to behave!"

They called upon Miss Wright one after the other to be introduced, and most of them promptly proposed for her hand. When gently refused, they assured her that they stood ready to break the lucky fellow's neck. Despite the protests and entreaties of the superintendent the men persisted in making a holiday of it, and there was no room to doubt that reform had begun.

The Pine Hillers, however, returned home in disgruntled mood. They recognized the fact that they were a bad lot and in need of repairs, and if there was any reform going on they wanted to be counted in. It would be a blur on the escutcheon of Pine Hill to play second fiddle to the Star mine. At an early morning hour there was another general movement toward the mine, and on this occasion every man had his gun and a determination to conquer or die. A demand was made upon the Star for its goddess that she might spread her tender influence over the shacks and shanties of the town on the crest of the hill. Then followed a fight that lasted for two days and caused a new graveyard to be surveyed and opened. Everybody on either side was ready to die for the goddess, and a respectable number of them were duly accommodated.

The Pine Hillers were at length driven back, with their hopes of reform rudely shattered, and the Star folks were binding up their wounds and singing pæans of victory when the cowboys came swooping down. They were sighing for sentiment and woman's influence. They rode over the miners and captured their goddess and bore her away. Two hours later they bundled her aboard a freight train on the S. P. road, and their leader, lifting his sombrero, explained:

"As we have no grazing ground for a goddess out here, ma'am, we've got to let you go, but I'll be respectfully cussed and the other boys will be respectfully blowed if we propose to let any darned galoots up at the Star or Pine Hill get ahead of us on refinement!" THOMAS WYNKOOP.

The Wollaston A. A. football team defeated the Hyde Park A. A., Saturday afternoon, at Merrymount park, 6 to 0. Although Wollaston was greatly outweighed by Hyde Park, they played the stronger game. The features were the playing of Miller, Taylor and Scharnagel for Wollaston, while Blantener and Stetson excelled for the visitors. The summary:

BETWEEN HEATS.

Gypsy Queen, 2:28, has been sold to J. H. Slater of Indianapolis, Ind.

Consuela S., the daughter of Directum, 2:05¼, has lowered her record to 2:12¼.

Democracy, 2:07½, recently lowered the Washington state record to 2:08 at Whatcom.

Le Roi, the pacing son of Altamount and the dam of Klamath, 2:07½, has lowered his record to 2:16.

Mobel's third, fourth and fifth heats in 2:10¼, 2:10½ and 2:11¼ demonstrate him a very high class trotter.

After his recent experience it is reported that Scott Hudson has declined to drive Prince Selma, 2:19¾, again.

It seems wrong to see only two horses start for a three thousand dollar purse, as happened recently at the Empire State track in New York.

It is a great Axtell year. His get are winning right and left, and recently he put two in the 2:10 list, the trotter Ozanam, 2:09¼, and the pacer Ax, 2:09¼, the former beating the hitherto unbeaten Anzella, 2:07¼.

Three of the most prominent horses now racing in the middle west are the trotter Tonso, 2:14½, and the pacers Stranger O., 2:09¼, and Brown Sam, 2:11½. The first once sold for $60, the second for $35 and the last for $57.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

Dressmakers are extensively using pretty girdles and belts formed of the dress fabric.

The marquise or tricorne hat reappears this season in felt, beaver and velvet and is decorated with wings, breast feathers, pompoms and aigrets.

The costume skirt, with side plaits or shallow box plaits, will be a popular autumn and winter model. It clears the ground all around without showing the feet.

The skirts of afternoon frocks, while not so long as those of recent seasons, do not clear the ground. They just touch on the front and sides and dip enough at the back to give them an outcurving effect.

The Louis XV. coat in velvet, brocade or heavy silk or satin faced cloth is one of the most stylish garments of the season, and the new models have the skirt in either of two lengths and the sleeves reversed in cuffs to any depth.

The jacket bodice shows the Russian and Eton blouse effects, which are in favor this season. Some of the models have the back in one broad piece without any seam down the center. Others again have a center back seam and a belt and peplum or postillion finish.—New York Post.

SILVER LINING SHINES

On Cloud Which Has Long Hung Over Ireland

THE UNITED IRISH LEAGUE

Has Done Much Toward Securing What Are Considered Just Dues From Great Britain—Envoys Say That End of Great Contest Is Near

Boston, Oct. 20.—Ireland's foes were denounced by speakers at two monster meetings in Symphony hall and the Hollis Street theatre last night. The receptions by the United Irish league to John E. Redmond, Michael Davitt, John Dillon and Edward Blake, who are envoys to the national convention here today, took the form of public meetings and more enthusiastic gatherings for the Irish cause never were held here before.

At each place the speakers were the same. Mr. Redmond gave expression of the gratitude of the Irish envoys for the reception. He said that words could not portray the importance of these meetings and the convention to Ireland's cause. He said that all the power and wealth of the English nation is being used in a reckless attempt to crush the spirit of freedom in Ireland. Innocent men are convicted by packed juries, and unscrupulous efforts are being made by the landlords and the British government to ruin and drive to the grave the leaders of the Irish Nationalists. Yet the old spirit is rampant and today the Irish people are united.

"I am happy to say," said Mr. Redmond, "I think we are near the end of the contest. The violence of the attacks of the British government on the Irish Land league portends this and every assistance should be given to those across the water who are fighting the cause of Ireland with such magnificent courage, self-sacrifice and generosity."

Mr. Redmond said that the envoys were here to secure the support of the many millions of the Irish race in this country. In speaking of the united movement he said that never in the history of the Irish party was it as united as it was today and the action of the party in the house of commons had never been so united as it has been for the past two years. He stated that if the officers and leaders of the league were to be imprisoned there would yet be in every city, town, hamlet and district Nationalists who will spring up and fill their places.

On the question of the fighting policy of the league he said that for a number of years past the landlords have had no organization, showing that while the people of Ireland were divided the landlords had no fear. Since the Irish league had swept through the entire island the landlords had organized into what was known as the Irish land trust. Another great testimonial to the good work of the league was the action of the British government in suspending the constitution so that they practically said that they could not govern Ireland without coercion. Men who are arrested on vague charges are not given jury trials; the public meeting is abolished, and public opinion in the press is crushed. Such acts as these have resulted in half the Irish membership in parliament being sent to jail to await trial on some trivial charge.

Mr. Dillon said he was confident of success in this country because they were the delegates of a united people. He said they have convinced the world that Ireland was distinct from England by the actions the league had taken during the Boer war and that they would continue the agitation until they got what they wanted. He went on to answer many questions he had received from some Irishmen as to why they did not resort to arms and revolt. He said that in Ireland the people were unarmed. The government would not grant a license for any Irishman not in the government's pay to carry a revolver or a gun, so that the people had not been drilled and did not know the manual of arms.

John F. Finerty roused the enthusiasm of the audience in a spirited speech in which he endorsed the actions of the Irish parliamentary party.

Michael Davitt was obliged to wait several minutes before he could get the audience to refrain from their enthusiastic reception. He concurred in all that the previous speakers had said about the appearance of the silver lining on the cloud which had hung over the Irish nation for generations. He said that 25 years ago no man tilling the soil felt himself safe from the government, but today 60,000 Irish tenant farmers knew no rack renting landlords. He said that in Ireland today there were many big landlords who were frightened at the thought of another 25 years' struggle with the United Irish league and he thought a settlement would soon come if the party kept as a unit.

Mr. Blake denounced the burden of taxation which England had placed upon Ireland, referring especially to the heavy taxes imposed on the Irish people to raise funds for the carrying on of the South African war, a cause, he said, in which the people of Ireland had no sympathy.

A series of resolutions expressing confidence in Mr. Redmond's policy and the actions of his party and denouncing England's policy of coercion were unanimously adopted.

BISHOP POTTER CRITICISED

For Remarks Concerning Temperance Credited to Him

Portland, Me., Oct. 20.—The National W. C. T. U. delegates had a beautiful Sunday for their devotions. Dr. Sanders spoke at St. Luke's cathedral in the morning, an afternoon meeting was held at the Jefferson theatre and last night hundreds of people were turned away from city hall. Lady Henry Somerset and Dr. Sanders addressed the city hall gathering.

Lady Somerset called on the church people to rise up and band together and stand on the side of temperance. She arraigned Bishop Potter for his published words that the poor people and laboring men live such contracted and monotonous lives that he does not much blame them for occasionally getting drunk, just to even things up.

She said that it must first be assumed that Bishop Potter was correctly quoted, which she herself doubted. If he really said the words, or even words that were of the same general purport, it was a strange perversion of the Christian ministry. A clergyman should not rail at those who are striving to uplift the down-trodden but he should go to the multi-millionaires of New York and ask them to give of their millions towards the establishment of something that would go toward ameliorating this hum-drum condition of monotony.

Looks Bad For British

London, Oct. 20.—The serious reverse in Somaliland places the small British force there of about 3000 men of doubtful reliability in an exceedingly perilous situation. The Mullah probably has about 15,000 men, mostly mounted, a large percentage of whom are armed with rifles. With this large force harrassing him Colonel Swayne has to retreat under a scorching sun over an arid and roadless desert. The gravest anxiety will be felt until further news is received. The entire expedition will have to be repeated on a much larger scale.

To Search For Missing Engineer

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Relatives of Chester A. Richardson, aged 25, a civil engineer, have arrived at Chicago from Pelham, N. H., to assist in the search for the young man, who mysteriously disappeared from Munising, Mich., where he was superintending the construction of a paper mill. Richardson, who was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, left Munising to spend Sunday with a former classmate in Chicago, and no trace of him since has been found.

World's Greatest Race Track

New York, Oct. 20.—According to The American there is to be established in Jamaica Plains, L. I., a race track that shall surpass anything of its kind in the world. The ground has been purchased for a combination of millionaire horse owners, including August Belmont, William C. Whitney and Thomas F. Hitchcock, Jr., and comprises a tract of 480 acres, the price paid being about $800 an acre.

Balfour's Promise

London, Oct. 20.—In a printed reply to a question asked in parliament, Gerald Balfour, president of the Board of Trade, promises to submit the government's agreement with the Cunard Steamship company and the International Mercantile Marine company as soon as possible.

Will Be Well Represented

Manila, Oct. 20.—The civil commission will probably increase the Philippine appropriation for the St. Louis exposition exhibit by $100,000, making the total $350,000. Fair Commissioner Barrett addressed a meeting of Filipinos on the subject, and the sentiment of the meeting was in favor of the increase.

Mail Bag Robbed

East Liverpool, O., Oct. 20.—The mail bag containing checks and money orders representing $50,000, which was stolen from a Cleveland and Pittsburg train a few days ago, has been found on the river bank near the depot. The bag had been looted. Government officers are working on the case.

SEVEN TO ONE

From reports received we figure that one bottle of Scott's Emulsion sometimes builds seven times its weight of solid, healthy flesh! Why is this so?

Because Scott's Emulsion is itself the richest and most digestible of foods.

Because Scott's Emulsion gives strong appetite.

Because Scott's Emulsion makes all good food do good—strong stomach—strong digestion.

Because Scott's Emulsion wakes up the dormant system—new life to the tissues—so that the body uses it's food for bone making and flesh building.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

RICH FIND OF FOSSILS.

Three Toed Horse Skeletons Unearthed by Exploring Party.

Word was recently received by Professor Osborne of the American Museum of Natural History that the party of scientific explorers which went west some months ago to search for relics of extinct species of horses had found fossils of a herd of five small horses, says the New York Herald. The animals belonged to the three toed variety, which hitherto has been known only from skulls and poor fragments of the frame.

Professor Osborne is overjoyed at the success of the present searching party. The word he received stated that ten fore legs, ten hind legs, several skulls and one skeleton almost intact, all in an excellent state of preservation, had been found. With the fragments, it is believed, it will be easily possible to restore at least two complete skeletons. This remarkable find far exceeds any ambition the exploring party had. At best the members had expected to unearth but a few fragments, with the aid of which, by dint of much labor and study, it would be possible to give an idea of the frame of one of the three toed horses which once galloped on the plains of the west.

Just where the find was made was not stated. The searchers have been working with the fund provided for that purpose by William C. Whitney. The fossils have been shipped to New York.

"This find is an important addition to the history and development of the horse in America," said Professor Osborne. "Special explorations for fossil horses began in 1901. Last season two complete stages were obtained, but they were of an earlier period than those just found."

FADS IN FALL JEWELRY.

Detachable Gold Underwear Buttons For Rich Men's Use.

The sole outstanding novelty in fashionable fall and winter jewelry is detachable plain gold underwear buttons. These are put up in sets of four and six and can be had in varying sizes and weights, says the New York Times. A thoroughly serviceable set of six can be obtained for $30, and this size gives evidence of being the most popular.

The buttons are oblong or round on the outer sides, and the reverse ends are molded to fit the curves of the body. The man of luxurious tastes and ample means need no longer suffer from the distress occasioned by the deadly animosity of laundresses to buttons of all kinds.

In the watch trade the demand is all for thinness, flatness and plainness. Watches even of only moderate thickness are being displaced as rapidly in the American market as were their ponderous predecessors driven out by the "mediums" of today.

"Customers are constantly asking for something new," said a prominent retailer. "They are tired of watches, rings, pencils, dressing cases, etc., and a big fortune awaits the man who will bring out something really novel. There are all kinds of adaptations, but nothing that is at once unique and artistic."

WOMEN AS "IMMORTALS."

French Paper Suggests the Idea and Asks For Names.

Femina, a Frenchwoman's review, has asked its readers to give the names of the forty Frenchwomen who would be "immortals" if there were such a thing as a French academy for women, says a special cable from Paris to the Philadelphia Press. Among the names sent in were many well known to Americans, some of them being Sarah Bernhardt, Augusta Holmes, Rejane, Gyp, Calve, Chaminade, Breval and Lucie Felix-Faure.

There were also the names of the wives of writers well known in the United States, like Alphonse Daudet, Edmond Rostand and Octave Feuillet.

A Rush to South Africa.

A rush of emigrants from Australia to South Africa has set in and is worrying the authorities, says the Argonaut. Applicants for permits to emigrate have to prove themselves possessed of a minimum of $500. The requirement, together with the expense of the voyage, is an obstacle to the poor in purse, and the result is that ships from Australia are suffering with a plague of stowaways. The captain of the Fortunatus, bound from Melbourne to the Cape, recently found that he had twenty of these unlicensed passengers on board, and so he took a drastic course. He dropped all the stowaways on the Australian coast 250 miles from Melbourne.

Popularity of Irish Country Seats.

To have a country seat in Ireland is a growing fad of rich Americans abroad, says the New York Press. After a round of London gayeties Mrs. Adair finds relaxation at Glenvaigh, her beautiful country home in the suburbs—if suburbs it may be called—of Dublin. The beautiful old hall is rarely without house parties of allen Americans and a foreign lion or two. Glenvaigh is looking forward to a visit from Lord Kitchener before he starts for India.

Winter Styles In Purses.

Green leather purses and wrist bags will be much used through the winter. Russian seal, polar seal, matte seal and oriental seal will also be worn, and there is a new leather, graphite, that is being made up smartly with French gray silver or aluminium into chatelaine bags and the like. Aluminium, by the way, is a novelty as a trimming. In bag trimmings nothing excels in popularity Pompeiian gold, a dull Roman gold with a green tinge.

Miners Will Accept President's Arbitration Plan

ASSURANCES BY MITCHELL

That Old Men Will Be Reinstated as Quickly as Possible—Special Interests Will Not Influence Arbitration Commission In Making Decisions

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 21.—The anxiously awaited convention of the 145,000 striking miners met yesterday, but did not reach a vote on the proposed plan of settlement. It is expected to do so today.

There were 662 delegates present in the Nesbitt theatre where the convention was held and they were empowered by their local unions to cast 867 votes for or against President Roosevelt's proposition of arbitration. The great majority of the delegates were uninstructed, the few who were being engineers, firemen and pumpmen, who fear that the 5600 strikers of those classes may not get back their old places now held by non-union men.

This question of the engineers, firemen and pumpmen proved the only stumbling block in the way of almost immediate adoption of the president's plan, which carries with it declaring the strike off and a general resumption of work through the 175-mile strip of the hard coal mining region.

At one time it seemed certain that the convention was about to adopt the recommendation of President Mitchell to end the strike, but the steammen's plea was too earnest and the final vote went over until today, when it is next to certain the vote to declare the strike off will show a big majority for it.

The leaders of the strikers, except Mr. Mitchell, were hardly heard at all in the convention yesterday, the anxious engineers being allowed to give full expression to their feelings. But today the leaders will be heard and one of them says there will be no more than 15 votes cast against the plan which President Roosevelt has proposed to them and which all the highest officials of the mine workers in this region have earnestly recommended.

There were two sessions, forenoon and afternoon, yesterday, and the net result as regards the progress of the convention towards its great object was a permanent organization with Mr. Mitchell in the chair, his speech laying the president's plan before the delegates, his eloquent impromptu speech advocating its adoption, and the appointment of a committee on resolutions.

The question before the convention when it adjourned was on the adoption of a resolution embodied in President Mitchell's opening speech to call off the strike and leave all questions to the president's commission. The surprise of the convention was the decision to admit newspaper men to all the sessions, open and executive, when even union miners, eagerly waiting by the hundred out in the street, could not get into the theatre. The pleas which won were that the reporters represented the people; that public opinion had helped the strikers and that the best way to get an accurate report of this convention of immediate and vast national import was to let the press representatives stay on the spot.

Late in the afternoon the question again reverted to that of reinstatement of men. A dozen speeches were made for and against the question of some specific action for assurance that the men would get back their places if they returned to work. Finally a delegate arose and asked Mr. Mitchell to express his views on the subject. He immediately responded and made one of the most important addresses he has been called on to make during the past five months. He spoke slowly and clearly and every word was listened to with great interest, because it was looked upon by the delegates as the real speech of the day. The strike leader spoke as follows:

"I desire to inform you that the president of your organization has done all he can to learn the attitude of the companies towards the men who are now on strike. As you know, the companies refuse direct negotiations with us. Through intermediaries we have received assurance that the companies are going to meet the issues fairly; that they are not disposed to blacklist the men; that they do not propose to be vindictive; that as far as possible men are to be returned to their old places. It may take some time before that can be brought about, and it may be that some few men will not be restored to their former positions at all. When you vote on this proposition you must do it with as full knowledge of the situation as I can give you.

"Now let me emphasize this point: That the poorest boy that worked in a breaker is as dear to us as the men who ran the best engines; that while we shall try with all the power we have to get every man that struck back to his old job, we will make special efforts for none and show special favors to none. We want the engineers and the firemen, and the pumpmen, and the inspectors, and the bosses to go back, but we do not want them to go back one bit more than we want the little breaker boys to go back. There was no single class of workmen who went out on a sympathetic strike. Every man who struck, struck for wages, he struck for exactly the same thing the miners and mine laborers struck for. As far as it is within the power of the union we shall afford protection to every man, union or non-union, who went out on strike with us. But, it may be true that some will be sacrificed, and, much as we shall regret that, I desire to say that no battle was ever fought, no victory was ever won, that did not carry with it some victims. Lives have been lost to gain the most brilliant victories that were ever won in the world.

"If it appeals to your judgment to accept the recommendations of your officers, if you decide to defer to the judgment of the president of your country, if you wish to be guided by the advice of your friends all over the land, and decide to return to work, the United Mine Workers of America will protect the man who happens to be left out of his job. In our pledge to the President of the United States, in which we notified him that we would recommend to you a resumption of work, we said to him that we should recommend a return of our people to their old jobs; and if the coal companies fail to give our men their old places, if they fail to treat them reasonably, we shall carry the question to the tribunal named by the president and ask that tribunal to decide that we are entitled to the work we left when we went on strike.

"Now, gentlemen, those are my views. I have no assurance that if you return to work on Wednesday all of you will be given back your old places. I do believe, however, that the coal companies will gradually displace the men who have your jobs and give you your old places again. I dare say that hundreds of the men who were brought here from the cities and from the farms to take your places will return to the cities and farms when you go back. I have no doubt at all that before two or three weeks have rolled by there will be no question about the reinstatement of the men.

"However, remember this, that when your votes are cast, I want you to cast them with the full knowledge that some of you may not get your old places back. I daresay the companies are as anxious to have competent engineers, firemen, pumpers and inspectors as you are to fill those places; and you know that the men they brought here to take your places are not competent. You all know that the men they brought here to take your places are not competent to run the hoisting engines; that the firemen they have brought here have not been successful; and, while the companies will not go out before the public and say they will 'sacrifice the men who stood by them,' as they call it, they will, in most cases, be glad to have their old and competent workmen back."

His remarks were greeted with applause. Another delegate made a speech against ending the strike without definite assurance of reinstatement, and Mr. Mitchell was again called upon for an explanation of the status of the arbitration plan as it now stands. In response to this request he said:

"We have not adopted their proposition as they made it and the proposition would never, with my consent, have been adopted as they made it. When the coal companies thought to practically name the arbitrators we objected and secured a modification of their proposition. That modification enabled the president to select men outside of the class suggested by the operators. Organized labor is represented on the commission. I do not, however, assume that either the capitalists or the trade unionists who are on the commission will permit their special interests to influence their judgment in making their decisions; but organized labor is on that commission and it is there because the President of the United States wanted it there and because we would not agree to the proposition unless it was there."

Then the delegates again took up the debate. Many of the delegates spoke with great earnestness. Three of them were willing to return to work and trust to the union to do justice to them. Another was willing to leave the whole matter in the hands of President Roosevelt's commission and another said: "If I can't get my job I can look for another one; therefore let us go to work and give the American people some coal." The sentiment of the last speaker was loudly applauded.

After further debate on both sides of the question, it was decided to let the question go over until today. A committee on resolutions was then appointed and at 5:18 p. m. the convention adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

NEW TRIAL IS LAUNCHED

Taking of Evidence Begun In the Molineux Case

WARNING FROM THE COURT

That Imagination of the Jury Must Not Be Drawn Upon—Doctor Who Attended Mrs Adams and Harry Cornish Give Testimony

New York, Oct. 21.—The jury for the trial of Roland B. Molineux, charged with the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams, was completed yesterday and Assistant District Attorney Osborne made his opening address for the state. The taking of evidence was begun at the close of Mr. Osborne's address. Speaking of the absence of certain witnesses whose evidence he wished to obtain, Mr. Osborne said that although the defense had the right to take the evidence of absent witnesses the prosecution did not have that right. There were witnesses out of the state who would not attend for him, and if the defense did not produce them he intended to comment on their absence.

"Not now," interrupted the court.

Continuing, the attorney recited the details of the case and speaking of Cornish said: "You gentlemen may think it was foolish of Cornish to give the contents of a bottle received in that way to Mrs. Adams."

"That is drawing on the imagination of the jury," interrupted the court.

The assistant district attorney, after explaining the nature of different persons, was advancing a theory as to the efforts at secrecy made by the poisoner, when the court interrupted him again. "You can tell the jury," Justice Lambert said, "what you will prove, and not the deductions you want them to draw."

"I expect to prove these facts, your honor," Mr. Osborne replied.

"Very well," ruled the court. "Prove them and let the jury draw their own deductions."

At the conclusion of his address, which had occupied an hour and a half, Mr. Osborne asked for an adjournment until this morning, which was denied. He then called Dr. Edward F. Hitchcock, the first physician to see Mrs. Adams after she was taken ill. The doctor said he saw a "suspicious appearance" in the throat of the dying woman and administered whiskey, but without effect. He put about one-sixth of a grain of the stuff from the bromo seltzer bottle to his tongue and detected hydrocyanic acid. Traces of mercurial poisoning were on Mrs. Adams' lips. Dr. Hitchcock identified a piece of paper as the one that Cornish gave him as the wrapper that enclosed the bottle and holder when it reached him at the Knickerbocker Athletic club. It was admitted as exhibit A. The bottle holder and bottle were also admitted in evidence, after the witness said he saw them on the dining table in the Adams flat. The witness said he was sure one of the cyanides caused the death of Mrs. Adams. Under cross-examination he said he gave Cornish no antidote for the poison, but nitrate of bismuth to relieve the stomach irritation complained of. Cornish was sick until he reached the street, the air reviving him.

It was 4:30, the usual time for adjournment in the criminal court, when counsel were through with Dr. Hitchcock, but Justice Lambert called for the next witness and Mr. Osborne produced Harry F. Cornish. He told of the receipt of the poisoned package at the club house on Dec. 24, 1899. It was put on his desk by one of the clerks. He tore off the wrapper and threw it away. Later, at some one's suggestion, he picked the paper up and wrapped it around the package again. Then he told of speaking of the anonymous gift at dinner that evening and said Mrs. Rogers suggested that he bring it home and give her the holder, the description of which seemed to match the silver on her toilet table.

Court here adjourned.

TWO CASES OF MURDER

Victims Were Both Woodsmen and Robbery Was the Object

Bangor, Me., Oct. 21.—Two murders of woodsmen in the wilderness of northern Maine have just come to light, giving work for the law officers of Aroostook and Piscataquis counties. The victims are John McElwee, a timber surveyor and explorer, killed near Unelucus lake, near Moro, and Martin Stanton, a woodsman, shot to death on the Eagle lake road, 35 miles from Patten. McElwee was killed probably on July 5, the day he went into the woods, and Stanton was shot some time last week. In both cases robbery was the object, and the clues to the murderers are such as to lead the county attorneys to hope for arrests shortly.

Dennison Quits the Field

Boston, Oct. 21.—Joseph A. Dennison, one of the three Democratic candidates in the Ninth congressional district, withdrew from the contest late yesterday, leaving the fight between Congressman Conry and John A. Kelliher, Democrats, and Charles T. Witt, Republican. By Dennison's withdrawal the possible loss of a Democratic seat in congress has been prevented, as the district is overwhelmingly Democratic.

Electric Road Survey Begun

Millbury, Mass., Oct. 21.—The survey of the new electric road from Millbury Centre to West Millbury, three miles away, was begun yesterday. Local men have organized a company to build the line and subscribed $30,000 for the work. The plan is to build the road next season and the line will connect at Millbury Centre with trolley lines for Worcester and Providence.

Probable Case of Suicide

Greenfield, Mass., Oct. 21.—The autopsy on the body of Roland Wylie, the lad who threatened to poison himself after being reproved by his school teacher, which was found Sunday, does not show any marks of violence. The organs have been sent to Harvard college for analysis. It is thought the lad took strychnine to carry out his threat.

Increase In Firemen's Wages

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 21.—At the meeting of the board of aldermen last night the petition of the permanent firemen for an increase of salary was granted by a unanimous vote. By this action firemen in all branches of the permanent force will receive an increase of $100 a year. Captains will get $1150 and drivers and engineers $1000.

Used Clubs Too Freely

Scituate, Mass., Oct. 21.—Special Officers Harrub and Silvi were placed under arrest yesterday by Constable Supple, charged with assault on Liba Litchfield. It is alleged the officers visited Litchfield to summon him as a witness in a liquor case and got into an altercation, clubbing him severely before making known their business.

Bears Bested Bee Hunter

Bennington, Vt., Oct. 21.—Jason Elliott, a Hoosic bee hunter, located several "bee" trees yesterday at Glastenbury and cut them down. A bear and her cubs then came up, and Elliott took to his heels, being followed for half a mile by the she bear. The cubs and their mother had a feast of honey and then departed.

Congressman at Death's Door

Killingly, Conn., Oct. 21.—The condition of Congressman Russell, who has been ill for several weeks, has become critical, and his recovery is not expected. Last evening he suffered two severe sinking spells, from which he was unable to rally, owing to his weakened condition.

Coal Coming Down

Boston, Oct. 21.—Predictions of an early fall in the prices for coal in Boston have come true and beginning today bituminous coal will cost $8 a ton and anthracite $12. This reduction amounts to $1 a ton on bituminous and $3 on anthracite.

Reunited In Death

Manchester, Vt., Oct. 21.—Death made his visitations within 24 hours in one family here, taking away George P. Felt at 8 o'clock Sunday night and his widow at 6 o'clock last night. They had been married 64 years.

Convicted of Manslaughter

New Haven, Oct. 21.—George B. Kane of Meriden, who was charged with manslaughter for shooting William H. Bailey at Meriden, was found guilty yesterday. Sentence was deferred.

Negro Murderer Roasted Alive

Forest City, Ark., Oct. 21.—Charles Young, colored, charged with murdering Mrs. Ed Lewis, white, was burned at the stake here last night by a mob.

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. We purchased some of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and he commenced taking them. Inside of thirty days he had gained forty pounds in flesh. He is now fully recovered. Good Afternoon.

Anthracite coal fell three dollars a ton in Boston yesterday, and is now selling at twelve dollars a ton.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Here's a sample of prohibition law from Augusta, Me. The aldermen passed an order instructing the city marshal to enforce the law, and it was sent to the common council by mistake and was laid on the table by the lower board. Consequently the city marshal hasn't got his instructions and refused to take them verbally. Evidently the oath of office of the chief of police down there don't amount to much.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Secretary Moody's telling of the truth about 67 cents a ton duty on anthracite coal, and how it got into the Dingley bill, is not "likely to prove dangerous" to the Republican party, either in the west, where he told it, or in the east, which has heard of his telling it. On the contrary, it is likely to prove of great benefit to the party in all sections of the country. This is a campaign in which the party whose representatives tell the truth with the greatest frankness is sure to stand highest in the confidence of the voters.—Boston Advertiser.

Baptized.

At the Wollaston Congregational church on Sunday the following children were baptized:

Donald Reid Blake, Wilson Cushing Blake, Elsie Broughton, Dorothy Agnes Cole, Roger Kenneth Dickey, Robert Henry King Foster, Ruth Winnifred Holland, Lorma Roselee Holland and Morgan Watt.

The children are each to be presented with a booklet and when they have arrived at the age of seven years a Bible.

Rev. Mr. Barr, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, raised by subscription Sunday $266, which with a few others to hear from will raise it to $300 to meet the liabilities of the church. Considerable interest was manifested in the matter and a large congregation was present. The congregations and interest have been increasing every Sabbath and the new pastor feels much encouraged in his work.

The Ladies' Benevolent society connected with the Congregational church will meet with Mrs. C. A. Campbell, Beale street, on Wednesday at 2.30 o'clock.

DECLARED OFF.

Great Strike of the Coal Miners Ended.

[Special to the Daily Ledger.]

Wilkesbarre, Oct. 21.—The miners met in convention this morning and voted to declare the strike off in the anthracite mines. Work will be resumed at once.

Bogus Agent.

Joseph H. Finch was before the district court this morning upon a complaint charging him with the larceny of less than $100 at Quincy.

From the evidence it appeared that last September Finch visited a number of business firms in Quincy seeking advertisements for a book which it is alleged he claimed was to be published in aid of Electrical Workers' Union, No. 103, who were then out on a strike; and some of the Quincy business men contributed. It was later claimed to have been a fraud. In court the officers of the Union testified that Finch was not a member and had not been authorized to make collections for them. The court imposed a sentence of six months from which an appeal was taken.

The Incorporation of Labor Unions.

There is no doubt whatever, says the Boston Daily Advertiser, that a bill will be introduced in the next legislature looking to the incorporation of labor unions. The movement originates as the outgrowth of the coal strike, when it was felt that the unions could be regulated just as capitalistic corporations, by state law.

The promoters of the movement who are among the manufacturers, say that such action would be beneficial to the unions themselves. It would give them a legalized standing.

In fact, it would proceed on just the same plan as the president wishes to apply to the trusts, demanding a license before permitting them to do business.

Improvements at Brewers Corner.

Mr. F. J. Pierson at Brewers corner is making extensive alterations in his block, having added a new thirty-five foot frontage on Granite street which will be occupied by Frank Brewer the grocer. The second floor has also been newly fitted and enlarged and is now occupied by Mrs. O. F. Clark for her millinery parlors. Mr. Pierson is adding a large fall stock of men's and boys' clothing and furnishings and will be pleased to have you call and see his fall selections.

The Afternoon Fire.

The alarm from Box 35 at 1.25 this afternoon was for a fire in a lot of rubbish in the rear of the Webb building on Hancock street and was probably started by some children throwing matches into it.

Too much cannot be said against the unlawful habit of shooting birds. It is a source of regret and great annoyance to residents in certain localities in Wollaston, especially in the neighborhood of third hill. It is a shame that boys will not let alone the few songsters that are with us. Something should be done about it.

WARD THREE RALLY.

Republicans Hold Red Hot Meeting.

Candidates for Council and Ward Committee.

Voters Urged to Support Party Candidate and Defeat Bryant.

The annual meeting of the Republicans of Ward Three to consider matters pertaining to the coming municipal election, to select names to be presented for councilman at large, councilmen from the ward and for ward committee at the Republican caucus Nov. 5, was held Monday evening.

Frederick L. Jones was selected as chairman and Benjamin Laughorn as secretary.

Mr. Jones in opening said that it was at first his intention to again become a candidate for the Republican nomination for mayor, but he had learned that Elisha Packard, who was a candidate last year, was to run again this year. He felt that there was no chance for the election of a Republican mayor this year if anyone else ran. In view of this fact he had decided not to become a candidate. If the Republicans expect to win at the polls this year there should be unanimity of action on their part.

Appearances now indicate that Mr. Packard would receive the Republican nomination and if so it was the duty of every Republican to support him. He did not think that any good Republican could consistently support Mayor Bryant, who broke the party a year ago.

It was the duty of every Republican to see that Mayor Bryant did not secure the nomination and every Republican should make all possible effort to defeat him.

The meeting then voted to present the name of Thomas W. Smith to the caucus as Councilman at large and Walter E. Piper, Alfred O. Diack and Julius Johnson as ward councilmen.

Brief remarks were made by the prospective candidates.

Henry H. Faxon was then called upon for remarks. He commenced by severely criticising the administration of Mayor Bryant who, he said, a year ago had tried to break up the Republican party. He had certainly left it in a demoralized condition.

It was the duty of every Republican to see that he was relegated to private life, as his administration had been a corrupt one. His chief occupation this year had been to punish those who opposed him last year. He has evinced a ruin or rule policy. He has bulldozed everyone connected with administration, but he could not bulldoze me. For this reason he has a most vituperative spirit toward me ever since. Revenge has rankled in his heart against me. Not toward me alone, but toward everyone who did not support him last year. He was not long in getting after me when he assumed office. He refused to appoint me a constable. I have done much to promote good citizenship and to elevate the moral tone. He has remembered my efforts by insulting me. He also referred to the action of the Board of Health which he thought would more properly be a board of filth.

Harry Phillip replied to Mr. Faxon and asked to have some evidence presented to show that the administration of Mayor Bryant had been corrupt. He thought he had given the city a good business administration. He thought no persons should make such charges without evidence to support them. Mayor Bryant had shown a disposition to have every person connected with the administration do his duty.

Other remarks were made by John P. Bigelow, Harry S. Nicoll, John Richards, Oscar Frisk and others.

The vesper service at the Wollaston Baptist church, Sunday afternoon, was the first of the season. Rev. Mr. Webber gave a talk on the text, "Therefore the Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath." The musical program was particularly good and excellently rendered by the church quartette.

Mr. J. B. Lewis of Boston, a prominent business man and well-known public speaker, will give a temperance address next Sunday night at the Atlantic Methodist church on "Emancipation of the 20th century." Mrs. L. J. Child, a leading contralto of Boston, will be present to sing. The seven o'clock praise service with the new books is proving helpful and attractive.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. CITY COUNCIL.

A Number of Appropriation Orders Reported.

Construction of Boulevard Wanted.

Mayor Asks Authority to Petition Legislature for Funds for Building It.

MONEY FOR BOULEVARD.

The mayor sent a communication stating that the Metropolitan Park Commission had made all of its takings for the boulevard in Quincy, and it was important to take steps to secure funds from the legislature to build it. Otherwise the city would not only receive no benefit but would lose the taxes on the property taken. He recommended that an order be passed authorizing the mayor to petition the legislature for the money necessary. To Committee on Legislative Matters.

POLICE FUNDS.

The mayor in a communication asked for the transfer of $295 from the appropriation for enforcement of liquor law to the appropriation for special police. In reply to questions by Councilman Faxon the mayor said if the transfer was made $200 would be left for the enforcement of the liquor law. As the most of the work in that department was done during the early part of the year, it would be sufficient, while at the present time regular officers could be used. The council had asked for special officers at Quincy Point and Ward Six which had been put on and there was not sufficient funds to supply the special officers necessary for the elections. Laid on the table until later, when an order making the transfer was passed.

POLLING PLACES.

Requests were received from the Republican committee for polling places for caucuses Nov. 5, from the Democrats for Nov. 10 and from the Socialists for Nov. 7. Laid on the table until later when order was offered.

STREET RAILWAY LOCATIONS.

The order granting the Old Colony street railway a change of location of tracks in City Square was passed to be ordained.

UP TO MAYOR.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported reference to the Executive department on the communication from the School Committee in relation to repairs on Washington school.

NO ICE POND.

The Committee on Public Buildings recommended that the offer of William T. Shea for the reservoir as an ice pond be not accepted. Report adopted.

MOTIONS, ORDERS, ETC.

Councilman Nichols offered orders for the State election Nov. 5 and for polling places for the Municipal election Dec. 2. Passed.

PUBLIC SCALES.

Councilman Fallon offered an order for $500 to provide public scales to be located in City Square near the fountain.

Troops to Remain on Duty

Harrisburg, Oct. 1.—Although Governor Stone and Adjutant General Stewart are both anxious to bring the National Guard home as soon as possible, on account of the enormous expense their maintenance in the coal region entails, the recall may not be ordered for several weeks. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

ITS FIRST CONVENTION

United Irish League Makes a Good Start at Boston

THE CONDITIONS IN IRELAND

Explained by Envoys, Who Urge Liberal Contributions to Carry on the Cause—Irish-Americans Criticised For Not Fighting For Boers

Boston, Oct. 21.—After many a speech for suffering Ireland and minor preliminary meetings all through the country, the United Irish League of America started out on what bids fair to be an enthusiastic career in furtherance of the cause of Irish independence, by holding its first convention in this city yesterday. The meeting took place in Faneuil hall; well known Irish Americans were present from the principal cities of the country, and conspicuous among them all were the Irish parliamentarians, John E. Redmond, John Dillon, Michael Davitt, Edward Blake; also Bourke Cockran of New York and United States Senator Smith of New Jersey.

It takes time to start a new organization of national scope, and it took the delegates all the forenoon to get together. Then the proceedings were opened by National President Finerty, who told how the league was formed and read a long address reviewing the story of Irish tribulations and partial reforms from the 12th century down.

After the committee of ways and means had been perfected, a number of letters regretting inability to be present were read, notably from President Roosevelt, Governor Crane, Mayor Collins and Bishop Conaty.

John Dillon was then introduced, but it was some time before he was permitted to say a word. He prefaced his remarks by saying that he was amazed at the strength of the movement and the success of the convention, both of which would give courage to the brethren in Ireland and conseternation to her enemies. He said that the league needed assistance in Ireland because the people there were disarmed, because they were not allowed free speech, a free discussion in the press, and public meetings, and, lastly, a trial by jury. This, he said, is tyranny. He recounted some of the experiences of O'Donnell and Redmond in trying to address meetings. He urged sending to Ireland steady contributions, that the contest against England might not flag. He also urged that every effort be made to spread before the people of this country the true state of affairs in Ireland, that public opinion might be aroused.

Michael Davitt, who was the next speaker, began by reading the list of branches of the league in Ireland. This was in answer to Secretary Wyndham's statement that there were scarcely 40 of these branches in Ireland. According to Mr. Davitt, there are organized in Ireland 1312 branches, with a total membership of 110,000. He also said that there were 300 branches in England, Scotland and Wales. He declared that true reports of the conditions in Ireland were never sent by cable to this country, but that they were stopped in London. "We desire means," he said, "of checkmating this gentleman in London."

Mr. Davitt said that when he greeted President Kruger at Marseilles he also met a large number of journalists, many of whom he saw again in Paris, and that the result of their interviews was the origin of a plan for the establishing of an independent news agency with headquarters in Paris. This agency will be independent of the gentlemen in London. He spoke of interviews with Generals De Wet and Botha. The latter asked him how many Irishmen came from America to fight for the Boers, and Mr. Davitt said he was ashamed to say that the number was only 40. General Botha said that if, after Paardeburg, 5000 had come from America to help the Boers, the power of England would have been smashed in South Africa. He said that he believed the brethren in this country at that time deserted the cause of Ireland in not fighting against England.

The platform and resolutions were then presented. They pledge the convention to undying allegiance in the cause of Ireland's independence; assert the right of the Irish race to carry on the war against England by means of honorable weapons; the belief that the leaders in Ireland are best fitted to direct and carry on this contest; demand the arraignment of England at the bar of public opinion, through the dissemination of the facts of her rule; that the United Irish League is the only menace to England's rule in Ireland, and finally urging upon the members in this country to contribute liberally to the cause.

The convention then adjourned until today.

Promise of Early Settlement of Hudson Valley Railway Strike

Glens Falls, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The strikers on the Hudson valley road, at a meeting late last night, decided to accept the proposition of the company to arbitrate the questions in dispute and to make every effort, consistent with the position they have maintained, to end the strike.

The strikers named J. M. Sheehan of Albany as their representative on the board of arbitration and the company has named B. J. Josslyn, the general manager of the road. These two men will meet this noon and it is expected that they will name the third member of the board at that time.

The people of this city and Sandy Hill are jubilant over the prospect of the early settlement of the strike. There is a feeling here that the long strike is about to be terminated.

Knoxville, Oct. 21.—While the supreme court was in session in this city yesterday a man claiming to be Silas Hulin entered the court room unannounced, and addressing Chief Justice Beard, said: "I am Hulin, who was not killed by Clarence Peak." Attacked Trades Unionism

Leeds, Eng., Oct. 21.—The 10th annual congress of the Free Labor association opened here yesterday. The delegates represented 400,000 workmen. President Chandler claimed that the growth of industrial freedom greatly tended towards the diminution of strikes and declared that trades union excesses in violation of personal freedom were a disgrace to labor.

Complaint Not Sustained

New York, Oct. 21.—The grand jury yesterday dismissed the complaint of assault growing out of the riot around the factory of R. Hoe & Co. at the time of Rabbi Joseph's funeral, against G. W. Church, superintendent for R. Hoe & Co. The complainant against Church swore that he heard Church order streams of water turned on the mob.

Great Britain Wants Satisfaction

Shanghai, Oct. 21.—Four British gunboats have been ordered to Hankow because of the failure of the Chinese authorities to deal with the murderers of Bruce and Lewis, the English missionaries who were killed in Ho-Nan province. It is said here that the Chinese authorities are alarmed at this step on the part of Great Britain.

Millionaire Indicted For Bribery

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—The millionaire politician, Colonel Edward Butler, was indicted by the grand jury yesterday on the charge of paying to Delegate Charles F. Kelly a $47,500 bribe for members of the house of delegates' combine who passed the 10-year city lighting bill Nov. 28, 1899.

Twenty-Five Miles In Airship

London, Oct. 21.—Stanley Spencer, the aeronaut who recently made a successful trip over London, travelled 25 miles yesterday in his airship. He rose from Black Pool and proceeded in a southeasterly direction and landed in the open country.

The Earliest Library.

The earliest library was that of Nebuchadnezzar. Every book was a brick engraved with cuneiform characters.

Turkish Women.

Turkish women do not come into control of their private fortunes until after marriage. After that they can dispose of one-third of it without the husband's consent.

Lightning's Rapidity.

It has been estimated that a flash of lightning occupies less than one-millionth part of a second. As one-tenth of a second is needed for the full effect of any light upon the eye we get only a very faint idea of the brilliancy of the flash.

Lunacy In Scotland.

Since 1858 the number of lunatics in Scotland has increased by 180 per cent, while the population increase has been only 49 per cent.

Odd Cure For Rheumatism.

The gypsies have an odd cure for rheumatism, and as it is cheap and utterly harmless it will not hurt to try it. They carry a good sized piece of brimstone in the pocket and warrant it to cure the worst cases.

Mildew Stains.

Mildew stains may easily be removed by wetting and soaping the spot, covering it with powdered chalk and then putting it in the sun to bleach. Damp it from time to time as it dries and then wash it in the usual manner with soap and water. If necessary, repeat the process.

White Tailed Eagles.

Although the golden eagle has disappeared from Wales, white tailed eagles are still to be found in north Wales and Shropshire.

A Weak Finish.

A newspaper thus describes the effects of a hurricane: "It shattered mountains, tore up oaks by the roots, dismantled churches, laid villages waste and overturned a haystack."

Kansas as a Territory.

When Kansas was first organized as a territory in 1854, its area included part of the present state of Colorado, extending as far west as the crest of the Rocky mountains. Denver, Leadville, Pueblo and Colorado Springs are now located on former Kansas soil.

Hyacinths and Hay Fever.

A German medical journal reports the case of a man who was attacked by hay fever in winter because he had cultivated hyacinths in his room.

Tammany.

Tammany lived in the seventeenth century. He was a native of Delaware, but settled on the banks of the Ohio river. He was chief sachem of his tribe, and his reign was discreet and peaceful. His great maxim was: "Unite. In peace unite for mutual happiness; in war, for mutual defense."

Longest Stilt Race.

The longest race ever run on stilts took place from Bordeaux to Biarritz in 1893. The distance is 303 miles.

Alexander the Great.

Alexander the Great used his sword against women rather than for them, and one of his favorite pastimes was beating his wives with the flat of his steel blade.

Turkestan Courtship.

In Turkestan every wedding engagement begins with the payment of a substantial consideration to the girl's parents. If the girl jilts her lover, the engagement gift has to be returned unless the parents have another daughter to give as a substitute.

Beet Sugar.

Beets yield 12 to 13 per cent of their weight in sugar.

Milk In China.

The Chinese have the idea that milk revives the youthful powers and that it has special virtue as winter food for old people.

To Waterproof Shoes.

Boots and shoes may be rendered permanently waterproof by soaking them for some hours in thick soap water. A fatty acid is forced in the leather by the soap which makes it impervious to water.

Swiss Teachers.

The public schools in Switzerland are operated by the government, and civil service rules are strictly applied. The teachers, who are mostly women, are very well paid and never discharged except for cause. When they get so old they can't teach, they are pensioned liberally. The result is that the country has an excellent corps of educators.

Marriage In Sweden.

In Swedish towns the average marrying age of males is thirty and a half years and of females twenty-seven and three-quarters.

Germs.

Every day of your life you take into your system germs sufficient to end your life were it not for the protecting action of the defensive agents in your blood.

Education In Germany.

Germany is now the best educated nation of Europe, yet only hundreds of years ago German teachers in many parts of the country were so poorly paid that they used to sing in front of houses in order to add to their income by odd pence.

A Fishing Tip.

It is a belief of fishermen that the finny denizens of the deep are hungriest and bite most freely during the four or five days following the moon's first quarter.

Nobility Recommends Nervine.

The above portrait is that of Countess Mogelstud, of Chicago, Ill., whose gratitude for the benefit received from the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine prompted her to make this statement:

"It affords me great pleasure to add my testimony to the very excellent merits of Dr. Miles' Nervine. Although I am past 80 years of age I find it soothes the tired brain, quiets the irritated nerves and insures restful sleep. I never feel contented without a bottle of it in the house." MINERS ARE REJOICING

Over the End of Their Great Conflict With Operators

BETTER TIMES LOOKED FOR

Decision to Accept President's Arbitration Proposition Was Unanimous—Arbitration Tribunal's Decision Expected by Thanksgiving Day

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 22.—Throughout the entire anthracite coal region the information that the mine workers' convention had declared the strike at an end was received with rejoicing. Scarcely a dissenting voice was raised amid the general jubilation. The greatest excitement was displayed in the Schuylkill region. At Shenandoah and Mahanoy City the residents appeared on the streets en masse, cheering for John Mitchell and shouting and singing in a delirium of delight. A regimental band participated in the celebration at Shenandoah, men and boys numbering thousands following the musicians through the principal streets of the borough.

When the news was flashed to the towns and villages in the coal regions the strike-affected inhabitants heaved a sigh of relief. Many days have gone by since more welcome news was received. Everywhere there was rejoicing and in many places the end of the strike was the signal for impromptu town celebrations. The anthracite coal regions from its largest city down to the lowliest coal patch has suffered by the conflict and everyone now looks for better times.

While the large army of mine workers and their families, numbering approximately 500,000 persons, are grateful that work is to be resumed on Thursday, the strikers have still to learn what their reward will be. President Roosevelt having taken prompt action in calling the arbitrators together for their first meeting on Friday the miners hope they will know by Thanksgiving day what practical gain they have been granted.

The vote to resume coal mining was a unanimous one and was reached only after a warm debate. The principal speech of the day was made by National Secretary-Treasurer Wilson. In a strong argument he counselled the men to accept arbitration, the very plan the strikers themselves had offered, return to work and trust to the president's tribunal to do them justice.

The question of taking care of all men who will fail to get work immediately will be a serious one for the union. In some places hundreds will not be able to get work for weeks, and in other localities where the mines are in very bad condition there will be no employment for many workmen for some months. Now that the strike is over the volume of relief money will decrease and the local unions will be compelled to call upon the national organization for assistance when the money now on hand runs out. The officials who care to talk of the situation feel confident that the national body will come to the assistance and help all those who stood out during the suspension.

Hundreds of men needed to repair the mines and otherwise place them in condition for operation are at work today, the convention having decided that this was imperative in order to get the men at work quickly and satisfy the country's demand for coal.

The proceedings in the convention indicate that there will be some friction in some of the local organizations over many little questions which will come up in connection with the men returning to the mines.

President Mitchell received many congratulatory telegrams from all over the country after the news spread that the strike was ended. On his return to headquarters he was asked for an expression of his views on the action of the convention and in reply he said:

"I am well pleased with the action of the anthracite mine workers in deciding to submit the issues which culminated in the strike to the commission selected by the President of the United States. The strike itself has demonstrated the power and dignity of labor. Conservative, intelligent trades unionism has received an impetus, the effect of which cannot be measured. I earnestly hope and firmly believe that both labor and capital have learned a lesson from the miners' strike which will enable them to adopt peaceful, humane and business methods of adjusting the differences in the future."

After Mr. Mitchell had notified President Roosevelt of the action of the convention and had received a reply to the effect that the commission would meet in Washington on Friday, he sent out the official announcement through the press to the strikers that the strike was off. It was addressed to all miners and mine workers in the anthracite region and was as follows:

"You are hereby officially notified that it was unanimously decided today by the delegates attending the special convention that all mine workers should report for work Thursday morning, Oct. 3, and that the issues which culminated in the strike should be referred for adjustment to the commission appointed by the President of the United States.

"We are authorized by the executive officers of districts 1, 7 and 9 to caution all those who resume work to exercise more than usual care in order that accidents to life and limb may be averted. Owing to the condition of the mines after an idleness of five months there will be great danger when work is resumed. We are prompted to offer this advice by the fact that at the close of the strike two years ago many more accidents and deaths occurred than take place when the mines are operating regularly."

President Mitchell has not made any arrangements regarding his future movements. He will act as the attorney for the men at all sessions of the commission and will have with him several assistants. Headquarters here will be kept open probably until after the award of the arbitration commission is announced.

After the miners had called the strike off they unanimously adopted resolutions thanking all national, state and municipal governments, all organizations and individuals throughout the world for assistance rendered the miners during their great struggle.

TESTIMONY OF MINERS

Will Be First Heard by Commission Appointed by the President

Washington, Oct. 22.—News of the termination of the strike was received by the president with great satisfaction. Before the formal telegram from Mr. Mitchell had reached him he had been informed through The Associated Press of the convention's favorable action.

Already telegrams have been sent to the members of the commission notifying them of the first meeting to be held in this city on Friday morning and summoning them to be present. The meeting probably will be held in the office of Commissioner Wright in the department of labor. After the commission has effected its organization, the members will call in a body on the president to pay their respects. At that time it is expected he will embrace the opportunity to give the commission such verbal instructions as he may care to present to it. Besides he may prepare a formal letter of instructions.

It is understood that few meetings of the commission will be held in Washington. After the work of the commission has been mapped out, the first step will be to take the testimony of the miners, who may be regarded as plaintiffs in the case. Notification will be sent to all interested parties that, at certain specified times, the commission will hear evidence to be presented. The parties to the inquiry will be permitted to be present at the hearings either personally or by counsel.

It is probable that the first sessions of the commission at which testimony will be taken will be held in Wilkesbarre, as that city will be most convenient for the miners' representatives. Other meetings will be held in Philadelphia or New York or in both cities.

How long the hearings will continue nobody can foretell. At their conclusion each member of the commission will be supplied a copy of the testimony adduced and will consider it at his leisure. Subsequently, the commission will reconvene, perhaps in this city, to formulate its report for presentation to the president.

Germany's Tariff Fight

Berlin, Oct. 22.—The government was defeated in the reichstag yesterday in test votes on the tariff bill by the Conservatives and Centrists inserting in the ministry's bill amendments fixing the minimum wheat duties at $1.50 per metric hundred weight, in place of $1.37 and the rye duties at $1.37, instead of $1.25. The chancellor's plan appears to be to do nothing immediately and see if the majority will yield.

RECORD BREAKING DAY

Thirteen Witnesses Examined In the Molineux Trial

CORNISH CHANGES HIS MIND

Denies Writing a Certain Note to Mrs Link and Acquaintance With Man Named Callahan—He Subsequently Admits That He Is Mistaken

New York, Oct. 22.—No such speed has ever been made in an important murder trial in New York city as was made in the trial of Molineux yesterday. In the five hours the court sat 13 witnesses were examined, not including the reading of the testimony given at the last trial by a witness who is now dead.

Cornish was again placed upon the witness stand. He said he first came to New York in January, 1896. He met Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Adams' daughter, almost immediately afterwards. He told of going to board with them. Cornish was divorced then and Mrs. Rogers was not living with her husband. Until six weeks ago, Cornish said he lived in the same flat with Mrs. Rogers and her brother. Her husband divorced her after her mother's death and she obtained employment as a stenographer. The witness denied that Mrs. Rogers shared her earnings with him or that she had given him $5 out of $10 that she borrowed from a Mrs. Link.

"Did you write to Mrs. Link cancelling an engagement to meet Mrs. Rogers, and later call on Mrs. Link, saying that you had been advised not to show any writing," asked Mr. Black, counsel for Molineux.

"Nothing of the kind ever occurred."

The witness retold the story of the receipt by him of the poison bottle. He thought he was giving Mrs. Adams a correct dose of bromo seltzer when he handed her the glass containing the poison.

"Is this your handwriting?" counsel asked, submitting a folded sheet of paper to the witness. "It is," Cornish replied, after looking at it carefully.

"This is addressed to A. F. Link," Mr. Black said. "You have changed [illegible]"

"Yes, I was mistaken."

A man named Callahan was called and Cornish was asked if he knew him. He said he did not, but later changed his testimony, saying he did know the man as one who had delivered newspapers at this house. This ended Cornish's examination.

Harry King, who was present when Cornish received the bottle and who escaped taking a dose of the poison only because there was no water in the club cooler, was called. He corroborated Cornish's testimony as to the receipt of the package. King also told of the illness of Cornish on the day Mrs. Adams died.

Howard A. Adams identified the glass from which his mother drank the poison and the spoon used in measuring the dose.

The next witness, Henry A. Wetherspoon, told of the talk at the Knickerbocker club as to who had sent the package to Cornish and of Cornish's illness.

George A. Salmon said he called at the Knickerbocker Athletic club on Dec. 24, 1898, and Cornish showed him the bromo bottle and silver holder and told him he had just received them.

"Who was present in Cornish's office when you saw the things?" was Mr. Black's only question. "I saw no one but Cornish."

Patrick J. Finneman said he saw Cornish open the poison package and throw the wrapper into a waste paper basket. After Cornish had remarked on the peculiarity of anyone sending him a package anonymously, Finneman picked the wrapper out of the basket and told Cornish if he kept the wrapper he might some day find the donor by his handwriting.

Dr. Louis A. Coffin, who was called to the club to attend Cornish, said he found Cornish suffering from mercurial poisoning. John A. Yokum then gave the component parts of cyanide of mercury. Detectives testified as to their work in tracing the bottle which contained the poison, and the evidence of Elsie Gray, deceased, who was cashier at the Kutnow powder factory, given at the first trial as to how a sample bottle of the powder could be obtained, was read.

APPLE CROP OF 1902

Will Amount to Sixteen Millions of Barrels Over That of 1901

Boston, Oct. 22.—The apple crop throughout the country this year, according to the estimate of The New England Homestead in its report for Oct. 25, will be 43,000,000 barrels, against 27,000,000 barrels in 1901. The latest crop presents some marked contrasts when placed beside that of a year ago. In the older established orchard sections in the middle and eastern states, the increase over last year's failure is very pronounced. In the central west, there are also sharp gains, while in the southwest, a territory favored last year by exceptionally good yields, the crop this season is unusually deficient.

As for quality, this is far from satisfactory in the central and western states, but in New England it is very much better than last year, when it was a failure. New York, the most [illegible] yet less than the bumper crop of 1896.

Drift of Opinion.

☞What a coincidence it is, just as we are all beginning to think about Thanksgiving day, that Turkey in Europe refuses to let Miss Stone return, and turkey in America is being cornered so that the price will be beyond slender purses. On the other side of the ocean is "the unspeakable Turk." On this side of the ocean is the uneatable turkey.—Daily Advertiser.

[illegible] Wright may have been just the man for the presidency of the collegiate department of Clark university, but he is just the man that is needed in the office of federal commission of labor. It is announced that he will continue to hold the latter office for a time at least, having some special work which he is desirous of completing.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞With yesterday's vote at Wilkesbarre, the strike ends and the coal famine ought to show the effects of the change. It is worth notice that a single coal road, within a week, has just shipped nearly 20,000 tons of anthracite that it has been holding back, all this time. The coal operators have had thousands upon thousands of tons in reserve. The Advertiser said so last August, and both Baer and Markle indignantly insinuated that The Advertiser was not telling the truth. Yet the facts were exactly as stated. There is plenty of coal that can be and will be sent this way before Thanksgiving.—Boston Daily Advertiser.

☞Mr. Charles Rothschild of London has a collection of 10,000 fleas. The Rothschild fleas are under the special direction of a savant who has classified them and burns the midnight oil in studying their habits. This wise man explains that "the flea affords more diverse material for the collector than does any other living creature." This is an observation with which every person who has ever been subjected to a visit from one of these tiny pests will cordially agree. Every animal whose acquaintance is cultivated has, it appears, a different kind of flea. The dog flea differeth from the cat flea, and the fox flea from the bear flea. In South America there is a flea which is the consort of a certain bird. This insect has claws like a lobster. The king flea, however, the boss of the whole flea tribe, is the Hystrichopsylla Talpae, which is one-fifth of an inch long, and held in great esteem by scientists. When he gets in form and attends strictly to business he is the terror of the universe. Fortunately he has not yet invaded the United States. Persons who think they have a grievance when they are receiving the attentions of the ordinary American flea ought to be thankful that things are not worse. Suppose they had to receive a visit every day from Hystrichopsylla Talpae! It is a comfort to know that the flea is not entirely free from torture; that when he is bitting mankind he is also being bitten by one of his own tribe. Every flea, it seems, carries his own Nemesis along with him in the shape of a tiny parasite. Thus justice is done, and man has a sweet revenge on his tormentors through Nature's thoughtfulness.—Baltimore Sun.

A $5000 FIRE.

Conflagration at Houghs Neck Narrowly Averted.

Manet Bakery Building Destroyed.

Sixteen Month Old Daughter of Wm. Hanrahan Burned to Death.

Florence, the sixteen months' old daughter of William Hanrahan, was burned to death at Houghs Neck, Tuesday afternoon in the fire which completely destroyed the building on Sea street known as the Manet bakery and market.

The building was a large wooden one; the first floor being occupied for store purposes and the upper part as a dwelling by Mr. Hanrahan, who owned it.

The fire started in the kitchen, presumably from the stove, and when discovered had gained such headway that the family had barely time to escape with their lives, let alone trying to save any of the contents.

The fire was discovered by a woman who had entered the store to make a purchase. At that time Mrs. Hanrahan was upstairs lying down with her baby daughter. When the customer came in she rushed down stairs to wait upon her and was greeted with the terrifying words: "Mrs. Hanrahan, your store is on fire."

The thought that the building was on fire benumbed her for a minute. Then collecting herself she thought of her baby and turned to rush up stairs after it. But it was too late for at that time the stairway was a mass of flames and as she realized that her babe was in danger she became frantic.

A ladder was secured and placed against the building in hopes that the child could be taken out. Unfortunately the ladder proved to be too short.

By this time quite a crowd had collected and an alarm had been sent in from Box 14. Among the crowd was Mrs. Dennis Murphy, who rushed into the building and rescued a boy who sat at a table eating.

The local Hose Co. were quickly on the spot and ran a line of hose from the nearest hydrant. Every man present constituted himself a member of the fire department and worked with a will.

The headway that the fire had made, coupled with the high north wind, made it seem for a few minutes as though nothing could prevent a conflagration.

The apparatus from Quincy had to take a round about route to reach the fire, owing to a part of Sea street being closed by the sewer. Considering this inconvenience, they made good time.

When they arrived several more line of hose was laid and gallon after gallon of water was poured into the burning building, but it was not until an hour after the alarm that the fire could be said to be under control, and another hour before water was shut off.

The fire was an extremely hot one and the wind scattered burning embers, which alighted on adjoining buildings and kept the firemen busy extinguishing these incipient fires.

The Brockton house, nearly opposite took fire several times, as did also the Midland house several hundred feet away.

The heat also set fire to a sign board on the opposite side of the street and burned it up and the telephone poles were also badly burned. The telephone wires on these poles soon became red hot and burned off and falling onto the wires of the Electric Light Company added a new element of danger.

This danger was averted by the firemen, who with ladders and insolated poles separated the cross. When it was seen that the wires were in danger the fire alarm wires were taken down from the poles nearest the fire. This put the box out of commission, but as soon as the fire was out it was connected, but it was not in working order until 6.45, at which time the all-out signal was sounded.

As soon as it was possible Chief Engineer Williams entered the building with his men to search for the body of the child. They found it in the cellar where it had fallen.

What was left of the child was placed in a blanket and given in charge of Medical Examiner Jones who had been notified by telephone and had arrived on the scene.

The mother of the child was frantic and her grief was inconsolable. Kind neighbors administered to her wants.

Mr. Hanrahan was not present during the fire and no facts concerning his loss could be learned. It was estimated however that the loss on building and contents will be upwards of $5000.

☞Thirty-eight years ago Sunday Phil Sheridan won his great victory of Cedar Creek over Early, to win which he made his famous 20-mile ride.

The Battleships.

Work on the battleships New Jersey and Rhode Island is progressing very fast now at Fore River shipyard in this city, and the two vessels show about the same degree of completion. The huge stem castings of both were hoisted into place by means of shears last week and the plating of the fore part of the vessels' hulls will now begin. The amidships section of the hulls and decks as far up as the protective deck, and well forward and aft, is already nine-tenths completed.

All the decks of the battleships are double plated. Strips of cheesecloth rolled in red lead are laid along the edges of the under plate and rings of red lead putty are made around each rivet hole. Then the upper plate is screwed on with bolts, which are turned tighter as the contact becomes closer until the two plates are practically one. The decks are fastened together with inch rivets and when they are done are seemingly one piece of solid steel. The red lead and cheesecloth are intended to prevent the circulation of any water that might, in case of mishap, work its way into the plating.

The first of the heavy armor that will cover the exposed parts of the battleships has arrived at Fore River. It includes the signal towers that are to be attached to the vessels' masts.

The first of the two steel car floats which the Fore River shipyard is building for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad will be put overboard about November 1, and the other a week later. The hull plating on both is nearly finished and the yellow pine fender strakes are about half on. The building of the launching ways was begun last week. When the floats are launched they will be complete except for the tracks, which the railroad company will add at its own yards. There will be three tracks on each float.

It is just a month since the cruiser Des Moines was launched at Fore River, and in that time rapid progress has been made in installing her machinery and interior fittings. The pumps and other auxilary machinery are now being put in and her decks are being laid. The enormous propelling engines have been tested in the machine shop and are ready to take down and put into the vessel's hull as soon as the work on the engine room is sufficiently completed.

The stem and stern post for the six-masted steel schooner that the Fore River shipyard is building for Capt. John G. Crowley, the managing owner of the Seven-master Thomas W. Lawson, which was launched from the same yard last summer, have been received at Quincy and the keel of the new vessel will be laid within the next month.

Portions of the great 75-ton traveling crane that is to be added to the equipment of the Fore River shipyard's forge shop have arrived and the rest is expected soon. No other shipyard in the country has any such powerful lifting machine as this will be, and only two or three of the biggest steel mills can show its equal. It will be capable of raising and carring the heaviest parts of the largest modern vessel with perfect ease.

A big lumber shed has been added to the buildings of the Fore River shipyard. It is connected with every part of the plant by a railroad track.

The steam yacht Duchess, owned by Leonard J. Busby of New York, which was built by Fore River eight years ago, and which regularly goes there each year for overhauling, is in her usual winter quarters at the yard dock.

A Clean Staunch Man.

The Advertiser has this to say in regard to the next county commissioner to be chosen: "With the very best of feeling for Mr. Wright, the Democratic candidate, the Advertiser believes that his chances of election are but little more than ordinary. The Republicans have nominated a clean, staunch man from among their own number and they will support him." And this Republican mentioned is William E. Badger of Quincy.—Hyde Park Times.

Caution.

Parents should realize the danger and call the attention of the town authorities to children and animals who go to the grounds of the reservoir unattended. The reservoir is left with no guard fence, simply an iron rod a foot or so lower than the edge of the basin. It might save one who was drowning, but in no way hinders one from falling in. The dangers of the tower are obvious. Frequently children stand on the stones at the top.

☞The Wheeling Intelligence sent to the editors of daily and weekly Journals of Cuba in regard to annexation: Replies have been received from 20 or more papers in Havana, Santiago, Manzanillo, Holguin, Puerto Principe and other cities and towns of the island, and without exception the editors say that the sentiment among the people is against annexation.

—By a fire that occurred last night, just before twelve o'clock, in the plant of the Glucose sugar refinery in Chicago, some 20 to 30 persons lost their lives. The building was seven stories, and so rapidly did the flames spread that those on the third floor had barely time to escape.

Up to now the flowers have bloomed very freely and every one hoped the cold weather would hold off a while longer but this morning flowers and vines are wilted, a heavy frost nipping them in the night. It won't be long before cold weather sets in for good.

Now that the Joseph T. French house has been vacated by the city it is hoped the building will be moved soon to the site selected near the Poor farm, and the grounds fix up. It will be a great addition to the library grounds and show up the handsome building to much greater advantage.

Extensive improvements are being made to the property of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co. An addition has been added to the rear of the building, a large window made on Coddington street and the whole painted. The grounds are to be grassed and the whole lot enclosed by a fence. The hospital property adjoining is also to be fenced in.

Large Granite Pillars.

Bodwell's granite works of Maine are furnishing the largest monolithe pillars ever quarried in that state. They are for the new cathedral of St. John the Divine Bishop Patten has started in New York. Each weighs 310 tons in the rough and 200 tons dressed.

They will be taken to New York by sea, and the real fun will begin when they are started on their journey through the streets to their final resting place. The cathedral authorities fully expect to have to pay several thousand dollars' damages for broken manholes and torn up streets.

When the monoliths are finally at the cathedral grounds someone will have to tackle the exceedingly difficult problem of putting them in place.—Boston Post.

Patrick McDonough of Quincy was brought in on a default warrant for drunkenness and was fined $15.

Margaret Ellis was arraigned for disturbing the peace at Milton and for assault on James Maguire. She was fined $5 for the assault and $2 for disturbing the peace.

Second Fore River.

The indications are that there will be considerable boat building in and about Greenleaf street this winter. Capt. Bill Edwards is to build a steam launch and Capt. Tom Davenport is to build a Dory launch so that when he goes smelting and is becalmed he can get home all right.

Died in New York.

William Faircloth, whose home is in Quincy, was found dead Sunday at the Empire City track near Mt. Vernon, N. Y. His body was found in a hay mow.

Faircloth was a horse trainer and was well known in Quincy. He was at one time employed by John R. Graham. He has been in New York for several years training horses for the millionaires. His body was brought to Quincy for burial yesterday. He has a brother who is a fireman at the Central station.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

Pearls.

Pearls must never be allowed to get damp or they will rot. Always clean them with a piece of fine cambric. Diamonds, however, should be scalded with hot water and then thoroughly dried.

Gosnold.

Gosnold, the smallest town in Massachusetts, comprises those little specks of land which, beginning at Wood's Holl, at the "shoulder" of old Cape Cod's right arm, extend seaward till they terminate in that fatal reef of the Sow and Pigs.

DOWN SHE GOES.

Quincy Dealers Reduce Price of Coal.

The Quincy dealers have reduced the price of anthracite coal to $12 per ton and soft coal to $8 per ton.

Largest Gun Ever Made.

The United States government has just contracted with the Fore River Ship & Engine Company of Quincy for the largest guns of modern type ever made in New England. They are six-inch, 50-calibre guns of the latest rapid-fire model, and are for use on warships. Within a week after the contract for this work was signed the government placed with the Fore River Company an order for a large number of three-inch pieces of 50-calibre which are also for naval use.

Ten sets of the six-inch guns are called for. They are the most approved pattern for the main batteries of battleships and cruisers. Sixty sets of the smaller pieces, which are used in the secondary batteries of the larger vessels of the navy, will be made. Both types have proved very useful and are considered much more effective than the old-fashioned guns of larger size.

The guns will be forced, oil tempered, annealed to harden them, bored, and turned at Fore River and then sent to the shops at the Washington navy yard, where all of the government ordinance is finished.

A Petition.

Tuesday morning a petition made itself visible in the store of Bransheid & Marten's on Sagamore street, demanding the return of the 8.20 inward morning and 5.28 outward evening train. Every train-seeker stopped and added a bold signature. There is a general complaint in Ward Six over the loss of these trains, as they were the most popular and more generally used than any. One of Atlantic's old residents entered the station Tuesday morning and after searching the timetable, heaved a great sigh and, thinking himself unobserved, stepped on the penny-in-the-slot machine and looked anxiously at the weight register to see if it reported any loss of flesh. A local wit who chanced to be near inquired of the great man on the small machine if he expected to get a few dollars out of the railroad for every pound of flesh he had lost over the timetable, and the polite inquiry was answered by a hasty exi and the banging of a door.

The New Bridge.

All the material for the steel bridge which is to replace the old wooden turnpike bridge connecting Quincy Point and Weymouth is ready in the Fore River shipyard, which has the contract for building the new structure, and construction work will be begun in about a fortnight.

A somewhat novel method will be adopted in building the bridge. Each of its seven sections, including the 100-foot draw span, will be completed on land, in the shipyard, and then floated out, one ofter another, and set on the concrete piers, which are already finished. One span can be put in place at each high tide, so the work of substituting the new structure for the old one will only take about four days.

It is expected that the new bridge will be opened for travel the latter part of February. Meanwhile the old bridge will continue in uninterrupted use.

Gone to California.

Miss Mabel S. Wright, daughter of County Commissioner Wright, left yesterday for California. She is a telegraph operator and is usually employed during the summer months at the White Mountains.

Miss Wright will be remembered by many of our citizens, as she was for many months at the Quincy Station; and during the exciting times when the terrible railroad accident at the Dimmock street bridge occurred; which kept her very busy from five minutes past one at noon, the time of the accident, until eleven at night, without a mouthful to eat.

The cold weather on the New England coast does not agree with her constitution, and she is going to try the west: stopping first at San Francisco, and going farther south, probably Pasedena or Los Angeles. No doubt she will greatly enjoy Southern California during the months.

Volkmann, 17; Q. H. S., 6.

A lively football game was played at Merrymount Park, Tuesday afternoon; Volkman School of Boston, defeated High School, 17-6.

The defensive work of both teams was lamentably weak, Quincy being unable to stop Volkman's rushes and the latter being completely fooled by quarterback plays and double passes.

Volkman outweighed the local boys and the backs aided each other in advancing the ball.

Lockwood played strongly, as did also McCarty. Capt. Miller, as usual, ran strongly. The Sanders boys played snappily both on the defensive and offensive.

Miller kicked off and Volkman began its rushing game landing the ball on High's 10-yd. line. A fumble gave Quincy the ball. Q. H. S. rushed the ball the length of the field for a touchdown and Miller kicked the goal.

Volkman kicked off to Fenno, who made 20 yds. Quincy could not gain. Volkman rushed the ball down the field for a touchdown. Score: Q. H. S. 6; Volkman 6.

Miller kicked off poorly and Volkman made a touchdown. Lockwood running 35 yds. for the score. The end of the half left the score: Volkman 12; Q. H. S. 6.

In the second half Quincy showed improved form but Volkman had the ball on High's 25-yd. line. McCarthy went over for a touchdown. Lockwood failed to kick goal. Score: Volkman 17; Q. H. S. 6.

Miller kicked off to Volkman, High put in some plucky work and held her opponents. On a double pass H. Sanders made 15 yds. and Miller put on 20 yds. around left end. With 5 yds. to gain for a touchdown Quincy fumbled. Volkman played poorly and High secured the ball. R. Sanders gained and Miller tried for afield goal as the game ended.

Evening Schools.

Evening common schools were opened Monday evening at the Adams and Willard school buildings and for free-hand and mechanical drawing at the old High school building.

The attendance was fully as large as upon the opening night last year at the Adams building, while the number at the Willard school was an increase of about fifty. The Adams school reported 89 and the Willard 103. The evening drawing school opened with an attendance of upwards of thirty.

The corps of teachers assigned to the several schools are as follows:

Adams—James M. Nowland, Thomas B. Pollard, Minnie E. Donovan, Ida J. Cameron and Josephine L. Kelley.

Willard—Austin W. Green, George R. Lewis, Frances C. Sullivan, Catherine C. McGovern, Annie E. Burns and Ellen G. Haley.

Drawing—Flora B. Shackley.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Those fortunate enough to enjoy an Alpine holiday are almost sure to espy the saldanella or snowbell, a dainty little plant about three inches high bearing two pendent fringed white or violet bells on each flower stalk. They may often be found with the snow still firmly frozen round the stem, says a writer in the Westminster Gazette, and the question naturally arises: How did the blossoms, so much larger in circumference, make their way through? Botanists tell us that the plant forms its flower buds under the snow and in the process of breathing evolves so much heat that the encircling snow is melted and trickles down the stalk, round which it frequently freezes again. Thus gradually a dome shaped cavity is formed round the blossoms, and the process is continued till in many cases they succeed in reaching the surface.

A modified form of the same heat producing power may be noticed in our native foxglove, so familiar on banks and woodland slopes during July and August. On a comparatively cool day when a little wind is stirring a thermometer carefully inserted in the bell-like flowers of a plant growing in a shady place will frequently register a temperature one or two degrees higher than that of the surrounding air.

More startling results are, however, obtained from plants in which a number of small flowers are congregated together within an outer sheath or spathe, as in the arums. The Italian arum common in vineyards and along the roadsides near the Mediterranean opens its spathe between 4 and 6 in the evening, emitting at the same time a winelike fragrance. Experiment has shown that if the temperature of the interior of the spathe be then taken it may be as high as 103 degrees or 112 degrees F. even when the outside air is only 58 degrees F.—Westminster Gazette.

NEW WEATHER VANE.

Will Clearly Show the Force of the Wind.

One can measure at any time the force of the wind by means of the instrument known as an anemometer, but in this way it is impossible to obtain any vivid idea of the wind's velocity. The anemometer will tell accurately whether a wind is traveling at the rate of twenty or thirty miles an hour, but it cannot make visible the difference between a moderate and a strong wind.

A German inventor has now devised a scheme by which the force of the wind can be clearly observed, says a writer in the New York Herald. The principal parts of this new invention are an anemometer and a vane. These two parts are connected in such a manner that the force of the wind is measured on the anemometer, while at the same time the rate at which it is going can be observed by the motions of the vane and of a revolving plate which is attached to it.

NEW WEATHER VANE.

Moreover, for both purposes a scale is used which shows whether a wind blowing at any time is light, moderate, strong, stormy, a gale or a hurricane.

Those who have seen this device say that it does excellent work and would prove extremely useful on schoolhouses and at race tracks and seaside resorts.

"A MONTANA BLUFF."

How Four Troopers Made Seventy-five Filipinos Flee.

What is regarded as one of the tallest bluffs on record furnished Captain Edgar Russel, chief signal officer in the Philippines during the insurrection, with a story which he told as an example of western nerve.

"We were outside of Manila in some little scrap," said the captain, "and about seventy-five natives were lying in a trench ahead of us, shooting away merrily, but not hitting anybody. By and by I noticed a little disturbance in our front. Presently four Montana troopers trotted out of our lines and started straight for the Filipinos. Everybody looked at them with wonder and waited to see them all killed. Bullets whistled all around them, but they never halted. Slowly, just at a trot, they jogged on toward the enemy. The natives fired and fired, but for some unknown reason did not hit. On and on went the quartet, disdaining cover. At last there was a shout, and to our utter astonishment we beheld the seventy-five Filipinos suddenly jump out of their trenches and take to their heels in mad flight. The nerve of the Montana troopers was too much for them. When they had all fled, throwing their rifles away as they ran, the troopers came back, their arms full of guns. That is what the army called 'a Montana bluff.' It's the sort of nerve that lets a man open a jackpot on a pair of deuces."—New York Tribune.

The Women of Langum.

Woman supreme—without the ballot! And this feather which London Answers sticks in the cap of woman is no less brilliant because she is allowed to wear it only in the town of Langum.

In that little Welsh village man neither is nor pretends to be. In other villages he sometimes pretends to be, but in this sequestered nook on the Pembrokeshire coast he is simply Annie Williams' man or Mary Jones' man and recognizes himself as such.

In Langum woman is the dominating force in the market; she is the household financier, the family accountant, and in fact fills all the positions which in any other community, civilized or barbaric, are established by precedent given to man. Whether he of Langum has resigned or been divested of all responsibilities of life is no part of this story.

There is another important fact in Langum life—oysters. The place is famous for them. But Langum oysters are in no sense rivals of Langum womankind; their proverbial dumbness precludes that.

Newport's Architecture.

The cottages of Newport afford a strange commentary upon the contrasting tastes of the American nation. Their heterogeneity were impossible in a race of settled culture, in a race of common blood, in a country of limited extent. But the United States is a nation of nations. Its people are not Americans, but Englishmen and Scotsmen, Frenchmen and Germans, Italians and Spaniards of the third or fourth or tenth generation, says the Smart Set. Their taste in architecture is a taste that was born on the sunny Mediterranean shore, in cozy Normandy orchards, in classic Spain and Italy, in baronial Scotland and England. It is revealed in the chateaux, the castles, the villas, the loggias of Newport. Seville and Welbeck, Florence and Falaise, here stand side by side on the same strip of grass, separated only by a grille from Venice or Antwerp.

Noah Left the Ark on April 29.

Saturday, April 29, is the day marked in all ancient calendars as being the one upon which Noah and his family quitted the ark after having withstood the siege of the great deluge. The day is marked in all ancient calendars, especially British, as egressus Noæ de arca, the 17th of March, the day upon which Noah, his family and their great floating collection of natural history specimens set sail, being designated in the same class of early printed literature as introitus Noæ in arca, "the day of Noah's entrance into the ark." Why these days were chosen as the ones upon which the supposed embarkation and debarkation were made are enigmas which the antiquarians have not yet solved.

Instincts That Lead to Death.

Professor Mivart proved that there are "instincts" that lead to death by failing to adapt themselves to a change of circumstances. Migratory quail by thousands perish in the deserts of northern Africa, where their ancestors used to find a comfortable winter resort, abounding with forests and even with grainfields, if we shall credit Pliny's account of the Numidian coast lands. The forests are gone, but myriads of quail still follow in the same route at the risk of starvation.

—Despite the apparent incongruity, no event in American history has furnished so many jokes as the coal situation. An American would see a joke even if he froze laughing at it.—Athol Chronicle.

Mussulmans.

At the present day, on the best authorities, there are 250,000,000 Mussulmans in the world. The Christian population is put at 447,000,000, but the increase of Islam is more rapid than that of its sister religion.

Tortoise Shell.

Tortoise shell, however old, can be kept bright by polishing it occasionally with rouge powder.

Strawberry Sago.

Strawberry sago is made by soaking half a cup of sago in a cup of cold water for an hour, adding a pint of strawberry juice and half a cup of sugar and cooking until the sago is transparent. Serve cold.

A Denby Dale Pie.

Inhabitants of Denby Dale, near Barnsley, England, have had the habit for 100 years past of baking enormous pies to celebrate great events. On one occasion a Denby Dale pie contained half a sheep, twenty fowls and half a peck of flour.

A Great Camellia.

At Plinitz, near Dresden, is the largest camellia in Europe. It is 160 years old, about fifty feet high and has 40,000 blossoms each season.

The Ant Bear.

The great ant bear of the South American forests contrives to intimidate his feline enemies by rearing up to his full length, but by that very trick gives the hunter a chance to take a deadly aim at his heart.

Nails and Hard Wood.

It is claimed that you can drive nails into hard wood without bending them if you dip them first in lard.

China's Population.

It is stated that the Chinese population of today numbers about 426,000,000 of souls, including 8,500,000 in Manchuria, 2,580,000 in Mongolia, 6,430,000 in Tibet and 1,200,000 in Chinese Turkestan.

Panned Potatoes.

For panned potatoes peel and cut raw potatoes into thin slices and let stand in cold water five minutes. Lay in a baking dish, sprinkling each layer with salt and pepper. When the dish is almost full, pour in enough milk to cover the potatoes and bake in a slow oven for two hours, stirring occasionally.

Sleep Talkers.

Persons who talk in their sleep will frequently answer questions if spoken to softly.

Memory Freaks.

It is instanced as one of the curiosities of the memory that people who know long pieces of verse by heart frequently cannot remember their telephone number.

Faded Writing.

Writing rendered illegible by age may be restored by moistening it by means of a feather with an infusion of galls or a solution of prussiate of potash slightly acidulated with muriatic acid, observing so to apply the liquid as to prevent the ink from spreading.

The Oldest Statue.

The oldest statue of the world is of the sheik of an Egyptian village. It is believed to be not less than 6,000 years old.

The Real Mother Goose.

"Mother Goose," who is probably more familiar to children than any other personage in story books, was a real person. Mrs. Goose, for that was her real name, lived with a family named Fleet, who kept a little store in Pudding lane, Boston.

Interest.

A dollar loaned for a hundred years and compounded at 24 per cent will amount in that time to $2,551,799,404.

Filtered Water.

Fish kept in filtered water, it is said, will die. That is because the food has been taken out of it. The food, however, is what makes unfiltered water dangerous as a beverage to human beings.

The Word Pen.

The word "pen" means a feather and is from the Latin penna, a wing. Surely the expression "a steel pen" could be improved upon.

Deepest Mining Shaft.

It is claimed that the Red Jacket shaft of the Calumet and Hecla copper mine in northern Michigan is the deepest in the world. It has taken nine years of day and night work to sink and has cost $2,500,000. This shaft is vertical, but all of the other shafts of the Calumet and Hecla follow the dip of the lode. Work on it was started in 1889, immediately after the last of the three great underground fires in the older workings of the mine, which did damage of more than $1,000,000. Work has been continued upon it since that time, and the shaft stands without a parallel in mining. It is 4,900 feet in depth, or 380 feet less than a mile.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

BY Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed, given by Henry R. Smith and Emma D. Smith, his wife, in her own right to Ann M. Johnson, dated March 31, 1899, and recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds, book 838, page 546, for breach of conditions contained in said mortgage, will be sold at public auction, upon the premises hereinafter described, on THURSDAY, October 30, 1902 at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of Quincy, known as Wollaston Park, being lots Nos. 36 and 37 on Plan of Charles S. Miller, dated April 10th, 1890, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book of Plans No. 13, plan No. 566, and bounded and described as follows, viz: Northeasterly by Wollaston avenue, one hundred (100) feet; southeasterly by lot No. 35 on said plan, one hundred (100) feet; southwesterly by lots Nos. 26 and 27 on said plan, one hundred (100) feet; northwesterly by lot No 38 on said plan, one hundred (100) feet; containing according to said plan, ten thousand (10,000) square feet of land, being the same premises conveyed to Henry R. Smith, by deed of William E. Harmon, Trustee, dated March 11th, 1893 (for Lot No. 36) and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, July 24th, 1893, and by deed of Josiah P. FOR IRELAND'S LIBERTY

$100,000 Will Be Raised by the United Irish League

LANDLORDS' TRUST FUND

Will Also Be Matched Dollar For Dollar While the Struggle Continues–Action Which Redmond Says Will Dismay the Enemies of Ireland

Boston, Oct. 22.—The two days' session of the United Irish League, which has been fraught with intense interest to the champions of Ireland's cause, was brought to an end yesterday afternoon. The convention with great enthusiasm adopted the report of its ways and means committee, pledging itself to raise the sum of $100,000 within six months in aid of the cause of Ireland, and further agreeing to give thereafter dollar for dollar with the landlords' fund so long as the struggle shall continue.

Ex-Governor Boutwell made a sympathetic address during the morning and received an ovation from the delegates. Messrs. Redmond and Blake addressed the convention in the afternoon.

Mr. Redmond thanked the convention in behalf of the delegates who accompanied him, the Irish league at home and the Irish nation for the magnificent service rendered to Ireland during the past two days of the convention. He said: "Our traducers say this is simply an agrarian movement. It is a lie. As it was in the days of Parnell, national self-government is true today. The declaration of this convention has not merely been eloquent and true in voicing the aspirations of the Irish race, but it has been businesslike. The support of the Irish-Americans has, I think, been given under two conditions. First, that the movement is a national one, and second, that they must concede to those in Ireland the policy, means and methods to be employed, so that the movement can be advanced.

"The shape in which the support you offer us is eminently practical. You have created in place of a provisional, a permanent organization as an auxiliary to the movement at home, and which will result in the commencement of the organization all over the United States. I am convinced that it will spread all over the continent, and that we in Ireland will receive the support of all.

"In adopting the report of the ways and means committee, your convention has struck a hard blow to the landlord trust. The Irish land trust has raised a fund of $500,000 to crush the Irish National League, and incidentally to drive out of public life Mr. Dillon, Mr. Davitt, Mr. O'Brien and myself. If such a thing was possible, what a terrible calamity it would be for the Irish people.

"You have pledged $100,000 in six months to meet the present and urgent necessities of the movement, and have further pledged yourselves to give dollar for dollar on whatever sum is put into the landlord trust. I am profoundly impressed that this important action of yours will be read with dismay in every circle of England and Ireland which is opposed to our cause. It will come as a thunderbolt, and its effect will be beneficial. I am taking it for granted that you have made these pledges knowing full well that can do it. If you fail, the injury to the prestige of the movement in Ireland will be irreparable. I hope you will commence at once, that not an hour will be lost in making good the promises you have made."

Edmund Blake, M. P., in a lengthy address, congratulated those who organized the convention and its officers. It was, he said, a constant delight to see in the convention the fervor and zeal of those born in Ireland. It was still a greater delight to see those who had not the honor to be born on the old sod, with such sacred feelings of affection for their mothers and fathers' land. He advocated the instilling of the Irish feeling into the children so that they should retain generation after generation the love of that country in which their forefathers lived, suffered and died. It is the duty of every Irish-American, next to their religious faith, to teach the Irish faith. He then, in a detailed manner, described the conditions in Ireland under the coercion laws.

The election of officers, with John F. Finerty of Chicago re-elected president, and the adoption of the customary vote of thanks, brought the convention to a close.

CARRIES THE STRAIN

Quite a strain on a child to grow. You find it about all you can do to live along as you are and keep well. Your child has to do all that and grow besides. Some children can't stand the extra strain. They get weak and sickly as a result of it.

This is where Scott's Emulsion does some of its best work. It is a strong "growing" medicine. It starts up new life in the backward child and strengthens the weak ones.

Scott's Emulsion takes all the extra strain and carries the children along until they are strong enough to stand it alone.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

Where Somalis Get Arms

London, Oct. 22.—An official connected with the Red sea ports in an interview published in The Star says: "The Mullah and other turbulent chiefs have been liberally supplied with rifles by Americans and Germans, in spite of the British gunboats. The rifles supplied by the Americans were done up as cotton goods. This explains the frequent reference in consular reports to the fondness of the Somalis for American calicos and shirtings. It is not calico the Somali wants, but the rifles inside the calico."

MANY MINES STILL IDLE

Will Take Some Time to Get Them In Working Order

OPERATIONS ARE RESUMED

Where Mines Are In a Condition to Start—Disappointment Among Engineers and Pumpmen—Many Strike Breakers Leaving Work

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 23.—Rapid progress is being made by all the coal companies in the anthracite region toward a general resumption of coal mining. The suspension officially ended at 7 o'clock this morning, but the quantity of coal that will be mined this week will not be great. It is not believed 25 percent of the normal production will be reached until some time next week. There are a number of mines that will not be in condition for operation for several months and there are others that will not be ready for the men within two or three weeks.

Yesterday was devoted to a general inspection at most collieries. Notwithstanding the many drawbacks, however, the company officials are confident there will be plenty of coal for distribution before real cold weather sets in.

Thousands of men of every class made application for work yesterday. Under the decision of the convention those indirectly employed in cutting and handling coal could not return to work until today, but workmen who are needed to make repairs and otherwise place the workings in condition for operation were reinstated yesterday wherever needed.

There were many disappointments however, principally among the engineers and pumpmen. These two classes of mine workers struck on June 2 for an eight-hour day and also to help the miners with their contest. Their positions are not so arduous as those of the miners and their laborers and the wages paid are comparatively better. They want their old positions back and in many cases they failed. It is the opinion of the workers that the superintendents will find a way to re-employ all of them. Company superintendents say there will be no discrimination in taking back men, except that where men have committed violence or were otherwise unduly aggressive during the progress of the strike. Such men, the officials say, will not be taken back.

A great number of men who have been employed throughout the strike left their places yesterday and returned to their homes. Hundreds were paid off by the several coal companies in this valley and the same is true of the other regions.

Celebrations in honor of the ending of the strike were continued in many towns of the Wyoming valley. Plymouth had a big time in the morning, and Plains, just outside of this city, celebrated last night.

President Mitchell is now engaged in preparing the miners' side of the case for presentation to the commission. He will appear before the tribunal and will have with him a number of assistants. Mr. Mitchell has nothing to say regarding the situation, but it is evident from his manner that he is quite satisfied.

Non-Union Men Badly Beaten

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 23.—Three Italians, who have been working at the Dodge washery of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company during the strike, were set upon by a mob as they were returning from work last evening and given a bad beating. Two of them were rescued by the city police and taken to a hospital. The third got away from the crowd before the police arrived and ran to Bellevue. Four men set upon him again and after beating him into insensibility threw him over a fence into the yard of a dwelling where he was found in a pool of blood. He will recover.

New Vessels Badly Damaged

Baltimore, Oct. 23.—Two ocean-going steamships, the Missouri and Maine, almost ready for launching, were seriously damaged by fire last night and as a consequence their initial dips will be delayed for several weeks. Three hundred men at work upon the vessels had narrow escapes. The blaze is said to have been started by the explosion of hot pitch.

General Davis Calls For Reform

Manila, Oct. 23.—General Davis has issued a general order drawing attention to the carelessness of officers and men of the army in the matters of dress and discipline and characterizing the neglect in these respects as extraordinary. The order directs commanding officers to insist upon reform in these matters.

DYNAMITE FOR HOTEL

Someone Evidently Has a Grudge Against Proprietor of Berlin House

Clinton, Mass., Oct. 23.—For the second time in three months some one has attempted to dynamite the Berlin House, of which John Draper is proprietor, each time the attempt being made in the same place, the front entrance of the hotel. The miscreant either placed a dynamite cartridge, having a time fuse, on the front piazza against the front door, or else threw one. The door was splintered, the paper and plastering of the front rooms torn off the walls and a small fire started. Draper and his wife were in the ell not far from the scene of the explosion, but neither they nor their guests, of which there were only a few in the house, were injured, and Draper succeeded in putting out the fire before it had gained headway.

Draper says he has his suspicions as to who caused the explosion and arrests may follow. The first attempt to blow up the house was made on July 10, when the fire which was started did more damage than yesterday's. The extent of the mischief done is not expected to be over $300.

Flurry In Tobacco Industry

Boston, Oct. 23.—Cigar manufacturers, makers and dealers in this city are considerably stirred up over the combination of the American Tobacco company with the Imperial company of Great Britain, and a movement has been started to preserve a market for the old brands of cigars. A convention will be held in Chicago to formulate plans for keeping the market open for union products and closing it as far as it is possible against the product of the American Tobacco company.

Pastor Hanscom's Contention

Augusta, Me., Oct. 23.—Rev. S. L. Hanscom of Bar Harbor yesterday filed an application with governor and council asking that corrections be made in the vote of Hancock county for sheriff at the recent election and that a certificate of election be issued to him. He claims that 273 votes intended for him were not counted for him in the 23 towns. The returns show Whitcomb to have 72 plurality.

Brutal Assault on Old Man

Norwich, Conn., Oct. 23.—Henry Williams, aged 80, a wealthy farmer of Salem, was brutally assaulted near his home by W. L. Spencer. Williams was severely battered about the face and head. Spencer accused Williams of having him removed from his position as letter carrier. It is believed that Williams will recover. At last accounts Spencer had not been found.

Missing Man Found Dead

Fitchburg, Mass., Oct. 23.—Herbert W. Andrews, a farmer living in one of the suburbs, disappeared from his home about four weeks ago, and yesterday his body was found in the woods by two gunners. Andrews had been suffering from a mental disorder, and it is thought that he became lost in the woods and died from exposure.

Temperance Folks Adjourn

Portland, Me., Oct. 23.—With the hymn "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" and the benediction, the convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union came to an end last night. The meeting place for next year has not been decided, but the belief is general that it will be in some city of the middle west.

Fire Drill Proved Valuable

Boston, Oct. 23.—Fire drill in the public schools was brought into practical use in the Freeman primary school yesterday afternoon, when 350 small children were marched out of the building while a fire raged in the basement. As the last child was safe the fire apparatus reached the yard gates. The damage was not extensive.

Promiscuous Shooting In Hospital

New York, Oct. 23.—A panic was created in the male alcoholic ward at Bellevue hospital yesterday when a man who said he was Peter N. Bain, 60 years old, a speculator, drew two 38-calibre revolvers from his pocket and began firing in the room. There were 17 patients in the ward and there was the wildest confusion until Bain was overpowered by 10 men. No one was injured.

FAILS OF RATIFICATION

Cession of Danish West Indies Is Checked

TIE VOTE IN LANDSTHING

Two Members Taken From What Was Practically Their Death Beds to Vote Against Sale of the Islands—Cabinet Decides Not to Resign

Copenhagen, Oct. 23.—The landsthing yesterday rejected the second reading of the bill providing for the ratification of the treaty between Denmark and the United States in regard to the cession of the Danish West Indies to the latter country. The vote stood 32 to 32, a tie. The vote was taken without any debate. The announcement of the vote caused the greatest excitement in the house and demonstrations on the part of the spectators in the building, where the result was greeted with mingled cheers and shouts of disapprobation. Crown Prince Frederick, all the ministers and many members of the diplomatic corps and members of the folkething were present. The public galleries were crowded.

The cabinet held a meeting immediately after the rejection of the bill and the ministers unanimously agreed that the action of the landsthing did not necessitate their resignations.

The predominant sentiment throughout Denmark is undoubtedly pro-sale and the rejection of the treaty is attributed chiefly to a domestic political effort to embarrass the government and bring about the resignation of the ministry. The question of the sale of the islands may not remain dead for any length of time. The inability of the rigsdag to agree on a policy for bettering the conditions of the islands is expected to be a factor in again forcing the sale question to an issue.

The result of yesterday's vote was doubtful until the last moment. One member had not taken a definite stand and it was uncertain whether two sick members would be able to attend. The ages of these men, Thygeson and Raben, are 97 and 87 years respectively. Both had been expected to die for several weeks past. They were both bedridden at their homes, 150 miles from Copenhagen; but they were brought to the city. Prominent anti-sale political leaders were sent to transport them here. The sufferers, who were accompanied by physicians, were carried into a saloon car, which was rolled onto a ferryboat, on which it crossed from Jutland. On their arrival at Copenhagen they were met by leading anti-salers and were driven in carriages to a hotel. There the two old men were guarded and nursed over night and were eventually carried to their chairs in the landsthing hall an hour before the meeting.

Long before the hour fixed for the meeting of the house the streets outside the rigsdag building were crowded with excited seekers for admission.

Thousands were turned away. The hall and galleries were packed. The vote was taken amid suppressed excitement and the announcement of the result was greeted with a storm of cheers and hisses. The exhibitions of joy on the part of the anti-sale men were almost unbounded. The disorder was not suppressed for a considerable time.

The finance minister intends to send a commission to the Danish West Indies to investigate the situation, with the view of assisting the islands in developing better economic conditions. The syndicate which recently promised to help the islands has been requested to submit its plans and prepare to carry them out as soon as possible.

Washington Not Surprised

Washington, Oct. 23.—The action of the landsthing in rejecting the treaty of cession causes little surprise here, for advices from Copenhagen had indicated that the fate of the treaty hung upon the slenderest thread. The authorities here are not precisely advised as to the legislative possibilities in Denmark; but, even assuming that yesterday's action is final for the present session, they are of the belief that it will not be long before Denmark will tire of making good a deficit in the revenues of the islands and let us have them.

How Islanders Feel

St. Thomas, D. W. I., Oct. 23.—The rejection by the Danish landsthing of the treaty providing for the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States has been received quietly in St. Thomas. A large section of the population of the islands is greatly disappointed, believing that its hopes of prosperity have been shattered. A smaller, but strong, section of the islanders is jubilant and hopes for a renewal of prosperity under the old flag and with the aid of the motherland.

Drop In Mexican Dollars

Manila, Oct. 23.—The decline in silver has forced the insular government to advance the rate of exchange on a gold dollar from $2.40 to $2.46 in silver. This new rate means increased losses to the government and other holders of Mexican dollars.

OSBORNE REBUKED

Reminded That He Need Not "Defend Cornish at This Point"

New York, Oct. 23.—Judge Lambert gave the prosecution in the Molineux case another setback yesterday when he called upon Assistant District Attorney Osborne to desist from defending Harry S. Cornish.

The prosecutor had ex-Captain McCluskey on the stand and had asked him if he had any difficulty in securing specimens of Cornish's writing. "I don't see," said the court, "why you should try to defend Cornish at this point." Mr. Osborne flushed and excused the witness.

Lorenz Has a Mishap

Chicago, Oct. 23.—Professor Lorenz had the first mishap in his American experiences at yesterday's clinic at Mercy hospital. The femur of Belle Mason, on whom he was operating, broke while the doctor was treating her. Professor Lorenz explained the accident was the 10th that had occurred in the course of his caring for more than 1000 cases of dislocation of the hip. "It postpones the operation," he said, "but in no way affects the ultimate outcome. In fact the patient is in better condition than before the fracture, and there is better assurance of her complete recovery from the deformity."

Austrian "Statesmanship"

Vienna, Oct. 23.—A free fight between Czechs and Germans in the reichsrath yesterday was only averted by the president suspending the session. The Germans, angered by a long-drawn speech by a Czech deputy, invited the president to suppress him and when he declined leaders of the Pan-German party shouted to the Czechs: "You are blackguards." The Czechs thereupon advanced to attack them, but the president's action cooled their ardor.

Concerning Sale of Liquor

Keokuk, Ia., Oct. 23.—The federal grand jury yesterday returned an indictment of the Adams Express company for an alleged violation of the internal revenue laws. Persons at Birmingham received C. O. D. packages of whiskey from consigners in Illinois and paid collections and charges to the express agent. It is held that the C. O. D. method constitutes a sale of goods by the express company to the consignee and hence requires a retail liquor dealers' license.

Executors Under $7,000,000 Bonds

New York, Oct. 23.—The United States Fidelity and Guarantee company yesterday filed a bond for $7,000,000 for the executors of the estate of William M. Rice, for whose murder Albert T. Patrick was convicted. As an appeal was taken by Patrick from his decision admitting the will of 1896 to probate, Surrogate Fitzgerald directed the executors to give bond for the full value of the estate, pending the result of the appeal.

Suicide Instead of Murder

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.—Joseph F. Devlin, a marine at the League Island navy yard, who was arrested on suspicion of being an accessory after the fact of the death of Christopher Silinski, a marine at the same station, was yesterday discharged from custody. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of suicide in Silinski's case.

Young Remained Mute

New York, Oct. 23.—William H. Young, who is accused of the murder of Mrs. Anna Pulitzer, was arraigned before Judge Cowing yesterday to plead to the indictment of murder in the first degree. By the advice of his counsel, the prisoner remained mute, and Judge Cowing ordered that a plea of not guilty be entered.

Jealous of Young Wife

Pensacola, Fla., Oct. 23.—W. J. Tarlton last night cut the throats of his wife and 4-year-old son and then slashed his own throat. Tarlton is dead, but his wife will recover. The child is in a critical condition. Tarlton was about 60 years old and his wife 21. Jealousy is supposed to have been Tarlton's motive.

More Bodies In Ruins

Chicago, Oct. 23.—Five bodies have been recovered from the fire in the plant of the glucose sugar refining company. It is almost certain that seven more bodies are lying in the ruins, but the heat of the debris has prevented firemen from making any search and the exact number is not known.

Would Exclude Bible From Schools

Topeka, Oct. 23.—J. B. Billard has brought suit against the board of education to compel the removal of the Bible reading from the public schools. Billard's son was expelled from school because, it is said, he refused to give proper attention during the opening exercises, when the Bible was being read.

Guns Used Upon Rioters

Madrid, Oct. 23.—During an anti-tax riot at Valde Corro the gendarmes were compelled to fire upon the rioters. One peasant was killed and two gendarmes were wounded before order was restored.

Good Afternoon.

William Allen White writes that President Roosevelt is the first president since the civil war that has conducted his office and has done things about as the average man believes he would have done them had he had the chance.

A great deal of good ink is wasted in comparing the literary output of the day with that of former times. The comparisons are, for the most part, unfair in that they take the run and ruck of the day and compare it with the pick of the past. But aside from this it must be remembered that the tendency of our age is rather toward a high general average of culture, ability and effectiveness than toward the production of dwarfs and giants.

We are a wasteful people. We are extravagant to the verge of wickedness. It is easy enough to account for this condition on the score of the immense natural wealth of our country, but from now on our duty will not be so much to say why we have been careless as to find some means to restrict our spendthrift disposition. Our waste is seen not only in our conduct of public affairs, but in the narrow things of home. The coal strike will not have been an unmixed evil if we have learned from it economy in the use and choice of fuel.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ There hasn't been a resumption since that of specie payments so important to the nation as the resumption of work this morning down in the coal mines underneath the ground.—Boston Globe.

☞ It is well that the law of New York no longer requires that in a murder trial the jury shall be composed of men who have never heard or read anything about the case at bar. Otherwise, the Molineux jury would have to be made up exclusively of men who have been absent in the Arctic regions for the past four years.—Boston Daily Advertiser.

☞ The girls of Teachers' college (connected with Columbia university) who are to occupy the new dormitories at One Hundred and Twentieth street and Amsterdam avenue, must obey a strict set of rules this year, if they are not to come under faculty displeasure. Miss Daniells, who has charge of the girls living in the dormitories, has drawn up regulations, of which the following are the most important:

The residents of the hall are urged to refrain from loud talking in the upper corridors.

Men can be received on the first floor only, except in the case of near relatives.

Residents who expect to be out after 10 P. M. must leave word at the office. Students under 25 years of age must obtain permission for being out of the building after 8 P. M. or over night, and satisfy the matron that they are properly matronized.

Girls are not to entertain their callers at the ping-pong table, which may only be used between 4 and 8.

Dancing in the green room until 8 P. M.

All new students must be vaccinated.

The playing of musical instruments cannot be permitted at hours that will interfere with the study of residents.

CLOSED CARS COMING

Street Railway Patrons Urged to be Patient.

There has been some complaint, during the cool weather for the past few days because the Old Colony street railway run open cars on some of its lines. Assistant Division Superintendent Conway when interviewed about the matter said that the railroad was just as anxious to run closed cars as were the patrons of the road, but the trouble was that the closed cars were late in arriving from the shops, and on certain trips during the rush season it was necessary to put on open cars to accommodate the public. Early last spring all of the open platform box cars were put into the shops to have vestibules put on.

Work had been pushed in order that the cars might be ready for use when cool weather arrived, but it had been impossible to get them all when desired. He further said that the company was doing all it could to get the closed cars out of the shop, and that they were expected every day, and if the riding public would only be patient a few days more they would have no further cause for complaint.

Wollaston Choral Union.

The Wollaston Choral Union held its first meeting of the season Wednesday night in the Unitarian vestry. President J. B. Cornish presided. The union unanimously adopted a constitution and by-laws, thus putting it on a permanent basis. Any person over sixteen years of age is eligible to membership. The officers for the ensuing year are:

President,—J. B. Cornish.

Vice Presidents,—Ichabod Faunce, Charles G. Farwell and Mr. Abbott.

Secretary,—H. F. Bates.

Treasurer,—Mrs. W. E. Rowe.

Librarian,—Miss Isabelle Albee.

Auditor,—William Howard.

Executive Committee,—Mrs. Saxe, Mrs. Farrington, Mrs. J. A. Jewell, Mrs. Charles Baker, Mr. Lincoln Crowell.

The union will be led by Mr. Chas. Stevens of Boston, who so ably conducted the music last year. Meetings will be held fortnightly.

The prospects for a successful season are excellent, as Wollaston needs a singing school and the people are much in favor of the enterprise. Over a half hundred were present at the meeting Wednesday night.

Surprise Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith of 11 Pleasant street were surprised by a number of their friends on Tuesday night with a handsome couch. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Thomas Downing in a very pleasing manner. Though taken by surprsie Mr. Smith responded in a few well chosen words. After refreshments were served, songs were rendered by Mr. Downing, Mr. Malan, Mr. D. Smith, Mr. Batts and W. A. Kingstree. Recitations by Mr. Gallagher.

The feature of the evening was a comic song entitled "That's All Tim," by Mr. Victor Johnson. A most enjoyable evening was spent and the company broke up at a late hour by singing Auld Lang Syne.

Readings.

The first of the Teachers' Association entertainments will give Quincy people a chance to hear Mr. Riddle at home. He is well known to Boston audiences, and as a reader is second to none now before the public. The course as arranged will include also a recital by a well-know Boston contralto; an illustrated lecture by Prof. Cross of Exeter; a concert by the Walter E. Loud concert company, and a lecture on some phase of the poetry of Browning by the Rev. Frank A. Dixon, who is an authority on the subject. Tickets will be offered for sale soon, and you are urged to watch the columns of this paper for a full announcement of the course.

No Excuse.

The Stoughton Sentinel reflects this Republican sentiment: "The country commissionership of Norfolk county is an administrative office just the same as the Governorship of the state and there is no more excuse for a Republican bolting the regular party nominee for county commissioner than there would be for a bolt on the Governorship."—Hyde Park Gazette.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by all druggists.

MILTON.

A largely attended rally in the interest of Candidate Towle was held in Ellsworth hall last week Friday evening. Among the speakers were, Mr. Towle, Mr. Ham, C. S. Pierce, W. E. Badger and A. A. Brackett.

The building of Robert Sweeney is being painted.

The store windows are filled with pictures of candidates seeking election.

There was a large attendance at Ellsworth hall last Sunday evening to listen to the talk to men on "Christian Manhood" by Edward Billings and Robert Gardner.

The fifth anniversary of the Mission of Our Saviour church will be observed Sunday evening. Rev. Theodore I. Reese will speak and a special musical programme will be given.

A musical entertainment was given by Walter Jackson at the meeting of the Thursday evening club this week.

The two new houses being erected by A. A. Brackett on Belcher circle are about completed. Mr. Jacoby, superintendent of schools will occupy one and Mr. Hubbard of Melrose the other.

A rally in the interest of J. Merrill Browne for representative will be held at Ellsworth hall next week.

An entertainment for the benefit of E. A. Rich will be held at Ellsworth hall Nov. 3. The Mason Bros. will furnish the programme assisted by L. J. Rich who will give an address on "The secret of success."

MacKay--Dunham.

On Wednesday evening, October 22 Miss Mabel Maude MacKay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel MacKay of Wollaston, was united in marriage to Mr. Hiram Granger Dunham of Portland, Me., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Dunham.

The ceremony took place at 7.30 o'clock at the home of the bride, No. 4 South Central avenue, in the presence of relatives and friends, and was performed by Rev. Preston I. Gurney, former pastor of the First Baptist church, Wollaston.

Mr. Albion R. MacKay, brother of the bride, acted as best man, and Miss Ethel Louise MacKay, sister of the bride, as maid of honor.

The ushers were: Mr. Freedom F. Dunham of Portland, Me., and Mr. H. G. Taft of Boston. The bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march and the bride and groom stood in a handsome bower of autumn foliage.

The bride was gowned in white mousseline de soi trimmed with lace medallions and chiffon roses and carried violets. The maid of honor was attired in white Swiss muslin and carried white roses. The house was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, potted plants and vines. Mr. Hubert Harris presided at the piano.

A reception followed from eight to ten and the bride and groom were assisted in receiving by their parents.

A collation was served from a table handsomely decorated with maiden hair ferns and white blossoms, by the the following ladies daintily gowned:

Miss Edith Wheeler, Cambridge.
Miss Winnifred Howard, Wollaston.
Miss Florence Arnold, Braintree.
Miss Christina MacPherson, Woallston.
Miss Carrie Anderson, Wollaston.
Miss Edith MacPherson, Canton.
Mrs. F. P. Hill, Wollaston,
Miss Mary E. Dunham, Portland.

Among the out-of town guests present were Mrs. Alfred Robertson, Portland, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dunham, Boston, Mr. E. Dreyfus, New York, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hudson Fish, Brookline.

The future residence of Mr. and Mrs. Durham will be 623 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, where they will be at home to their friends after Dec. 1.

In the Anthracite Region.

All will be bustle and activity in the anthracite mines today. Cars that have long been sidetracked will be waked out of their slumber. The sound of the pick and shovel will echo to the blast of dynamite. Coal already mined will be started on its journey to the seaboard and industry will put on its working clothes everywhere.

The most dismal sounds come from the local coal dealers. Some of them argue that prices must come down slowly and all kinds of specious reasons are given for clinging to exorbitant figures.—Boston Globe.

Sudden Death.

Mrs. Annie N., wife of Michael Mc Nally, died suddenly at her home at 249 Newbury avenue, Atlantic, Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. McNally sat in a chair holding her baby. She was suddenly seen to turn white. She expired in a few minutes.

A physician was summoned and pronounced her death due to heart disease. She was 30 years of age. Previous to her marriage she was a teacher at the Massachusetts Fields school.

TODAY'S COURT.

John McDonald was arraigned for disturbing the peace at Holbrook. He was put under $200 bonds to keep the peace for two months.

The continued case of Harry M. Morrow for drunkenness at Quincy was called and he was defaulted.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Local politics have begun to warm up a little around the edges.

Rev. Mr. Chase and family are visiting relatives in Connecticut.

The Sewer department will move from the Adams building to City Hall on Friday.

Many of the handsome flower beds in Wollaston were blighted by the heavy frost of Tuesday night.

Henry P. Kittridge is at work on a patent oil burner with which he intends to heat his store this winter.

The school committee expect to occupy its new rooms in the old street railway building the first of the month.

The Republican City Committee will meet Saturday evening to open nomination papers for councilmen at large.

The Edward Hewitson Glee Club held its first meeting Tuesday night in the Baptist chapel. The next meeting will be held Monday, Oct. 27.

Mrs. P. McNally, wife of letter-carrie McNally of Wollaston, passed away yesterday afternoon very suddenly. The funeral will be held Friday.

Everybody who has business at City Hall is delighted with the remodelled building which should supply all wants for the next twenty-five years.

Mrs. Berry and daughters of Charles street have given up their large residence and have removed to Boston. They have leased their house for a number of years.

A party of Wollaston and Quincy gentlemen attended on Monday evening the visitation of the Massachusetts Lodge of Masons at Masonic temple, Boston, by invitation of Brother James C. Bates of Wollaston, secretary of the lodge.

Among those who sailed Wednesday on the steamship New England for Europe were Mrs. Burleigh E. Pratt, who goes to visit her father who is ill, Mr. and Mrs. John Lawry and Mr. Donald.

The second number in the course of entertainments at the Bethany church under the auspices of the Brotherhood was given Wednesday evening by Henry Thomas Bailey who gave a lecture on "Jerusalem the City of the Great King." There was quite a large attendance.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

The Smart Set.

The first meeting of the Smart Set whist club was held with Miss Laura Hall of Newbury avenue on Wednesday evening. Partners were chosen by matching colors of tiny scent bags, and the game begun at eight. Prizes were awarded to Miss Alice Coe and Miss Mary Melzard; Miss Emily Gasset and Miss Gertrude Hall; Miss Emma Curtin and Miss Maud Gray. The refreshment table was laid for sixteen.

An Absolute Monopoly.

The coal operators, after the resumption of work and the settlement of the labor troubles, are going to make the coal business as close a monopoly as the oil business now is.

The anthracite men will do this on practically the same lines as the standard oil people have followed, except that there is no competition to be crushed out, as in the oil trade.

The trust will have selling agents who will no longer be independent business firms but will be little more than clerks of the Pennsylvania trust.

They will make prices and sell coal only on such terms as the trust fixes beforehand.—Boston Advertiser.

Supply the Poor With Coal.

At a meeting of the Committee at City Hall last evening the following report of the Committee was accepted:

Quincy, Oct. 22, 1902.
Citizens' Coal Committee,
Quincy, Mass.

Gentlemen:—Your sub-committee on visiting the coal dealers of Quincy, find them ready and desirous of doing all that they can to help and assist in the work of supplying coal in small quantities and at the same prices as lots of a ton or more would command, and this without any charge for delivery, even if for but a single bag of 100 pounds, and in any part of the city. Also as it is anticipated that the prices of coal will now steadily decline, they are ready to deliver such orders based for anthracite today at the market price of $12.00 per ton, or 60 cents per bag of 100 lbs., and at $8.00 per ton for soft coal, or 40 cents per bag of 100 lbs., these prices to be decreased from time to time as the price per ton declines. The coal dealers would also purchase from the Committee the bags used in this service at their fair value when the Committee ceased longer to use them. Bags made for this purpose can be procured of E. D. Hewins, 72 Lincoln street, at $75.00 per 100 bags.

Respectfully submitted,
T. King,
Rupert F. Claflin,
For Committee.

The foregoing report clearly defines the purpose of the Committee in the matter of supplying coal to those who wish to purchase coal in small quantities. It is the prevailing opinion of this Committee that the price of coal will decrease for some time and the final price both of anthracite and bituminous coal will be quite a little less than the price at present. Therefore it is recommended that purchases be made with great prudence.

A Protest.

Editor of the Daily Ledger:

Dear Sir:

As a citizen who rides daily on the West Quincy line of the electric road I wish to enter my protest, and ask the Ledger to voice the feelings expressed by the citizens residing in West Quincy in regard to the manner in which they are being used.

The new three-car service between East Milton and Neponset has proved a complete failure; for the reason that on cannot tell within fifteen or twenty inutes when you can get a car running ther way, on this line. The last two evenings the 6.35 trip from West Quincy has been twenty minutes late. Also you cannot make a connection with any car running from Quincy Square to East Weymouth within twenty-five minutes' time.

We also protest against the running of open cars this time of the year, and especially an open car for the young ladies who work in the Tubular Rivet Shop at Wollaston. For instance, take young people who work in a warm room all day where the thermometer is 70 degrees, and then be obliged to ride home in an open car, is cruel treatment to say the least.

The accommodations of a rainy day are something the management should feel ashamed of. When one hundred school children are packed like sardines in a car, leaving no room for the regular patrons, it is entirely wrong. An extra car should run for the school children on rainy days.

It is hoped the mayor will withhold his signature from the order granting a location for double tracks from City Square to the Daily Ledger office, for the reason said corporation does not intend to put in their track until spring. If the same was done now it would help in giving better accommodations. In fact the people using the cars living on this line from South Quincy to East Milton, have been too easy; and put up with promises until their patience has been tried; and now they intend to accept this abuse no longer.

In conclusion I wish to say that if the management does not make a change in regard to running of cars on this line, and put on closed cars, and run extra cars for the school children, there will be a movement started which will oblige this street railway to give accommodations asked for.

Taylor—Williams.

The Second Church in Copley square, Boston, never presented a more brilliant appearance than it did Wednesday evening when the marriage of Miss Mildred Williams, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Williams, to Henry L. Taylor of Haverhill was solemnized at half-past seven o'clock, the Rev. Thomas Van Ness officiating.

Miss Helen M. Johnson of Brookline was the maid of honor and she wore a beautiful gown of white mousseline de soie with full trained skirt and girdle of white satin with sash ends. The bridesmaids were Miss Maud Hunt, Miss Miriam Goss, Miss Louise Kittredge, Miss Julia Quincy, Miss Bessie Page and Miss Patty Faxon. Their gowns were very effective in soft effects of white organdie muslin made en traine.

The transparent yokes were of fine white point d'sprit, they being edged with deep ruffles of point Paris lace. The sashes and ends were of white taffeta silk. In their hair they wore large white chrysanthemums. They carried huge boquets of pale pink carnations and maiden hair ferns.

The bride was charming, her blonde coloring being particularly suited to the beauty of her wedding gown which was white duchesse satin, the full, high-necked bodice of which in blouse effect had the entire front of exquisite point lace. The sleeves were made tight to the elbow where they were finished with a wide shirring and then hung full to the wrist. The long train skirt was slashed with the lace let in. She wore her tulle veil off her face and it was caught with a small spray of orange blossoms which flower, with lilies of the valley, formed her shower bouquet.

A large reception followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Williams at 186 Marlboro street.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor left on an extended wedding tour, after which they will take up their residence in Haverhill.

Thompson—Colgan.

Herbert Andrew Thompson of Quincy and Miss Ethelyn Colgan of Newtonville were united in marriage Tuesday evening at the residence of the bride's brother, William H. Colgan, at Newtonville. Rev. Dr. Edwin H. Hadlock of Springfield was the officiating clergyman.

Is Most Practical.

At a largely attended meeting at Turner's Falls on Monday evening, Mr. C. M. Burnett, treasurer of one of the local corporations, gave an interesting address on "Do the Public Schools Give the Preparation that they Ought for the Future Welfare of the Pupil?"

Mr. Burnett pointed out some of the wonderful improvements in the system of modern education, but coutended that in substituting the new for the old there had been a decided loss in some important particulars.

In spelling he said there had been a decided falling off. The new methods of teaching reading had considerable to do with this. Typewriters, young men and girls, cannot spell.

The high school curriculum of today is more for fitting pupiis for college than for a practical training in life. Fitting for college should be done in preparatory schools. Mr. Burnett condemned vertical writing in toto, as being impractical and unnatural. To his personal knowledge it was a fact that boys are handicapped in securing positions as bookeepers because of their vertical writing.

BRAIN BUILDING.

What the Newest Science Hopes to Achieve.

Mind art is the newest science. It is the art of brain building, by the cultivation of which anybody may become the architect of his own mind machine, rebuilding it or altering it as he sees fit. Professor Elmer Gates of Washington is the originator and teacher of this art. He has, says a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, found out not only how the mind may be built to order, but also how character and disposition may be improved at will so as to transform bad persons into good persons.

It is all a matter of educating the cells of the brain, he claims, which are the physical units of mind. The whole brain is a piece of physical mechanism, and, like another machine, it may be built up. Beginning with the child, it can be put together bit by bit.

"Every thought that enters the mind," declares Professor Gates, "is registered in the brain by a change in the structure of the cells. The change is a physical change, more or less permanent. Think of a certain thing a number of times every day for a month, and the result must be a building up of that part of the brain in which the matter in question is considered. Blood flows to that portion of the mind machine and does the constructive work, multiplying and enlarging the cells locally.

"Apply this idea through a systematic course of training and you can educate a child as it ought to be educated. Brain building is the science of the future.

"Nearly all the thinking you do is done without your knowing it. Ideas frequently leap into the mind as if from nowhere, and they are likely to be the best ideas."

Professor Gates has applied the theory in his own nursery and has obtained amazing results from the training of his little boy and girl, who began their education before they were weaned. A beginning was made early in cultivating the faculty of attention. The little girl when she was not able to stand alone was taught to give her attention to a certain thing and to keep it fixed upon that thing as long as she could. The little girl and her brother, long before they could talk, were taught to put blocks through holes in a wooden box. The holes were of twenty different shapes and the blocks of as many different forms, and the children were obliged without knowing what they were about, to register in their brains a large variety of geometrical concepts.

RAILROADING

In the very near future electric cars running over the east side system of the East St. Louis and Suburban Electric Railway company at express train speed will be stopped within a hundred feet, says J. M. Brandette in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The brakes with which the cars of the system will be equipped represent the highest development of braking science. There have been track brakes and wheel brakes which have been more or less successful. The brake which will be put on the East St. Louis cars is an ingenious combination of the two principles by which the maximum braking effect of each is obtained.

The brake proper consists of a double track shoe which is strongly attracted to the track when energized by a current produced by the car motors and brake heads and shoes of the ordinary type, acting directly on the wheels. It is so constructed that the downward pull and the resultant drag of the track brake are simultaneously transmitted into lateral pressure on the wheels.

When the brake is applied, the strong attraction of the track shoes to the rails produces three effects—an increase of the pressure of the wheels on the track because of the downward pull of the magnets, retardation by reason of the friction between the shoes and rails and a maximum braking effect on the wheels obtained through the transmission of the drag of the track shoes on the brake shoes.

An interesting fact is that the brake shoe pressure is automatically regulated by the condition of the rail surface. If the track is wet, the drag is lessened and the brake pressure on the wheels correspondingly increased.

The braking effect is also automatically adjusted to the shifting of weight on the trucks, as when, for instance, the motion is being rapidly retarded and the weight thrown on the forward trucks. Speed is also automatically controlled down long and steep grades. Just enough current can be permitted to pass through the track shoe magnets to hold the car at uniform speed on any grade. Any increase of speed causes the brakes to act with greater force, and any decrease of speed decreases the brake action.

Danger of failure of current is obviated by the fact that the magnets are energized by current obtained from the car motors and not from line current.

A New Gas.

Remarkable properties are claimed for a new gas called electroid by its discoverer, Professor Rychnowski of Lemberg, who declares that it is a cure for consumption. When condensed, the gas assumes the form of tiny greenish blue balls which are elastic like india rubber and emit rays under the influence of which the growth of plants and flowers is greatly accelerated and organic matter is prevented from decomposing. Some tuberoses on being exposed to the electroid rays in a dark room immediately burst into flower.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Fever blisters can be cured by the use of powdered alum.

Headache frequently yields to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and back of the neck.

For tender feet, soak in two quarts of cold water to which an ounce of powdered borax is added and rub dry with a towel.

In convulsions place cold water to the head, loosen clothing and place in a hot bath for ten minutes from 87 degrees to 90 degrees.

A cure for diarrhea and stomach pain of considerable repute is made thus: Pour whisky on to a lump of sugar and set light to it. When the flame has died out, eat the sugar as hot as you can.

To cure warts apply three times a day nitric acid with a small camel's hair brush, taking great care that none runs down on the flesh. After five minutes wash off. Continue this till the warts have disappeared.

In an emergency to make a compress for a wound, if nothing better is at hand, clean tissue paper makes an excellent application. It is much to be preferred to a strip torn from clothing or a soiled handkerchief, which may be the only other choice.

Money In Her Pocket.

There may be greater virtues in the possession of the married woman, but there are few greater and more excellent talents than that of knowing how to spend money—not to waste it, but to spend it and be acquainted with its management.

But whether or not one knows the details of the methods of getting money into the right hands it is an important part of a wife's virtues to know how to spend the money when once hers. Many a woman buys what she wants if she has the means to do so without a thought if it be best or if she could do without it or if she could get it at a better price elsewhere. But really the more open handed a husband is the more it is the wife's duty to think twice when spending, for, putting aside any question of her equities in the husband's income, the fact remains that it is usually in his power and is under the province of that law which declares that might makes right, and if he is open handed that circumstance gives her a double obligation to spend it reasonably and wisely.

Science of Courtesy.

In teaching a child manners be sure that you have him understand that all these pretty courtesies and amenities are not mere matters of form, but that true gentility is something that proceeds from the heart—that they are dictated by the creed of love and kindness—of doing to others as you would be done by, says the Sunny South. The heart furnishes the best criterion of what social forms shall be rejected or accepted. It is always the purpose of good manners to place one's companion at ease, but this (the child should understand) is not an end in itself, but a duty from one to another. Cultivate those manners in children which teach them to be just, kind, obliging, to remove embarrassment, to call out the best in a companion, to defend the right and to be respectful and reverent to all the great efforts of humanity—to the church, the school, the law, the government—and to all that helps to express the genius for art and beauty.

Mourning Attire.

In reply to a question regarding the proper kind of mourning for a near relative, many of the arbitrary rules in this matter have been greatly modified or made optional. Each year has wrought a change for the better until now there exists a liberty of action never before known. Custom in this country still fixes black as a proper emblem of grief for the loss of relatives, but death is not made the occasion of foolish extravagance or wasteful expenditure. Plain black dresses, headware and wraps are adopted in hundreds of instances instead of the former heavy and expensive weeds. Indeed anything and everything that render a mourner's grief or garments conspicuous are now generally disapproved.

Baby's Finger Nails.

The care of a baby's finger nails should by no means be omitted. At the babies' hospitals the nurses cut the nails once or twice a week as is necessary, using small, slender, sharp scissors. Care is taken not to cut the nails too short nor straight across, but slightly rounded. An ivory nail cleaner or a wooden toothpick is the proper cleaner for the tender finger, and every day after the bath the skin should be gently pushed back from the base and sides of the nail with a soft towel. Care of this sort given regularly during infancy will result in well shaped fingers when the child is older.

When Wrinkles Refuse to Depart.

When wrinkles are extremely stubborn and refuse to be blotted out by home treatment, it is a good plan to consult a reliable specialist, who will stimulate the skin and build it up by using electricity, scientific massage and a tissue building cuticle food. Careful hygiéne, too, is absolutely necessary when one proclaims war against any beauty ill, particularly an accordion plaited countenance.

Cleaning Windows.

The cleaning of windows may be greatly facilitated by first dusting them with whiting. Sew up some whiting in a small linen bag and rub the whole window and ledges. Rub this off with a rough cloth and polish with chamois. Another plan is to rub the glass with a chamois, dampened with whiting and polish with soft cloths.

TURN THE RASCALS OUT

Hill Says It Is the Pressing Demand of the Hour

SPEAKS IN TAMMANY HALL

For the First Time In Ten Years—Says Tariff Revision Is the Leading National Issue—Letter From Cleveland Endorsing the State Ticket

New York, Oct. 23.—For the first time in 10 years David B. Hill spoke last night in Tammany hall. The occasion was the ratification of the Democratic state ticket.

Former President Grover Cleveland sent a letter expressing his regret that a prior engagement prevented his attending the meeting. It was as follows:

"I regret that my engagements will not permit an acceptance of your invitation to attend the Democratic meeting to be held in Tammany hall on the 22d instant.

"It is most gratifying to learn from the terms of your note that the Democracy of the city of New York fully appreciate how vitally the underlying principles of our party are involved in the pending canvass; and also to know that they shall not be forgotten in its campaign efforts.

"The great Democratic organization of the city of New York is so important a factor in controlling the result of party endeavor in the broadest fields that no campaign in which it engages can be considered sufficiently local to free it from the responsibility of its influence upon party prospects everywhere and at all times.

"This responsibility has been well met in the present campaign by the selection of trustworthy candidates, by intelligent party work, and by the sensible efforts to secure harmonious Democratic action.

"I sincerely hope that as a result the Democracy of the city of New York will again demonstrate its invincibility at home; that Democratic good government and economical administration will be restored to the people of the state, and that Democratic hope and confidence will be revived and stimulated far beyond the limits of city and state."

Mr. Hill said in part: "Ten years ago I had the honor of speaking in this ancient temple of Democracy in behalf of the policy of revenue reform. Today the leading national issue in the ensuing election is that of a revision of the present exorbitant and unnecessary tariff and it is therefore appropriate that my voice should again be heard in behalf of this righteous cause within these old walls dedicated to the enunciation of right principles of government.

"Regardless of past differences, which never related to party policy, I extend the right hand of fellowship to every Democrat in this grand old organization or in any other organization and together we'll battle, shoulder to shoulder, in behalf of those Jeffersonian principles which we all have inherited from the great founder of the Democratic party.

"Tariff revision must come in the very near future and the sooner it comes the better for our country. No good reason can be urged why it should longer be delayed."

Mr. Hill devoted a considerable part of his speech to state affairs, in the course of which he said: "It now appears that the 'raid' upon the charitable institutions of the state made last winter by the Odell administration was not only political, but mercenary in its character. The favored recipient of official patronage was the corporation of J. W. Mathews company of Newburgh, the home of Governor Odell. His personal interest in that corporation has now been demonstrated in disclosures published.

"It has been shown further that the chairman of the Republican state executive committee is financially interested in the state printing ring at Albany, and that the banking department withholds or grants charters for trust companies at the instance, suggestion or regard of Republican politicians of the locality, who receive large compensation for their official influence.

"It is unnecessary to multiply instances. 'Turn the rascals out' is the remedy of the people and the pressing demand of the hour."

Democrats Declared Without Issues

Cincinnati, Oct. 23.—A Republican rally in this city was addressed last night by Senators Beveridge, Foraker and Hanna. Senator Foraker presided. He reviewed former campaigns and their leaders, saying there never was one like that of this year when the Democrats had no issues and no leader—unless Tom Johnson is their leader. He reviewed the old issues of free trade, free silver, "Aguinaldo, the George Washington of the Orient," and other questions that, he said, have been found wanting and last of all was "the strike which President Roosevelt had removed so that now the Democrats were without issue or hope."

Moody Busy on the Stump

Washington, Oct. 23.—Secretary Moody was at his desk in the navy department yesterday and will remain here during the rest of the week. He has been making campaign speeches in the west. Next Monday he will again enter the canvass and will speak at Bridgeport, Conn., and Providence. The secretary expects to spend the remainder of the campaign in his home state.

THE LIFE OF KRUGER

London Times Gives Outline as Written by Famous Burgher Himself

London, Oct. 23.—The Times this morning publishes three closely printed columns of a first instalment of extracts from "Kruger's Memoirs" which were dictated to trusted friends during his enforced repose at Orangelust.

The memoirs begin by describing incidents connected with the great trek participated in by his father, when the ex-president was 9 years old, some of which he remembers with great vividness. He gives a graphic account of shooting his first lion at the age of 14 and picturesque incidents of the struggles of the Boers with the black aborigines.

Then follows well written descriptions of the part Mr. Kruger took in all the wars with the Matabeles, Zulus, etc.

At the commencement of the civil war of 1861 Mr. Kruger wished to take no part whatever in the disputes; but, after he had been once drawn in, he did not rest until he had secured the right of popular opinion.

The extracts then deal with the history of Transvaal politics up to the closing period of the burgher's presidency and the commencement of the open conflict with Great Britain and the arrival of the Shepstone mission, empowered to effect the annexation of the country. Mr. Kruger says he demanded of the burghers that they prohibit the Shepstone mission from entering Pretoria, but that the burghers ignored his demand.

The Times promises, on a subsequent occasion, to give extracts from the memoirs dealing with the period after British annexation.

Cannot Reopen Pious Case

Washington, Oct. 23.—Some of the parties in interest in the pious arbitration are not satisfied with the amount of the award in their favor and appealed to the state department to endeavor to induce The Hague tribunal to reopen the case and amend the decision so as to make the judgment payable in gold instead of in Mexican currency. The treaty expressly stipulated that the tribunal should fix not only the amount but the kind of currency in which the award should be paid, and Secretary Hay has informed the claimants that he cannot grant their request.

Strikers on the Rampage

Paris, Oct. 23.—In encounters at Dunkirk yesterday between the police and dock laborers a commissary and four policemen were injured. The strikers raided several shops and smashed windows in newspaper offices. Last evening they invaded the docks and attempted to cut the moorings of British colliers. They set fire to bales of goods and threw cargo cranes and sentry boxes into the canal. Troops finally succeeded in driving the strikers away.

Cranborne Won't Give Facts

London, Oct. 23.—The general belief that a secret treaty is in existence between Germany and Great Britain relative to the prospective division of the Portuguese possessions in South Africa received further confirmation in the house of commons yesterday. Under-Foreign Secretary Cranborne, replying to questions on the subject, parried all queries, saying that if such a treaty existed he, in the nature of things, was precluded from giving its terms.

To Hem In Mad Mullah

Rome, Oct. 23.—Negotiations are proceeding with the object of obtaining Abyssinian military co-operation in Somaliland, similar to that of 1900, when Ras Makonen invaded and devastated Ogahden. The suggestion is that the Abyssinians should hem in the mad Mullah's forces from the southward and the British attack them from the north.

Policeman Shot Soldier

Tamaqua, Pa., Oct. 23.—While endeavoring to quell a fight between soldiers and a crowd in a Landsford saloon at midnight, Sergeant Reilly of company D, Sixth regiment, was seriously shot in the neck by William Whildin, a policeman.

Paterson Rioters Convicted

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 23.—A verdict of guilty was returned yesterday by the jury in the case of William McQueen and Rudolf Grossman, charged with complicity in the rioting of June 18, during the strike of the dyers' helpers.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Vermont legislature adopted by a unanimous vote of a set of resolutions thanking President Roosevelt for his efforts in settling the coal strike.

Commander Low, a retired officer, has been ordered to take command of the nautical schoolship Enterprise at Boston as the relief of Commander Taussig, who has been placed on waiting orders.

Rev. Dr. W. T. Sabine was, at New York, consecrated a bishop to succeed the late Bishop Latane.

Former City Marshal George J. Dean of Haverhill, Mass., died after a lingering illness, aged 78. He joined the local police in 1851, and rose from the ranks to the command of the force, finally retiring in 1900.

Commander McLean, who rendered such efficient service in Hayti and on the isthmus while in command of the cruiser Cincinnati, has been placed on waiting orders.

In a hard fought contest at Annapolis the naval cadet football eleven defeated the University of Pennsylvania by a score of 10 to 6.

George L. Burt, one of the oldest residents of Dorchester (Boston), is dead. He had served in both branches of the legislature. He was born in Walpole, N. H., in 1829.

A KLEPTOMANIAC

[Original.]

"You profess to love me. According to your idea of love, I presume you do. Any kind of love will do before marriage, but it must be a strong devotion that will stand the faults and foibles of a life partner."

"You will never show a fault too pernicious for me to bear with."

"You don't know my faults."

"If you possess all there are in the dictionary, I shall still love you always."

"There are faults that come from a physical defect. One may have a passion for gambling, for drink, for a number of vices, any one of which is excited by an abnormal brain condition. Suppose after marriage you should find me suffering from something like this."

"I should do all in my power to protect you from the consequences of your deficiency."

I tried to bring her to a decision, but I could not, and I was obliged to leave her without either a "Yes" or a "No." I did not doubt that she suffered from some such cause as she had mentioned, though I knew it was not drink and I did not believe it to be gambling. She had named these as illustrations.

We were in the same summer hotel on a beautiful lake. It was toward the end of the season, and as most of the guests had been there for five or six weeks we were all acquainted. One afternoon we were listening to music in the parlor when the landlord entered and announced that one of the guests had lost a valuable jewel. The servants had been searched and nothing found. Would every guest consent to the same process? The question was put to a vote and carried unanimously.

The doors were locked, and the searching began. While it was going on my eyes fell on the girl I loved, and I soon noticed that whenever the searchers came near her she moved away. After I had been searched she came and stood beside me. I felt her hand against mine, and she placed within it a small box. Then she moved away and in a few minutes submitted to be searched, evidently relieved of a great dread. After she had been searched she passed by where I was standing, giving me a supplicating look, either a request that I would not betray her or blame her—I could not tell which.

All was clear to me now. The fault she would not name was kleptomania.

It would be impossible to describe my emotions. When I felt her passing the box, it seemed as if I had been bitten by a rattlesnake. Nevertheless for her sake I took it and concealed it. When she looked her appeal, I had realized the situation—she was not a thief for gain; she stole because she was impelled to do so. But think of a man accepting such a defect in his wife, entering upon matrimony knowing that at any moment she would be liable to bring disgrace upon herself, him, their children! I turned, looked out through a window and shook convulsively. My soul was wedded to this woman, and I suffered the same as if she were already my wife.

Some one touched my shoulder, and I turned. She was looking up at me, her eyes full of gratitude and love. The search was ended, the doors were open, and the guests were leaving the room. The jewel had not been found.

"Come," she said, "for a walk."

Mechanically I followed her to the margin of the lake. She stepped into one of the cedar rowboats there, and I entered after her, she taking the tiller, I the oars. I pulled away from the shore, and she steered the boat across the lake toward a point where a bed of rushes grew higher than a man's head. I felt sure that she would take me to some concealed spot where she could repossess the stolen jewel. Was it a proclivity of kleptomaniacs to wish to keep what they stole?

Presently I heard the boat's nose penetrate the rushes, and in another moment we were in their midst, completely concealed. Then she said to me:

"You have repeatedly asked me to be your wife, and I have repeatedly declined to say 'Yes.' Now that you know what I am, do you still wish to marry me?"

She was lounging back in her seat, toying with one of the tiller ropes. She was simply dressed in pure white, her neck and arms uncovered, unadorned except by a rose in her hair. As she asked the question she looked up at me with an honest look that assured me she was innocent at least of a sense of guilt. It was for me to decide then and there, once and forever, if I would take her with her physical defect or resign her. Looking steadily into her honest eyes, I said:

"Yes."

An expression of supreme happiness passed over her face.

"Give me the box," she said.

I took it from my pocket and handed it to her. It was a ring box. She opened it and turned it so that I could plainly see the inside.

It was empty.

I sat for a moment scarcely understanding what it meant, but her face soon broke into a smile that revealed the trap into which she had led me.

"Fool," I muttered, "to have been thus duped!"

She clapped her hands in glee at the success of her ruse and my discomfiture.

"Well," I said at last, "if I have been made a guy, I have at least stood your test. You have not given me the answer I have earned. Is it yes or no?"

"Yes."

What a convenient place to receive such an answer!

requires physical and mental ability of a high degree to withstand its hard labors. The high tension to which the nervous system is constantly subjected, has a depressing effect, and soon headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, etc., develop in severe form. Such was the case of Mail Carrier S. F. Sweinhart, of Huntsville, Ala., he says:

"An attack of pneumonia left me with muscular rheumatism, headache, and pains that seemed to be all over me. I was scarcely able to move for about a month when I decided to give Dr. Miles' Pain Pills and Nerve Plasters a trial. In three days I was again on my route and in two weeks I was free from pain and gaining in flesh and strength."

OUTPUT IS RESTRICTED

By Unsatisfactory Condition of Anthracite Mines

WATER, GAS AND BAD ROOFS

Contributed Toward Delay In Resumption In Many Collieries—Large Number of Union Engineers and Carpenters Have Grievances

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 24.—The resumption of mining throughout the anthracite region was not as general yesterday as was expected. Unlooked for difficultics were encountered in the shape of water and accumulated gas, and dangerous roofs which threatened to fall and entomb the workers were also discovered in many of the collieries. The mine superintendents would take no chances and the mining of coal was put off until all parts of the underground workings can be made safe. This will take a few days yet and in some cases it will take weeks before some of the mines can be put in full operation.

Although work was carried on in some mines which are not considered in the best of condition, no accidents were reported for the day. In quite a few of the collieries the machinery and everything else connected with the hoisting of coal acted badly and it was found necessary to close down after steam had been raised and the miners were ready to go to work. From reports received from the entire anthracite region, the number of mines in operation is given as a little less than two-thirds of the total number, but the output of coal was less than half the normal.

As was to be expected there was more or less dissatisfaction among the old employes over the reopening of the mines. Where it was decided not to resume work for a few days the men took it that the coal companies did not want their services and many complaints reached President Mitchell's headquarters. But as the day fore on and the true situation became known there was a better feeling all around. President Mitchell expects that when all the mines get in operation there will be less complaints. Until the collieries do resume there will be more or less idle men airing their discontent.

It looks as though the union engineers were going to have some difficulty getting back their old places. At nearly every mine where the striking engineers made application for work they were told that there were no vacancies. A large number of carpenters are also out in the cold. A delegation of carpenters waited upon President Mitchell yesterday and told him of their grievances. The chief of the Miners' union advised his callers to wait a few days and see if employment would not be offered them.

President Mitchell believes that when general resumption takes place there will be few of the mine employes idle. The firemen are being taken back in larger numbers than any of the other steam men. That is because they are experienced and they take the places of men who are not so capable.

The only friction reported between union and non-union was at several collieries in the Wyoming region, where the miners objected to be lowered into the mines by non-union engineers.

President Mitchell was busy at headquarters getting the miners' side of the case in shape for presentation to the arbitration board. Great preparations are now under way for the celebration of Mitchell day in this city on Oct. 29. National Board Member John Fallon has charge of all the arrangements. He will be chief marshal of the parade, which promises to be the largest demonstration of miners ever held in the coal region.

Grievance of Engineers

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 24.—President Mitchell was shown last evening The Associated Press dispatch stating that President Morton of the International Association of Stationary Engineers and Firemen would order the members of that organization to refuse to handle anthracite coal until every member affected by the strike is reinstated on the basis on which miners returned to work. He refused to make any comment.

May Reach Decision by Christmas

Washington, Oct. 24.—The members of the arbitration commission appointed by the president to investigate and report on the conditions in the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania held their initial meeting this morning. Judge Gray, in an interview, expressed the hope that the commission would complete its duties before Christmas.

BOER LEADERS DISAGREE

May Result In Abandonment of Tour For Collection of Funds

London, Oct. 24.—The failure of Generals De Wet, Botha and Delarey to attend Lady Cook's dinner in their honor last evening is supposed to be connected with quarrels which have arisen between them. They were all sightseeing in London yesterday and up to the last moment they were expected at Lady Cook's.

It is reported that De Wet wants the tour of the generals, including the trip to the United States, to be abandoned, and that all three are disappointed at the financial results so far obtained. Botha, however, is said to be anxious to make a further effort to collect funds. A warm discussion on this point is believed to have occurred between De Wet and Botha; Delarey is said to have remained neutral in the matter. De Wet's presence is considered necessary for the success of the tour, and if he persists in returning to South Africa it is not unlikely that the whole tour will be abandoned.

Rockefeller's Thank Offering

New York, Oct. 24.—At the meeting yesterday of the teachers' college trustees of Columbia university, it was announced that John D. Rockefeller had offered to give $500,000 to the college, provided that the college could raise $190,000 to pay off the debt of the institution and $250,000 besides, as a "thank offering to Almighty God" for the preservation of himself, his family and household from the fire which recently destroyed his country home at Pocantico hills.

Hanna's Strength Gives Out

Indianapolis, Oct. 24.—Senator Hanna, who delivered a campaign address here last night, was standing some distance from the speaker's table when his strength seemed to fail him, and he had to reach for the stand, dragging himself over to it. After a moment's hesitation he announced that his physical condition would not allow him to speak longer and he was helped to his chair by others on the stage.

Death Due to Negligence

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 24.—As a result of his inquiry into the death of Esther Quimby, Coroner Banning has returned a verdict that she came to her death of diphtheria and general septicemia owing to the culpable negligence of her parents and a certain so-called "healer" named Lathrop, in failing to provide proper medical care and attendance. The coroner holds the three persons on a charge of manslaughter.

Drastic Measures Demanded

London, Oct. 24.—The Conservative newspapers this morning admit that the new rules of procedure in the house of commons have quite failed to stop Irish obstruction. They strongly protest against the daily Irish scenes in the house and demand that the government take drastic measures to maintain the dignity of parliament and the authority of the speaker.

Trip Abroad Is Checked

Montreal, Oct. 24.—Frank O'Connor, who up to two weeks ago was sergeant of the band of a United States regiment stationed at Fort Riley, Kas., was arrested yesterday on a steamship just as he was about to sail for Liverpool. O'Connor is charged with stealing the pay of men of the band. He has consented to return without extradition proceedings.

The French Miners' Strike

Paris, Oct. 24.—It has been semi-officially announced that Premier Combes, in deference to the desire of the chamber of deputies and the government, will use his influence to secure a pacific solution of the coal strike. He will open negotiations today with the mine owners and the striking miners with the view of having the matter arbitrated.

Railroaders Want Higher Wages

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 24.—According to interviews with heads of railroad unions and union members, a demand will be made upon the Southern Pacific within the next 30 days for increased wages which will affect more than 30,000 employes. The chief cause of the demand is the increased cost of living.

Buried Beneath Falling Rock

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 24.—Two returned strikers, who were working with a gang of rock men on the night shift at a colliery in Lackawanna last night, were buried beneath a fall of rock and badly crushed. One man died from injuries and the other is in a critical condition.

Seventy Miles by Wireless

Annapolis, Oct. 24.—Successful experiments were made yesterday between the naval academy and the auxiliary cruiser Prairie with the Slaby-Arco (or German) system of wireless telegraph. The Prairie was anchored 70 miles down the Chesapeake and signals were exchanged with her with facility from the station here.

WOBURN IN UNFAVORABLE LIGHT.

Woburn, Mass., Oct. 24.—The report of the bribery committee at the city council meeting last night resulted in a heated and acrimonious debate. The meeting began with the reading of the report of the bribery committee and a final recommendation that the whole matter be laid before the district attorney. The report was accepted and the committee discharged.

President Brady, who made the charges leading to the appointment of the committee, then took the floor, and claimed that there was no need of the council going to the district attorney, as he had already laid the matter before that official. He said that the committee had been one of protection rather than of investigation, and severely criticised some of the members.

Aldermen Wood and Greaney tried in vain to interrupt the speaker, but were overruled by the chair.

Alderman Wood managed to get the floor, and charged Brady with selling lottery tickets. "You're a liar," shouted Brady. "You're a liar yourself," retorted Wood, and back and forth went the word half a dozen times.

Finally the members calmed down only to be still further aroused by the introduction of an order to grant a location to the local street railway in one of the principal streets. As it was on this question of a street railway location that the bribery charges originated, the council was soon in a turmoil again.

At last Councilman McCune secured the floor and began a heated speech, in which he denounced President Brady and refused to listen to the latter's order to sit down. The city messenger, who is over 70 years old and not particularly vigorous, was directed by President Brady to eject McCune, but the latter pushed the messenger aside without much difficulty. Then the police were sent for, but before they arrived the council adjourned until next Wednesday.

Good Afternoon.

People who were not fortunate enough to have their coal bins filled last spring should not hasten to lay in their winter's supply, as there is no question but what the price will gradually drop to $7 per ton.

The Boston Journal has passed into the hands of Frank A. Munsey, the widely known publisher. Stephen O'Meara, who has of late owned the controlling interest in the "people's favorite" daily, has made rapid progress, but we look for even greater accomplishments under the new management.

Whether any would-be candidate got caught or not, we do not know, but the Republican City Committee set a very early date for filing nominations for the Municipal caucuses, and gave but a very meagre notice of the same, and the time has now expired. The caucuses will not be held until Wednesday, Nov. 5, when a candidate for Mayor, as well as Councilmen, will be nominated by direct vote. There will be no municipal conventions by either party this year.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ In this town, and in all others as well, there is living a class of men whose aim is to get a living without work. As long as they succeed in this without bothering other people, well and good; but when the general public has to be appealed to to assist in the noble work of aiding the beggars, it is time to get interested. There is a sort of trust among the non-workers. They hold up the unwary, they seek dimes and quarters from those they know, they request contributions of every kind from those whom they feel will allow their generosity to get the better of their common sense and their knowledge that they are being "worked" unscrupulously. Some of these healthy, hearty fellows who have long since ceased to do any good work are sent away at intervals, and more of them ought to be.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ An Indiana man has been put in prison because he refused to send his children to public schools. It happens that he and his wife chose to teach their children themselves. The father satisfied the court that his children were farther advanced than public school children of the same ages. Now, compulsory public school education may be all right, but there are times when the letter of a law kills. When things have come to such a pass that parents have no say about their children's bringing up it is time to call a halt. Besides, what inconsistency in having compulsory education laws when from far and wide goes up the cry of insufficient accommodations. Better that the authorities spend their energies in providing for the children that are sent to public schools than to ferret out isolated cases in which parents are teaching their children at home, and especially when the children are farther along than their mates whom city or town is schooling.—Boston Home Journal.

LATEST.

Fire at Wollastou.

The alarm at 2.57 this afternoon was for a fire at the house of Mr. Tabb at No. 200 Beale street. Damage slight.

LAWSON AFLOAT.

Now on Way to Boston with Big Cargo of Coal.

The seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, built at Quincy, left Philadelphia at 2 P. M. Wednesday with 7000 tons of coal. Thursday morning she was reported aground on the upper end of Cherry Island flats in the Delaware river, but not in a dangerous condition. Thursday afternoon at 3.40 she was floated without damage and started again for Boston. The Lawson is the largest schooner in the world, and many are watching her course daily.

The Hunting Season.

It is now getting on towards the last of October, and while hundreds of sportsmen are tramping the Maine woods in search of game, hundreds more are preparing for a trip into the same wilds.

The season thus far this year has been a remarkable one. The through trains have brought home daily a score or more deer, and more moose have been seen and shot this year than in several years past. Some grand specimens of the moose family have been brought out of the woods, and now that the snow has just begun to cover the earth, hunting for moose will be easier and more interesting.

Plenty and abundance is the cry of the sportsman who have returned. If you are going, send a two-cent stamp to the General Passenger Department, Boston & Maine Railroad, Boston, for their illustrated booklet "Fishing and Hunting."

Election Day.

A week from next Tuesday, Nov. 4, forty-two States will elect representatives to the Fifty-eighth Congress, 378 in all, the total membership having been increased by the reapportionment under the twelfth census to 386. Eight members, all republicans, have already been elected—four from Maine and two each from Oregon and Vermont. On the same day full tickets of State executive officers and legislatures will be elected in twenty-one States, minor executive officers in eleven, and legislatures in two. Amendments to the constitution will be submitted to the vote of the people in many States at the same time.

Wood—Perkins.

Mr. Charles H. Wood and Miss Sabra Perkins, two well known young people of East Milton, were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony Wednesday, at 8 P. M., by the Rev. Theodore I. Reese of the Milton Episcopal church.

Mr. Robert Wood, brother of the groom, acted as best man and Miss Lillian S. Perkins stood up with the bride.

The bride was prettily arrayed in Swiss muslin entrain, with veil and carried a bouquet of orange blossoms.

After a short wedding tour to New York, Philadelphia and Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Wood will be at home to friends at No. 5 Pierce street, Norfolk Downs, after December first.

Raceabout Class.

The 21-foot racing class will probably be revived. The Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts held a meeting Thursday to get the views of yachting men as to the revival. This class met with a great deal of success in 1898 and '99. There was quite a number of yachting men at the meeting and all were heartily in favor of the revival of the 21-foot raceabout class. It was decided to take no action on the matter until the views of the members of the Knockabout Association should be secured. If the Knockabout Association favors it, the Y. R. A. M. will provide for such a class of 21-footers.

On the Ticket.

When John P. Bigelow attempted to file his nomination papers at the State House last week as a candidate for Representative they were not allowed on account of some informality. He was, however, given time to amend them so that after all his papers went in and his name will appear on the official ballot.

Tenants of Henry H. Faxon Sign Petition to Board of Health.

Henry H. Faxon has not given up the idea of eventually receiving an appointment as city scavenger to look after his own property. This morning he presented Dr. Dion, secretary of the Board of Health, with a petition signed by fifty of his tenants, asking that he may be permitted to do that work upon his own property.

Dr. Dion said that he would bring the matter before the Board.

The petition was as follows, the place of business or residence of each:

To the Board of Health, Quincy, Mass.

We, the undersigned, tenants of Henry H. Faxon, petition your Board that he may be permitted to clean out vaults and cesspools, and remove refuse from the estates over which he has charge, believing it to be conducive to our welfare that said Faxon should have this privilege.

Speed or Power.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: Secretary Moody will probably refer to the general board, of which Admiral Dewey is president, the question of designs for the new armored cruisers, and should the board support the contention of Admiral Melville the ships will be built with greater speed power than is now provided.

Since it became known that the vessels were not to have the speed of the best ships of their class the point has been raised that they cannot legally be contracted for, as it is specifically provided by the act that they must have the "highest practicable speed for ships of their class."

The statement made to the President by Commander W. H. Beehler, recently naval attache at Berlin, and the best informed officer of the navy on the development of the German navy, is rather in conflict with the official information on file at the navy department respecting the comparative stength of the German and United States navies.

Commander Beehler is said to have told the President that the German navy is at least twice as strong as the American in actual fighting ships. Germany, he says, does not include in its list of ships, tugs, sailing craft and other vessels of no relative fighting value, while the United States in estimating its total tonnage, includes all classes.

Four New Warships.

A Washington dispatch of Thursday to the Boston Herald says: If the naval board on construction can prevent it, there will be no halt in the construction of new ships for the navy.

In an official report to Secretary Moody, the board urges authorization of the following:

Two battleships of 16,000 tons trial displacement, 18 knots speed; four 12-inch, eight 8-inch, 12 7-inch and 20 6-inch guns; two armored cruisers of 14,000 tons displacement, 22 knots speed; four 10-inch, 16 6-inch and 22 3-inch guns; two gunboats of 1050 tons displacement, 12 knots speed and six 4-inch rapid fire guns.

In framing this recommendation the board took into consideration the needs of the country, not only with respect to the defence of continental United States, but its dependencies.

A Good Shot.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnson returned Thursday evening from a two weeks' trip to Maine and New Hampshire. "Bob" had his gun with him on the trip and although some of the Sunshine club laughed at the idea of his trying to shoot anything, he has proved to them that he can shoot and shoot straight. As a result of his trip, the club will have an opportunity to see what bear meat tastes like, for he brought home two black bears, the skins of which are displayed at his market. Bob says he shot them himself and he would scorn to tell a lie about a little thing like that.

A concert under the auspices of the Wollaston Unitarian club is to be given next Wednesday, Oct. 29, at 7.45 o'clock in the Unitarian church. A fine concert is looked forward to as the programme included the Harvard Quartette, a reader and the harpist Miss Annie F. Sibby.

There will be a sale of useful and fancy articles at the Unitarian chapel, Wednesday afternoon and evening Oct. 29th from 3 until 10 o'clock. 3t

Ex-Female Prisoners.

Few Quincy women are aware that there is in this county a temporary Asylum for Discharged Female Prisoners which has for years done much good. The 39th annual meeting was held in the chapel of the home on Washington street, Dedham, Thursday afternoon. The laundry, where most of the inmates find employment, and the nursery, were the chief points of interest to the visitors. In the latter seven bright youngsters from 2 to 5 years old made friends of all. The Rev. F. B. Allen of Boston presided.

The treasurer's report showed the year's receipts as $12,160.23 and the expenditures $11,887.17. As the home has not yet secured its winter coal it is expected the balance will be needed for that purpose.

These statistics were announced: On Sept. 30, 1902, there were at the asylum of women, 25; of children, 7; total number of women during the year, 106; of children, 21; of inmates, 129; average number of inmates, 35; of the women 27 were sent to positions; 12 were sent to provide for themselves; 9 were sent to other institutious; 22 were returned to friends, and nine left without permission.

Of the children, the largest number at one time was 12, and the smallest six. One child died.

In the 39 years of its existence the home has sheltered 2109 women. In the past 14 years its agent, Miss S. D. Nickerson of Boston, has sent to it almost 900 women and 79 children.

Mrs. Charles W. Dexter of Boston was elected president, and Miss Annie E. Wilson of 161 Harvard street, Brookline, treasurer.

Mother Jones Reception.

"Mother" Jones, widely known as the friend of the miners, was given a reception at Music hall, Thursday evening, by the Socialist club of Quincy. There was a large attendance and considerable enthusiasm. Levi H. Turner, Socialist, presided and speeches were made by Mother Jones and Mrs. L. H. Merrifield of Boston. During the evening music was furnished by an orchestra and there was selections by the Granite City quartette.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grips; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

TODAY'S COURT.

Home Missionary Society.

The annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Boston South Baptist association was held at the Wollaston Baptist church on Thursday. Among the speakers were Rev. J. A. Francis, Mrs. G. B. Coleman, and Miss Matilda Brown of Boston, Mrs. Earles of Newton, Mrs. A. J. Hughes and others. Mrs. Blanchard of Dorchester and Mrs. Francis of Boston led the devotional services. Encouraging reports were received from the different circles, and letters from Cuba, New Mexico and Porto Rico were read by Mrs. Manning of Wollaston and Mrs. Stewart and Miss Newton of Boston.

Two Maxwells.

Councillor Maxwell who is a candidate in this district for re-election, spoke at Cochato hall, Braintree Thursday evening. He warned voters against an independent candidate of the same name, a trick of the Democrats.

NOMINATIONS.

Too Late to File More for Caucuses.

Papers at Large are Not Opened.

No Contests in Some Wards for Councilmen.

It is now too late to file nominations for the Republican Municipal caucuses to be held Nov. 5. No candidate for Mayor will have his name on the caucus tickets unless he has already filed his nomination in due form. The same is true of candidates for the City Council, either at large or by wards, and for the School Committee, either at large or by wards.

The nominations for Mayor and other candidates at-large were filed with Secretary Langelier and will not be opened until Saturday evening, when the Republican City Committee will meet at headquarters at 7 o'clock.

Both Charles M. Bryant and Elisha Packard have filed nomination papers, and it is believed that there are no others. This is as the "anti-Bryant" men would have it—a straight issue, Bryant or anti-Bryant.

Some of the Ward Committees opened papers filed with them last night, while others did not, there being some misunderstanding. Few of the nominations have een madbe public.

There was no contest in Ward One as but three gentlemen filed papers. They were: Lewis Bass, Jr., Andrew A. Meyer and Charles H. Hardwick.

In Ward Two papers were filed by five candidates. Some question arose over some of the papers and the committee decided not to make them public until after their meeting next Monday. In the meantime the question will be brought before the meeting of the City Committee on Saturday night.

In Ward Three the papers were not opened Thursday night but will be opened tonight at 7 o'clock.

There will be no contest in Ward Four over ward councilmen, as but three names were filed. They were Willard B. Jones, James F. Edwards and William S. Murray. For School Committee from the ward the name of Rev. Carl F. Hendrickson was filed.

In Ward Six four candidates filed papers for councilmen. The three present members—Louis F. R. Langelier, Charles A. Hadlock and William Gasset, also John Moir. Papers nominating Frederick J. Peirce for school committee man from the Ward were also filed.

They Never Imbibe.

The Ona Indian is deserving of a higher place than he has hitherto occupied in men's esteem if but for one trait. He forms the almost solitary exception among aboriginal tribes in refusing to touch alcohol in any form. This policy of total abstinence is rigidly adhered to in the face of cold, hunger and illness and even during the excitement of ceremonial rites. Whatever his faults may be, judged from the white man's standard, the Ona of South America has at least the saving virtue of manliness. His ideal is one of bodily prowess, hardihood and endurance.—Scottish American.

Their Fate.

The late Dr. Talmage once called on his lawyer and found two of his parishioners there on legal business of a private nature.

"Ah, doctor," called the lawyer in greeting, "good morning! Here are two of your flock. May I ask without impertinence if you regard them as black sheep or white?"

"I don't know as yet," replied Talmage dryly, "whether they're black or white, but I'm certain that if they remain here long they'll be fleeced."

Very Sad.

"Yes, it's very sad."

"How is that."

"Why, he always held that to train a wife properly you should catch her while she's young. So he did."

"Well?"

"Well, it seems that she had the same idea about a husband, and now there's a crisscross of training ideas that is simply home wrecking."—Chicago Post.

YOUNGSTERS NO MATCH

For Justice Harlan When He Entered Students' Pugilistic Arena

Washington, Oct. 24.—Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court, who is a member of the faculty of the Columbian University law school in this city, interfered and prevented a class fight between the freshmen and sophomores. Justice Harlan is a giant in stature and, although 69 years of age, he is still vigorous and active, golf being one of his daily exercises.

The anticipated contest was the result of the announcement of the freshman class that it would hold its first meeting in jurisprudence hall. This announcement acted as a suggestive challenge to the sophomores to break up the meeting if possible. After the regular lecture of the evening, the first year men undertook to open the meeting, when the sophomores made a charge against the door of the hall. At this point Justice Harlan appeared and ordered the combat to cease. The sophomores paused for a moment, but were evidently not disposed to obey the order, for they immediately began a second assault.

It was then that the eminent jurist took a personal hand in the fray. He reached over the heads of the assaulting party and, seizing the leader of the forces by the collar, dragged him from the pile. The jurist then directed the second year men to disperse, with the desired effect.

People Disagree With Government

Copenhagen, Oct. 24.—In the course of a speech in the folkething yesterday Premier Deuntzer expressed regret at the fact that the decision of the landsthing in rejecting the Danish West Indies treaty made it appear that Denmark was a country which did not keep its word. The present ministry, he explains, was not responsible for the negotiations relating to the Danish West Indies. A strong public sentiment is developing in favor of the dissolution of the landsthing and an appeal to the people, but the government shows no disposition in that direction.

Tom Johnson After "Traitors"

Cincinnati, Oct. 24.—Tom L. Johnson, candidate for the presidency in 1904, created quite a sensation here last night by attacking certain elements in his own party, especially John R. McLean and Lewis G. Bernard, chairman of the Democratic committee of Hamilton county. His references to them as traitors were as bitter as his language could make them. He not only read them out of the party, but challenged them to meet him on the charges that he made politically against them.

Schooner's Keel Torn Off

Sydney, C. B., Oct. 24.—Captain Grandy and 15 of the crew of the Newfoundland fishing schooner Ruby reached here yesterday and reported that their vessel struck on Cow shoals, near Port Morien. The keel of the vessel was torn off and she soon sank. The crew lost everything.

Fire In Oregon's Bunkers

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—The Bulletin says that a fire has been burning in the coal bunkers of the battleship Oregon for three days. A board of survey has been summoned to examine the vessel and it will be some time before she will be able to depart for Manila.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." sold by all druggists.

A POINT FOR MOLINEUX

Prosecution Cannot Use Barnet Letters as Evidence

COURT OF APPEALS DECISION

Would Be Violated by Their Admission Other Than For the Purpose of Comparison of Handwriting—Testimony by Defendant Recalled

New York, Oct. 24.—A strong point was scored by the defense in the trial of Roland B. Molineux yesterday when Justice Lambert ruled out the Barnet letters.

Nicholas A. Hockman, who kept letter boxes at 257 West Forty-Second street, tsetified in the previous trial that Molineux rented a letter box from him and received 20 or more letters addressed "H. C. Barnet." As soon as Mr. Osborne asked him about these letters, ex-Governor Black objected.

Mr. Osborne attempted to explain and again counsel for the defense objected. "I object," he said, "to counsel making an explanation in the hearing of the jury."

"I exclude the evidence," ruled the court.

"I think I can conince your hono'," Mr. Osborne said, "that the letters are competent."

Counsel approached the bench and began to speak in an undertone. "Never mind," said the court, "I remember all about it. Under the decision of the court of appeals the Barnet series of letters were excluded as improper as evidence. Despite that ruling I was willing to admit those letters as standard of comparison in handwriting, because I did not regard such admission as a violation of the court of appeals decision, but any further use of them would violate the ruling and I will not permit it."

Mr. Osborne made another attempt to get the letters in evidence. He called Henry C. Lockwood from the general postoffice to identify the stamp and the cancellation marks of the poison package wrapper. Lockwood said they proved beyond a doubt that the package the wrapper held was mailed at the general postoffice. Then Mr. Osborne showed him a bundle of the Barnet letter envelopes and asked him to tell by the cancellation marks at what time they were mailed.

"I object," put in the defense.

"I have the right to show," Mr. Osborne said, "that this defendant had the opportunity to mail these letters; to raise the point that they were mailed at the hour at which I can prove he passed the general postoffice each day."

"Excluded," ruled the court.

Mr. Osborne read the postmarks on the Barnet envelope to the witness and asked him what they indicated. Again Mr. Black interposed and Mr. Osborne sat down at the single word "excluded" from the court.

Matthias Dodd, from Tiffany & Co., testified that the defendant had an account there in December, 1898. He identified the small card envelope and pasteboard box which were in the poison package and said there is no way of tracing such goods to any particular account. Like envelopes are given free to any one who makes a purchase and asks for an envelope in which to enclose a card.

Mr. Weeks announced that it was conceded that a coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Adams was held in February, 1899, and that Roland B. Molineux appeared voluntarily as a witness. The concession acknowledged, Mr. Osborne read to the jury that portion of the testimony then given which related to the troubles between Molineux and Cornish.

Mr. Osborne also read, by virtue of a ruling of the court, the statement Molineux made in the coroner's court that he had never made any cyanide of mercury, and never had seen it used in dry colors. He supposed he could make it if he had the formula. Before the coroner Molineux also said that he could not recall ever seeing any of the blue paper with the interlaced crescent crests and had never used such paper. During the previous trial and again yesterday Molineux's counsel admitted that Molineux owned such paper.

When Mr. Weeks had read the result of his cross-examination of Molineux in the coroner's court, an adjournment was taken until today.

Rioters Defy the Law

Paris, Oct. 24.—Strikers at Dunkirk invaded the law courts yesterday and interrupted business there. They were charged repeatedly by cavalry on the square in front of the law courts. The rioters assailed the soldiers with bricks and scrap iron. A lieutenant of cavalry and all the commissaries of police present were wounded. Two additional regiments of infantry have arrived here.

Will First Consult Colleagues

St. John, Oct. 24.—Premier Bond of Newfoundland passed through St. John yesterday on his way home from Montreal. Asked as to the negotiations for a treaty of reciprocity between the United States and Newfoundland, he said: "Until I reach home and confer with my colleagues my lips are sealed."

REMARKABLE LAKE.

A Body of Water With a Roof of Solidified Salt.

A lake with a salt roof isn't frozen salt, and it isn't underground. On the contrary, this remarkable lake may be seen at any time during the year, fully exposed, being even at its best when the sun is shining directly upon it. This wonderful body of water is one of the saltest of the salt lakes and is situated near Obdorsk, Siberia. The lake is nine miles wide and seventeen long and within the memory of man was not entirely roofed over by the salt deposit. Originally evaporation played the most prominent part in coating the lake over with salt, but at the present time the salt springs which surround it are adding fast to the thickness of the crust.

In the long ago rapid evaporation of the lake's waters left great salt crystals floating on the surface. In course of time these caked together. Thus the waters were finally entirely covered. In 1878 the lake found an underground outlet into the river Obi, which lowered its surface about three feet. The salt crust was so thick, however, that it retained its old level and now presents the curious spectacle of a salt roofed lake. The salt coat increases six inches in thickness every year. The many islands with which the lake is studded are said to act as braces and to help keep the arched salt crust in position.

Unique Hotel Rules.

Following are the rules and regulations posted in a certain hotel in Illinois:

Board, 50 cents per square foot; meals extra; breakfast at 6, supper at 7.

Guests are requested not to speak to the dumb waiter; guests wishing to get up without being called can have self rising flour for lunch.

The office is convenient to all connections; horses to hire, 25 cents a day.

Guests wishing to do a little driving will find hammer and nails in the closet.

If the room gets too warm, open the window and see the fire escape.

If you are fond of athletics and like good jumping, lift the mattress and see the bed spring.

If the lights go out, take a soda—that is light enough for any man.

Any one troubled with nightmare will find a halter in the barn.

Don't worry about paying your bill; the house is supported by its foundation.—Detroit Free Press.

Modifying It.

Mrs. C. was horrified to discover that her little seven-year-old daughter was acquiring the habit of alluding very freely to the devil, and at last she told her determinedly that a repetition of the obnoxious word would bring severe punishment.

The child knew that her mother was in earnest, so she set a seal on her lips. At last she seemed to have forgotten it, but one Sunday Mrs. C., who had been too ill to go to church, asked her if she could tell what the minister had preached about in his sermon.

"Oh, yes'm," she answered. "He preached about our Lord going up into the mountain and being tempted by—by—by the gentleman who keeps hell!"

She didn't intend to run any risks of being punished.—Francis E. Wadleigh in Lippincott's.

A Long Green One.

"Bribem's interested in that bill you voted for," said the first councilman.

"Sure," replied the other. "Don't you suppose I know that?"

"Did he ask you personally to vote for it?"

"Well—er—he just handed me a note."—Kennebec Journal.

Repudiates It.

"Where did that child get her manners?"

"Not from my side of the house."

"Why not?"

"Because she hasn't any."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In writing a letter the great genius is the one who remembers what should be left out.—Exchange.

There is no crime. All crime is ignorance. Its remedy is education.—Freedom.

AFTER EQUINOX

The season has changed. Cold winds, damp air, coughs, colds, grippe, pneumonia—that's the order of events.

This is the time of year for those with weak lungs or a tendency to heavy colds to fortify themselves against exposure by taking Scott's Emulsion.

Regular doses give great protection to the throat and lungs. What's the use of staying near the edge when such easy treatment will keep you out of danger.

For obstinate colds, for old coughs, for catarrh and bronchitis Scott's Emulsion is a standard remedy. You can feel the effects of even a small bottle.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

VICTORY FOR OPEN DOOR

In Agreement For Military Evacuation of Shanghai

UNITED STATES DIPLOMACY

Results In Bringing About Conditions Which, Though Not a Direct Party to Negotiations, Gives Us Commercial Equality In China

Washington, Oct. 24.—The news of the agreement by France, Great Britain and Germany to finally evacuate Shanghai was gladly received at the state department. The United States government some time ago, at the instance of the Chinese government, begun quietly but persistently to bring pressure to bear upon the powers concerned in the occupation of the place to evacuate it in conformity with the stipulations of the treaty of Pekin.

Not having participated directly in the occupation, it was necessary for the United States to move discreetly in approaching the other nations on this subject, but the advances were well received and it soon appeared that the only difficulty in bringing about the desired evacuation was the indisposition of each of the occupying powers to take the initiative.

The last to hold out was England, and as lately as last week it was stated that she was objecting simply for the purpose of making sure of getting a fair share of certain important trade advantages in the exploitation of the Yang Tse valley. It is gathered from the Shanghai advices of yesterday that this object has now been secured and it is, of course, certain, notwithstanding the fact that the United States does not sign the treaty of evacuation, that we will participate in these advantages.

The negotiations have brought about an important extension of the open door policy, as urged by Secretary Hay. The agreement affects not only Shanghai, but the entire Yang Tse Kiang valley, which the powers are seeking to develop for commercial purposes. The date of the evacuation is still open, but it will undoubtedly be accomplished by Jan. 1. About 1200 troops will participate in the evacuation, each power having furnished about an equal number of troops since the Chinese crisis became acute.

The first stages of the negotiations resulted in an agreement on two points—the first, favorable to the evacuation; the second, that in case any power intended to resume the military occupancy of Shanghai the other powers were equally entitled to resume. Germany then proposed that China be asked for assurances of equality of treatment of the powers. China gave these assurances.

Although the nature of the commercial equality is not specified, the agreement is that the military and other rights of the powers shall be on an equal footing. The United States is not a direct party to the negotiations, but has been fully advised of the intentions of the three powers. At one stage of the negotiations Secretary Hay advised Foreign Minister Delcasse of France, through Ambassador Porter, that the United States government was in full sympathy with the plan and hoped for an early agreement on the subject. The date of the evacuation of Shanghai is expected to be settled in a few days.

Russia's Permission Necessary

Pekin, Oct. 25.—Owing to the continuance of brigandage in that portion of Manchuria evacuated by Russia, China has asked Russia's permission to dispatch 1000 soldiers thither in order to suppress the disorders. To this request the Russian legation has replied that the matter must be referred to Port Arthur, which will necessitate considerable delay.

Georgia Lynching Bee

Tallapoosa, Ga., Oct. 24.—Ben Brown, a negro, charged with having attempted to criminally assault Mrs. Henry Dees, a white woman, was taken from the county jail here last night by a mob of 300 men and lynched a few hours after his attempted crime. Troops had been ordered from Atlanta, but did not arrive until an hour and a half after the negro had been hanged.

Early Call For Convention

Indianapolis, Oct. 24.—James Wood, on behalf of the business committee of the Quinquiennial Friends' meeting, last evening called a meeting of all Christian denominations to meet at Washington March 1, 1903, to discuss ways and means to fight the liquor traffic.

Shut Out of Germany

Berlin, Oct. 24.—The government issued a decree yesterday forbidding the circulation in Germany of a Polish paper published in Pittsburg, Pa., because it had been convicted of contumacy by a Posen court twice within a year for objectionable utterances.

Switzerland Is Worrying

Geneva, Oct. 24.—Great anxiety is felt here at Germany's decision to fortify the entire German-Swiss frontier with a line of forts. It is expected that Switzerland will follow suit.

A kindly nurse shall come some day
To us, with solemn mien, and say,
"'Tis time to go to bed and sleep."
And we, mayhap, shall sigh or weep
To leave our playthings and our play,
And pray a longer while to stay.
But she, unheeding our alarms,
Shall fold us close within her arms,
Until upon her mother breast
We sink at last to sleep and rest,
And wake to read in Angel eyes
Our welcome sweet to Paradise!

Heath---Flowers.

A very pretty home wedding took place Thursday evening, when Mr. Samuel T. Heath and Mrs. Mary E. Flowers were united in marriage by Rev. E. N. Hardy at the residence of the bride, 12 Thompson street, Quincy Point, in the presence of about fifty relatives and friends of the happy couple.

The bride, who wore a beautiful blue and white silk, with bodice of lace and carried Bride roses, was attended by Miss Belle Gillis of Watertown, as bridesmaid, who was also charmingly attired in a delicate blue silk.

The groom was assisted by Mr. George J. McNaught of Boston, as best man. Both the bridesmaid and best man joined the bridal couple in receiving at a reception held immediately after the ceremony. A wedding supper was served later.

The house was tastefully decorated with palms and ferns and during the evening frappe was served.

Many beautiful and valuable tokens of esteem were received from friends.

Mr. Heath holds a responsible position at the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., and during his year or more residence in Quincy, to which place he came from Baltimore, Md., he has gained the admiration of a large circle of friends and fellow employes, who join in best wishes for the future happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Heath.

After a tour of the cities of New York, Baltimore and Washington Mr. and Mrs. Heath will be at home to friends after December first at their elegant new home at Quincy Point, recently built for them.

Coal Trust Monopoly.

The coal operators, after the resumption of work and the settlement of the labor troubles, are going to make the coal business as close a monopoly as the oil business now is.

The anthracite men will do this on practically the same lines as the standard oil people have followed, except that there is no competition to be crushed out, as in the oil trade.

The trust will have selling agents who will no longer be independent business firms but will be little more than clerks of the Pennsylvania trust.

They will make prices and sell coal only on such terms as the trust fixes beforehand.—Boston Advertiser.

THE UNITY CLUB.

Papers on the Internal Heat of the Earth.

The Unity Club meeting Friday evening brought out a large audience eager to enjoy the first of the winter's programs. President Parlin introduced Mr. C. F. Harper, principal of the High School, who had charge of the program.

The subject, "The Internal heat of the Earth," was divided into three topics, "The origin and formation of the earth," "Earthquakes," and "Volcanoes."

The first paper was ably treated by Mr. Smith of the High school, who gave a hasty summary of the various theories advanced by philosophers during the centuries, of the origin of matter. Speculation, he said, was of no use, we must use the labrotory method, comparing the beginning of things with present conditions. He showed how meteorites are similiar in substance to rock formations on the earth, thus proving that the bodies in space are of the same nature as the earth.

He explained at some length the nebular hypothesis as developed by La Place and Herschel, the successors of its discoverer Kant, the German philosopher. This theory holds that the planetery system was caused by the cooling and compression of an original nebular, which threw off as it cooled successive rings that retained the motion imparted to them by the parent body. Thus we have the planets revolving round the sun and moons moving round the planets.

As the earth cooled a crust was formed, leaving the interior in a more or less liquid condition under high pressure. The atmosphere was probably heavier than at present and permeated with the carbonic acid that later was used in plant life.

Mr. Charles Sampson took the subject of "Volcanoes," showing how the earth's crust is broken up by internal heat expanding at certain points.

In a clear exposition he explained how force and heat were necessary for volcanic action. Two theories regarding volcanoes are the internal fluidity theory and the chemical theory. The former is the more probable, though the latter has many adherents.

There are two kinds of volcanoes: the quiet from which only lava flows in a stream, and the explosive. Many of the former are found in Iceland, and Kralsatoa and Kilauea in the Pacific are the largest of the latter, bursting with force enough to send ashes for miles. Volcanoes are found usually near the sea and the Pacific shores are noted for their many volcanoes.

In the absence of the regular essayist, Mr. Harper spoke on "Earthquakes," showing how they originated and how the attendant phenomena.

Summing up, so to speak, President Parlin showed how volcanoes benefited mankind by giving carbon dioxide to plant life on which man depends for life.

The music was in charge of Mrs. C. K. Crane. Miss Ernestine Litchfield accompanied by Miss Hatch, sang "Beauty's Eyes" by Tosti and "Thou art like a Flower" by Litt, in a pleasing manner.

The second number of the Flashlight proved a great treat, the stories being heartily enjoyed by all. The attendance was one hundred.

LONE ROBBER'S DARING

Held Up a Train at a Lonely Point In Montana

THE ENGINEER SHOT DEAD

For Refusing to Heed Command to Stop the Train—Express Safe Blown Open and Robbed and Mail Plundered—No Resistance Offered

Missoula, Mont., Oct. 25.—An eastbound passenger train on the Northern Pacific was held up near Drummond, 45 miles from this city, and Engineer O'Neill was killed. The train, which included mail, baggage and express cars and nine coaches, arrived at Missoula at 10:20 p. m. and proceeded eastward after a short delay at this station. It arrived after midnight at a place two miles west of Drummond. Here the train was signalled to stop and the engineer slowed up. While doing so, he saw a man creeping toward him over the tender. The man, who was armed, called to O'Neill to stop the train instantly. The engineer took in the situation at once, and, pulling open the throttle, tried to start the train at full speed. The robber divined his purpose and fired at him. The shot took instant effect and the engineer fell dead at his post.

The robber then proceeded to rifle the express and mail cars. He plundered the regular mail and blew open the safe in the express car, which was wrecked by the explosion. The amount of plunder which he secured is not known at present but it is supposed to be large.

The excitement on the train was intense. The sudden stoppage of the train, followed soon by the explosion, spread alarm among the train hands and the passengers. The darkness of the night and the loneliness of the place added to the general scenes of terror.

Word of the attack was sent to Drummond, whence it was telegraphed to Deer Lodge, about 50 miles away. Bloodhounds were sent at once and steps were taken to keep vigilant watch for the robber.

It was assumed that at least eight men were engaged in the hold-up, but the latest advices are that one man alone perpetrated the murder and robbery.

The robber boasted that he was the man who took part in the hold-up of the Southern Pacific train near Portland, Ore., about a year ago. He made this boast to the train hands to terrorize them while he employed them to run the train four miles to a point two miles east of Drummond. He declared that he would be hard to catch, as he had a horse in the timber.

The Northern Pacific has offered a reward of $5000 for delivery, dead or alive, of the train robber who killed O'Neill.

The mask worn by the bandit was found on a mountain trail two miles from the scene of the hold-up and after giving the hounds the scent of the mask, the animals took up the trail which was then about eight hours old.

The Dennis Inquest

Washington, Oct. 25.—A coroner's inquest was begun yesterday over the remains of Mrs. Ada G. Dennis, who died Wednesday as the result of the mysterious assault committed upon her 10 months ago. Nine witnesses in all were examined, but there was not one word spoken that threw any light on the mystery. The inquest was then adjourned without day, pending the recovery of Richard Cole, the colored porter, one of the principal witnesses, who is ill.

Reward For Service Rendered

Liverpool, Oct. 25.—Mr. Arnold-Forster, financial secretary of the admiralty, in a speech last night at the Conservative club's dinner, said he regarded the agreement between the government and the Cunard Steamship company as payment of value received for protection in time of war, and that the proposed Cunard steamers were intended to possess special qualities not obtainable on a purely commercial basis of agreement.

May Thank United States For It

Havana, Oct. 25.—Dr. Finlay, chief of the sanitation department, says the death rate here in September was 17.86 per thousand. With the end of September a full year was completed since a case of yellow fever originated in this city. This is an event which stands unparalleled in the history of the oldest physician here.

Sweden Facing a Famine

Stockholm, Oct. 25.—The utter failure of the harvest has caused great distress in northern Sweden. Famine is approaching, all the stocks of grain from previous years having been exhausted, and an early and severe winter aggravates the destitution.

Rebels Dispersed by Snow

Sofia, Oct. 25.—Snowfalls in the mountains are contributing to the dispersal of the Macedonian insurgents. Leaders of bands who have sought refuge in Bulgarian territory admit that the Turkish troops have generally been victorious.

Mended Heart Stopped Beating

New York, Oct. 25.—The almost unprecedented operation, stitching up a wound in the heart, performed on Mrs. Annie Kingsley, did not result in saving the woman's life. She died yesterday at a hospital.

MYSTERY OF THE WOODS

Companion of Boy Found Dead May Know Something About It

Laconia, N. H., Oct. 25.—The body of Ara Bunker, 17 years old, was found yesterday afternoon in the woods half a mile from Belmont village on the Hollow route road to Canterbury with a charge of birdshot in his back, just below the left lung. The shot had evidently been fired at short range. Bunker and a companion, Israel Willard, 13, went gunning on Wednesday, but the latter returned at night, accounting for Bunker's absence by saying he had left him in the woods, and that Bunker, who was an orphan, had stated that he was going to run away.

Willard refuses to throw any light upon the case or to tell, if he knows, how Bunker met his death. Both lads carried single-barrelled shotguns, and both guns were empty, Bunker's being found on the ground in front of him.

By direction of County Solicitor Veazey, Willard will be arrested and brought here, pending the result of the coroner's inquest. The body of Bunker was removed to the home of his grandfather, John H. Fifield, awaiting further investigation.

Against Fisher and Betts

Boston, Oct. 25.—It took the jury in the superior civil court only five minutes yesterday to render a verdict for the defendant in the suits brought by John M. Fisher and Frederick E. Betts to recover damages against Henry N. Sawyer for alleged abuse of judicial process in causing them to be arrested in a civil suit against them for a printing bill of $703, on the alleged ground that they intended to leave the state. The plaintiffs, whose business was recently checked by the federal authorities, each sought to recover $5000 damages from Sawyer.

Berlin's Dynamiting Case

Clinton, Mass., Oct. 25.—State Detective Murray arrived here yesterday to take up the investigation of the Berlin dynamiting outrage of Wednesday night. The Berlin House, a well known hostelry in the town of Berlin, was partially wrecked by an explosion, said to be dynamite, by some man whose identity, it is hinted, the police well know. It is hinted that the man who committed the outrage was merely piqued over being refused admittance to the hotel or over not receiving what he considered proper attention while there.

Anti-Imperialists For Democrats

Boston, Oct. 25.—There were anti-imperialists of fervor and influence in Faneuil hall when the noon rally of their faction took place yesterday. The meeting passed resolutions virtually endorsing Democratic candidates as favorable to the anti-imperialistic cause. In attendance the gathering was enough to fill all the floor seats with a triple row of listeners standing at the rear of the hall.

Wants to Discuss Trusts

Boston, Oct. 25.—John C. Chase, nominee for governor by the Socialist party, has sent to Messrs. Bates and Gaston, candidates for the same office on the Republican and Democratic tickets respectively, a challenge for joint debate on the trust question before the people of Boston on a date prior to election convenient to all.

Despondent Over Being Robbed

Chester, Vt., Oct. 25.—Last week Albert E. Reed went to Walpole, N. H., and Bellows Falls, and in returning stated that he had lost a $50 gold watch, $50 in money and an overcoat. He felt despondent over his loss, and that night he took paris green, lingering until last night, when he died. He was a Civil war veteran and was 65 years old.

Rearrested For Stanton Murder

Dover, Me., Oct. 25.—George Mills, alias Edward Ballard, arrived here last night in charge of Sheriff Ireland and was rearrested on the charge of murdering Martin Stanton in the woods. Ballard, as he now calls himself, will be given a hearing next week, at the completion of Coroner Martin's inquest at Milo.

Trolley and Freight Cars Collide

Portland, Me., Oct. 25.—A trolley car collided with two freight cars that were being backed over a crossing at Cumberland Mills last evening and Motorman Fleck received painful injuries. The 40 passengers were considerably shaken up, although but two of them were hurt.

Irish Envoys at Lowell

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 25.—Over 2000 persons last night listened to patriotic speeches by Michael Davitt and John Dillon, M. P. Five hundred dollars was pledged towards the Irish cause, and resolutions denouncing the English methods of landlordism in Ireland were adopted.

Bank Embezzler Again Convicted

Louisville, Oct. 25.—The federal grand jury last night rendered a verdict of guilty in the case of J. M. McKnight, former president of the defunct German National bank of Louisville, on the charge of embezzling the bank's funds. McKnight was twice convicted and sentenced on this charge and in another trial there was a hung jury. The United States circuit court of appeals set aside both convictions on technical grounds.

Priest and Others Sentenced

Brest, Oct. 25.—Abbe Salaun, parish priest at Lesneven, was sentenced yesterday to four months' imprisonment, and several other persons, including three women, were given various terms in prison for acts committed in connection with the resistance to the closing last August of unauthorized congregationist schools.

SILVER BOTTLE HOLDER

Sent to Cornish Was Not Bought by Molineux

POISON PACKAGE ADDRESS,

Cornish and Barnet Letters and Letters Written by Defendant Declared by Handwriting Expert to Have Been Written by One Hand

New York, Oct. 25.—The defense in the Molineux trial again claimed an advantage yesterday when Miss Emma Miller, the woman who sold the silver bottle-holder which accompanied the poison package sent to Harry Cornish, testified positively that Molineux was not the purchaser.

The jurors continued their examination of the letter exhibits. There are 68 of them in all, of which 53 are the conceded writings of Molineux and the others are the poison package wrapper address, three Cornish letters on interlaced crescent-crested paper, one of them the Harpster letter, six "Barnet" letters admitted as standards of comparison only, and five envelopes.

Much of the day's session was devoted to the examination of Mr. Tyrrell, a handwriting expert. To Mr. Osborne's first question Mr. Tyrrell said he had examined the three Cornish letters and the address of the poison package wrapper and found that all those writings were made by the same hand.

"Have you compared the address on the wrapper, exhibit A, with the Barnet letter?" "I have. I find that one hand wrote all."

"Now tell us, in your own way, how you reached that conclusion?"

The invitation was the signal for the erection of a large easel and blackboard near the witness chair and in plain view of the jury. Mr. Tyrrell took a large sheet of paper and was pinning it to the board when Mr. Black protested. "What do you expect to do?" Justice Lambert asked the witness.

"I intend to illustrate the writings to show how I made my comparison and deduced my conclusions."

"Excluded," ruled the court.

At counsel's request Mr. Tyrrell explained how he made his comparison and the jury, photographs in hand, followed his talk.

"Look at exhibit A, (the poison package wrapper) and tell us what are the peculiarities of the handwriting," said Mr. Osborne.

"It is a disguised handwriting."

Tyrrell pointed out the similarity of certain characteristics in the writing of the poison package and the Harpster letter. He found like peculiarities in the writing of the other Cornish letters and of the Barnet letters that convinced him all were the work of the same hand.

District Attorney Jerome made his first public appearance in the case at this point by explaining to the court how much plainer the witness' demonstration would be if he were permitted to use the blackboard.

Justice Lambert shook his head.

Mr. Tyrrell declared again that the address on the poison package and the Barnet and Cornish letters were written by the same hand and then counsel got the witness to say he had compared the disputed writings with the writings admitted to have been made by the defendant. He declared that one hand wrote them all.

"Now, your honor," said Mr. Osborne, "I want this witness to show on the blackboard the similarity of handwriting he found."

Justice Lambert ruled that while the witness could not use the blackboard demonstration at this time, he might compare the different standards of handwriting. Mr. Tyrrell went on to pick out single letters in the different writings which, he said, are in every instance that they occur, exactly similar. The witness said he found the same peculiarities in all the conceded handwritings of the defendant.

The jury seemed much impressed with Mr. Tyrrell's manifestation and followed every word he said and every movement he made as he picked out letter after letter in the poison package address and found its counterpart in one or more of the conceded writings of the defendant.

While Mr. Tyrrell was testifying Mr. Black protested at the waste of time. "I think," he said in an audible voice to Mr. Osborne, "the expert testimony should be limited to six months."

"I'll attend to that," said the court somewhat sharply, and Mr. Black, who evidently had not intended his remark for the court's ear, sat down abashed.

Tyrrell was still on his direct examination when the court adjourned until Monday morning.

To Give Big Order For Guns

Washington, Oct. 25.—General Crozier, chief of ordnance, expects to place orders at once for the manufacture of the new three-inch guns to supply the field artillery. It will require 180 of these new guns to supply the regular artillery as now organized. It is expected that an additional number will be made to supply an emergency.

Uprising Headed Off

Tangier, Oct. 25.—The sultan's vigorous action in dealing with the murderer of Missionary Cooper was due to the discovery of a plot to murder all the Europeans in Fez. This plot would have been carried out by a mob rising had the sultan shown any weakness or hesitation.

Burial Alive.

Though it is possible that cases of burial of living persons may still occur, fortunately they are more rare than in former times. Even the doctor's orders against interment were not always obeyed, for the Gentleman's Magazine of 1751 relates the case of Richard Carson of Hay, Herefordshire, England, who was supposed to have died, but a doctor declared that Carson still lived and ordered that he was not to be buried. His relatives paid no heed to the injunction, and the body was committed to the grave next day. A person passing through the churchyard heard a noise and prevailed on the clerk to open the grave, where the supposed corpse was found in a profuse sweat and bleeding at the nose. Unfortunately the man was beyond recovery and soon died.

The Llama.

In Bolivia, one of the highest inhabitated countries on the globe—La Paz, the capital, being 12,000 feet above the sea level—much use is made of that graceful and invaluable pack animal, the llama, which will travel farther and with even less food than the burro, but will not carry more than 150 pounds. The llama in some respects resembles the camel, kneeling in camel fashion to receive its load, and it will not rise if more than 150 pounds are placed on its back; moreover, the weight must be evenly distributed over its back and sides.

Grapes.

"Grapes dissolve and dislodge gravel and calculi," says the doctor. They bring the stomach and bowels to a healthy condition. Even the consumptive finds new life in them and should take grape juice by the tumblerful daily, as it makes new, rich blood. It builds up the tissues and feeds starved nerves. It is also cleansing.

Lightning Rapidity.

It is absolutely impossible for us to conceive of the rapidity and brilliancy of lightning. It has been estimated that a flash occupies less than one-millionth part of a second. As one-tenth of a second is needed for the full effect of any light upon the eye, we get only a very faint idea of the brilliancy of the flash.

TOTAL OF 100,000 TONS

Output of Mines Shows a Substantial Increase

BETTER FEELING PREVAILS

Between Workmen and Employes—All Union Men In the Lehigh and Schuylkill Region to Be Re-employed—Busy Times For Mitchell

Wilkesbarre, Oct. 25.—There were 22 more mines in operation in the anthracite region yesterday than on Thursday and the output will be close to 100,000 tons. This is as near as can be estimated. From reports received the total output Thursday did not exceed 75,000 tons. When in full operation the mines employ in every capacity about 145,000 men and boys. Of this number it is estimated that 82,000 were at work yesterday. A more amicable feeling prevails between employer and employe. The non-union men, despite what may be said to the contrary, are slowly being displaced at many of the mines by the old employes.

The work of clearing up those mines which are filled with debris from falls is pushed forward as rapidly as possible and the fact that they are not in readiness to operate is a great disappointment to the mine owners. Ex-Congressman Williams, one of the largest individual operators in the Wyoming region, says his mines will not be in readiness to resume before next week, but he will take all his old employes, including steam men, back, because they have served him faithfully in the past. The trouble with the individual operators in the Lehigh region is expected to blow over in a day or two and it is said here on good authority that all collieries in the Lehigh and Schuylkill region that are in condition to mine will resume next Monday and that all the union miners will be re-employed.

The imported workman is a decidedly minus quantity. Superintendent Rose of the Delaware and Hudson company, which operates 30 places, says he does not know of a single "import" still in the company's employ. The companies are not dismissing any non-union men, but the most careful inquiry fails to disclose a single instance of strenuous efforts on the part of any company to force an "import" to remain in the company's employ.

The fact that the imported men have quit the coal regions made possible the order of Governor Stone, directing that the soldiers be recalled as fast "as conditions would permit."

Sheriff Schadt went to Wilkesbarre last night and told General Gobin he was satisfied to resume the responsibility of taking care of Lackawanna county from now on. The sheriff had had interviews with coal company superintendents and found that they were of the opinion that the troops would not be needed there any longer.

President Mitchell continues reticent and refuses to be quoted on any move made by the operators, either regarding the treatment of the old employes or the advance in the price of coal. The evidence which he will present to the arbitration commission is now being arranged in systematic form. When Mr. Mitchell was asked regarding the published report that there was some doubt whether he would be permitted to appear before the commission on behalf of the miners he said that he presumed the miners could select any counsel they saw fit to present their case before the commission. President Mitchell pledged himself before the miners' convention to present the case of the union miners before the arbitration board. Mr. Mitchell has received a call to Washington and will leave here Sunday afternoon.

An Invitation to Depart

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 25.—The Doukhobors of Assinaboia were yesterday officially notified that they were not wanted in British Columbia in a letter which says: "The government, while ready to welcome with pleasure desirable immigrants, refuse absolutely to enter into negotiations with a body of immigrants who, at the outset, declare that they will not conform with the laws of the country."

Sued For $25,000; Got Six Cents

New York, Oct. 25.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Jennie Blasco, who sued William J. Sloane for $25,000 for alleged breach of promise, awarded damages of 6 cents to the plaintiff. When the verdict was read Sloane's counsel, Emanuel M. Friend, tendered a nickel and a penny to Mrs. Blasco. Scorning the money, Mrs. Blasco collapsed. When she recovered her composure she said she would appeal.

To Take Place of Canteen

Washington, Oct. 25.—Secretary Root has approved a preliminary plan for the expenditure of the appropriation of $500,000 intended to provide substitutes at military posts for the canteen, which has been abolished by legislation. The intention is to provide reading rooms, gymnasiums and other amusements for the soldiers.

Cupid and Bullets

Marion, Ky., Oct. 25.—George M. Sisco is under arrest, charged with murdering Miss Nellie Williamson from ambush while she was accompanied by Grover Brown. Sisco's son, Allie, and Brown were rivals and had quarreled. It is believed that the fatal shot was intended for Brown.

BERRY PICKERS' CHECKS

Believed to Have Been Counterfeited to Tune of Hundreds of Dollars

South Carver, Mass., Oct. 25.—Suspicions are held among cranberry growers in this section that cranberry picking checks have been counterfeited, leading to considerable loss to those who have cashed them in. E. M. White, treasurer of the Federal Cranberry company, has been making an investigation. The checks are of pasteboard, and are given pickers in exchange for a measure of berries, redemption taking place at the close of the picking season. For convenience in handling checks, larger denominations are issued, good for 25, 50, or 100 measures, as the case may be.

Mr. White's suspicions were first aroused by a stranger who presented checks to the value of $160, which he replaced with a bank check. He later found that these had been offered, and a few of them accepted, by outside parties, at a discount of about 20 percent, upon a very plausible excuse. Mr. White is convinced that he has already redeemed several hundred dollars' worth of these bogus checks.

War Against Organized Labor

Chicago, Oct. 25.—The Record-Herald says: The National Association of Manufacturers of the United States of America, through a circular letter being mailed to every manufacturer in this country, declares for war on organized labor and its aims and objects. Recipients of these letters are asked to become members of this association and the arguments advanced are because the organization is engaged in a "bitter up-hill fight against the unlawful demands of organized labor." The letters bear the signature of President Parry.

Bold Theft of Tea

New York, Oct. 25.—Seventy-chests of tea, valued at $5000, supposed to have been stolen, were seized by the police yesterday in a Brooklyn junk shop. The tea was brought to port consigned to Frank Golding. Soon after the steamer put in two men drove up and, representing themselves as agents of the consignee, carted the chests away. Later Golding put in his claim and on learning the facts put the matter into the hands of the police. The seizure followed.

Amalgamation of No Value

Washington, Oct. 25.—In his annual report to the secretary of the navy, Engineer-in-Chief Melville says with the greatest frankness that the personnel act has proven to be a failure as it is administered and he declares that one-half of the officers of the navy are yet to be convinced of the benefits of amalgamation. Admiral Melville thinks that if the law were administered with a desire to make it a success it would give the most efficient navy in the world.

The Panama Situation

Colon, Oct. 25.—The situation on the isthmus remains unchanged. Small bands of so-called Liberals are seen daily along the line of the railroad. Some of these make bold to collect taxes, levy dues, patrol villages, etc., as there are no government troops stationed on the line. The death rate among the soldiers of the government now at Panama and Colon is very high.

Chinese Labor In Samoa

Berlin, Oct. 25.—The German-Samoan company, with the permission of the government, designs to import Chinese laborers to work on the plantations in Samoa, on which cacoa is chiefly grown. The probabilities are that native labor later will be wholly displaced by Chinamen. The German concessionaries find they can get more work out of Chinamen.

Neeley Won't Push Claims

Muncie, Ind., Oct. 25.—Charles F. W. Neely has abandoned his plans to return to Cuba and will make Muncie his home, opening an office here. He says he has abandoned for a time at least his demand upon the United States government for the $6000 taken from him at the time of his arrest.

Army to Be Reduced to Minimum

Washington, Oct. 25.—A general order to the army was issued yesterday announcing that by direction of the president the organization of the enlisted strength of the army, under the reorganization act of Feb. 2, 1901, shall be reduced to 56,989, the minimum authorized by law.

Chance For American Capital

Washington, Oct. 25.—Governor Taft cables that the Philippine commission has passed an act inviting bids for street railroad, electric light and other franchises in Manila, the bids to be opened March 5, 1903. The bids will be advertised in this country.

Beckham May Succeed Himself

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 25.—That Governor Beckman is eligible, under the state constitution, to succeed himself as chief executive of Kentucky, is held by four leading constitutional lawyers in an opinion furnished the governor yesterday.

Dunkirk Strike Ended

Dunkirk, Oct. 25.—The dock laborers yesterday formally decided by 1711 votes to 481 to resume work. The town is quiet, an overwhelming force of troops having been sent here by the military authorities.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

ALWAYS BE ON TIME.

Do Not Be a Laggard Like the Boy In This Little Story.

The writer was not long ago instrumental in securing a good position in a store for a boy about fifteen years of age. He needed the place very much, for his mother was in the most reduced circumstances, and this boy was the eldest of six children, and the mother was a widow.

At the end of two weeks the mother came to me to ask if I would be willing to go to the store and ask the proprietor to take Willie back again.

"Take him back!" I said. "Has he lost his place?"

"Yes, sir. They sent him back home when he went to the store yesterday morning." A call on the proprietor of the store elicited the fact that the boy had been discharged because he was "never on time."

"He was late every morning," said the proprietor. "He always had some excuse, but I could not have a boy of that kind in my employ. If I excused him, I must excuse others. I insist on every person in my employ being here on time. I am here myself on time, and it is only right and just that they should be here also."

It is right and just that every boy who is paid for his time should be at his post on time. He will find that punctuality is of high value and that the lack of it will be a stumbling block in the road toward success.—American Boy.

Homemade Humming Top.

A humming top like the one here illustrated may be easily made from a modern baking powder box and a piece of soft pine wood. Make the hole in the bottom of the box square to fit the shoulder on the spindle, and fasten the latter in and the lid of the box on with glue. The square hole cut in the side of the box will make the sound while the top is spinning.

Children Picking Nutmegs.

Fancy picking nutmegs! This is what the children of South America and the tropical islands do almost as soon as they can walk. Gathering nutmegs is something like gathering chestnuts. Nutmeg trees are planted in groves. The trees are twenty feet apart and have long, green leaves, very dark and glossy.

The nutmeg is enveloped in a husk about the size and shape of a rusty coat apple. When perfectly ripe, the husk splits and the nut falls out. The kernel of the nut is the nutmeg of commerce. It is beaten from the husk by children, who climb the nutmeg trees and thrash the branches with poles. The air is sometimes so heavy with perfume that the young nutmeg gatherers are overcome by its heaviness and have to be borne from the grove on the shoulders of companions.

How to Cut a Pear In Two.

A pear suspended from the ceiling by a piece of thread is to be cut exactly in halves as it falls, after burning the thread on which it hangs. How can we find the exact spot to place the knife on a chair or the floor so that the pear in falling will be cut? This is done by dipping the pear in a glass of water. After suspending the pear a few drops of water will fall on the exact spot, which must be noted. These preparations must be made before your exhibition, so that the audience will only see the suspended pear, without knowing anything of the drops of water. When the moment for the performance has arrived, place the edge of the knife on the exact spot, then burn the thread, and the pear in falling will be cut in two.—American Boy.

The Kind Wasp.

A story of how one wasp cared for another that had been injured is told by a gentleman who while reading the newspaper felt bothered by a buzzing of a wasp about his head and knocked it down. It fell through the open window and lay on the sill as if dead. A few seconds afterward, to his great surprise, a large wasp flew to the window sill and, after buzzing around his wounded brother for a few minutes, began to lick him all over. The sick wasp seemed to revive under this treatment, and his friend then dragged him gently to the edge, grasped him round the body and flew away with him. It was plain that the stranger, finding a wounded comrade, gave him aid as well as he could and then bore him away home.

Silly Sally's Cake.

Silly Sally made a cake
And put some raisins in it;
She placed it in the oven hot
And left it there a minute.

Then she took it out again
To see if it was done;
But, no, of course, it was not baked;
It only had begun.

So then she put it back again
And left it there a day,
But when she went to take it out
The cake had burned away.
—New York Herald.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Some cooks claim that a tablespoonful or two of strong tea will improve the flavor of apple pie.

Powdered cinnamon dusted over the top of a cup of cocoa or chocolate will greatly improve the flavor of the beverage.

To cream butter easily heat the bowl a little by pouring hot water in it and pouring it out again. It must not be hot enough to melt the butter.

When mashing potatoes, use hot milk, and if you have been in the habit of using cold you will be surprised at the difference in their lightness.

The dish of baked beans will be improved if to the water that is poured over them as they are transferred to the baking dish a half teaspoonful of dry mustard is added.

When large potatoes remain hard inside while outwardly soft, add cold water. This prevents the outer portion from cooking too much, while the interior heat will cook the heart of the vegetable.

"Goldenrod toast" is the fanciful title given to this toast concoction: Make a rich white sauce and mix with it the diced whites of several eggs. Pour it hot over hot toast. Sprinkle the top with the grated yolks and serve at once.

Two Kinds of Independence.

We have all met the girl with the independent air, who is apt to show a rebellious spirit when things do not go her own way. Not infrequently she is well educated and comes from a refined home. But this fact does not make her manner the less offensive. It is a good thing to have a little self confidence and courage, for these qualities are essential to success. But independence is a trait that is contrary to agreeableness and robs its possessor of that sweet amiability which is born from the virtue obedience. Every law of God and every law of nature is dependent on another law for support. The girl who thinks she can get along without cultivating the graces of gentleness, courtesy and kindness to others is making a sad mistake and will be anything but a success. Who knows how to obey well will rule equally well. Whether in the business or social world, the girl or woman who influences things for the best is the one whose bright disposition deems independence out of place where progress is desired.

Wall Paper.

Don't put wall paper of warm, bright coloring in a south or west room or a cool paper of subdued tone in a north or east room. For south and west rooms the best colors are greens and blues, and in a room where there is plenty of sunshine a white wall paper often has a charming effect. For cold rooms facing north or east you can either have yellow wall paper or any tone of red or pink. Don't have a large patterned paper in a small room. For dining rooms and libraries the self colored ingrain papers are the most suitable. The surface being dull and rough gives them a subdued effect. For drawing rooms and bedrooms the plain tinted lining papers are the best. Don't have a frieze or a dado in a low pitched room. It seems to make it much lower than it really is. A patterned ceiling paper has the same effect; therefore in low rooms plain color washed or painted ceilings are preferable to any others.

Rules For Your Waitress.

Wear silent shoes, practice quick but gentle movements.

Have clean hands, collar, cuffs, cap and apron.

Never bang the door or leave it standing open.

Have everything necessary at hand.

Take minute care in details.

Hand everything on the left side of the guest.

Carry all articles to and from the table on a tray.

Remove at once all articles done with.

Try to anticipate the needs of every one with water, bread, etc.

Do not jingle the glasses, knives, etc.

In moving about the room avoid knocking against the backs of the chairs.

Marriage as a Profession.

Marriage for a girl is undoubtedly a profession, and a profession which requires an education. She must recognize how much depends upon her health and the health of those committed to her care; how much depends on her being a careful manageress of her household and of the money put into her hands for use for the welfare of others. Above all, she should be taught that wives and mothers are made, not born, and no girl should attempt to marry without having received some instruction in the science of housekeeping and of making money go as far as it possibly can.—Chicago Post.

Furniture Cream.

A tested recipe for furniture cream is the following: Put two ounces of beeswax and an ounce of castile soap in a jar with half a pint of cold water, and set it in a moderate oven till it is all dissolved and blended, stirring it occasionally during the process. When perfectly melted, let it stand till quite cold, when half a pint of spirits of turpentine and two tablespoonfuls of vinegar must be thoroughly stirred into the mixture.

Ironing Handkerchiefs.

In ironing handkerchiefs it is useful to remember that the middle should be ironed first. To iron the edges first causes the middle to swell out like a balloon and makes it difficult to iron it satisfactorily. Test the iron carefully before using it. A piece of rag should be at hand for this purpose.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ That is a pitiful tale which an official of one of Boston's largest coal companies related to a reporter, yesterday, about the speculators being to blame for the high price of soft coal in that city and shows what poor, helpless mortals the Hub dealers are in their own estimation. The one remarkable trait of the coal business is that it is so easy to control it to the disadvantage of the public and so difficult to conduct it in a manner favorable to consumers.—Lynn Item.

☞ Is an estimable accomplishment sufficient excuse that the world owes its possessor a living? The question is suggested by the statement, apparently well founded, that some clever New York artists are unable to sell their paintings for more than the cost of the frames, and that even the frames must sometimes go at less than their price to save the artists from starvation. Yet who is to blame? It would be gratifying to all lovers of pictoral art if the mass of intelligent and well-to-do could become so interested in paintings as to welcome with appropriate numbers of dollars the entire output of all meritorious artists. But the artistic sense is not one of the basic virtues to which all men should conform; it is merely a phase of refinement. Love of beauty as expressed by art is general, but no one has the right to demand that it shall follow the direction of his own calling and for his personal gain. It manifests itself in many ways, two or three of which are as many as can be followed by any one who has affairs of his own to look after. From wall paper and woodwork to paintings and poems there is a variety of subjects that are being treated artistically, and among which the taste of the individual may be gratified and refined. Except, perhaps, music, there is no art that demands more effort for its comprehension than that of the painter; so it would seem that the impecunious painter should, according to his disposition, blame either his profession or the impulse which forced him into it before he had counted the cost.—Harper's Weekly.

CITY HALL REMODELED.

Now Roomy, Convenient, Light, Airy and Healthy.

All the Offices Now Entered from a Main Corridor.

No Necessity of a New City Hall for Many Years to Come.

Quincy now has something in the way of a City Hall that the citizens need not feel ashamed of. Ever since Quincy became a city, the officials, whom the voters have elected to transact their business, have had their offices in the old stone building. The offices at best were not inviting and ill arranged. It made no difference how much time the City Messenger put into the work City Hall was never clean and never would be. In the first place it was damp, and then the police station was located in the basement and the travellers entertained through the night used to leave behind them things that crawled.

Several attempts have been made to have the building remodelled, but the schemes for some reason fell through. This year Mayor Bryant took up the matter. In time the order passed the City Council, the contract was let, and last week the several departments moved in, including the City Engineer and Sewer departments, which have been located in another building.

The changes in remodelling the old building are many. Our old citizens who gathered in the old Town Hall on election days to listen to the words from "Wisdom Corner" will not recognize the street floor when they come to see what $13,000 has accomplished.

In the old building it will be remembered that there were three entrances on the front. That at the north into the City Treasurer's office, that on the south into the office of the Commissioner of Public Works, while that in the centre opened onto a flight of stone steps leading to the City Council chamber on the upper floor.

Now there is but one entrance on front, and that is in the centre. In the day time swinging glass doors let one into a small vestibule from which another set of glass doors admit to a corridor running through the centre of the building. On the outside of the first set of doors are solid doors which are closed only at night.

Looking down this corridor, which is sheathed up nearly half way to the ceiling, doors can be seen on either side. These lead into the several offices. On each door is a number and the name of the officer who occupies it.

Those on the right are numbered 2, 4, 6 and 8. They are occupied by the City Treasurer, City Clerk, City Messenger and City Engineer. The City Messenger's office has three large glass windows. In this room is a heavy sound proof door which upon being opened is found to lead into the office of the Mayor, which is known as room 9. There is also a similar door leading from the office of the City Clerk. A room in which the Mayor can carry on a conversation without being overheard will be thoroughly appreciated.

The rooms on the left of the corridor are numbered 1, 3, 5 and 7, and are occupied by the Commissioner of Public Works, Water office, Tax Collector and Assessors.

In the office of the Commissioner there is a little room partitioned off for his private office, which also fills a long felt want. A door also connects the offices of the Commissioner and Water department.

In the Assessors' room there is also a private office for the meetings of the board where they will be free from interruption.

At the lower end of the corridor is a door leading to the small addition built on rear of the building. Here are located the toilet rooms. Near the entrance is a door toward Depot street which upon being opened, is found to be a stairway leading to the Council Chamber as formerly.

On either side of the main entrance at the front, are stairways leading to the Council chamber floor. These join at a small landing half way up, directly over the entrance. From this landing half a dozen steps takes one to the main landing. Swinging doors open into the Council chamber and stairways on either side lead to the gallery overlooking the Council chamber.

A little to the right of the main entrance is a stairway leading to the basement. The changes here have been many. In place of the damp, bug-ridden cellar, are a series of rooms which are also occupied for offices.

Those on the right are numbered 11 and 13, and are occupied by the managers of Public Burial Places and as a drafting room of the Sewer department. Room number 11 is also used as an emergency room for the City Engineer's department.

The rooms on the left are numbered 10, 12, and 14. Number 10, which is where the police was located, is the office of the Overseer of the Poor. It also has a door leading to room number 12 which is occupied by the Board of Health and its Inspector and the Inspector of Plumbing.

Room 14 is occupied by the Sewer Department. In the rear of Room 13 is a large room which will be used as a store room, and in the rear of these is the boiler room and coal bins.

Directly beneath the main entrance is a large brick vault, in which racks have been built. Here will be kept plans of the City Engineer and the Sewer department.

There are also brick vaults in rooms 11 and 13 for the use of the departments using those rooms, and still another vault back of the boilers.

On the first or street floor there are brick vaults in the rooms of the City Treasurer, City Clerk and Assessors. Those departments not having vaults have large safes.

There is also a stairway on the south side of the building leading to the office of the Overseer of the Poor.

All the rooms are piped for gas and wired for electricity. Telephones connecting with the central office are also located in the offices of all departments but that of the Managers of Public Burial Places, and in one of the rooms used by the Sewer department.

Best of all, however, is a system of interior telephones connecting every office in the basement and on the street floor and the Committee room on the Council chamber floor. By these telephones, officials can communicate with any other office without leaving their room.

In the Mayor's office is also a call instrument connected with the police alarm system. There is also a door bell on the front of the building. The bell is located in the office of the City Messenger and is so that after the outor door has been closed at night, the Messenger can be reached if he is in the building.

The outside of the building has been but little changed and it is still the same solid looking structure as when first built of stone in 1844. The main changes are the replacing of the large windows by double windows and the changes on the front that have already been noted.

Light is furnished the basement by large windows that have been inserted on both sides of the building. The openings in the grounds made for these openings being protected by an iron rail. It might also be added that the opening by the boiler room is to be provided with an elevator to remove ashes, etc.

But little more remains to be said other than the rentals saved by moving the Engineer's and Sewer departments to City Hall will nearly pay the interest on the cost of remodelling and that the building as it is now should fill all wants of the city for the next twenty-five years.

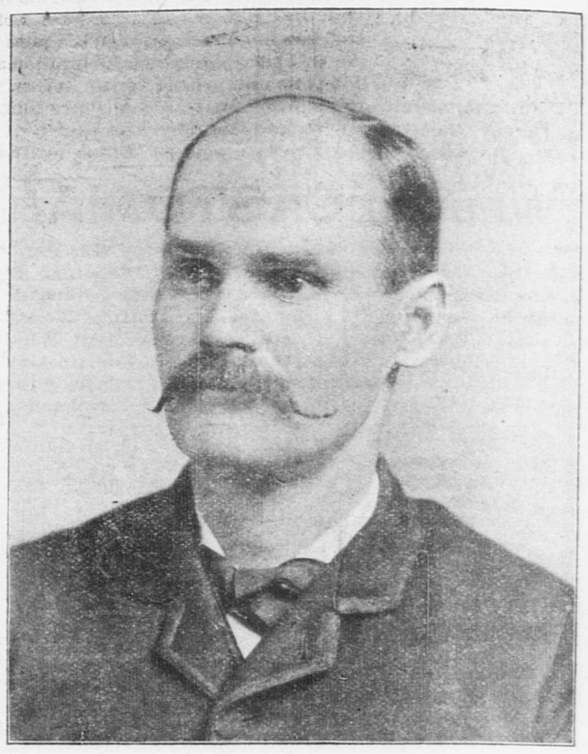
FRED L. JONES FOR PACKARD.

"I Hope All My Friends Will Vote for Mr. Packard at the Caucuses, as I Shall Do."



The Advertiser reports Fred L. Jones, who was the regular Republican candidate for Mayor last year, as follows at the Ward Three Republican meeting, Oct. 20:

"I fully intended to be a candidate for Mayor this year, but as Mr. Packard of Ward 1 was bound to run I saw that it was impossible for two men in the field to defeat Mr. Bryant, and therefore I decided not to enter the contest.

"Since Mr. Packard is bound to run, I hope all my friends will vote for Mr. Packard at the caucuses as I shall do.

"I have no love for Mr. Packard, but he is opposing Mr. Bryant, the man who was the means, to a certain extent, of breaking up the Republican party in this city last year.

I hope, therefore, that you will force Mr. Bryant to run as an independent again this year

BRIDGE HEARING.

An Improvement Which Necessity Seems to Demand.

The County Commissioners gave a hearing in the Probate court rooms this morning on the petition of Mayor Hall to widen the bridge over the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad near the Atlantic depot and the approaches to the bridge.

The city was represented by Mayor Bryant, City Solicitor Blackmur, City Engineer Flood, Assessor Glover and Herbert T. Whitman. The railroad was represented by Mr. Goodrich.

City Solicitor Blackmur in opening said all were familiar with the location. The need of what the petition asked for was so obvious that oral testimony was hardly necessary, and a view would convince anyone. Other boards of Commissioner had made decrees, but the cost and difference of opinion as to who should do the work had resulted in nothing being done.

City Engineer Flood presented a plan to widen the bridge to 64 feet. The plan called for cutting the present bridge in half and building a new section in the center. He also presented an estimate as to cost from the Boston Bridge Co., which was to do all the work except extending the abutments for $2,700.

He also testified to the need of a wider bridge and the unsafe condition of the street as it was at present. The traffic across the bridge was congested and he believed public necessity called for the widening.

Mayor Bryant said he frequently used the bridge and public necessity called for it being widened. As it was, now, it was dangerous and inconvenient. The approaches were in a bad condition and the situation becomes more dangerous every year.

Herbert T. Whitman also spoke of the urgent need of widening It was the main thoroughfare to towns south of Boston. The cost of widening between 50 feet and 64 feet would be but little. In his opinion travel over the bridge had more than doubled in thirty years.

Assessor Glover testified to the congested condition of the street over the bridge. It was a disgrace to the whole city. But one team could pass at a time when a car is on the bridge and teaming was often blocked.

The party then took a special car and viewed the premises, after which the hearing was adjourned.

Was It Intimidation?

Editors Daily Ledger:

Fifty signers, all tenants of Mr. H. H. Faxon, sign a petition to have him appointed City Scavanger. Do they do this because they wish to pay him one dollar for what they can have done by the regular City Scavanger for sixty-five cents? No! It looks like a case of fear of the iron rod he holds over them. Why were not others, not tenants, asked to sign that petition?

Mr. Faxon made an insinuation about Mayor Bryant sending out a clear statement of the financial condition of the city, as a campaign document, what is this one of his issued at the eleventh hour?

Not a tenant.

Caucus Nominations.

The Ledger of Friday published the nominations for the Republican caucuses with the exception of Wards Three and Five.

Ward Three has only three candidates for Councilmen from the ward: Walter E. Piper, Alfred O. Diack and Julius Johnson.

In Ward Five the candidates are: Nathan G. Nickerson, Herbert J. Polk and W. H. Broughton. It is the intention to run Walter F. Nichols at large.

Cuff--Curley.

The marriage of John Warren Cuff, one of Braintree's popular young men and leader of Cuff's orchestra, and Miss Anna May Curley, daughter of Mrs. William Curley of Dorchester, was solemnized in St. Leo's church Dorchester, Wednesday evening, Oct. 22d, by Rev. Fr. Cuffe of Quincy.

The bride was richly gowned in white chiffon over liberty silk with duchess lace trimmings. She wore the customary long veil of tulle and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid was a sister of the bride, Miss Alice M. Curley, who wore a dress of white satin with trimmings of cluny lace. The groomsman was a brother of the groom, Mr. William C. Cuff of South Braintree.

The ushers were: Messrs. Edward Dee of South Braintree, Robert Griggor of Boston, James Shea of New York and Bert Curley of Troy, N. Y.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party returned to the residence of the bride's mother, No. 9 Michigan avenue, where a reception was held from 8 to 10 o'clock. The happy couple were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cuff, parents of the groom, Mrs. William Curley, mother of the bride and by Miss Helen Cuff and Miss Florence Curley, sisters of the bride and groom.

The spacious reception room was tastefully banked with palms in the rear of the receiving party. Ropes of mountain laurel, smilax, asparagus springeri, maidenhair ferns and chrysanthemums were the other decorations.

The dining room in charge of Caterer Seiler with a corps of mulatto waiters spoke loudly to man's natural and artistic taste. From the chandelier to the ends of the long table were festoons of smilax caught by large bows of white ribbon. In the center of the table stood an immense silver vase upon a mirror. In the vase were arranged five large bouquets of white roses. The table indeed was "delectable both to behold and taste;" ices, sherbets, scalloped oysters, chicken salad, coffee and other tempting edibles being in strong evidence. The music was furnished by Cuff's orchestra.

The groom's present to the bride was an elegant upright, mahogany piano. The ushers and best man each received a pearl crescent stick-pin while the bridesmaid received a chain and pendent of rope pearls, gifts from the groom. The costumes of the receiving party were as follows:

Mrs. William H. Cuff, black silk net over black silk with trimmings of blue panvelvet and jet.

Mrs. William Curley, lavender satin with trimmings of chiffon and cluny lace.

Mr. and Mrs. Cuff were plentifully sprinkled with confetti and showered with good wishes from a host of friends as they left on a bridal trip to New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

The presents were beautiful beyond description. Among them was a mahogany music cabinet from Cuff's orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Cuff will reside on Central avenue upon their return from their wedding trip.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Gleason Torrey, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Torrey, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Hobart, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shay and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cuff and family, Miss Josie Colbert, Mr. James Colbert, Dr. B. C. Shanks, Mr. Norton Potter, Mr. Harry Snow, Miss Eva Snow, Mr. Thurlow Torrey, Mrs. Barnes, Mr. Norman Barnes, Miss Isabel McGurn of South Braintree; Mr. Stephen O'Hearn and daughters, Miss Annie Riley, Miss Lizzie Griggor, Miss Grace Conarty, Miss Ella Conarty of Taunton; Miss Ready of South Weymouth; Dr. Sullivan of Providence.

Echoes from Convention.

At the Sunday school convention held at Springfield, Oct. 7-9, Prof. Sanders of Yale Divinity school gave a very interesting talk on "Joshua in the Life of the Jewish Nation." The nation was now at its crisis. Joshua, because of his experience as Moses right hand man had great strength with the people. His strong positive personality of wisdom, unselfishness, courage, faith and reliability and his great capacity for leadership, was just the man the nation needed at this time. Some of the religious lessons we can learn from the life of Joshua are, God selects the best possible men for his service, but does not guarantee their absolute perfection. The men who fail to get into line with God's purposes simply cut themselves off from opportunities.

Prof. Horne of Dartmouth college gave an address on "The Method of Teaching," he spoke of four steps in teaching the lesson. 1. Preparation for lesson. 2. Presentation of lesson. 3. Transition or general ideas. 4. Application of the lesson in spiritual way.

Henry Turner Bailey of the Massachusetts State Board of Education, spoke on the "Religious Training of Little Children," he said, religious training begins at birth and begins with training the will. The parents stand in the place of God to the little child. The parents' will should be, to the child as God's will is to the parent. Lead the child to believe that you expect him to do right. The parents should be true to their promises to the child, so the child can have perfect faith in their parents. Mr. Bailey said he received a great compliment from his little girl. A gentleman friend called at his home one day; this friend asked his little girl how many brothers she had, she answered three, she counted her father as one of her brothers. The child should not be allowed to tease; the parents should be firm in their decision. The child should be given different playthings on Sunday from other days, the best stories should be told and best songs used on this day.

Miss Slattery said, Teachers are to blame for some of the disorder of the Sunday schools. The teacher should be in her seat in the Sunday school first, and have social conversation with the pupils before the school opens.

THE CANDIDATES.

Why Representative McKnight Should be Re-elected.

To the Editor of the Daily Ledger:

As the time for the election of Representatives to the General Court approaches it behooves us to carefully consider the merits of the various candidates for the position. Among the list there is one to whom I desire te call particular attention and to urge the voters of this city to give him their earnest endorsement at the polls. Representative John McKnight, who has so ably and conscientiously represented the City of Quincy in the Legislature during its past session, and who has proven one of the brightest and keenest Representatives that we have had in the Legislature for several years, has come before us for re-election, in accordance with a time honored custom which has up to the present time been held inviolable by the citizens of this district. The Republican voters of this district cannot afford to evade this well established rule of a two-year term for its Representatives, and such radical change as a departure from this custom, as contemplated by the accident of nomination undoubtedly would prove most disastrous to the hopes of future candidates for legislative honors, and a real detriment to our city by inflicting upon us the change to one-year service of our legislators instead of the two-year term as established by precedent.

Another important point which should be carefully considered in this connection is the fact that unless we send Representative McKnight back to the Legislature we shall be left without any experienced Representative in the General Court. If we are foolish enough to send two green men to the Legislature; men of no legislative experience, we as a city will have to suffer for our shortsightedness. In fact, as Senator Sprague retires from the Senate this year and will be succeeded by a new man we shall not only lose his experience and influence, but will be practically without proper representation in the law making body of our Commonwealth. This is too serious a question to be lightly treated or ignored, and the most common sense view to take of it is to return Representative McKnight to the House, and thus be assured of one competent experienced member of that body from our city.

A vote for Representative John McKnight means a vote for the best interests of our city, and his election will assure us an able, level-headed champion of what is for the good of our city.

A Republican Voter.

FROM GRAFTON AND BACK

By CECILY ALLEN

Copyright, 1901, by Cecily Allen

When the news spread through Grafton that Frank Wilson had given Jennie Holmes a position as clerk in his store, the gossips of that self important little county seat were thrown into a fine flutter. The women shook their heads over their teacups and prophesied that no good thing could come out of such an innovation. The men encircling the stove in the store of Frank's only competitor in "groceries, dry goods, crockery and general merchandise" decided that "ef ol' Sam White knowed there was a gal swishin' her skirts roun' his flour barrels an' sugar sacks he'd just natu'ly turn over in his grave." And the whole town and surrounding farming district announced that it was all due to Frank Wilson's having attended a business college in the city for three months.

But in due time the women on "trading trips" gravitated toward Jennie. She had an eye for colors and knew just how much it would take for baby's first short dress or Martha Jane's pinafores. The bluff farmers liked her, too, because she seemed to read aright the mysterious instructions intrusted to them by busy wives at home. There was no complaint about the calicoes and ginghams matched at Wilson's store, and Jennie always threw in a stick of candy for the littlest one, to say nothing of smiles and friendly glances.

And, the strangest of all, she did not spill sugar nor drop the cracker box nor leave the molasses faucet running, as her employer's competitor had foretold. In fact, she fitted into the niche so admirably that on two occasions Frank saw fit to raise her salary.

At this last piece of good fortune she bought an organ on the installment plan, and the wee front room at her aunt's home was thereby transformed into a veritable paradise.

Enter then the proverbial serpent in the form of a demonstrator whose mission was to teach stolid wives of farmers the gentle art of warming up canned baked beans. She wore a striped silk waist, very long and very pointed in the front, very high as to collar and very tight as to sleeve—she had a pretty arm—and her silk lined skirt gracefully swept up the sawdust on Frank Wilson's floor.

The demonstrator first patronized and then really liked Jennie. She told the winsome little clerk that her energy and talent were wasted in such a narrow sphere. She really ought to be in the city, where her ability would command a good salary and where she might in time rise to be head of a department. Jennie was not quite sure what the latter elevation implied, but she was properly dazzled by the fair words of her new found acquaintance, and when the latter suggested that she had a friend who had the necessary influence to secure a position for "any one," particularly any one she might recommend, Jennie was duly grateful.

So when a month later she received a few lines written in a sprawling attempt at English angular penmanship announcing that an opening awaited her in the great city Jennie was wildly excited. So great was her excitement that she did not notice the expression on Frank's face when she offered her resignation and told him the good news. Yet he went with her to the train, saw her comfortably fixed for the day's journey and tried not to look wistfully into the sweet face, fairly shining now with happy anticipations. Then he went back to the store, the new clerk and a realization that it was not the girl's sales, but her gentle personality, which had roused his interest—and something more.

The demonstrator, clad in a new tailor made suit and a silk waist even more gorgeous than the one which had dazzled Jennie and Grafton in general, met her at the depot and piloted her to the boarding house where she had, with all good intentions, selected a tiny hall room "with running water, dear, and you don't often get that in a hall room."

"I'll be around in the morning, my dear, and take you to the store. My friend will be expecting you, of course, but my being with you will make it pleasanter. Then I shall not see you for a week or ten days. I'm going out on the M. and C. R. for a trip. But you'll be so busy you won't be lonesome."

Lonesome? Oh, no. Jennie was not lonesome. She was simply sick from the tip of her new tan shoes to the crown of her new sailor hat with a strange, vague illness which is not defined in medical publications. She was glad when the well meaning but chattering demonstrator took herself off.

The next day found her installed in a bargain square of the big department store. The rush of people made her head swim, the rude, captious bargain seekers terrified her, the thick air stifled her and the cold, wary glance of the floorwalker, always suspicious of new clerks, made her long for the friendly if unspoken approval of her former employer. That night as she walked home she was only too glad to avoid crowded cars, for the thought of a crowd was hateful to her now. She wondered if every day would be like this, so long, so dreary.

Days that dragged into weeks and that meant only nerve racking hours in the bargain square and grim, silent evenings in the hall bedroom taught Jennie Holmes many lessons. No one seemed to "appreciate" her as the demonstrator had predicted. The same faces seldom appeared twice in front of her counter, and she was actually starving for the sight of one familiar face, the sound of a familiar voice. Sometimes she caught herself wondering what was going on in Frank's store, whether he had saved the piece of red henrietta cloth for Mrs. Morrison, who came to town only once a month. She was almost tempted to write and remind him of it, but she did not.

Jennie and the demonstrator drifted apart. The latter during her brief sojourns in town was busy laying in fresh supplies of clothes. Fine raiment palled upon Jennie, and when the voluble demonstrator took her departure Jennie turned to her magazines, papers and home letters with a feeling of relief.

Then came her promotion at the store and with it a friendship worth having—a friendship which represented rescue from the desolation of a hall bedroom and the horrors of cheap boarding house fare. For the trio of girls took furnished rooms and cooked those things which were at least wholesome and of good quality if not elaborately prepared. Her salesbook each day showed a steady advance. Placed now in a regular department, she had her regular customers. Dim visions of being head of a department loomed up before her, and yet—

* * * * * * *

They had been to a fashionable theater. They had worn their "very best," these three busy women, and had treated themselves to seats in the front row of the balcony. Between the acts from this point of vantage Jennie had leaned over to watch the gay assemblage.

When she reached her room, she turned the gas on full head, and, tilting her mirror, she studied her face. It was not an unpleasant task. Indeed the floorwalker in her department had remarked to one of his friends that the little country girl was "devilish pretty, by Jove." She shuddered as she recalled his words and his foppish appearance, even to the plated fob which swung from his silk embroidered vest.

Then, strangely enough, her thoughts went back to Frank Wilson, with his strong, resolute face, his square, determined shoulders, his keen blue eyes, which could be wonderfully friendly without a gleam of impertinence in their clear depths. She brushed her hair vigorously as she berated herself thus:

"Jennie Holmes, you're a goose. You thought that when you came to town you'd actually be a part of the life of this great, bustling city—a part of the gay world you saw at the theater tonight. And a pretty figure you cut, working in a store with hundreds of other girls at $10 a week. You're getting pale and ugly, too, and I have a good mind to send you back home to Grafton."

Then she thought of Thanksgiving day, only two weeks off, and her aunt's little front room with the organ, never opened now, and—the store. Oh, dear, the ribbon boxes must be in a shocking mess by this time! And she cried herself to sleep.

The next morning she was late at the store for the first time. The girls left her writing. It was a meek little letter telling Frank that she did not like her work and asking very prettily for her old position if the opening could be made.

The reply came by wire:

Position open. Will expect you Monday.

The trio in the furnished rooms resolved itself into a duet. The other girls were sorry to lose their bright faced companion and secretly envied her the beatific expression with which she made her preparations for departure. They received one postal card announcing her safe arrival at Grafton. Then ensued a long silence.

"I guess she found the store in as bad shape as she anticipated. I can just picture her straightening up ribbon boxes and sorting trimmings," laughed one of the girls. And then she sighed and went back to such realities as bargain hunters and "cash."

And the next day came the letter:

I did not take my old position, but I think I will like the new one just as well, perhaps even better. Frank and I will be married Christmas day. Can't you come up? It will be a very quiet affair, but I'd love to have you. If you can't come, of course I'll send you some of the cake. Give my love to the girls I liked. You know which ones I mean. I am too busy to write more now, but come if you can. JENNIE.

The two girls looked at each other and pushed back their untasted lunch. Said one:

"We might have known it. She never was meant for business life. Come on. We've just fifteen minutes left, but we can get a set of that hemstitched table linen. I wonder which express company goes to Grafton."

The other girl stopped to kiss a photograph on the mantel.

"Little girl, we miss you, but not half so much as he probably did when you came to us."

And there were tears in her eyes when she looked in her purse for a certain five dollar bill.

The Shepherd's Purse.

A valuable little plant that goes to waste by roadsides and vacant lots is the shepherd's purse, whose tiny seed pods are known by everybody at sight, though not by name. The green seeds stripped from the stems and strewn over lettuce or endive are a piquant addition to salads of which no epicure will need to taste twice to be assured. The fresh peppery taste suggested in one of its names, "wayside cress," is yet finer than common cress. But its curative qualities need dwelling upon, for it is said to be one of the surest remedies for a disordered digestion. The seed is eaten green. When the lower pods are set and the top still in flower is the best time, but it can be used any time. The pleasant, warming, clearing, purifying effect is felt at once, and the only directions are to eat the seeds often and as much as is agreeable. For croupy children it may be boiled in milk, but for elderly persons this is unnecessary.—New York Tribune.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 26—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

The blessings of the gospel are often represented in the Scriptures by a feast. In the topical reference we have Christ's representation of them in this way in the parable of the marriage of the king's son, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king which made a marriage for his son." The invited guests were then called by the king's servants, but they would not come. "Again he sent forth other servants, saying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold I have prepared my dinner; my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready. Come unto the marriage. But they made light of it and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise and the remnants took his servants and treated them spitefully and slew them." The king then punished his wicked subjects and invited other guests to the wedding, and the marriage feast was celebrated.

The king in the parable is God. The son is Christ. The wedding feast represents the present and eternal blessings of the gospel. The first invited guests were the Jews. They misused and even killed God's prophets and apostles who were sent unto them. God therefore severely punished them and extended the invitation to His gospel feast to all men.

The gospel invitation is therefore today a worldwide invitation. It is to all men. Salvation is offered full and free to all who will accept it, as it is offered in the gospel through Christ. What a gracious invitation it is! God has provided a feast of eternal joys and says to all men: "Come, for all things are now ready. Come, buy wine and milk without money and without price."

It seems incredible that any one could treat God's gracious invitation lightly, and yet many do. Men today, as of old, make light of it and go their ways, some to pleasure, some to business, and some even violently reject the proffered offers of mercy and in their rejection despitefully use the messengers. Such treatment of the most gracious invitation the world knows anything about is absolutely inexcusable. It is given in good faith. The benefits to be derived from its acceptance are all upon man's side. God has nothing to lose, but man has all to lose by lightly esteeming the salvation offered through Jesus Christ. Nor does God hold any man inexcusable. To accept is to live; to reject is to die. "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy, under two or three witnesses; of how much sorer punishment suppose ye shall he be thought worthy who hath trodden underfoot the Son of God?" (Heb. x, 28, 29.)

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. vii, 1; Ps. ii, 10-12; Isa. i, 18-20; liii, 3; lv, 1-7; Matt. xi, 28-30; Mark ii, 14; John i, 35-39; Rev. xxii, 17.

The Pledge.

The Christian Endeavor pledge, concerning which so much has been said and written, is often spoken of as "the backbone of the society." It is given herewith in its entirety: "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise Him that I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do; that I will make it a rule of my life to pray and to read the Bible every day and to support my own church in every way, especially by attending all her regular Sunday and midweek services, unless prevented by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Saviour, and that, just so far as I know how, throughout my whole life I will endeavor to lead a Christian life. As an active member I promise to be true to all my duties, to be present at and to take some part aside from singing in every Christian Endeavor prayer meeting, unless hindered by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Lord and Master. If obliged to be absent from the monthly consecration meeting of the society, I will, if possible, send at least a verse of Scripture to be read in response to my name at the roll call." Charles M. Sheldon's famous book, "In His Steps," grew out of the Christian Endeavor pledge.

New York State Conventions.

An Endeavor Invitation.

Youth passes swiftly. Consider eternity.
Pray, brother, come to the foot of the cross.
Sweet be the smile of the dear, loving Saviour
Calmly entreating you. Count all else loss.
Eternity outweighs the world and its dross.
—John R. Clements in Christian Endeavor World.

3. F., New York.—The missionary committee's work is chiefly the conducting of interesting missionary meetings. The arousing of interest in mission study and the circulation of missionary literature are also a part of its duties.

4. X., New York.—There can be no possible objection to your reading an extract from Mr. Doyle's exposition of the lesson as your part in the prayer meeting. Read it as his and then add a word of your own as your testimony.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

On the beach to the left and back of Square tum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Many other points of interest might be mentioned: Thomas Crane Memorial Hall which is the public library building; Merrymount, the home of Mrs. John Quincy Adams, where Morton erected his famous May pole in 1626; the soldiers' monument at Mount Wollaston cemetery with its tablets; the famous Quincy granite quarries, many of great depth; the granite yards where monuments and statuary are being cut, and the polishing mills where granite is polished; also the big ship yard now established at Quincy Point.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." sold by all druggists.

—One thing about the pension matter that excites observation is that a large part of the Spanish war veterans receive $12 per month, while thousands of aged civil war veterans, crippled and broken in health, are receiving only $6 or $8 per month, chiefly because the medical bureau of the pension office requires data, that it is impossible for many of the veterans now to procure.—West Worcester Chronicle.

President's Strike Arbiters

Who They Are, What They Have Done and Why They Were Put on the Commission

OF the six men who are arbitrating the issues of the great coal strike at least three are typical new century Americans and earnest, vigorous livers of the strenuous life. All are men who have done things successfully, who are still doing things and who may be depended upon to have ideas of their own as well as the courage of their convictions.

Some of them know what it means to earn a living with their hands. Some of them don't. Most of them are just the kind of men one would expect the president to select for such a task, men of the Roosevelt stamp. Collectively they make a body to be respected. Individually they are most interesting.

The special representative of organized labor on the commission, E. E. Clark, chief of the Order of Railway Conductors, began railroading as a brakeman and for twelve years twisted brakes on various roads in the west, until in 1884, when he became a conductor on the Denver and Rio Grande. Since 1890 he has been head of the conductors' organization, an experience that will fit him for the services to be performed.

Mr. Clark's qualities and experience specially commend him to the miners. That was undoubtedly one of the considerations that induced the president to select Mr. Clark. Moreover, the president, in selecting Mr. Clark, acted upon personal knowledge of the man. At the convention of railway engineers and firemen held at Chattanooga a few weeks ago, at which President Roosevelt was present, Mr. Clark made an address which impressed the president with his ability and personality.

Mr. Clark is well known in Washington to many public men, including members of the interstate commerce commission, by whom his selection is highly commended. The mediation and arbitration act, which became a law in 1898 and which provides for a permanent board of arbitration and conciliation to handle all disputes between railways and their employees, is credited largely to the efforts of Mr. Clark. Mr. Clark is a native of New York and is forty-six years old.

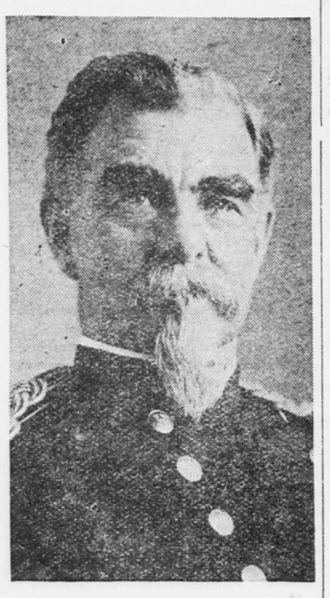
The man selected as a practical coal miner, Thomas H. Watkins of Scranton, started life as a digger of coal. Tiring of the pick, he secured employment in a miners' company store. He managed to save some money and organized the firm of Simpson & Watkins and opened a company store under an agreement with the operators. In this way Mr. Watkins made money enough to buy coal lands, which returned golden profits.

Mr. Watkins, it is said, was the real promoter of the short lived Wyoming and Kingston railroad. The building of this road was a part of a movement by the individual operators to fight the coal barons. This enterprise forced the big roads to purchase at a large price. Mr. Watkins is said to have made a fortune in the transaction.

Mr. Watkins' friends have often likened him to President Roosevelt.



GENERAL JOHN M. WILSON.

He is about forty-five years old and does not look unlike the president. He is tall, has broad, square shoulders and wears a short cropped gray mustache.

Right Rev. John Lancaster Spalding, bishop of Peoria, is a scion of a great sacerdotal family linked with the early days and best traditions of Catholicity in America. He is the scholar, philosopher, litterateur and educator of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States.

Bishop Spalding is a native of Kentucky, and his uncle, under whose care he was trained, was the great Martin John Spalding, archbishop of Baltimore, one of the church's intellectual giants of the last century.

It has been stated that Bishop Spalding was the special selection of the president, and, although not personally known to the president, there has long been a bond of sympathy between them because of the strongly similar sentiments expressed in their writings, notably the intense Americanism of both.

In the bituminous coal strike of 1900 Bishop Spalding, through the Rev. J. Y. Power, a priest of his diocese at Spring Valley, Ill., where John Mitchell lives, exerted a potent influence in the preservation of order among the miners and in the final settlement of the strike. Bishop Spalding is especially noted as a clear and logical thinker, possessed of great lucidity of expression, and has frequently been styled the "modern Emerson."

General John M. Wilson, the military member of the commission, started out to earn his own living when he was little more than twelve years old. He was born in the District of Columbia sixty-five years ago and became a page in the senate in 1849. He thus knew Clay, Webster and Calhoun, Thomas H. Benton, Stephen A. Douglas and Salmon P. Chase as a popular boy knows such men and is able to recall some of their feats of oratory.

General Wilson entered West Point in time to graduate in 1860. He fought through the civil war and was several times brevetted for gallantry. He became chief of engineers in 1897, which position he held until retirement in 1901.

Judge George Gray of the United States circuit court is a native of Delaware. He was sent by President McKinley as a member of the Paris peace commission to draft the treaty with Spain. After his return to this country he was appointed United States circuit judge. Judge Gray was senator from Delaware from 1884 to 1899.

Judge Gray was graduated from Princeton in 1859 and studied law at Harvard. He practiced law in his native state and served as its attorney general. He was a delegate to the Democratic national conventions of 1876, 1880 and 1884. When the present chief justice of the United States supreme court was appointed, Judge Gray's name was mentioned for the place, but President Cleveland desired to select an older man.

When it was announced that the operators had asked that one of the members of the proposed board of arbitration should be a United States judge, Judge Gray's name immediately suggested itself.

Edward Wheeler Parker, although the youngest member of the commission, is recognized as one of the principal authorities on coal conditions in the United States. For twelve years he has been engaged in gathering coal statistics in connection with the United States bureau of geological survey. Mr. Parker is the editor of the Engineering and Mining Journal. He is forty-two years old and lives in New York city.

Carroll D. Wright, the recorder of the commission, has spent years in the study of the relations between capital and labor. He has been United States commissioner of labor since the organization of the bureau in 1885.

These are the men who have before them the task of adjusting the differences of a contest between capital and labor which for more than five months caused us a lot of domestic perplexity and almost disorganized the business of the nation.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Railroads Are Overtaxed by the Extraordinary Volume of Business

New York, Oct. 25.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: No better evidence of industrial and commercial activity is needed than the present inadequate transporting facilities. Every form of railway equipment has been increased and perfected during the past few years to an extent that appears almost excessive, yet the nation's business has more than kept pace.

Unseasonably mild weather has retarded retail trade at many points, yet the movement of goods is fully sustained by undiminished preparatio is for future sales.

Coke is still the vital factor in the iron and steel situation. Not only has no improvement occurred, but the supply of fuel is falling further behind, and the outlook is alarming. If the railroads cannot get coke to the furnaces now, it is obvious that traffic will be further congested when snow falls.

It is still conspicuous in the cotton goods market that buyers are slow to anticipate future requirements, apparently having confidence in cheaper raw material. There is a steady absorption for immediate requirements which prevents any accumulation of supplies. No improvement appears in the demand for men's wear, woolen or worsted fabrics. Silk goods are firm, with a scarcity in many descriptions.

Deliveries of footwear on old orders are very heavy and New England producers are receiving fair contracts for staple lines running into next March.

Nations Parted by Prejudice

Dundee, Oct. 25.—Andrew Carnegie was the principal figure in a series of functions held here yesterday, which included the laying of the foundation stone for the first of five branch libraries to which Mr. Carnegie has contributed $185,000. Mr. Carnegie made a speech in which he strongly urged a better understanding between Britons and Americans. He said that only prejudice kept these English-speaking peoples apart and that if he could do anything to bring them together he would consider that his life had not been lived in vain.

Part of Mastadon Unearthed

Paris, Ills., Oct. 25.—While digging a ditch nine miles northwest of Paris, Charles Fletcher and James Murray unearthed the remains of a full-sized mastodon. Seven feet of the right tusk were intact, which was attached to the skull. All the upper teeth were also well preserved. Those on the right were attached to the tusk and upper part of the skull. The earth in all directions of the find will be dug up in an effort to locate the remainder of the skeleton.

Date Set For Evacuation

London, Oct. 25.—The foreign office has advanced no stipulations which are likely to obstruct the evacuation of Shanghai, Great Britain having concurred in the proposal to evacuate that city. Nov. 1 is the date proposed for the joint evacuation of the French, German and British forces there, but some delay is probable. The conditions of the evacuation, however, are still under consideration.

Death of Marshall Waggoner

Detroit, Oct. 25.—Marshall Waggoner, whose conversion from a widely known materialistic infidel to an equally aggressive Christian upon the death of his wife was accompanied by the public burning of his extensive library some years ago, died here last night. He was nearly 90 years of age and had been in a senile decline for several years.

Liberal Toward Loyal Transvaalers

London, Oct. 25.—The Daily Mail says it understands that the government will next week ask parliament to vote a grant of $10,000,000 for the benefit of those residents of the Transvaal who remained loyal to Great Britain during the war in South Africa, in addition to the $13,000,000 granted under the peace treaty.

Numerous Marine Mishaps

St. Johns, Oct. 25.—Another marine disaster has been reported here, five men being drowned by the foundering of a craft off Fogo. The total of the casualties among the fisher folk during the past few weeks is extremely large, and the total of lost fishing vessels for the year promises to reach an abnormal figure.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure:

"I suffered agonizing pain in the left breast and between my shoulders from heart trouble. My heart would palpitate, flutter, then skip beats, until I could no longer lie in bed. Night after night I walked the floor, for to lie down would have meant sudden death. My condition seemed almost hopeless when I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, but it helped me from the first. Later I took Dr. Miles' Nervine with the Heart Cure and the effect was astonishing. I earnestly implore similar sufferers to give these remedies a trial."

BRAINTREE.

Town Meeting next Wednesday night.

Jane Minot Gushee, widow of the late William A. Gushee, died at the residence of Mr. H. Willie Simonds, Tremont street, Sunday morning, October 19th, at 3.45 o'clock.

It is very evident that the people of Braintree are opposed to socialist rallies being held on Sunday.

Braintree is becoming a business center; two corporations are to locate here and employ over one thousand men.

Capt. John M. Levangie took a party out in his yacht Zig Zag, the first of the week for a day's cruise.

On Tuesday Mrs. George Sumner returned from the hospital greatly improved in health.

Pond and Mayflower Park schools had no session last Tuesday the day being "teachers' visiting day."

Hatch & Grinnell, shoe manufacturers, are to occupy Closson's shoe factory when vacated by Rice & Hutchins.

Mrs. C. A. Belcher entertained class one of the First church Sunday school at her home Tuesday.

Mrs. E. C. Bryant of River street entertained the Willing Workers of the First Congregational church last Monday.

William May has been grading the ground around Mr. H. F. Arnold's new house, Cleveland avenue, and laying out Putman avenue.

Miss Almira E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Fuller, celebrated her sixth birthday Monday afternoon by entertaining about ten of her neighbors. She was the recipient of several presents, among them being a five dollar gold piece from her grandfather Fuller. Games were played and refreshments served.

W. P. Mercer has put in an incandescent light near the residence of B. F. Spear, on Liberty street, which is much appreciated by the residents of that locality.

The J. P. S. A. were entertained Tuesday evening at the residence of Charles O. Miller on Liberty street. At the close of the business meeting Mr. Bailey read a very interesting essay from the works of Prentice Mulford entitled "The Drawing Power of the Mind." Arrangements are being made to give the first free lecture of the season in the school hall early in December.

The whist party in G. A. R. hall, Thursday evening under the auspices of the Ladies Aid society auxilary to the S. of V. was largely attended.

Rice and Hutchins, extensive shoe manufacturers, will erect at once a five story shoe factory on Pearl street, South Braintree, east of railroad track and adjoining the tracks of the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. The building will be fifty feet wide and over two hundred feet long. A factory of that size accommodates about 400 employes.

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. FASHION HINTS.

A Dainty Theatre Bodice—Of Liberty Silk Over Taffeta.

With the signs of approaching warm weather our heavy and much trimmed satin and peau de soi waists are found too uncomfortable and we long for lighter garments to wear to the theatre. A very dainty waist is of pale blue liberty silk over taffeta of the same shade and is trimmed with ribbon-run beading. It has something of a bolero effect, as the lower part consists of plaited chiffon which blouses slightly over the belt. An attractive chiffon jabot completes the garniture. The stitching is all done with Corticelli silk. When finished this makes a very attractive waist.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S WIFE.

She Is Really Her Husband's Business Partner and Acts It.

"In England," says Ainslee's Magazine, "a man's wife is in reality his partner, and whether or not the two are in harmony with each other in affection in all material things they recognize that their fortunes are irrevocably bound together, that the interests of both are quite identical and that each has just as strong a motive for making things go well as has the other, since they share equally the labor and the reward therefrom. They may have their private disagreements, but they front the world together. The wife takes the keenest interest in the most minute details of everything that affects her husband's welfare. She knows his income to a penny. She manages her household as a chancellor of the exchequer manages the nation's outlay, so that the annual budget shall not only avoid a deficit and shall accurately balance, but so that it shall show a surplus. She will practice a rigid economy if necessary, and in doing so she will feel that she is merely carrying out her share of the marriage contract. It is the man's part to make money; it is her part to help him save it. She plans nothing for herself apart from him. She cannot think of him as in anything apart from her. If he is in political life, she enters into his ambitions with intelligence and zeal. She will write his letters for him and entertain his constituents. She will study the bluebooks and teach herself to understand the public questions with which he has to deal, so that she may discuss them with him and follow his career intelligently. She belongs to him, in fact, as he belongs to her. There is not much display of sentiment in an English household after the first year of married life has ended, but there is the bond of a common interest which grows stronger every day and every year and which gives to man and wife a unity of purpose and of feeling that will beyond comparison outlast the cobweb tissues of emotionalism."

He Was a Butcher.

"Now, I rather pride myself on my ability to read character," said the man who was given to buying detective tales, "and yet why should I? It is really a very simple thing; requires nothing but close observation. For instance, it is easy to tell a man's occupation. His facial expression, his actions, even his dress, are stamped by his daily work. You see that man sitting opposite us? Well, I am just as sure as though he had told me that he is a barber."

"You are mistaken," replied his friend. "That man is a butcher."

"Impossible!" exclaimed the amateur detective. "You never saw a butcher with slim white hands, like his."

"Perhaps not," admitted the other, "but he is a butcher just the same."

"How do you know he is?"

"How do I know? Why, the scoundrel shaved me once."—Household Guest.

Why He Objected.

"But, papa," pleaded the millionaire's daughter in behalf of the poor young man she wished to marry, "surely it is no disgrace to work for a living?"

"N-no, my dear—no. What I object to is being the one who is worked for it."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

New Millinery Device.

As a substitute for birds in hat garniture, says Bird Love, a dealer offers fish, "the latest Parisian creation." Not improbable that another season may find fashion supporting the finny tribe—not in parlor aquariums, but upon my lady's crown, says the New York Press. No end of color schemes may be found in the proper juxtaposition of crabs, lobsters, eels and goldfish, not to forget the lovely minnows!

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

"The Awakening of Pipp," a farcical sketch that has been scoring a big hit in the leading vaudeville theatres throughout the country, is to be played for the first time in Boston, at Keith's next week, by Charles E. Grapewin, a clever character actor, and Anna Chance, both of whom are well and favorably known to the patrons of this theatre. Other entertainers who are announced to appear are; Mayme Remington and her pickaninnies, in "coon" songs; Mlle. Rachel Laya, a noted French vocalist; Julian Rose, popular Hebrew comedian and parody singer; Satsuma, a clever Japanese juggler; the Baggensens, in a combination of sleight-of-hand and acrobatic comedy; Eddie Mack, dancing specialist, and Stack and Milton, clever horizontal bar performers. Papinta, the "myriad" dancer, is underlined for the week of Nov. 3.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

Next Monday afternoon comes "The Volunteer Organist," which visits Boston for the first time this season and which is certain to attract large audiences who delight in pleasing comedy and stirring episodes. The reports which precedes the coming of this attraction speak of it in terms of the highest praise and the play has met with unqualified success wherever it has been seen. The play is elaborately staged, the company carrying everything used in the production. The principal scene shows the interior of a large church with its choir gallery and organ loft and in this act occurs one of the most startling features of the play. The company is a large one and is said to be first-class in every respect. The engagement is for one week only, with the regular daily matinees at two o'clock and the evening performances at eight.

PARK THEATRE.

Preparations for the elaborate revival of "Faust," by Corse Payton's stock company at the Park Theatre, have been in progress for sometime, and it will begin a run of one week only next Monday, Oct. 27. This familiar stage classic has not been in Boston for several seasons, and its presentation here under such favorable auspices will be more than doubly welcome. The stage settings and effects will be in every way complete, the costumes will be strikingly appropriate and the entire production will be notable for its beauty and effectiveness. Marguerite will be played by Una Abell Brinker, and the cast will require the services of Mr. Payton's entire company. It should be remembered that afternoon performances are given every day at the Park Theatre, thus offering ladies and children an opportunity to see Mr. Payton's productions without the inconvieuce and discomfort sometimes attendant upon going to the theatre in the evening. At the close of the performance Tuesday afternoon, the weekly reception and tea will be held on the stage. All ladies and children in the audience are invited to meet Una Abell Brinker, the leading lady.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Next week's attraction at the Castle Square Theatre will be the dramatized version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's "A Lady of Quality," the author of this popular novel having had the aid of Mr. Stephen Townesend in making the play, which closely follows the book in its dramatic form. The fascinating Clorinda Wildairs is presented at the age of sixteen in black satin breeches, and from that time the play shows the chief events of her career, till after the death of Sir John Oxon, she becomes definitely engaged to the Duke of Osmonde. In one respect, however, the book is abandoned, for Anne, sister Anne, does not die, and the Duke, ere marriage, overhears a confession, or a partial confession, of Clorinda to Anne of the homicide and its justifying circumstances. The leading characters have been assigned as follows: Duke of Osmonde, John Craig; Earl of Dunstanwolde, Louis Thiel; Sir Jeoffrey Wildairs, James L. Seeley; Sir Christopher Crowell, John T. Craven; Dick Hardy, William J. Hasson; George Foxall, W. C. Mason; Chaplain, Lindsay Morrison; Clorinda Wildairs, Lillian Lawrence; Anne Wildairs, Mary Sanders; Lady Betty Tantillion, Jane Irving; Mistress Wimpole, Leonora Bradley. The usual distribution of chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

The Columbia theatre has opened its regular season with a musical extravaganza that is undoubtedly one of the most magnificently mounted pieces that has been played in Boston, both scenic and costuming effects being on a lavish scale that few producers, outside of Manager Chamberlyn, would dare attempt. "The Defender," by Allen Lowe, the well know newspaper man, and Chas. Dennee, of the Conservatory of Music, was originally produced at this house last Spring and withdrawn at the height of its success to fill previous bookings in New York and other large cities. That this gorgeous production, representing as it does an enormous expenditure of time, energy and money closely approaching the $40,000 mark, has fulfilled the expectations of the management is a matter of theatrical history, as each city where it has appeared the newspaper critics have been of one mind as to its merits, the general concensus of opinion being "one of the brightest and most pretentious of offerings that this indefatigable manager has yet presented." So great was the demand of the Boston theatre-goers that Manager Chamberlyn was obliged to cancel outstanding dates to bring it back to the home of its nativity, and that it was a wise move is evinced by the crowded houses that have nightly greeted "The Defender" during the past week. The evening performance begins promptly at eight and the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees at two o'clock.

The Bank of England.

The Bank of England employs about a thousand people, pays a quarter of a million in wages and £35,000 a year in pensions.

Atmospheric Pressure.

The atmospheric pressure on the body of the average man is 32,400 pounds. The ordinary rise and fall of the barometer increases or decreases this pressure 2,500 pounds.

Oil Stains.

To remove oil stains make a paste with fuller's earth and soft coal water and spread it thinly on the stains. Let it remain for some hours and then brush off with a stiff brush. If the stains have not disappeared, repeat the process.

DEATH OF MRS STANTON

One of the World's Leaders In Woman Suffrage

MISS ANTHONY'S TRIBUTE

To the Memory of Friend Who Forged Thunderbolts For Her to Fire—Believed In Inmutable Law and Had No Faith In Another World

New York, Oct. 27.—Elizabeth Cady Stanton, the well known woman suffragist, died yesterday at her home in this city. Old age was given as the cause of death. She was conscious almost to the last. Four sons and two daughters were with Mrs. Stanton when she died. She was 87 years old.

ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 27.—The news of the death of Elizabeth Cady Stanton fell with crushing weight upon Susan B. Anthony, who had planned to go to New York on Nov. 12 to assist the venerable advocate of woman's suffrage in the celebration of her 87th birthday. Miss Anthony said:

"Through the early days, when the world was against us, we stood together. Mrs. Stanton was always a courageous woman, a leader of thought and new movements. I always called her the philosopher and statesman of our movement. She was a most finished writer, and every state paper presented to congress or the state legistures in the early days was written by Mrs. Stanton.

"I cannot express myself at all as I feel; I am too crushed to say much, but if she had outlived me she would have found fine words with which to express our friendship."

"What period of your lives gave you the greatest pleasure?" was asked.

"When we were digging together. When she forged the thunderbolts and I fired them. The greatest campaign we ever made together was in '69 at the constitutional convention held in Kansas for suffrage, and the same year in New York state.

"In spite of her big family, to whom she was devoted, and the great amount of work she did outside her home, she was one of the finest housekeepers I ever saw.

"The last time I saw Mrs. Stanton was in June. She talked about the other side," said Miss Anthony, "but had no faith that there was any other world. She always said this was a beautiful world and she wanted to stay here as long as possible. She believed in the immutable law in everything, and did not believe in any special providence for herself or anyone else."

Miss Anthony and Mrs. Stanton have campaigned together all over this country. They went several times to California in the old days and are the most picturesque figures the woman suffrage movement ever had. They went to England together in 1883.

Stars Leave National League

Chicago, Oct. 27.—The players signed by American league teams for next season have been announced from President Johnson's office. Nineteen of the National league's most brilliant stars have gone over to the Johnson forces for next year and the champion Pittsburg team has been absolutely riddled to form the club which will represent New York in the American league circuit. Aside from the wholesale raid on Pittsburg several of the other National clubs have suffered.

Unfortunate Mariners Safe

St. George, B. W. I., Oct. 27.—A boat containing Captain Kay and his wife and the crew of the British bark Florence B. Edgett, from Bear River, N. S., for Buenos Ayres, arrived here yesterday. Their vessel was dismasted in a hurricane Sept. 18 and was abandoned Oct. 15 in a waterlogged condition. They suffered many handships and were without nautical instruments in the boat, but managed to reach Grenada safely.

DISTRICT OPTION CAMPAIGN

Receives Help at Boston From British Temperance Advocates

Boston, Oct. 27.—Lady Henry Somerset was greeted by one of the largest audiences which could be accommodated in Tremont temple yesterday at the W. C. T. U. meeting held to advocate the district option bill for Boston, which is to be submitted to the voters for acceptance or rejection. Two addresses were given, one by Lady Somerset and the other by Rev. Henry Sanders of London. Mrs. Somerset's address was a plea for a patriotism that makes the welfare of the world its own.

In discussing district option for Boston, she advocated putting the responsibility for the presence of saloons upon each community. Teach them to vote against the saloon in the places where they know them. She referred to the fact that there are no saloons on many magnificent streets in the city, but in the narrow streets they are seen doing their deadly work just as they are in England. She urged that there be no rest until the people of the poorer districts have the same opportunity to drive out the saloons as do the people of the wealthier districts.

Rev. Mr. Sanders said the history of this country has been a history of the uplifting and the betterment of mankind. He contrasted the matter of temperance reform in this country and in England, to the disadvantage of the latter, and went on to speak of the suffering and misery caused by the drink evil. He urged that the church could give no sanction to this evil to the extent of receiving money from those engaged in the saloon business.

Says Shooting Was Accidental

Laconia, N. H., Oct. 27.—Israel Willard, aged 13, who was a companion of Ara Bunker, the victim of the shooting affair at Belmont, admits that he was the cause of the shooting and that it was an accident. He says that himself and Bunker were wending their way through a thicket of underbrush when he stubbed his toe and fell. His fowling piece was discharged and Bunker received the full charge at the base of the right lung. It is the opiuon of the surgeons that death from hemorrhage resulted in a few minutes.

Portland, Me., Oct. 27.—Josiah H. Drummond, A. M., LL. D., whose prominence in Masonic work was known throughout the United States, and whose eminence as a jurist, politician, mathematician and genealogist was almost as well established, died suddenly while walking along Congress street Saturday. He was born at Winslow, Me., in 1827. He served in both branches of the legislature.

Probable Work of Incendiary

Warren, Mass., Oct. 27.—A four-story wooden tenement house owned by James T. Two Men Drowned

Hyannis, Mass., Oct. 27.—An overturned boat caused a double drowning in Lewis bay yesterday, the victims being Martin Lenan of this town and Cornelius Harrington of Boston, both railroad men. Boston Boy Takes His Own Life

Boston, Oct. 27.—Carl Meyer, aged 17, living with his parents, killed himself by shooting yesterday. It is said the lad had been denied permission to engage in athletic sports, owing to his poor health, and disappointment is given as a possible reason for ending his life. His parents and friends, however, believe the shooting was accidental.

Lynn Man Badly Hurt

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 27.—Two men who were driving along Munroe street just after 6 o'clock yesterday morning found Arthur Leighton lying in the road and removed him to a hospital. His skull is fractured and he is in a critical condition. The police have been unable to learn anything regarding the manner in which he received his injuries.

Still Searching For Young Clark

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 27.—Search, which was unavailing, for traces of missing Wilbur Clark was conducted through the Essex woods around Chebacco pond yesterday by several parties, one led by H. W. Clark, father of the missing boy. The boy disappeared June 17.

BIG OUTPUT OF COAL THIS WEEK

The Method of Procedure as to Taking Testimony to be Considered by Commission Today.

Washington, Oct. 27.—All is in readiness for the meeting this afternoon of the anthracite coal commission. All the members of the commission are in the city and most of the operators or their representatives are here. The meeting will be called to order at 2 o'clock and the wishes of both parties to the controversy will be considered as to the method of procedure in securing testimony. Plans for holding the public sessions, places of meeting and various other details necessary to be settled before the actual work of taking testimony can be begun will be decided. No testimony will be taken today.

It is said that very little evidence will be heard in Washington, as it is not the desire of the commission to compel the attendance of witnesses here when the evidence they have to give can be secured at greater convenience to them at or near their places of residence. The commission also will determine whether it will give hearings to persons not having a direct interest in the issues at stake between the miners and the operators, but who believe they can give advice of a practical character that will assist the commission in its work. Considerable evidence of this character was taken by the commission which reported on the Chicago strike, but unfortunately it was not of material value in assisting that body to arrive at its conclusions.

Five of the mine operators or their representatives arrived here last night. They included Bear of the Reading, Thomas of the Erie, Kerr, representing Fowler of the Ontario and Western; Wilcox of the Delaware and Hudson and Walter, representing the Lehigh Valley. They spent the time chatting in the lobby of the hotel, but refrained from discussing for publication their plans for today. The operators will hear the ideas that the commission has to make for undertaking the work in hand, and if necessary will suggest such changes as will best secure the results desired.

Mitchell's Efforts Appreciated

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 27.—President Mitchell was in conference with the district presidents, Nicholls, Duffy and Fahy, for several hours yesterday. He outlined his case as he will present it to the board of arbitration, in behalf of the miners, and the same received the approval of the district presidents.

President Mitchell was presented with a gold badge and gold watch yesterday by the Polish, Lithuanian and Slavish members of the United Mine Workers. The badge bears his monogram "J. M." in diamonds just underneath the bar containing the pin by which it is fastened to the coat lapel. Below this is the button of the United Mine Workers of America, from which hangs a pendant—a tiny pick and shovel with miner's lamp in the centre, underneath which is a medallion. The seal of the organization in the centre is in the form of a breaker boy standing in the midst of a bank of coal. The presentation took place at President Mitchell's headquarters and a large crowd listened to the speeches of presentation and acceptance.

Shortly before 4 o'clock Mitchell left headquarters for the Lehigh Valley depot to go to Washington to attend today's meeting of the anthracite coal strike commission. He was accompanied to the station by a large and enthusiastic crowd and when he boarded the train he was cheered and wished godspeed.

A large force of men were at work yesterday clearing up the mines for general resumption today. It is said nearly all the collieries are now in shape for work and that there will be a heavy output of coal today.

Non-Union Men Drubbed

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 27.—Half a dozen non-unionists employed at the Oxford colliery of the People's Coal company were given a sound drubbing and chased half a mile through a gangway yesterday by a crowd of union employes of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company's Bellevue colliery. President Crawford of the People's company made complaint to the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company and the latter is endeavoring to discover what men participated in the assault.

Deputies Relieved From Duty

Shamokin, Pa., Oct. 27.—One hundred deputies who were on guard at the collieries in this region during the strike were sent home last night, under orders to be ready to return at any time when notified, as it is feared there will be local strikes if all non-union men do not resign their positions.

Disease Carrying Off Soldiers

Kingston, Ja., Oct. 27.—Steamer Heroynia reached here yesterday from Colon. Her officers report that considerable fighting is going on in the interior of that country. At Savanilla the government soldiers are dying at an alarming rate from fever and privations.

Envoys Feel Gratified

Boston, Oct. 27.—John Dillon, M. P., and Michael Davitt, two of the Irish envoys, have gone to New York after their New England visit. Mr. Davitt said the spirit and enthusiasm displayed by the great gatherings far surpassed anything he had anticipated and left no doubt in his mind as to the influence which is being exerted by the United Irish League of America.

Passengers Badly Scared

East Liverpool, O., Oct. 27.—While descending a steep hill in this city yesterday a street car became unmanageable, the brakes refusing to work on account of leaves on the track, and it dashed wildly down the hill, left the rails and ran nearly a square over the paving bricks, finally stopping only a short distance from the river. A panic prevailed among the passengers.

Burned by Carbolic Acid

Buffalo, Oct. 27.—Gertrude Axmacher, 18 years old, who lives with her parents in Elm street, was badly burned about the face by carbolic acid thrown by an unknown woman last night. A woman wearing a heavy veil called Miss Axmacher to the door and when she appeared dashed the contents of a vial into her face and fled. No arrest has been made.

Georgia Town Flooded

Brunswick, Ga., Oct. 27.—As a result of continued heavy rains for 48 hours five blocks in the centre of the city are under water and considerable damage has been done. The city fire department is under water and both jails are flooded. The Brunswick Electrical Supply company has been put entirely out of business by the water.

Cholera Scourge In Philippines

Manila, Oct. 27.—Cholera is gaining a strong foothold on the island of Mindanao. It is expected to spread there as it has elsewhere in the islands. The disease continues to be bad in the island of Panay, but it is light elsewhere. It has disappeared from Manila. The cases reported up to date exceed 100,000.

Strikers Rejected Arbitration

Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 27.—There has been no apparent effort to terminate the strike on the Hudson Valley railway since the strikers rejected the offers to settle the questions in dispute by arbitration. The company yesterday operated its schedule of cars, but at longer intervals.

Swayne's Forces March On

London, Oct. 27.—A dispatch from Simla, India, reports that Colonel Swayne and his forces are continuing their march from Bohotle to Berbera, Somaliland, East Africa, and that they are not pursued.

Good Afternoon.

With coal at retail in New York for $6.50, prices in Boston and vicinity must soon drop.

The Herald classes the Ninth and Tenth Congressional districts as "Democratic sure," but there may be a surprise. On a full vote the Tenth will be close.

Congratulations to President Roosevelt who is 44 years old today. No other President was as young when he was inaugurated, but few have been more successful or popular.

A study of the Assessors aggregates shows that our government, both local and State, is almost taxation without representation. Only 1600 of the 4800 voters are property taxpayers, and 1600 or less than one half of the 3465 resident individual taxpayers are voters. These figures are somewhat startling.

President Roosevelt believes that what the navy needs is ships that can go to sea and stay there and take care of themselves for long periods at a time, and yet be able to put up the stiffest kind of a fight. That sounds strenuous, but these are the kind the country wants, and the kind that Quincy desires to build.

While the candidates for Representatives are almost too numerous, there is almost a scarcity among Republicans for Councilmen from ward. Three are to be nominated in each ward, and some of the wards have only three candidates. The voters, however, had an opportunity to place in nomination as many as they wished. Several of the present Councilmen are not candidates for reelection and will be missed.

A city forester might be appreciated in these days when having no coal, every one is out getting wood. Many trees need to be cut out and might be given to the needy. It is criminal to lose them. Trees bordering all streets should be marked, either to indicate those that must be undisturbed or those that may be taken. Again in several places, notably near the Wollaston station on Beale street the thick roadside growth is a menance to safety. It would save the expense of hiring the work done and help the poor, if these superfluous trees could be taken out. Again Elm avenue needs care. The dangerous hole on East Elm avenue has been there all summer. The poison ivy which abounds in such profusion on Elm avenue, near Willow street should be rooted out as well as the poison oak and the deadly night shade that tempts with its crimson berries on Brook street and Beale street near Highland avenue.

Gained Forty Pounds in Thirty Days.

For several months our younger brother had been troubled with indigestion. He had tried several remedies but got no benefit from them. We purchased some of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and he commenced taking them. Inside of thirty days he had gained forty pounds in flesh. He is now fully recovered. We have a good trade on the tablets.—Holley Bros., Merchants, Long Branch, Mo. For sale by all druggists.

A STRAIGHT ISSUE

Elisha Packard vs. Charles M. Bryant.

At the Republican Caucuses.

Seven Candidates for Councilmen at Large.

The Republican City Committee met Saturday evening to open nomination papers for Mayor, Councilman at large and School Committee at large.

There were but two papers filed for Mayor, namely those of Charles M. Bryant, the present incumbent of the office, and ex-Councilman Elisha Packard.

Both of these papers were largely signed, those of Mr. Bryant containing 164 names and those of Mr. Packard 57 names. On both papers the signers were from all wards.

For the five Councilmen at large there were seven papers. Each ward has one and Ward Three two.

From Ward One, Councilman Andrew Stewart again becomes a candidate.

From Ward Two, Councilman George E. Adams who has served from the ward is the candidate.

From Ward Three, Councilman Thomas W. Smith who has been elected from the ward desires to run at large, and ex-Councilman William T. Spargo will also try for the nomination.

From Ward Four, Arthur W. Loud, a new man, will try his luck.

From Ward Five, Councilman Walter F. Nichols who has served as ward councilman becomes the candidate.

From Ward Six, President Charles Alden, will again be a candidate at large.

There was but one paper filed for School Committee at large, that of James H. Churchill of Atlantic who was elected to fill out the unexpired term of Charles F. Merrick.

Ward Nominations.

In giving the names of the gentlemen from Ward One who filed papers as candidates for the Council from the Ward, one name was inadvertantly omitted, that of Perley A. Glass. This makes four candidates from the ward, namely, Mr. Glass, Lewis Bass, Jr., Andrew A. Meyer and Charles H. Hardwick.

The names of the candidates for Councilman from Ward Two have not been publicly announced as yet, owing to a question as to the legality of some of the papers. The matter was taken to the City Committee Saturday evening. It is understood, however, that the names of the five gentlemen who desire to represent that ward are: Alexander W. Thompson, Joseph L. Whiton, Jr., Eugene R. Stone, Elijah Barrows and Capt. Hardy.

It is understood that W. H. Broughton, one of the three gentlemen named as candidates for councilmen from Ward Five has declined to have his name used. In this connection it might be stated that but two names were filed in this ward and the name of Mr. Broughton was the one selected by the Ward Committee to fill the vacancy. The committee claim the right to select the third man when it meets.

Cottages Entered.

It was reported to the police this morning that the cottage of A. Legard on Darrow street, Houghs Neck, had been broken into. Just what has been taken is not known as the owner has not visited the cottage as yet. It is also said that other cottages have been entered.

But Little Demand for Coal.

City Messenger Tirrell commenced to receive orders for 100-pound bags of coal as arranged by the Relief Committee. Not more than half a dozen orders were received this morning.

Not a Candidate.

Much has been said first and last about the candidacy of John P. Bigelow for Representative. First, it was that he had filed nomination papers, then that he had not, and still again that he had. As a matter of fact, Mr. Bigelow did not file his papers, and is therefore not a candidate. On the day upon which the time for filing papers expired, Mr. Bigelow went to the State House to file his papers. There was a technicality in them, however, and the ballot commissioners gave him twenty-four hours in which to amend them. Before the expiration of that time Mr. Bigelow experienced a change of heart and the papers remained in Quincy. This means that there will be but eight candidates for Representative. But eight is too many for two places.

Annual Conference.

The Norfolk conference of Unitarian and other christian churches will be held Thursday, October thirtieth, 1902, with the First parish in Dorchester (Meeting-house Hill,) Rev. E. R. Shippen, minister.

At 11.00 A. M. there will be a discussion of the question "What can we do in Common?" by three ministers of Norfolk county churches, viz: Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern, Congregational church South Braintree; Rev. L. O. Williams, Universalist church, Stoughton; Rev. E. C. Butler, First Parish (Unitarian) Quincy.

At 2.30 P. M. A layman's meeting. Address, "The power of our expectation," by Mr. William C. Bates, of Fall River, followed by George Wigglesworth, Esq., of Milton, and other laymen.

Did he Prove Competent?

Editors Daily Ledger:

The letter of "A Republican Voter," in your issue of Saturday, relative to the candidacy of Representative McKnight deserves more than a thought in passing. It contains arguments which to my mind are irrefutable. And in one terse sentence in the Ledger of Friday you express the real situation. There is only one question that should be asked, viz: Did McKnight prove competent last year? If he did he ought to be given the customary second term. The premature ambitions of other candidates can well wait until we have done the square thing in this matter. Even in the game of politics fair play should not be disregarded. The district will be serving its own interests by doing justice to Mr. McKnight. Let's re-elect him. John D. Mackay.

At Home at Atlantic.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Curtin, of Atlantic, was the scene of a very happy gathering Saturday evening. The occasion was an at home given by their daughter, Miss Emma Gay Curtin, who entertained a large number of friends.

Miss Curtin showed herself to be a most agreeable hostess and was ably assisted by Miss Alice Coe, Miss Corinna Wilde, Miss Helen Curtain and Miss Lillian Waterhouse.

The rooms were prettily decorated with fall flowers, crysanthemums and autumn foliage, and the party were kept merry during the evening with music both vocal and instrumental.

Both in Ninetieth Year.

Two long residents of the city, both women in their ninetieth year, passed away on Saturday and Sunday. One was but two months older than the other, and they died within a few hours of each other. The first, Mrs. Dorothea C. Jones of Granite street, was the widow of James Jones; the second, Mrs. Lucretia Savil Pierce of Revere road, was the widow of Charles L. Pierce.

Does Not Charge.

Henry H. Faxon takes exception to the statement in a communication in Saturday's Ledger, signed by "Not a tenant," that he charges one dollar for what the regular City Scavenger charges sixty cents. Mr. Faxon says he never charged anything and that the charges of the City Scavenger are from $1.65 to $5.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

There will be a matinee whist in I. O. O. F. hall on Thursday afternoon.

Miss May Melzard of Botolph street has resigned as a teacher in Quincy and accepted a school in Malden.

Miss Bertha Waldron has been seriously ill at her parents' residence on Granite street the past week.

The surplus poles on Washington and Hancock streets near the fountain in City Square have been removed.

The 5.28 outward evening train, the return of which was petitioned for by Ward Six, made its first stop at Atlantic Saturday and was well patronized.

Miss Grace Quimby of Pasadena, California, who has been the guest of her uncle, N. B. Furnald and family the past week left today for St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Mrs. George H. Sherwin with her two sons has gone to Southern Pines, South Carolina, to spend the winter with her sister, Mrs. Harry O. Parker formerly of Atlantic.

William M. Packard presided at the open air Socialist meeting in City Square, Saturday night. Addresses were made by Patrick Mahoney and John W. Sherman of Boston.

Capt. Charles W. Eddy will open his season at Music Hall next Monday, Nov. 3, with ladies night reduced price being made for the ladies. He will present his All Star Co., the Merry Makers.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Bradbury Jr. of Quincy, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marguerite M. Bradbury, to Edward R. Nichals, son of the late Mrs. N. C. Daniels of New Britain, Connecticut.

Atlantic people are very much gratified to learn that the 5.28 train from Boston and the 8.20 to Boston are to be given them again. These two trains were very largely used by Atlantic and the patrons felt very sore when they were deprived of them.

Pirovano—Spargo.

John F. Pirovano, one of the members of the fire department attached to the Central station, and Miss Mary R. Spargo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Spargo, were united in marriage Saturday evening. The ceremony took place at the residence of the groom's brother, 13 Brooks avenue, and was performed by William M. Marden, Esq. Mr. and Mrs. Pirovano were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Neil. They will reside in Milford, N. H., where Mr. Pirovano has been appointed manager of a granite manufacturing firm. Before leaving Quincy they will give a reception to their friends at Malnati hall.

ASSESSORS' AGGREGATES.

The City of Quincy Has 5,901 Property Taxpayers.

Total Number of Houses is 4,725, an Increase of 198 in a Year.

But 1,600 of the 4,800 Voters of the City are Property Taxpayers.

The Assessors' table of aggregates for May, 1902, is given below and is compared by the Ledger with the years 1901 and 1897, one and five years previously:

	1902.	1901.	1897.
Number of residents assessed on property:
Individuals,	3,465	3,415	3,272
All others,	654	626	598
Total,	4,119	4,041	3,870
Number of non-residents assessed on property:
Individuals,	1,572	1,585	1,233
All others,	210	186	140
Total,	1,782	1,771	1,373
Number of persons assessed:
On property,	5,901	5,812	5,243
Poll tax only,	5,771	5,373	4,533
Total,	11,672	11,185	9,776
Number of male poll assessed,	7,554	7,021	6,031
Tax on each male poll,	$2	$2	$2
Value of assessed personal estate:
Excluding resident bank stock	$2,839,850	$2,579,850	$2,268,100
Resident bank stock,	$182,642	$189,975	$186,546
Total,	$3,022,492	$2,769,825	$2,454,646
Value of assessed real estate:
Buildings, excluding land,	$9,685,275	$9,336,800	$7,876,000
Land, excluding buildings,	$9,448,925	$9,281,725	$7,681,500
Total,	$19,134,200	$18,618,525	$15,557,500
Total valuation of assessed estate,	$22,156,692	$21,388,350	$18,012,146
Tax for State, County and City purposes including overlayings:
On personal estate,	$52,592.62	$48,748.92	$46,147.34
On real estate,	$332,940.88	$326,452.28	$292,481.00
On polls,	$15,108.00	$14,042.00	$12,062.80
Total levy,	$400,641.50	$389,243.20	$350,690.34
Rate of Tax per $1000,	$17.40	$17.60	$18.80
Number of horses assessed,	1,329	1,331	1,352
Number of cows assessed,	631	710	637
Number of neat cattle other than cows,	9	9	0
Number of swine,	27	32	0
Number of dwelling houses,	4,725	4,527	3,941
Number of acres of land,	6,517	6,560	6,429

Comments and comparisons on the valuation were made at the time the tax rate was announced.

One of the surprises of the table of aggregates is that so few of the poll taxpayers are assessed on property. Subtracting 5,771, the number assessed a poll tax only, from 7,554, the number of male polls assessed, leaves but 1783 polls who are assessed on property. Some of these are not registered voters, so that the number of voters who are taxpayers may be less than 1700, and possibly less than 1600. Yet Quincy has over 4800 voters.

At the same time there are 3,465 individual residents of Quincy who are assessed on property. So that over one-half of the resident property taxpayers have no voice or vote in the city affairs.

The number of individual resident taxpayers increased 50 in one year and 193 in five years. The number of firms, corporations, etc., classed as "all others," increased 28 in one year and 56 in five years.

Again 1782 of the 5901 property taxpayers are non-residents, nearly one-third. The non-residents decreased 13 in one year, but made a net increase of 331 in five years. While the number residents increased 249 in five years, the non residents increased 409.

The Assessors of 1902 valued the buildings at $236,350 more than the land. In one year the increase in value of buildings was $348,475, and in five years $1,809,275. In one year the land values increased $167,200, and in five years $1,767,425.

The number of horses is 2 less than the previous years and 23 less than five years ago, and only one for every 20 of the population.

The Assessors report that the new Assessors' plans revealed considerable real estate not assessed, yet the table of aggregates tell a different story, as the number of acres assessed in 1902 was 42 less than in 1901.

Other interesting comparisons may be made.

Quincy is now a city of 4725 houses almost wholly homes for one or two familes, as is shown in part by the number of voters, which now aggregate 4808, but 33 more than the number of houses. The city has 5621 school children, or 896 in excess of the number of houses. The population is estimate at 28,105.

The following summary shows the progress in housebuilding, the year ending May 1, 1902 having been the best year since 1898, and exceeded but twice:

Year.	Houses.	Gain.
In 1880,	1,753	—
In 1881,	1,777	24
In 1882,	1,836	59
In 1883,	1,919	83
In 1884,	2,003	84
In 1885,	2,089	86
In 1886,	2,219	130
In 1887,	2,352	133
In 1888,	2,458	101
In 1889,	2,616	163
In 1890,	2,766	150
In 1891,	2,935	169
In 1892,	3,169	234
In 1893,	3,336	167
In 1894,	3,486	150
In 1895,	3,644	158
In 1893,	3,764	121
In 1897,	3,940	176
In 1898,	4,176	236
In 1899,	4,277	101
In 1900,	4,404	126
In 1901,	4,527	123
In 1902,	4,725	198

Seeking Damages.

George A. Ryden, who was discharged on the charge of dynamiting the house of George K. Ellis on July 3 last, has placed an attachment of $5,000 on the property of Mr. Ellis.

Norfolk County Booming.

There were recorded in Norfolk county last week 206 real estate transfers, which was 13 more than Suffolk county. Middlesex county was the only county to report more transfers.

Hewitson Associates.

The Edward Hewitson Associates who were entertained at the home of Mr. Walter E. Simmons on Saturday evening, had an attendance of between thirty and forty members. In the absence of President Harris Barbour, who is attending college, Vice President Linda Fowler called the meeting to order. After the reports were read and business transacted, plans for the following year were discussed. The meeting was then turned over to Mr. John Manning, chairman of the social committee. He introduced Mr. Rowley, a student at Harvard college, who gave some pleasing vocal selections accompanied by Mr. John Simmons on the piano. Mr. W. E. Simmons followed with humorous impersonations. A short intermission was next in order when refreshments were served by the host and hostess.

The remainder of the evening was taken up with brief addresses on the coal strike. The first speaker, Mr. Black of Harvard college, explained the causes that lead to the strike, and the condition of the miners and operators.

Mr. Comins of Wollaston, purchasing agent of coal for the B. & A. road, gave an instructive talk on coal. He told of the formation, and the difference between anthracite and bituminous coal. In conclusion he said, public opinion was the most important factor in reaching the end of the coal strike.

The committee in charge of the evening were John Manning, Roy Baker, Fred Mitchell and Joe Whittier.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the host and hostess for their hospitality.

After the meeting adjourned a few of the members remained to sing college and other songs. Mrs. Tenny, the founder of the club, has done much toward keeping it up to a high standard and the increase of membership over last year shows the interest felt by the community at large.

India for Christ.

A Sunday School concert was given by the Bible school of the Bethany church Sunday evening and was largely attended. The program given was the concert exercise "India for Christ." This included responsive scripture reading by the Superintendent and school; prayer by S. Scammell; solo "The Ninety and Nine" by Mrs. Fred Moore, map exercise conducted by Miss Atkins; responsive exercise, "India, a wonderful land;" recitation and response by Miss Nina Bates, Miss Mitt Bates, Miss Annie Sanderson and Miss Hazel Mowry; bits of India's Missionary history by Dr. C. T. Sherman's class; American Board Missions and Methods in India, by Superintendent and school; reading of a special letter from Samuel B. Capen, president of the American board, by Harry S. Bates; prayer by Albert L. Hayden; address by Rev. Mr. Hardy; responsive exercise by Superintendent and school. The exercises closed by repeating the Lord's prayer by the school in unison and benediction. Hymns were sung during the exercises.

King's Daughters.

The annual meeting of the King's Daughters of Quincy was held Saturday afternoon at the First church. It opened with devotional exercises in charge of Rev. Frank W. Pratt at 4 o'clock.

This was followed by an address by Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D.D., who made an appeal for the Floating Hospital. Lend-a-Hand society and the King's Daughters. Druing the afternoon Miss Carrie Follett Spear sang several solos.

In the evening the address was by John Anderson of Wollaston who spoke of the work of the Boston Floating Hospital. Solos were given by Mrs. Keys of Wollaston.

From 5.30 to 6.30 tea was served by the members of the Charitable Ten circle and a social hour enjoyed. Collections were taken for the Floating Hospital.

An invitation was received from the Reaper's circle of Christs church to meet with them next year.

—The corner stone was laid Sunday for the first Swedish church in Cambridge.

—Tortoise shell, as it comes from the West Indies, is coarse, dirty and lusterless, and only the most skilful and patient manipulation makes it the rich and beautiful material that it eventually becomes.

A GOOD RECORD.

McKnight and Creed Justified in Running Independent.

Practical Politics makes these comments relative to Independent Candidates:

"The reflection that 'Virtue is its own reward,' must be very consoling just at this time to many members of the legislature of 1902 who find that the consciousness of having performed their duty is likely to be the only recompense they are to receive.

"In a great many cases men who have made good records for conscientious and painstaking work have found themselves in the cold, so far as being renominated by their party was concerned, and simply because their opponents found time to put in hard work politically while the incumbents were attending to their duties at the state house.

"Opportunity is everything in politics, but it is not surprising that some of the men who feel that they have not been fairly dealt with by their party voters are now getting outside the party lines and are endeavoring to win as independent candidates the recognition which the party machine has denied them.

A very large number of instances of this sort might be cited, but it is enough to take two cases in point. Rep. D. W. Creed of Boston was one of the most faithful and efficient members of the committee on election laws last year. His whole course as a legislator was such as would ordinarily be expected to insure a return to the house, especially as his district was one in which it had been customary to give each representative at least two terms.

"Unfortunately the democrats of his district paid less attention to Mr. Creed's record than to the argument of expediency, and as a result, in order to vindicate himself, he is obliged to run as an indipendent candidate against the regular nominees."

"Probably no first year man in the house of last year had a more enviable record for effectiveness than Rep. McKnight of Quincy. His knowledge of insurance matters was early recognized by his fellow members on the insurance committee, and he was placed in charge of many important matters for the committee, handling these on the floor of the house with a skill and self-possession rarely found in a new member.

"Notwithstanding this record, or regardless of it, the republicans of his district refused to accord him a renomination, and he also is compelled to appeal to the people as a independent.

"Luckily for the state the number of districts in which it is the custom to give a representative only one term is steadily growing less, and it is to be hoped that the example set by the two districts mentioned will not be allowed to spread.

"Both McKnight and Creed seem to have very good chances of winning, and in the interests of fair play it is to be hoped they will."

TODAY'S COURT.

The four continued cases against George L. Smith for violation of the liquor law at Cohasset were called. The cases for illegal sale on Oct. 7 and 9 were dismissed for want of prosecution. On the complaints for exposing for sale and for keeping a liquor nuisance, he was fined $50 on each.

—Calico print works use 40,000,000 dozen eggs per year, wine clarifiers use 10,000,000 dozen, the photographers and other industries use many millions, and these demands increase more rapidly than table demands.

Secretary Chamberlain to Make a Personal Visit to South Africa

London, Oct. 27.—It is officially announced that Colonial Secretary Chamberlain has decided personally to visit South Africa and examine on the spot the problems presented by the termination of the war and the settlement of affairs in the new colonies. King Edward has given his approval of this plan, which, it is said, has also the full approval of Premier Balfour and the cabinet.

Mr. Chamberlain proposes to start for South Africa toward the end of November and to return the early part of March. His visit will embrace the cape, Natal, the Orange River colony and the Transvaal. He hopes to have an opportunity to confer while in South Africa with representatives of all the different interests concerned and to consider their views in his future policy.

It is said that Lord Milner has been consulted with regard to Mr. Chamberlain's trip and that he cordially welcomes the idea.

Jones Scores Party System

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Political parties were scored at a meeting here last night of the Chicago Philosophical society by "Golden Rule" Mayor Jones of Toledo. He characterized the whole party system as "childish, immature and imbecile." Referring to the coal strike, he said: "The coal strike in 1902 will be found in the future to have made the largest contribution to the cause of human liberty of anything since Lincoln signed the emancipation proclamation."

Fear of Irish Uprising

London, Oct. 27.—The apprehension with which the government views the condition of Ireland can be judged from the fact that the chief constable of Birmingham has issued a warning to all arm and ammunition manufacturers not to sell goods for shipment to the proclaimed districts of Ireland. Even to such parts of Ireland as are not proclaimed, shipments of arms must be clearly marked as such, under pain of stringent penalties.

Jury Had Minds Made Up

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 27.—The jury in the trial of Major Bernard B. Evans, charged with the murder of Captain J. J. Griffin, returned a verdict of not guilty after being out only five minutes. Major Evans is a brother of ex-Governor Evans and Judge Gary Evans. The affair occurred in Evans' apartments. He claims that in a friendly scuffle the pistol was discharged.

Gloomy Outlook In Philippines

Manila, Oct. 27.—Agriculture in the Islands, already impaired on account of the war, rinderpest and the cholera, has been further injured by locusts. These insects have appeared in many places and are working serious injury to the crops. The advent of locusts, together with the fall in the price of silver, renders the business and industrial prospect of the Philippines gloomy and cheerless.

Killed Child and Tried Suicide

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Mrs. Daniel Lynch, wife of a prominent merchant of this city, drowned her 8-year-old daughter in the bathroom at her home and then attempted suicide by cutting her throat yesterday. It is believed the woman will recover. One of the Lynch children died a month ago and Mrs. Lynch has been acting strangely since.

Garrett Party Got Lost

Landa, Mex., Oct. 27.—United States Consul Alonzo Garrett returned to the consulate last night, after wandering with a party of friends in the Sierra Madre mountains for 20 days, the greater part of the time without food. The party was on a hunting trip and its water supply failed.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." sold by all druggists.

CANAL TITLE IS VALID

President Will Undoubtedly Select Panama Route

KNOX SUBMITS HIS REPORT

Gives Reason For Favoring Acceptance—No Doubt That Columbia Will Ratify Treaty Drawn by Secretary Hay—Walker to Head Commission

Washington, Oct. 27.—Attorney General Knox has decided that if the United States should accept the offer of the new Panama Canal company, submitted last spring, for the sale of the canal for $40,000,000, it would receive through the parties in interest a valid and unincumbered title to the property.

This decision was arrived at after a thorough and exhaustive investigation of the situation in Paris, first by Special Attorney Russell and later by the attorney general himself.

The attorney general has formally submitted the opinion to President Roosevelt. It makes about 300 pages.

The opinion opens with a history of the concessions made by Colombia, the formation of the De Lesseps Panama Canal company of France, the failure of this company in 1888, the transfer in 1894 of all its rights to the present Panama Canal company of France by the liquidator appointed by the French court to wind up the affairs of the old company, and of the laws passed by France concerning the liquidation of the old company.

The opinion then takes up the principal objections which have been made in this country to the title proposed to be given to the United States. The history and nature of French companies of the kind in question are examined. As to the proposition that the United States would be subject to the debts and claims of the stockholders and bondholders and other creditors of both of the companies, the opinion says:

"As a general proposition it is not perceived how there could be any law or equity for subjecting a purchaser of an article sold as assets of a failing partnership (such as the old company) to the debts of the partnership. If such were the law, there would be no purchasers of such assets, and the creditors would receive no payment for their debts out of the proceeds, nor stockholders any dividend of a residue."

Nevertheless, the opinion exhaustively considers all possible mortgages and other liens affecting the property itself, real or personal, under French or Colombian law.

The opinion closes as follows: "For the reasons I have given, I am of the opinion that the United States would receive a good, valid and unencumbered title."

Knox's report makes it certain that President Roosevelt will select the Panama route for the isthmian canal and the canal will be built.

The only other question is as to the necessary concessions to be made by Colombia and the United States, and there is no doubt on the part of the administration that the Colombian government will ratify the treaty drafted by Secretary Hay in accordance with the directions of congress.

There may be some further delay on account of the feeling over the vigorous acts of our naval officers on the isthmus, but by mid-winter it is expected that the treaty will have been ratified in the Colombian congress, then to assemble, and it will be ratified, it is believed, without difficulty by the United States senate.

Apparently the last hope of the Nicaragua route advocates is vanishing, and there is no prospect of success for the opponents of any isthmian canal. The president has power, under the action of congress, to designate the Panama route, now that the title is shown to be satisfactory, to pay the $40,000,000 asked by the Panama company and to appoint a commission to provide for its construction, if he is also satisfied that suitable concessions will be made by Colombia. He is preparing to appoint the commission as soon as the question of the Colombian concessions is finally settled favorably, with Rear Admiral Walker, retired, as its president.

A SERVICE OF THANKS

For the Complete Restoration to Health of the King of England

London, Oct. 27.—The last ceremonies connected with the reign of Kind Edward VII occurred yesterday, when the king, accompanied by Queen Alexandra, the Prince of Wales and almost all the members of the royal family, drove to St. Paul's cathedral and offered up thanks for the recovery of his health.

The weather was rainy and small crowds marked the royal progress through the metropolis. At Temple Bar the lord mayor of London and the corporation, in bedraggled robes, met the king and escorted him to the cathedral. At St. Paul's were gathered several thousand persons. The Honorable Artillery company formed an imposing line. The members wore their busbies and carried fixed bayonets. Before the service was over several of the artillerymen had fainted as a result of long standing.

The choir, the chapter and the bishop of London escorted the king and the queen to the throne under the reredos. There was a full choral service of thanksgiving, followed by a sermon from the bishop of London, who laid special stress upon the fact that this was the second time in his majesty's life that he had entered St. Paul's to give thanks for his recovery from a dangerous illness.

At the conclusion the royal party returned to Buckingham palace and were well greeted on the way wherever the crowds were large enough to raise a cheer.

The scene at St. Paul's was more brilliant than devotional. All the officials present wore their uniforms and decorations, creating a blaze of color seldom seen in the cathedral. King Edward was dressed in the uniform of a field marshal and wore the decoration of the Order of the Garter.

Real Tragedy on the Stage

Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., Oct. 27.—John Volkman was accidentally shot and killed Saturday night on the stage of Thespian hall by Charles Meinet of a travelling medicine company. One of the star features of the show was Meinet's feat of shooting an apple from the head of some person, and Volkman volunteered to allow the apple to be placed on his head. Volkman was shot in the forehead and died within an hour. Meinet is held on a charge of manslaughter.

A STUBBORN COLD OR BRONCHITIS

yields more readily to Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil than to anything that you can take; and if persistently used a few days, will break up the cold.

When you awake in the night choked up and coughing hard, take a dose of the Emulsion, and you will get immediate relief, where no cough medicine will give you relief. It has a soothing and healing effect upon the throat and bronchial tubes.

Most people understand Scott's Emulsion is a great body builder—but it is equally good to allay inflammation and cure colds and violent coughing.

NEW CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Uncle Sam's Exhibition Comprises Many Beautiful Specimens.

The chrysanthemum show at the department of agriculture in Washington is proving a steady attraction, and will continue open every day except Sunday from now till Nov. 10. The new varieties most admired are the Mrs. Phillipe Roger, an immense flower, and the Pennsylvania, a remarkably pure and rich yellow, exceedingly prolific in blooms on the single plant, says the New York Times. Honesty, a new candidate for admiration, comes from Europe. There is a pretty new Japanese seedling of blended white and pink.

Black Hawk, said to be President Roosevelt's choice, is a small, dark red, nearly black. Belle of Castlewood appears in prolific white, compact blooms. One of the finest specimens is the white and sprangling Mrs. John M. Wilson, which was raised from a seedling in the propagating garden nine years ago. The President McKinley is a beautiful flower of gold and crimson.

The white varieties are numerous and beautiful. One that has attracted considerable attention is of silvery white and is called the William Jennings Bryan. A remarkably beautiful flower is Mrs. L. F. Button. Another is the Mrs. Henry Robinson, which is large and ball shaped. The Mrs. George F. Baer, a very pretty chrysanthemum, is named after the wife of the president of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad.

The yellow blooms are very attractive. Among the prettiest of those is the Colonel D. Appleton. The O. P. Bassett and the Mrs. Gordon Dexter, in the same class, have come in for more than ordinary attention. A flower that is greatly admired is the Mrs. Perrine, named for the mother of Mrs. Grover Cleveland. It is a fine specimen in a pleasing shade of pink. The Casco is a heavy, rich, red flower, and Sunrise is an all gold and brick red specimen, the latter color showing on the reverse side of the petals. The Mrs. J. F. Tranter is one of the largest blooms in the large collection.

The President W. R. Smith, a beautiful specimen, was named after W. R. Smith of the botanic garden when he was president of the American Floral association.

TROPHIES FOR WHITE HOUSE

Superb Collection of Big Game Heads to Adorn Library Walls.

President Roosevelt's interest in the big game animals of America is responsible for one of the most interesting features of the decorations of the new White House, says the New York American. This consists of what in many respects is the most striking collection of animal heads to be found in the United States. These will be placed on the walls of the library.

Though only eleven species of animals are in the collection, each of the heads is believed to be the largest and most superbly mounted one of its kind in existence. Despite the fact that the president has been an indefatigable hunter of game none of his many trophies has a place in the collection. This is due to the fact that when he suggested that the collection be made he insisted that each head should be the best of its kind that could be obtained.

In the collection is the head of an immense bison which was killed by Indians twenty years ago, the head of an Alaska moose with an antler spread of seven feet, an elk having a horn circle of eleven feet and with seven points to each horn, two Alaska caribou, a bighorn sheep, a mountain lion, a silver tipped grizzly bear, a white Alaskan sheep and a Kadiack island bear.

The collection was made at the president's request by a New York physician and represents an expenditure of more than $5.000.

Plan to Restore Whittier's Home.

The Whittier homestead at Haverhill, Mass., which was damaged by fire recently, is to be restored on exactly the old lines, says a Boston special to the New York Times. The ancient furniture and china of the Whittier family, much of it antedating the birth of the poet, are safe, with not an article broken. The desk of his grandfather, on which Whittier wrote his first verses—and, as it happens, also the last poem he ever wrote—will go back to the old corner where it stood two generations, and perhaps three, before his birth. The greatest care will be taken to have everything restored in exactly the fashion of the olden time.

Novelty For Lounging Rooms.

The newest wall treatment for lounging or smoking rooms is in the Japanese fashion of split bamboo. Not only can this be applied in all sorts of individual and unique ways—diagonally, in paneling, figures, etc.—but it has the increased advantage of being easy to keep clean.

After the Coal Strike.

D'ye hear that rattlin' in the cellar?
Jim's a-shovelin' on the coal.
D'ye hear that roarin' up the chimney?
The heater's goin'! Bless my soul!
Sounds so strange, yet so familiar,
I can scarce believe it's true.
Come here, children; hold your hands here;
Feel it comin' up the flue?

Gracious me, it makes one happy!
Bring your chairs and sit around.
Feels just like it did last winter;
Sounds just like it used to sound;
Same old rosy, cozy corner,
Same old warm and grisly rug,
Same old cradle over yonder;
Same dear baby just as snug.

Jane, you sit there by the table;
Tom, come sit on mother's knee;
John, go out and get the apples;
Hurry; see how long you'll be.
Rob, run down, bring up your daddy;
Tell him that his pipe is filled;
Tell him that his chair is ready
And that old Jack Frost is killed!

SENATOR HOAR'S VIEWS
On Trusts, Tariff, Reciprocity and Strikes

COMBINATIONS OF CAPITAL
Depended Upon to Do Things For Which Individual Strength Is Inadequate—Favors Maintaining In General the Existing Protective System

Boston, Oct. 28.—The Chickatawbut club, a Republican dining organization, ratified the nomination of Bates and Guild last night by listening to a long and interesting address by Senator Hoar. Before introducing Senator Hoar, a letter from Governor Crane was read, regretting his inability to be present, but joining in the endorsement of the two candidates. Mr. Hoar said in part:

"There are two men in this country whom everybody is praising just now. One is Theodore Roosevelt. The other is Winthrop Murray Crane. The people of Massachusetts are to say next week whether they will have to succeed Mr. Crane a man whom Mr. Crane almost brought up in politics or a man who was brought up in the service of the West End railroad, and has encountered Murray Crane in the most serious conflict of his public life.

"When we come to our national election we are to say whether we will send the men to congress that Theodore Roosevelt wants to help him in the great question with which he is dealing, or whether we will send men who are to organize the house of representatives and to choose a speaker, and appoint the committee on all great subjects—of the tariff and reciprocity and trusts, and bankruptcy—whose whole object for the next two years will be to hurl Theodore Roosevelt from power, and to defeat his re-election two years hence.

Speaking of the trusts Senator Hoar said that if the evils of destruction of competition, fraudulent capitalization and secrecy could be cured, the cure of other evils would, in his opinion, follow. Continuing, he said:

"Now what is it with which we have to deal? All our vast foreign commence, almost; all our enormous interstate commerce, almost; all our manufactures, almost, is carried on by corporations. This enables any concern, great or small, to keep on in business when any one man interested in it dies or retires without being wound up in the probate court or in a court of equity, thereby stopping the business and throwing every laborer who works in it out of employment. Is it not the duty of wise statesmanship to go slowly and carefully in this matter, so we can cure or prevent the evil without sacrificing or destroying what is good?"

Senator Hoar then reviewed the Sherman anti-trust law, and claimed that he himself had inserted in the bill the sections which declare that any combination, or trusts, which restricts trade to be illegal and also provides for the punishment.

"Every suit that has been brought," he continued, "which has been successful has been under this section. Great trusts have already been broken up, and the effect of the example has undoubtedly prevented the formation of other great trusts.

"We are dependent on these great combinations of capital to do all things for which individual strength is totally inadequate. So I would curb them and make the people safe within them. But I would not destroy them.

"I want to say one word about a revision of the tariff. There always have been and always will be some mistakes in every tariff bill. Hides ought to be put on the free list. But a tariff revision when made should be made on the principles of the protective system and not on the principles of free traders or the revenue reformers. We must maintain in general the existing protective system.

"I am in favor of reciprocity, I think reciprocity can be best secured by concurrent legislation rather than by treaties, but I am not in favor of buying a market abroad for some other product by sacrificing the optical instruments of Southbridge, or the watches of Waltham, or the jewelry of Attleboro, or the fishermen of Gloucester."

Senator Hoar concluded his remarks with a few words on strikes. "We have, I hope, fortunately settled that which was so threatening a few weeks ago. I cannot, for myself, see why, if capital may combine in corporations, labor may not combine in labor unions. I can see no reason why the workman should not combine to make his bargain as to the rate of wages, as to the hours of labor and as to the comfort and safety of his occupation. But on the other hand, he has no right to interfere by violence with the freedom of any workman who does not choose to belong to his union. He may, undoubtedly, refuse to work with him. But a republic cannot live if any body of men undertake to impose their own will upon the lawful freedom of others.

"I believe the sympathy of all true Americans is on the side of labor and its attempt to better its condition. Capital and wealth will in the end take care of themselves. But to the elevation of labor, which is but another name for the elevation of citizenship, the whole force and power of the republic should be bent."

Going After Hostile Moros

Manila, Oct. 28.—It is expected that the expedition against the Sultan of Bacolod will leave Camp Vicars about Nov. 5. He is strengthening his forts.

RECOGNITION OF UNION
Will Prove a Knotty Problem For Coal Strike Arbitrators

BAER OBJECTS TO MITCHELL
Appearing Before Commission Except as Representative of Strikers In Their Individual Capacity—Work to Be Begun by Physical Examination of Conditions In Coal Region

Washington, Oct. 28.—The anthracite coal strike commission yesterday, in the hearing room of the interstate commerce commission, held its first conference with the parties to the controversy in the anthracite regions. There was a full representation of both operators and miners, and members of the press and a number of other interested parties were present. The proceedings covered about two hours' time, and were given up entirely to a discussion of the time and method of proceeding with the proposed investigation.

The commission decided to begin its work next Thursday, the first days of the investigation to be devoted to a physical examination of the mines and the homes of the miners, starting in the vicinity of Scranton. The entire anthracite field will be covered.

There was considerable discussion over a proposition made by the commission to have expert accountants appointed to audit statements of wages and classification of miners to be made by the operators for the use of the commission, but no result was reached on this point beyond the announcement by the chairman of the commission's intention to appoint such an accountant in case his services should be found necessary.

During the progress of the meeting Mr. Mitchell, as the representative of the miners, presented a copy of the original declaration of the miners as formulated by the Shamokin convention, as the basis of the demands of the miners. This demand is first, for an increase of 20 percent in wages of those not engaged by the day, second, a reduction of 20 percent in working hours of those engaged by the day; third, the payment for coal mined by weight at a minimum rate of 60 cents per ton of 2240 pounds; fourth, a wage agreement between the operators and the miners for an adjustment of wages.

Mr. Baer, on the part of the coal operators, took exception to Mr. Mitchell's appearance before the commission as a representative of the Mine Workers' union, but said that he had no objection to his presence as a representative of the strikers as such in their individual capacity. The commission made no attempt to settle the controversy, but it was made apparent that the recognition of the Miners' union will be an important and knotty problem for the arbitrators.

After consulting the members of the commission, President Gray announced that it would begin its inspection next Thursday, commencing its work in district No. 1, in which the city of Scranton is located.

While the subject was up, Mr. Baer said that the mine operators would furnish all facilities at their command to enable the commission to make its investigation thorough, adding that they would place a special train at the disposal of the commission, providing also for the accommodation of a representative of the miners.

The public meeting of the commission then came to a close and the commissioners retired for the purpose of private consultation. They first took up the question which had been raised by the proffer of a special train by Mr. Baer and unanimously decided not to accept the train. The exchange of views which followed brought out the fact that the commissioners expect personally to pay all of their expenses, accepting no favors and relying on the government to reimburse them if so disposed.

Official stenographers to report the proceedings of the commission and also to act as secretaries for members of the commission were appointed.

Coal Output Increased

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 28.—More coal was mined and more men were employed in mining it yesterday than any day since the mines in the anthracite region resumed work. The only districts that lag behind in the output are Lehigh and Mahanoy. The individual operators and their employes in those districts are still at loggerheads. In the Lackawanna and Wyoming regions all the collieries are in operation with the exception of a few which are still under water, and heavy trains of coal were moved rapidly to seaboard points. The miners and laborers who left the region during the strike are returning in large numbers.

The Eighth and Ninth regiments of the state militia which are stationed in the Wyoming and Lackawanna valleys have nothing to do these days and time is hanging heavily on the hands of the soldiers.

Objectionable to Frenchmen

Paris, Oct. 28.—Burns, an American horseman, who was recently expelled from France after investigations of the alleged turf scandals, having returned to this country in the expectation that his case would be reheard, the minister of the interior directed that he be at once expelled again. Burns will be conducted to the frontier today.

Rewarded For Killing a Man

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 28.—Upon the recommendation of Major General Miller, Colonel Rutledge last night promoted Arthur Wadsworth from a private to sergeant. Wadsworth shot and killed William Durham one night while on guard duty. Durham did not heed the warning to halt given by Wadsworth. Miller says the promotion of Wadsworth is a reward for the faithful performance of duty.

Bernhardt's Triumph

Berlin, Oct. 28.—Sara Bernhardt, for the first time since 1870, played in Germany last night. She appeared in "Fedora" at the Royal theatre, before an assemblage of members of the nobility and the first social personages of Berlin. At the end of each act she was recalled four or five times, and at the close of the performance, after her sixth recall, and surrounded by a mass of flowers and wreaths, she said: "If statesmen can forget, so can I."

Prince Alert Smashes Record

Memphis, Oct. 28.—The special match race for $12,000 a side between the pacers Prince Alert and Sir Albert S, one heat, at half a mile, resulted in an easy victory for the former here yesterday in the remarkable time of 57 3-4 seconds. This establishes a new world's record for this distance in a race, beating the former time by 2½ seconds.

Chamberlain's Decision Endorsed

London, Oct. 28.—The African trade section of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce has conveyed assurances to Mr. Chamberlain that his visit to South Africa will result in the greatest benefit to the commerce of South Africa and in improvement of the relations existing between South Africa and Great Britain.

One of China's Greatest Men

Tien Tsin, Oct. 28.—Yuan Shi Kai, governor of Pe-Chi-Li province, has been appointed minister of commerce of the Chinese empire. He will have supreme control over mines, railroads, telegraphs and commercial matters and greater power than any viceroy has ever possessed.

A Much-Married Man

Baltimore, Oct. 28.—Ephraim Skorman, charged with bigamy, on being confronted by the three women he had married, pleaded guilty in court yesterday. One of these he married in Russia, one in Boston and one in Baltimore.

Good Afternoon.

Remember that next Wednesday the Republicans are to nominate a candidate for Mayor. No convention will be held this year, but the direct votes of the voters will count in placing a candidate in nomination.

There is hard feeling against the management of the Old Colony street railroad company by citizens residing along the West Quincy route. They think the service never was so poor as at the present time. It is hoped that something will be done soon to improve the running time.

Ministers With Us.

The Norfolk Association of Congregational ministers is meeting today at the Bethany church. Rev. Edwin N. Hardy was moderator of the session which opened at 9 A. M. Fourteen clergymen were present.

A short business meeting opened the session. This was followed by a book review by Rev. J. H. Vincent of Weymouth and a discussion on "The Evolution Philosophy" led by Rev. L. T. Chamberlain.

Next came a discussion on "What shall we do with the exegesis and the sermon as part of the exercise of the Association." The subject was presented by Rev. E. C. Camp of Whitman.

☞ Next Monday is ladies' day at Music Hall and at the reduced rate no doubt the hall will be packed. You can secure your seats in advance at Music Hall Pharmacy, Greenleaf Hotel block.

A Change Maker.

Of the many machines of the cash register type now in use that recently put into the Quincy postoffice is one of the most unique. The machine is what is known as a change maker. By its use it is only necessary to press a key to have the desired change fall into the hand.

In the front part of the machine are tiers of pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and halfs. Back of this is a row of keys on the top of which are the figures from one to ninety-nine.

A customer purchases a two-cent stamp and hands the clerk a dollar bill in payment. The clerk places the bill in a drawer and presses the key, containing the number corresponding with the amount of the purchase, in this case that having the number two, and out drops a half dollar, a quarter, two dimes and three pennies, in all ninety-eight cents.

Whatever the amount of purchase, be it under a dollar, it is only necessary to press the corresponding key to have the exact change drop into the hand.

If change for a half dollar is desired, the half dollar key must first be pressed then the key of the amount of the purchase. The machine is also arranged so that change can be given for any purchase up to five dollars, but silver dollars would have to be used in the machine and as they are not in general use the machine is only used here for purposes of making change for one dollar or less.

THIRTY YEARS OLD

West Quincy M. E. Church to Celebrate.

Recently Remodelled and Improved.

Former Pastors and Eminent Clergymen to be Present.

During the past few weeks extensive repairs and alterations have been made to the Methodist Episcopal church at West Quincy. These repairs are now completed and this week Friday, Saturday and Sunday the society will celebrate its thirtieth anniversary and the reopening. Arrangements have been made to make the occasion a memorable one in the history of the church.

On Friday evening the exercises will open at 7 o'clock with a devotional service. Previous to this there will be a reception to former pastors. Of the former pastors, those now living are: Rev. W. F. Lawford, Rev. James H. Humphrey, Rev. Franklin Furber, Rev. Edward W. Virgin, Rev. A. A. Brown and Rev. John Peterson. Several of these are expected to be present.

Following the devotional exercise, the pastor, Rev. David L. Martin, Ph. D., will welcome those present, and the former pastors will extend greetings.

An address will be given by Henry H. Faxon, Esq., who will take for his subject "How can we best promote the temperance cause in Quincy." A discussion by the pastors of Quincy will follow on "The relation of the church and community to each other."

The evening's program will close with a supper.

During the anniversary exercises music will be furnished by the Worm-ington quartette, the choir, and Miss Blanche Tilton of Boston.

The exercises on Saturday will be held in the evening at 7.30, when the pastor will give a historical sermon.

Sunday's program will consist of a love feast at 9.30, conducted by Rev. John Peterson; sermon at 10.30 by Rev. Marcus D. Buell, S. T. D., dean of Boston University School of Theology; Epworth League rally at 6.15 led by Rev. Roscoe D. Tarbox, and sermon at 7.15 by Rev. Willard T. Perrin, Ph. D., Presiding elder of the Boston district.

Without a Scratch.

Walter Anderson, a newsboy had a narrow escape from serious injury Monday evening on Hancock street near the Ledger office. He was riding a bicycle about the square and attempted to cross the tracks in front of an approaching car. The motorman brought his car to a sudden stop but the young man was too near and the car struck the wheel, Anderson was thrown in one direction and the wheel in another. Fortunately, the boy in falling landed squarely upon the fender. But for the prompt work of the motorman a serious accident must have resulted. As it was, the boy escaped without a scratch.

FOR NO-LICENSE.

A Strenuous Campaign Planned by the Quincy League.

The "No-License" League of Quincy held a muster in the offices of Dr. Sherman Monday evening and there promises to be firing from now on all along the line. Delcevare King is president, John O. Hall, Jr., treasurer and Attorney Mackay the secretary.

Ward meetings are being arranged by committees appointed for the purpose. An especial effort will be made to reach the men who have come to the city during the past year and who may be misinformed regarding or indifferent to the merits of the issue.

It was the sense of the meeting that the corporation of the local press, the clergy and every other available force that operates for good citizenship be sought. It is the intention to secure not only a larger total vote than last years's, but to have it larger in ratio of population.

Every member of the league will be notified individually of the next meeting which comes on November 10, and the general public will be invited to attend through press advertisements.

Birthday Party.

Miss Estelle C. Tirrell of Quincy Point was agreeably surprised Monday evening by a number of friends, members of the M. G. R. club, it being her sixteenth birthday. Miss Tirrell was the recipient of many gifts, and with music and games a very enjoyable evening was passed. Among those present were Miss Elizabeth Scouler, Miss Lauretta Lowe, Misses Gertrude and Lulu Crowley, Misses Julia and Theresa Roche, Miss Gertrude Foster, Miss Ethel B. Kittredge, Miss Mary Gay, Miss Ethel Hersey, Miss Jeanette Weston and Miss Marion Tirrell.

Today's Storm.

Monday nights papers stated that the storm billed to visit New England had become side tracked and had gone to Canada. Apparently Canada had no use for the storm and sent it back on the night express for New England. It arrived shortly after midnight and early this morning it rained in torrents. The indications at noon were not bright for its clearing up right away,

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." sold by all druggists.

ALLIANCE FORMED.

Mr. Edward J. Murphy One of Our Leading Druggists,

MAKES ARRANGEMENTS WITH A LARGE BOSTON HOUSE.

Their Object is to Produce a Valuable Remedy, in a Form That Can be Easily Taken, but Heretofore Impractical--From Now On this New Preparation of An Old Medicine Will Become An Indispensable Auxiliary to the Medical Profession.

Enterprise is one of the virtues of druggist Edward J. Murphy. Often has he demonstrated his ability to not only keep pace with, but to keep ahead of the times. Many times have the people of our city had occasion to be proud of the way this prominent druggist has shown himself to be among the foremost in the country in adopting the latest scientific and chemical discoveries.

Even in this age of progress, the advance in pharmaceutical development has been at times almost of a sensational nature. The druggist or chemist who has not had push and enterprise has soon become a back number, and can be found today running a small store, the appearance of which, devoid of any signs of modernism, is familiar to all.

It has always been Mr. Edward J. Murphy's ambition to connect himself with some discovery that would not only be a source of profit to himself, but the means of accomplishing good to others. With this end in view it is not strange that Mr. Edward J. Murphy in his profession, should have been led to think seriously concerning the use of cod liver oil. He, like hundreds of other druggists, has sold vast quantities of this valuable, but nauseating remedy.

Into his ear has been poured many a tale of woe, by sufferers who would beg him to advise some way they might take the medicine prescribed for them, and many attempts has he made in the past to enable a patient to take this remedy, knowing well that could they succeed in doing so, he would be instrumental in restoring health—and in many cases even in saving life.

He was obliged to give up attaining the desired end, of disguising the taste of this obnoxious, greasy medicine, as many others have had to before him. He found it was not a very difficult matter to fool the palate, but he could not fool the patient's stomach. Even when the oil had been made tasteless by being administered in capsules or other forms, the stomach would rebel and promptly eject it.

Right at this stage of the game Mr. Edward J. Murphy learned of an important discovery made by two eminent French chemists, whose secret has been bought by a large Boston house. With characteristic enterprise Mr. Edward J. Murphy connected himself with them and succeeded in making arrangements with them to directly handle this new discovery.

Thank goodness, we now have at last, right here in town, a preparation that contains all the curative principles which have given the cod's liver its great reputation as a remedy for wasting diseases. Now these sought-for principles are in a concentrated form, free from the nauseating, greasy matter that characterizes cod liver oil as we have known it. This extract is put up in a most palatable and delicious form, so that it can be taken by any one with the most delicate and sensitive stomach. It is positively free from any objectionable odor, taste, or any of the other disagreeable features that have always attended cod liver oil.

Mr. Edward J. Murphy will gladly tell any one who will call on him, all about the discovery. He is so pleased in regard to the matter that he wants every one to know about it. Above all he wishes it to be positively understood that this new preparation is not a patent medicine. He will tell you everything in it and explain to you how scholars have devoted their lives and capitalists their money, in procuring this product to which has been given the name of Vinol—Wine of Cod Liver Oil.

We think right here it would be a good plan for any one who is so unfortunate as to feel it necessary for their health to take cod liver oil, to hear what Mr. Edward J. Murphy has to say on the subject. What he will tell you will cost nothing. What you will learn you can safely assert will prove of the greatest value to you.

Boston Museum.

There is now being offered at the Boston Museum one of the best, most interesting, most attractive and wholesome entertainments that have ever graced its historic stage. This is the comedy-drama, "A Message from Mars," and it is introduced under the auspices of Charles Frohman, by the distinguished London actor-manager, Charles Hawtrey and his own company. This play has had more prosperity and a longer life than any modern piece. It was acted 560 consecutive times in London, and all last season at the Garrick Theatre, N. Y. This was the first time in the history of the American stage, that a foreign star has been able to continue playing one piece in the metropolis during an entire season. In Boston it has been received with equal enthusiasm by both the public and the press, and the Museum is nightly crowded to its capacity; seven or eight calls nightly follow the fall of the curtain on the powerful scenes. Its story is that of the reformation of a selfish man, through the visit to him, in a dream, of a messenger from Mars. Mr. Hawtry is one of the most delightful and convincing actors that England has ever sent us. Even when first seen in all his selfishness, the innate charm of his nature makes the spectator long for the time of his reformation. "A Message from Mars" cannot fail to exercise a good influence upon all who witness it, and one of its most potent qualities is that it enforces its lesson in so amusing and interesting a way, without any attempt to sermonize. It appeals to every heart and mind, and tears and laughter, in rapid alternation, accompany its progress.

CONVENTION CITY.

[Editorial Correspondence.]

Although Detroit is within twenty hours of Boston, few Quincy people are aware that the city is so thrifty and so beautiful. The census of 1900 showed a population of 285,704, an increase from 205,876 in 1890, and 116,340 in 1880.

Detroit is becoming known as the "Convention City," and boasts of the fact that some convention meets there nearly every day of the summer. Conspicuous on the front of City Hall in the public square is always displayed the word "Welcome," and beneath it is the name of the convention being held in the city. The city now has several hotels, but is agitating the erection of a mammoth one to better accommodate the large number of visitors. For a good square meal served in good style at low price visit The Wayne.

Detroit takes pride in cleanliness. There are evidences of it on all sides, in the manufacturing as well as in residential sections. In the business streets there are signs "Do not spit on the sidewalk." The streets are of asphalt and an army of "white wings" are employed during the day keeping them scrupulously clean. The streets are very broad, straight and level and without cross walks. In layout, one is reminded of Washington, as the streets are in right angles, while in addition there are avenues radiating from City Square in all directions like the spokes of a wheel, but not as numerous.

The city has but few apartment houses or flats, as individual houses predominate with liberal lots of land. Outside of the mercantile district very few of the houses abut the street, and there are no fences. On many avenues the front lawns are very extensive, and on these estates are beautiful houses which will compare favorably with any other city. Most of the streets have grass plots about six feet wide between the roadway and the sidewalk.

In addition to the beautiful avenues, Detroit has a 12-mile boulevard which circles the city from the water front on the south to the water front on the north. At the northerly end is a bridge nearly a mile long connecting the city with Belle Isle a beautiful public park of 750 acres completely surrounded by fresh water. The park has about 20 miles of drives, also walks, ponds and canals. There is an extensive zoological garden, grounds for all kinds of sports, pavilions, etc. Everybody skates in winter, and there is a building especially for their comfort on the island. The Detroit Boat club and the Detroit Yacht club have clubhouses in the river, which are reached from the island. The former is of stone and cost $75,000, and is richly furnished.

The plant of the municipal water works is extensive and is laid out as a park, the sum of $250,000 having been bequeathed for the purpose. At the entrance is a memorial gateway. A little way inside a large clock with a floral disk, the motive power being water. On a raised green is a floral calendar, changed daily, which reads today: "Up-to-date—Tuesday—October 28—1902." On the grounds are a library, a conservatory, a tower, ponds and reservoirs, etc. Four engines, each with a capacity of 24,000,000 gallons daily, pump the water. In this connection we might add that water rates including hose are but $6 per house, and a liberal use of water is encouraged.

The manufacturing of the city is mostly on the outskirts or near the city limits, and is extensive. Two or three stove companies have large manufactories, and there are several other enterprises. Perhaps the largest industry is the Detroit Car Company which is capable of turning out 70 freight cars a day, and is a very busy place.

The electric street railway service is excellent, with free transfers in City Square. Many long lines run out of the city including one of 73 miles to Port Huron, and one of 68 miles to Flint, one of 76 miles to Jackson, one to Toledo, Ohio, and others. In Detroit the front of the car is always the front, and most of the cars have a rather unsightly but convenient rear platform of about six feet. Two feet in the rear of the door is a railing, and all who ride on the platform stand in the rear, leaving an open passage way to enter or leave the cars, which ladies appreciate.

Much more might be written but space will not admit. Detroit is the county seat and has a rich county building. It has a Y. M. C. A. which is overflowing a large building. It has three High school buildings, the central one being a grand structure with five floors housing 1,500 pupils. Enterprising newspapers, numerous churches, wide awake business men and hospitable people make up a prosperous city. More shipping is said to pass through Detroit river than by any of the ports on the Atlantic coast.

Detroit is a big railroad centre, but we can recommend the roads operated by the New York Central for reaching it quickly, safely and with comfort. This railway system now includes the Boston & Albany Railroad as well as the Michigan Central and nine other roads, comprising 11,126 miles in the opulous territory east of Chicago and St. Louis. The key to the whole system is the four tracks between Albany and Buffalo, and all the latest equipment in engines, cars and safety appliances.

Ledger readers would enjoy the "Four Track News," for its illustrations, little histories, and articles of interest to travellers. It can be had of George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York, for fifty cents per year. How Mr. Daniels is able to publish such a gem in addition to his important railroad duties will surprise many.

Board of Health Again Refuse Petition of H. H. Faxon.

Evidently Henry H. Faxon will not get a license as a scavenger to look after his own property. He has tried all the year to get our appointment, but to no avail, for the Board of Health positively refuse to give him an appointment. Last week Mr. Faxon presented the Board of Health with a petition signed by fifty of his tenants, asking that he be granted a license to do the scavenger work on his own property. The Board of Health took up his petition at a meeting held Monday evening, at which it was voted not to grant the prayer of the petition. Thus ends another chapter in the contest between Mr. Faxon and the Board of Health.

An Historic Paper.

At the second meeting of the Woman's Alliance of the First Church held on Monday afternoon in the ladies' parlor of the chapel, Mrs. Harriet Litchfield of Wollaston read her paper on the early history of Quincy.

A large number of members and their friends were present, and after the formal business was transacted, a most delightful hour was given to this paper. The reader said, that like public characters, she seemed to be having a number of last appearances.

Mrs. Litchfield pinned up a large map of Quincy which she had made, showing our interesting and extended water line and its inlets. She told the oft-told, but ever welcome story of the early Plymouth settlement. She spoke of the fact that recent and present improvements were obliterating old land and water marks.

She gave the history of the famous battle of the faith as enacted by Ann Hutchinson and her clerical brothers. She feels that her house must have been upon what seem to be the relics of such a fame in Wollaston. Mrs. Litchfield gave logical reasons drawn from a careful study to locate this historic spot.

She compared the present fifteen minutes' interval of transit in the electric cars, and the railroad service, to the primitive water passage of those early days when, except by foot or horse, travellers went to Boston by boat.

The paper is another leaf in our history, and we cannot lose anything that in the pressure of today might efface the story of our early history. At the close of the reading, a social tea and informal meeting came.

THE FIRST GUN.

Improvements Wanted at National and State Expense.

The first political rally in Quincy this fall was held Monday evening at St. Mary's hall in the interest of Hon. Wm. S. McNary, the Democratic candidate for Congress from the Tenth district. There was a large attendance and the remarks of the speakers were loudly applauded.

Ex-Councilman John J. Dugan presided, and on the platform were President T. J. Carey of the City Committee, Councilman Elcock and Fallon, and the following gentlemen who addressed the meeting: Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, Hon. T. J. Gargon, Hon. David I. Walsh, Hon. James A. Gallivan, Hon. Joseph F. O'Connell, J. Frank O'Hare, Joseph W. F. Whall and W. G. Harber.

The principal address was by Candidate McNary, who spoke of the tariff and replied to questions of candidate W. W. Towle, and also touched upon the needs of Quincy, more especially the dredging of Fore River.

Councilman Peter T. Fallon, Democratic candidate for Representative, was also introduced. He spoke briefly on the needs of Quincy, more especially the building of the boulevard, and if elected he should use his best efforts to get an appropriation for that purpose.

THE MOLINEUX TRIAL

Daughter of Mrs Adams and Handwriting Experts Give Testimony

New York, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Florence Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams, of whose murder Roland B. Molineux is accused, was the most conspicuous witness on the stand at the trial yesterday. Her appearance attracted an unusual crowd of women, who followed the examination of the witness with the keenest attention.

Mrs. Rogers was subjected to a close examination regarding her relations with Harry Cornish, but little that was significant was elicited in this line of inquiry. Mrs. Rogers related the circumstances of her mother's death immediately after taking the poison and identified the glass in which the fatal draught was administered, and from which, she said, she afterwards saw Cornish drink. The greater part of the session was devoted to the examination of handwriting experts, who testified to the identity of specimens of Molineux's admitted handwriting with the address on the poison package and that of the disputed letters.

It was remarked in court after the adjournment that the case for the prosecution would close today, in which event the case may go to the jury by the end of the week.

Wouldn't Discuss Crimes Act

London, Oct. 28.—An impassioned condemnation of British rule in Ireland was again heard last night from the Nationalist section of the house of commons. The proceedings were occasionally interrupted by the taunts with which these scenes are regularly accompanied. With the assistance of a number of Liberal members, the Nationalists mustered sufficient votes to permit William O'Brien to move an adjournment of the house for the purpose of discussing the proclamation of the crimes act in Ireland. Mr. O'Brien's motion was finally defeated by 215 votes to 121.

Not Acceptable to Cuba

Havana, Oct. 28.—The proposed treaty between the United States and Cuba has been returned to Washington by mail. With the treaty was sent a counter-proposition from the government of Cuba to that of the United States, the nature of which is not known, but it is understood that President Palma says that the acceptance of the propositions made by the United States would be ruinous to Cuba, as it would result in a large reduction of the customs revenue of the island.

COLOMBIA WANTS $10,000,000

In Addition to a Lump Yearly Payment of $600,000 Instead of Having to Wait Sixteen Years, as Proposed In State Department Treaty

Washington, Oct. 28.—The long expected response of the Colombian government to the proposition made by the state department for the negotiation of a canal treaty, on the lines of the Spooner act, has reached Washington and was presented to the state department yesterday by Mr. Herran, the secretary of the Colombian legation.

It is difficult to learn the exact understanding of the nature of this communication, but it is known that it is not altogether an unqualified acceptance of the state department's proposition. It is, however, friendly and dignified in tone, and does not close negotiations by any means, though it unquestionably sets back the date of final agreement by opening up new topics for argument.

For one thing the Colombian government now is entirely dissatisfied with the small amount of the payment to be made to it by the United States under the terms of the protocol which it is proposed to use as the basis of the treaty. This sum is $7,000,000. Colombia wants at least $10,000,000. Moreover, the original proposal looked to a wait for 14 years before beginning the payment of annual rental, the amount of which was to be then fixed by mutual agreement. Colombia now asks the United States to agree at once to a lump yearly payment of $600,000, which will considerably increase the immediate cost of the enterprise.

The Colombian government clings to its contention that it has no constitutional authority to alienate any Colombian territory and reiterates that the best it can do to meet the language of the Spooner act, which looks to perpetual control by the United States over the canal strip, is to make a 100-year lease, with a distinct stipulation that the same shall be renewable by the United States at the expiration of the first century.

One obstacle which, it is believed, will interfere somewhat with the immediate resumption of negotiations of the treaty, is the feeling aroused in Colombia by the actions of American naval officers during the recent revolutionary movements there. These are declared to have been bitterly resented in Bogota, where it was felt the American officers had exceeded their authority in interfering with the transportation of Colombian soldiers across the Isthmian railway—a right the Colombian officials have asserted is guaranteed them by treaty. The controversy growing out of the attitude of those officers was taken up by the Colombian state department with United States Minister Hart at Bogota, and so far as known has not yet been definitely settled. The question at issue touches the question of sovereignty and has an important bearing on the pending subject.

The Colombian legation officials decline to discuss the latest response made by Colombia, but the opinion prevails that included within its scope are some representations respecting or growing out of recent events on the isthmus.

—It is estimated that there are now 12,000 automobiles in this country and that they are increasing in number at the rate of nearly 19,000 a year.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwich, Kas., is past 83 years of age, yet he says: "I am enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influences of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

"I am an old soldier," writes Mr. Geo. Watson, of Newton, Ia., "and I have been a great sufferer from nervousness, vertigo and spinal trouble. Have spent considerable money for medicine and doctors, but with little benefit. I was so bad my mind showed signs of weakness. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I know it saved my life."

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Saved me from the insane asylum," Mrs. A. M. Heifner, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes. "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep nor rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

DID NOT KILL HIMSELF

Vermont Lad Will Be Asked to Explain the Cause of Brother's Death

South Londonderry, Vt., Oct. 28.—Melvin Johnson, aged 15, for whom fully 100 men and boys searched Sunday, fearing that he had killed himself as a sequel to the death of his younger brother, Clifford, by a bullet wound, has been located at Manchester, 12 miles from here. He claims that his brother was accidentally shot. An inquiry into the circumstances will be held.

The shooting occurred in the chamber occupied by the brothers in the Johnson home. On Sunday Mrs. Johnson called upstairs to her sons, and Melvin, the elder, answered. A moment later, Mrs. Johnson noticed a jar as if something heavy had fallen in the chamber and Melvin came down stairs and went out without saying a word.

Mrs. Johnson went up stairs, and found Clifford on the floor with a bullet hole in the temple. He died in a few minutes. Melvin had disappeared. Neighbors were notified and the search became general.

An examination of the wound in Clifford Johnson's head disclosed the fact that it was made with a revolver bullet. No revolver could be found, and it was supposed that Melvin had carried it away with him.

In the absence of any known quarrel between the brothers, the parents and all who know the family were convinced that the shooting must have been accidental. Fearing that, in his grief, Melvin might have taken his own life with the weapon, Mr. Johnson secured a bloodhound, but the animal could not find the boy's tracks. All night and most of the day, the search by neighbors continued.

Danforth Case Coming Up

Boston, Oct. 28.—Nina Danforth, the deformed girl of Newton, who has spent six months in the East Cambridge jail, awaiting trial for shooting to death the man whom had betrayed her, A. J. Emery, is expected to appear before Judge Lawton this week and plead guilty to manslaughter. A short sentence is expected. It is understood that the government desires to avoid a possible precedent, which might be established, should it be found after trial that the shooting was done in a period of emotional insanity.

A Singular Case

Attleboro, Mass., Oct. 28.—The police and Medical Examiner Holden are looking for a young woman who is wandering about carrying the body of a dead infant. The child died Saturday morning at Warren, R. I. After death the woman wrapped the body in a newspaper and came into Massachusetts. The poor authorities here refused to have anything to do with the case until the medical examiner viewed the body. When that official went to make his examination the woman had disappeared.

Town Excited Over Smallpox

Webster, Mass., Oct. 28.—Dr. Morse of the state board of health, after an examination yesterday, reported 15 cases of smallpox in Webster and vicinity. There are supposed to be many more cases in town, but Dr. Morse had time for only a partial examination. He discovered the victims of the disease in hotels and in the street, and the whole town is greatly wrought up over it.

Nurses Sued For Damages

Waltham, Mass., Oct. 28.—Mrs. Elizabeth M. Huggard brought suit for $20,000 against the Waltham training school for nurses yesterday, alleging that while an inmate at the institution the plaintiff was given carbolic acid by mistake while being treated for typhoid fever and malaria. The husband of the plaintiff also has filed a suit in $5000 in connection with the case.

Fishermen Save Lumber Schooner

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 28.—Schooner Medford, lumber laden, Bangor for Boston, was picked up about 15 miles south of the Isles of Shoals by the fishing schooner Eliza Bennett, and towed into this harbor. The Medford had been abandoned. She sprang aleak and was deserted by the crew. When picked up she was full of water, but her deckload kept her afloat.

Suicide With Carbolic Acid

Westfield, Mass., Oct. 28.—Mrs. Louis M. Dewey, 32, committed suicide yesterday by taking carbolic acid. She was the wife of Louis M. Dewey, the genealogist who wrote the history of the Dewey family. Mr. Dewey believes that despondency was the cause of his wife's suicide.

Communion Plates Stolen

Boston, Oct. 28.—Seven of the silver plates used in the communion service in Tremont temple have been stolen from the room in which they were kept for many years. The thief probably supposed the plates to be solid silver, but it is said they are only partly of pure metal.

Murder Suspect Arrested

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.—Emanuel Johnson, colored, employed as a laborer at the city filtration plant here, was arrested yesterday on suspicion of having murdered a man at Clinton, Mass., in 1897. Seven murder suspects have been arrested at the filtration plant during the present year.

The French Miners' Strike

Paris, Oct. 28.—Another meeting between Premier Combes and the national committee of striking miners was held here yesterday, but no definite results were obtained. The negotiations between the French premier and the mine owners looking toward arbitration are still in progress.

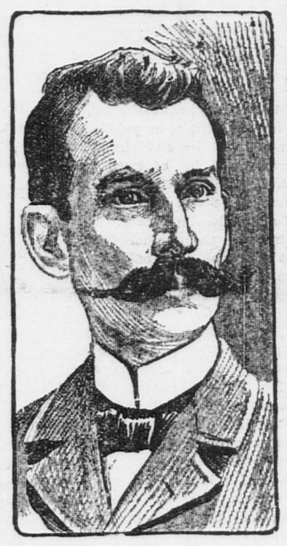
Revolutionists In Colombia Give Up In the Interior

FORCES UNDER URIBE-URIBE

Have Long Kept Up Turmoil In the Interior of the Country and at One Time Threatened the Capital—Long Step Toward Pacification

Panama, Oct. 29.—The revolutionary general, Uribe-Uribe,—with 10 cannon, 2500 rifles and 300,000 rounds of ammunition, has surrendered to General Marjarres at Rio Frio, near Santa Marta.

The forces under General Uribe-Uribe, which were defeated Oct. 14 at La Cienage, retreated to Rio Frio and took up positions there. General Marjarres, with 2000 men, proceeded against the rebels from La Cienaga and engaged the enemy. The government general succeeded in surrounding the rebels and forcing them to surrender. General Castillo was with General Uribe-Uribe.



GENERAL URIBE-URIBE.

The news of this victory was received here by General Perdomo and Governor Salazar yesterday in a telegram from General Marjarres. Details of the engagement are lacking, but heavy casualties on both sides are reported.

The surrender of Uribe-Uribe is said to complete the pacification of the departments of Magdalena and Bolivar.

The revolutionists now occupy the isthmus only.

In the fight of Oct. 14, at La Cienaga, the revolutionary force consisted of 1300 men.

Colon, Oct. 29.—The government gunboat General Pinzon arrived here yesterday afternoon from Savanilla. She was especially sent from that port by the governor of the department of Bolivar to bring to the isthmus news of the defeat of the revolutionists under Uribe-Uribe and Castillo at Rio Frio. Both these generals were made prisoners.

There is much rejoicing in Colon and Panama over the success of General Marjarres and especially over the capture of Uribe-Uribe.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Confirmation of the news of the surrender of General Uribe-Uribe was contained in the following dispatch received at the Colombian legation here last night:

The legation officials declare that with the surrender of Uribe-Uribe the life of the rebellion in the interior of Colombia has received its death blow and that the complete pacification of that portion of the country must inevitably follow. He was, they say, the acknowledged leader of the movement against the government, and by his energy and perseverance in raising and equipping troops and securing assistance from the outside has kept the revolution going for some years. General Uribe-Uribe's movements have taken him in various portions of the interior of Colombia, his early operations being in the state of Jolima, later in the state of Santander and finally in the state of Magdalena.

In the state of Santander, at the head of an army of over 10,000 men, he seriously menaced the capital, Bogota, until he was defeated by a superior government force on May 26, 1900, when the casualties numbered about 5000 men in all.

It has been repeatedly asserted by the officials here that General Uribe-Uribe received substantial aid from the government of Venezuela, he having visited Caracas and had frequent interviews with President Castro. Last year he visited the United States and for a time was in correspondence with the officials of the legation with a view to reaching honorable terms of capitulation, but the efforts in that direction were without substantial result, and General Uribe-Uribe returned to Colombia and again took up arms against the government.

CANAL NEGOTIATIONS

Will End by Colombia Accepting Our Terms

BLUNDERS ON THE ISTHMUS

By Our Naval Officers Gave Ground For Cautious Proceedings Which Might In Any Way Affect Sovereignty of Our Southern Neighbors

Washington, Oct. 29.—The response of the Colombian government to the proposals of the state department indicates that Colombia will haggle and delay up to the last moment that she deems it safe before acceding to terms that would be essential to our construction of the Panama canal. It is not believed here that Colombia would really go to the point of sending us to Nicaragua since the benefit to her of construction along the Panama route would be great. The Cauca valley on the west side of Colombia, known to be exceedingly rich but comparatively undeveloped, would have so direct an outlet through the Panama canal as to be practically on the Atlantic ocean. The entire west coast would be benefited immensely, and particularly the state of Panama. The United States under these circumstances would look tolerantly on a proposal to hold up the enterprise for a larger annual rental should that be attempted by Colombia.

It is acknowledged, however, that Admiral Casey and Commander McLean blundered in their conduct of affairs on the isthmus and so gave the Colombian government some legitimate ground for desiring to proceed cautiously in negotiations with the United States affecting Colombian sovereignty in any way. In refusing to transport government soldiers on the railroad, our officers not only evaded sovereignty of Colombia but overrode a contract between the government and the railroad company. It does not allay the bad blood thus occasioned to point to the fact that the same officers doubtless prevented the town of Panama from falling into the hands of the insurgents.

Our government insists that it does not desire to interfere with the sovereignty of Colombia on the isthmus, but it has been made somewhat hard to impress this idea on account of the happenings of the summer. The outcome of the insurrection apparently rests upon the naval warfare. If the government vessels should capture or destroy the insurgent navy, and with the new Bogota believed to be the best vessel there, the government's chances of success are believed to be large, the insurrection would seemingly be over.

The newspaper report that the Chilean government would let Colombia have one of its ships is not credited in naval circles here. The collapse of the insurrection would doubtless simplify our further negotiations regarding the canal route. It is assumed that Senator Morgan can no longer fight against the Panama route on account of alleged defectiveness of the title, since the attorney general's recent report; this will naturally focus Morgan's activities on the terms of the Colombian treaty, and hence the importance of having them reasonable.

At present the rates are 75 and 80 cents.

QUARRELED OVER SPOILS

Burglars Shot Down a Companion and Left Him to Die In the Road

Portland, Me., Oct. 29.—William Thompson of Chelsea, Mass., known to the police as a "hobo burglar," was shot, presumably by his fellow burglars, on the County road between Stroudwater and Westbrook yesterday. It is supposed the burglars, who had robbed O. L. Sherman's general store nearby, of whom Thompson was undoubtedly one, quarreled when it came to dividing the spoils and Thompson was shot. His companions ran away and he was left lying in the road. He crawled to the house of Roscoe Knight and was later taken to the Westbrook police station, where he died without revealing the names of those with him nor did he tell how he came to be wounded. He was badly intoxicated when found.

Thompson said there were two men with him, but the police think there was another. It is believed some one of the trio must have been wounded. The men of whom the police are in search are said to have been seen with Thompson in Portland a day or two ago.

The police have issued requests for the apprehension of James Ryan, aged 26; James Arnold, aged 31, and William Smith, aged 32, Thompson's suspected companions. They previously have been arrested with Thompson.

Banks Are Heavy Creditors

Providence, Oct. 29.—At a meeting yesterday of the creditors of the B. H. Locke is a Harvard graduate and one of the original rough riders.

Good Afternoon.

If the wood and coal obtained by the City Relief Committee is sold at cost, what becomes of the subscriptions to funds, only one-half of which is expected to be returned? A lower price than $11 a cord and $12 per ton should be quoted. Coal at $15 would be more economical than wood at $11.

Although the School Committee are expected to approve plans for new school houses before appropriations are made, they have practically nothing to say as to the same. Only one plan is secured by the Committee of the Council and the School Committee are asked to give their approval. The demand is so great for increased accommodations that the board may approve almost anything, but even then they do not get a new schoolhouse at Quincy Point, Atlantic or a new Coddington, and nothing is done about enlarging the much over-crowded High school building. Had the selection of plans for the new Quincy Point school-house rested with the School Committee, they would have submitted several satisfactory ones to the City Council months ago. Plans, too, that would not require so much money as the one which has hung fire over a year.

Practical Politics in its list of nominations for State and municipal officers has the name of Charles M. Bryant as an Independent candidate for Mayor of Quincy and has not heard of any "avowed candidates or others suggested." Evidently Mr. Bryant is no more willing to abide by the vote of a majority of the Republicans this year than he was last year. He bolted the ticket last year and he is undoubtedly ready to do so this year. As F. L. Jones, the Regular Republican candidate of last year says, Mr. Bryant attempted to break up the Republican party in Quincy last year, and no Republican can have any love for any man who has disrupted the Republican party as Mr. Bryant has done.

There are many degrees of independence in candidates for office, and much has been said about the independence of Mayor Bryant, but Quincy never had so much ring rule as this year. His honor has allowed no independence his official family, and any one who was active for the Regular Republican candidate last year has had to take a back seat this year. An independent Mayor, who works for the best interests of the city and all its people, is one thing, but an independence which is vindictive is quite different. The city has had too much politics this year.

Rally at Braintree.

The Republicans of Quincy will have to go to Boston or Braintree to be enthused this year. At the Town Hall, Braintree, tomorrow night a reception will be given to the candidates for County Commissioner, Senator and Representatives, and there will be two notable speakers: Hon. Robert S. Roe of Worcester and Albert Luce Esq., of Somerville.

POLITICAL PUZZLE.

Find If Possible the Republicans in List Below.

One of the meanest tricks of the State campaign now drawing to a close, was the underhanded nomination of Robert S. Maxwell of Boston on papers as the "Republican Citizen" candidate. The Regular Republican candidate for renomination is Hon. Arthur A. Maxwell of Boston and Robert S. is practically an "unknown" who has been nominated just to mix-up the voters, with no idea of being elected. He is a painter by trade, and works next door to the Democratic candidate.

Seventy-six in Quincy were a party to this contemptible scheme, and pose as "Republican Citizens." They are almost wholly from Ward Four, and the Republicans are as scarce as hen's teeth. Can you find any in the list below:

Chas. H. Farrell, William J. Farrell, Peter H. Farrell, Jos. H. White, Jas. H. Kane, Edw. T. Monahan, Jules Comi, Stephen Hannon, Jeffry Kelly, Arthur Morrissett, Thomas Connor.

J. Edw. Berry, John R. Ballou, Thos. Gilrain, John D. Monahan, John J. Dunn, Albert Beliveau, John Clarke, Michael Riordan, Jas. F. Rooney, Edw. S. Cain, Jos. H. McLaughlin, Michael J. Doyle.

What Theodore Roosevelt Says.

An article on "The Presidency," by Theodore Roosevelt, to be published in the November 6th issue of The Youth's Companion, will be of great public interest. When the article was written Mr. Roosevelt had not even been nominated for the Vice-Presidency.

Nothing was then further from his thought than that he would so soon exercise the great powers which are entrusted to the President of the United States.

In view of the circumstances the article possesses an importance more than ordinary, and it will be eagerly looked for. The number of The Youth's Companion containing it, and all the subsequent issues of 1902, will be sent free to new subscribers from the time their subscription of $1.75 is received for the 1903 volume. The new subscriber will also receive The Companion Calendar for 1903, lithographed in twelve colors and gold. Full illustrated announcement of the new volume and sample copies of The Companion will be sent to any address free. The Youth's Companion, 144 Berkeley street, Boston, Mass.

More Cars Wanted.

Complaints are frequently heard regarding the scarcity of cars on the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. After Quincy there is standing room only for the Wollaston, Norfolk Downs and Atlantic passengers on the 11.16, 12.16 and 1.16 inward trains Saturdays. As these trains are patronized mostly by ladies the situation is even harder. Then too, ladies object to riding in smoking cars even though no smoking is going on, as on the Sunday evening 5.28 train.

To Race Next Year.

The Cadillac, the crack yacht built in Quincy for a Detroit syndicate, was recently sold at auction for $1,875 to William M. Warren, Andrew H. Green, John H. Smedley, and John C. Shaw, who will enter her in the matinee races of the Country club.

Rally Tonight.

The Democrats advertise a grand rally to be held this evening at Music Hall, with a notable list of speakers. W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., will preside, and Candidate McNary and Congressman Naphen are expected to address the voters.

TO BE WIDENED.

Norfolk County Commissioners So Adjudicated.

The Hancock Street Bridge

Will Be 64 Feet Wide and Possibly Lengthened.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners held at Dedham on Tuesday, the board adjudicated that public necessity and convenience required that the bridge over the railroad near the Atlantic depot on Hancock street be widened to 64 feet.

When the work is completed a commission to be appointed by the Supreme court will determine what portion of the expense shall be borne by the railroad and what by the city.

The widening of this bridge means that the approaches to the bridge on both sides will also be widened to the full width.

The bridge has long been considered too narrow, especially so since the advent of the street railway. Hancock street is the main thoroughfare between Boston and the South Shore, and the extent to which the bridge is used by teams has increased at a remarkable rate. It is no uncommon thing to see teams waiting on either side of the bridge for other teams to pass.

Quincy in History.

"Where American Independence Began" is the title of a book to be published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. in November. It will be of unusual interest to the people of New England as it tells the story of that remarkable group of patriots in Boston and Quincy among whom independence had its earliest utterance and strongest advocacy. The author is Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, already known to the reading public by his history of the Old First church of Quincy, over which he was pastor for many years. About fifty illustrations will adorn the book. They will include half-tones of portraits by Stuart, Copley, Hunt and other celebrated artists, treasured in the homes and art galleries of Boston and the halls of Harvard. An idea of the attractive character of the book may be obtained by its table of contents: "The Heirs and Heritage of Freedom," "License Before Liberty," "Liberty Checked," "Judith and Joanna," "John Adams, the Great Advocate of Independence," "John Quincy Adams, the Puritan President," "Charles Francis Adams and the War for the Union," "The Colonial Colonels," "Dorothy Q. and Other Dorothys," "Rare Old Tutor Flynt," and "The Perambulation of Quincy." —Transcript.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." sold by all druggists.

At a recent meeting of the vestry of Christ church, it was voted to extend a call to Rev. Francis Lee Whittemore of Providence, R. I., to become rector.

His first service was under the Bishop of London at East London. Five years ago he returned to America and became assistant to Dr. Rousminere at New Bedford, where he remained two years. For the past three years he has been an assistant to Dr. Rousminere at Providence, R. I.

Torpedo Boat Manœuvres.

So much pleased is Secretary of the Navy Moody and other officers with the manœuvres of the torpedo boat flotilla in Narragansett Bay a few months ago that he has decided, says a Newport dispatch to the Transcript, to issue orders for the reassembling of all the torpedo craft here next summer Then will be held a series of drills in every branch of the tactics known to be used by this class of small boats, and it is expected that at least twenty boats will be in the flotilla. They will include torpedo boats, torpedo-boat destroyers and submarine torpedo boats. Before next summer additional wharves will have been constructed at the torpedo station. Present plans of the inspector in charge of ordinance provide for accommodations for twenty-five of the slender craft.

The drill of the torpedo boats was nothing more nor less than manœuvres similar to those indulged in by the cruisers and battleships, modified, of course, to suit the peculiarities of the smaller boats. Conditions afforded Secretary Moody to view the torpedo boats at practice, and he was highly pleased with the results accomplished. Lieut. Chandler, who was commander of the flotilla, is of the opinion that Narragansett Bay, with all its curves and twists, making the greatest of caution necessary even for small boats, offers admirable advantage to future movement of the torpedo boats. This belief is accepted by Mr. Moody and he will therefore arrange for the mobilization here of all the torpedo boats on the Atlantic coast.

BABY UPSET LAMP

Explosion Followed and Mother and Child Were Burned to Death

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 28.—Mrs. William Golden, 27 years old, and her infant daughter, Jennie, aged 2 years, were burned to death last night. The mother was preparing supper shortly before 6 o'clock, when the baby, seated in a carriage near the table, pulled at the table cloth and upset the lamp, an explosion resulting in which Mrs. Golden and Jennie were terribly burned. Mrs. Golden ran to the door and stood for several minutes with her clothes blazing. After her clothes had been destroyed she sank to the steps in a half unconscious state.

When neighbors arrived they found her inquiring if her baby had escaped injury. Mother and child were taken to the Lowell hospital, where the child died at 9 o'clock and the mother at 9:30.

Sympathy Was With Union Men

Chicago, Oct. 28.—In a riot yesterday, caused by the American posting service's attempt to post bills by the use of non-union labor, seven men were severely injured and a riot call was sent in. More than 800 persons gathered and many of them assisted the union men in stopping the work. When the police arrived the non-union men had surrendered their wagons and escaped from the shower of missiles. Only two bills were posted and those were torn down by the sympathizers of the striking bill posters. The crowd dispersed upon the appearance of the police and no arrests were made.

Forged Imperial Signatures

Prague, Oct. 28.—The trial has begun here of Alois Mueller and Peter Von Schlocta on charges of trafficking in forged patents of nobility. It is alleged that Mueller has duped the buyers of such patents to the extent of $100,000. Mueller is an economic expert, 64 years of age. Twenty-three separate charges have been brought against him, involving over 100 forgeries of state documents, imperial rescripts and certificates of births, marriages and deaths. His clients included well known officials.

Boers' Remarks Displeased Crowd

London, Oct. 28.—The Boer commanders, Kritzinger, Fouche and Joubert, after addressing a meeting at Cambridge last night, had a narrow escape from the angry crowd of people that had listened to their speeches. Kritzinger was obliged to scale a wall to get away, while the others were escorted to their hotel by the police.

Minneapolis, Oct. 28.—Christopher Norebeck, formerly a member of the detective force, was sentenced yesterday to three years in the state penitentiary for bribery. Chicago, Oct. 28.—The Record-Herald says: Between 40,000 and 50,000 colonists have gone into the far western, northwestern and southwestern states during the months of September and October. The movements of homeseekers and settlers has never before been so great in the history of western railroads.

Faculty Won't Permit Rushes

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 28.—The students at the Michigan Agricultural college, numbering about 1000, went on strike yesterday, owing to the suspension of 17 of their number for participation in a freshman-sophomore rush. President Snyder says that the faculty means to stand firm in its position.

TREATY NOT REJECTED

Returned by Cuba For Modification of Details

THE BEET SUGAR INTERESTS

Suspected of Having a Hand In Disquieting Reports From Havana—Vigorous Rivalry Among Foreign Countries to Secure Trade

Washington, Oct. 29.—The reports going out of Havana and Washington concerning obstacles on the part of Cuba to the acceptance of the proposed treaty with the United States have been much exaggerated, it may be stated on excellent authority, and too much significance has been generally attached to the return of that instrument to the United States. This, it is assumed, is merely for the modification of details and should in no sense be regarded as a rejection, or as foreshadowing any final break in the negotiations. It is hinted that emissaries on American beet sugar interests are responsible for no small part of the sensational reports from Havana, to the effect that the diplomatic representatives of the foreign powers would withdraw from Cuba in case she negotiated such a treaty with the United States as that now under consideration.

It has even been suggested that parties in the interest of foreign traders might put a lobby at work in the Cuban congress to prevent its granting special commercial privileges to the United States through a reciprocity treaty. While there doubtless is a vigorous rivalry among the foreign representatives for advantageous terms in getting the trade of Cuba, it is apparent that the consummation of a treaty with the United States would not estop Cuba from negotiating with other countries along similar lines, and so that there need be no underhand methods employed.

Dispatches stating that President Palma objects to the American proposal on the ground that it would result in a large reduction of the Cuban revenue have given rise to the idea that Cuba will propose to grant us reciprocity by raising her duties on products from all other countries, instead of making a concession to us from the present rates. The details of the negotiation remain secret and so far nothing more can be said of this report than that it perhaps points in the direction in which Cuba may desire the present modifications.

Hostile Influences at Work

Havana, Oct. 29.—The demand of the United States that Cuba shall raise her tariff in order that the United States shall continue to benefit by a 25 percent "differential" is hotly resented in Cuban political circles, while foreign diplomatic and consular representatives have not been slow to protest. Two prominent European powers, whose governments were prompt to recognize Cuba, have notified President Palma that, whatever the outcome of reciprocity negotiations with Washington, they expect all the advantage of the "most favored nation" clause when they make a treaty with Cuba. They intimate that, in default of Cuba's ability to grant such privilege, they may reconsider previous recognition of Cuba as a nation. President Palma, acknowledging Cuba's obligations to the United States, nevertheless believes that Cuban markets should not be virtually closed against European commerce.

Miners Threaten General Strike

Paris, Oct. 29.—The national committee of the striking miners has written a letter to Premier Combes accusing the companies of using intimidation to force the miners to resume work individually, and of discharging those who refused to do so. The committee threatens that if such methods are continued it will ask all the trades unions of France to order a general strike.

Americans Free From Cholera

Washington, Oct. 29.—Surgeon General O'Reilly has received a report from Lieutenant Lyster of the medical department, who is attached to the United States legation guard at Pekin, from which it appears that the American soldiers are the only foreigners who have escaped the epidemic of cholera up to date.

TREATY NOT REJECTED

Returned by Cuba For Modification of Details

THE BEET SUGAR INTERESTS

Suspected of Having a Hand In Disquieting Reports From Havana—Vigorous Rivalry Among Foreign Countries to Secure Trade

Washington, Oct. 29.—The reports going out of Havana and Washington concerning obstacles on the part of Cuba to the acceptance of the proposed treaty with the United States have been much exaggerated, it may be stated on excellent authority, and too much significance has been generally attached to the return of that instrument to the United States. This, it is assumed, is merely for the modification of details and should in no sense be regarded as a rejection, or as foreshadowing any final break in the negotiations. It is hinted that emissaries on American beet sugar interests are responsible for no small part of the sensational reports from Havana, to the effect that the diplomatic representatives of the foreign powers would withdraw from Cuba in case she negotiated such a treaty with the United States as that now under consideration.

It has even been suggested that parties in the interest of foreign traders might put a lobby at work in the Cuban congress to prevent its granting special commercial privileges to the United States through a reciprocity treaty. While there doubtless is a vigorous rivalry among the foreign representatives for advantageous terms in getting the trade of Cuba, it is apparent that the consummation of a treaty with the United States would not estop Cuba from negotiating with other countries along similar lines, and so that there need be no underhand methods employed.

Dispatches stating that President Palma objects to the American proposal on the ground that it would result in a large reduction of the Cuban revenue have given rise to the idea that Cuba will propose to grant us reciprocity by raising her duties on products from all other countries, instead of making a concession to us from the present rates. The details of the negotiation remain secret and so far nothing more can be said of this report than that it perhaps points in the direction in which Cuba may desire the present modifications.

Hostile Influences at Work

Havana, Oct. 29.—The demand of the United States that Cuba shall raise her tariff in order that the United States shall continue to benefit by a 25 percent "differential" is hotly resented in Cuban political circles, while foreign diplomatic and consular representatives have not been slow to protest. Two prominent European powers, whose governments were prompt to recognize Cuba, have notified President Palma that, whatever the outcome of reciprocity negotiations with Washington, they expect all the advantage of the "most favored nation" clause when they make a treaty with Cuba. They intimate that, in default of Cuba's ability to grant such privilege, they may reconsider previous recognition of Cuba as a nation. President Palma, acknowledging Cuba's obligations to the United States, nevertheless believes that Cuban markets should not be virtually closed against European commerce.

Miners Threaten General Strike

Paris, Oct. 29.—The national committee of the striking miners has written a letter to Premier Combes accusing the companies of using intimidation to force the miners to resume work individually, and of discharging those who refused to do so. The committee threatens that if such methods are continued it will ask all the trades unions of France to order a general strike.

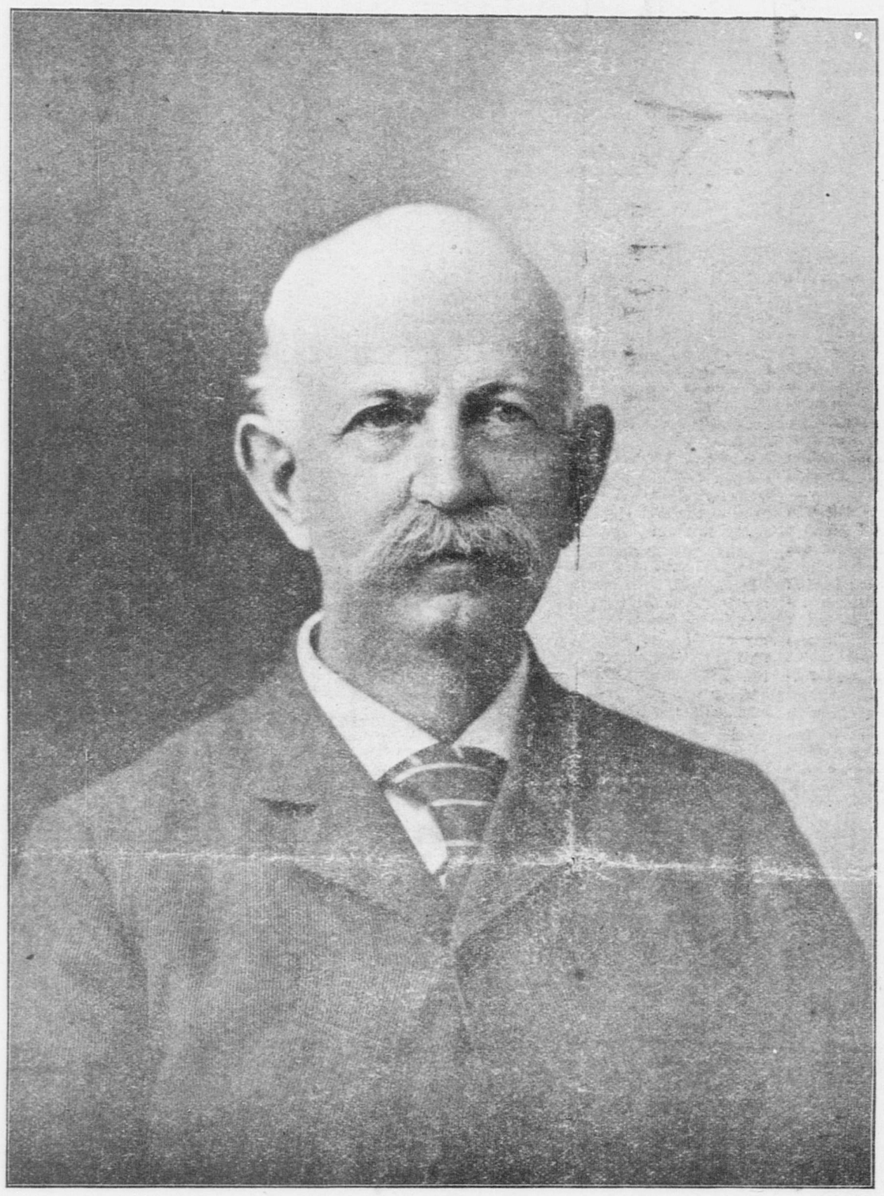
QUINCY DAILY LEDGER.

Vol. 14. No. 254. QUINCY, MASS., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1902. PRICE TWO CENTS.

MARSHALL P. WRIGHT.

Candidate for RE-ELECTION as County Commissioner.



An Office the Duties of Which are Strictly of a Business Nature and Non-political.

The following circular has been issued to the voters of Norfolk County this week:

Norfolk County is a Republican County, but it sometimes elects Democrats to office, and re-elects them, if they deserve it, in spite of narrow-minded party efforts to displace them.

Last year MARSHALL P. WRIGHT was elected to fill out an unexpired term by the votes of thousands of influential Republicans and by those of the Democrats as well. He had 4800 majority. The reason that he received this large number of Republican votes was that the regular Republican nomination was one that ought not to have been made.

Mr. Wright is a man of high character and independent judgment, well fitted by training and experience for the kind of work he has been called on to do. He has proved an excellent commissioner, having the confidence of his associates and the appreciation of those in a position to know what he has done. He is peculiarly well adapted for dealing with the two large public works now in course of construction and in contemplation in Norfolk County—the Fore River Bridge and the Registry of Deeds Building.

Under these circumstances many Republicans felt that the best interests of the party as well as of the county made it desirable that Mr. Wright should be re-elected by general consent this year. As a means of promoting Mr. Wright's re-election, nomination papers were taken out in his interest and signed by a great many Republicans throughout the county. In Quincy alone, where Mr. Wright lives, and where his opponent also lives, more than 250 Republicans have signed these nomination papers for Mr. Wright. Under the law the Secretary of State will not allow the actual filing of more than 200 names upon nomination papers for a county commissioner, but the names of more Republicans are constantly being signed to the lists, although they cannot be filed.

The strength of the desire among Republicans that Mr. Wright should be re-elected was brought to the attention of the delegates to the Republican convention, and the Boston Journal, which helped elect Mr. Wright last year, declared editorially that the wise and decent thing for the Republican convention to do was to nominate Mr. Wright, and expressed the hope that this broad-guage course would be taken.

Nevertheless this convention, controlled by those who opposed Mr. Wright last year, by friends of self-seeking candidates, and by a few narrow-minded partisans, and including last year's defeated candidate in its membership, insisted upon taking a narrow view of the situation. Under the foolish cry that the county must be "redeemed," the nomination was made of a man whom no one seriously contends to be the equal of Mr. Wright in either capacity, experience or independence of judgment.

As at present constituted, the Board of County Commissioners consists of two Republicans and one Democrat. It is a harmonious and efficient board, and all citizens may be sure of obtaining from it exactly what they are entitled to. As there has been some talk about the apportionment of Representatives to the Legislature among the towns of the county by the Commissioners, it is well enough to say that the next apportionment comes in 1906, the year after the expiration of the term of the Commissioner to be elected this year. If it were otherwise, and the apportionment was to be made by the present Board, an absolutely fair and just one would be assured.

The result of the election depends upon the great body of voters who chose Mr. Wright last year, and who in years gone by twice chose Sheriff Endicott (a Democrat whom a Republican Governor had promoted to fill a vacancy,) in spite of narrow-minded party nomination made against him.

A committee of Republicans has been formed to make these facts known to the voters, and this circular is sent out accordingly.

"AFTER FIVE YEARS"

By Frances Wilson

Copyright, 1901, by Frances Wilson

"We'll have tea, I think," she said in a meditative manner, leaning her cheek against two fingers of her left hand, "and perhaps some of those little cakes—the ones that are so tempting on the outside and all emptiness on the inside."

From her tone Lorrimer understood that she meant to intimate that the artistic unities demanded cakes of this description. He translated the order into man talk for the benefit of the obsequious waiter and then asked with the air of one who was used to being made a confidant of:

"What's the trouble? Because I've noticed that when you order tea it is an infallible sign of a disturbed conscience."

There was a flash of mirth in her eyes as they met his, and she clasped her hands on the edge of the table and leaned toward him, saying in a wheedling way:

"You're the greatest comfort to me. You're the only man I know, ever have known, save one, who always understands! With you it isn't necessary to dot one's i's and cross one's t's."

Having paid him this handsome compliment, she beamed at him across the narrow table and expectantly awaited the question which she knew was sure to follow.

"And the other fellow," he laughed, "the one who shares with me the proud distinction?"

"He's the trouble!" came the answer in a pathetic voice. Then with sudden vivacity: "Did you ever notice that there's something about the movements of the average waiter that reminds one of Spencerian writing? There's a flowing grace in the way that he removes a dish cover, a flourish in the way that he sets down a plate, which marks him as a human exponent of the Spencerian theory."

Their order had arrived, and it was not until she had poured the tea that she spoke again. Then she burst out indignantly:

"Nobody but a dreamer would think of such a thing as continuing a romance from the point where he left it five years before. It's absurd, you know," she continued candidly. "A person's feelings change from year to year!"

"From season to season would seem to me a more accurate statement," put in her companion, with a suave smile, "unless, indeed, my experience has been unusual."

"You do understand," she smiled. "You certainly do! Now you would know, wouldn't you, that if a woman were fond of you, say when leg o' mutton sleeves were in fashion, she might—probably would—feel very different by the time that the coat sleeves were de rigueur?"

Her face wore the hopeful expression of a person who has at last found a perfectly rational human being who will see things as they are. Lorrimer drained his cup and set it down deliberately before he replied. Then he said:

"Don't you think you would better begin at the beginning? You're a trifle incoherent, you know."

"That's just it! There wasn't any beginning! And evidently he thinks that there hasn't been any end. It was all so elusive and intangible and so sad! He left so much to the imagination. I think that was a part of his fascination for me. There was a look in his eyes at times that wrung my heart, and from pity I drifted by degrees into something more.

"When we parted, I knew that we were sworn to an eternal friendship—sort of ashes of roses affair, you know—and in my own heart I was fully determined never to marry. I was going to be one of those sweet, sad, strong women that you read about."

She screwed her forehead into a knot and looked at him deprecatingly.

"What happened?" he inquired in a sympathetic tone. "You haven't married, it is true, but I have never connected you in my thoughts with a hidden sorrow."

The occupants of an adjoining table rose to go, and her attention was engrossed for a moment by a love of a gown. Then she came back to Lorrimer and her story.

"I suppose that what happened was just—other men!" she said ruefully. "The spirit was willing, but the flesh was weak."

"What in the name of goodness is troubling you then?" asked Lorrimer, thoroughly mystified.

"Why, I had a note from him this morning! He will be in town next Wednesday. His wife is dead!"

She composed her face to an expression of perfect propriety before making this announcement, though there was a faint twitching of her lips.

"Ah-h-h! I see. You fear that he is coming to claim his pound of flesh, and you're not of the same mind that you were when it was promised."

She nodded.

"It's not quite nice of me to tell you, but we're very old friends, and I'm really troubled. He's such a nice fellow—just a thoroughgoing idealist, and I know he thinks of me as cherishing his memory, and of course I do," she added quickly, "only not in just the way he thinks. He's had so much sadness in his life that I cannot bear to give him pain. I want him to see for himself that I am different now. I thought of fixing myself up like a perfect frump," she said anxiously, "to receive him and asking you to drop in at ten minutes past 5, not a minute later, so that there won't be any time for"—

"Reminiscences?" prompted Lorrimer, and she assented.

The teapot was empty and the illusory cakes had vanished. There was a flutter of departing guests all about them, and they rose and made their way homeward.

At precisely 5 o'clock the next day Miss Barry was greeting Mr. Grantham with an expression in her dark eyes which was not well planned, if indeed it was calculated to reconcile him to his fate.

"You've grown, actually grown, since we last met," he said, his handsome, serious face lighting up with pleasure and with a ring of boyish pleasure in his voice which suddenly made her feel very world worn, very callous and very unworthy. "Tell me about yourself—all that you've been doing and thinking," he went on cordially, but with no trace of embarrassment, "and then I'll retaliate in kind."

"I've simply been growing worldly and horrid, and I'm not at all the sort of person that I was five years ago. I've given up my ideals, those exquisite chimeras which seemed so near to us that summer. You see New York isn't the proper habitat for the soul."

Grantham's deep eyes were bent upon her half in doubt.

"I don't think you are quite fair to yourself," he began gently, and the look in his eyes made her wonder nervously how much longer it would be before Lorrimer appeared.

As if in response to her thought he was announced at that moment, and the three were soon chatting pleasantly. If Mr. Grantham felt any annoyance at the presence of a third party, there was no trace of it in his manner. His eyes rested upon Miss Barry with a look which struck Lorrimer as being of the sort that one gives to an admired but utterly unattainable object; he looked at her as one might look at some beautiful ideal to which he had ceased to aspire.

He also noticed that Miss Barry, with feminine inconsistency, had evidently repented of her determination to "look like a frump." There was something extremely up to date in the way that the dull pink broadcloth swirled around her slender figure, and her dark hair seemed to shine and ripple more exquisitely than usual. Lorrimer decided to seize the first opportunity that presented to hum:

And, oh, I am glad that moment sad
Was cheered by sight of me!

It was not until Mr. Grantham rose to go that he said:

"You know perhaps of the death of my twin sister, Mrs. Raymond? She died in Rome six months ago. It was a terrible shock to Mrs. Grantham."

There was a queer little inarticulate exclamation which seemed to come from Miss Barry's lips, while a shade of astonishment flashed across Lorrimer's face. The speaker looked from one to the other in a puzzled way and then continued:

"Mrs. Grantham was with her and will return on the Etruria next week. I want you to meet her, Miss Barry, and see our boys." His face was shining with pride. "I know you will love them."

Miss Barry murmured the usual commonplaces and then added maliciously, with a defiant look straight at Lorrimer:

"I was about to ask for Mrs. Grantham when Mr. Lorrimer joined us. I hope she is very well?"

Left alone, she and Lorrimer looked at each other in a nonplused manner for a moment. Then they both burst into peals of laughter.

She finally crossed the room and made a search in the small desk which stood in the alcove and came back, with her eyes bent upon the note in her hand. Sitting down beside Lorrimer, she held it out to him, looking rather foolish.

"It doesn't say that his wife is dead, but wouldn't you think so from the wording and—and from the other circumstances?" she pleaded. Then devoutly: "Goodness! I'm glad I wore the pink broadcloth!"

"So am I, dear," replied Lorrimer, and then he went on to say— But it would take too long to tell that.

Too Tight a Squeeze.

John Fiske, the historian, was a man of enormous stature, and extremely sensitive about any reference to his unusual size. On one occasion, when he was visiting a friend at his home in a beautiful town in Connecticut, the hostess and her daughter invited Mr. Fiske to drive with them one morning. The road is a picturesque one, which winds along the river at the foot of the mountains. At one point the hostess suggested that the party alight and walk a short distance through the field to get a particularly attractive view. Around this field was a high fence with no opening but a narrow stile. The ladies passed through and turned to wait for their guest. For a moment he contemplated the opening; to squeeze through was impossible, to climb over was equally impracticable. Finally his deep bass voice broke the silence: "Ladies, I think we would better continue our drive."

A Feat of Swordsmanship.

Napoleon, it is said, one day met an old one armed soldier and asked him where he lost his arm.

"Sire, at Austerlitz."

"And were you not decorated?"

"No, sire."

"Then here is my own cross for you. I make you chevalier."

"Your majesty makes me chevalier because I have lost one arm. What would your majesty have done had I lost both?"

"Oh, in that case I should have made you officer of the Legion."

Whereupon the soldier immediately drew his sword and cut off his other arm.

THE COLOMBIAN WAR

Defeated Revolutionary General to Direct His Efforts Toward Peace

Colon, Oct. 30.—Further news has reached here of the engagement on Oct. 24 at Rio Frio which resulted in the surrender of the revolutionary generals, Uribe-Uribe and Castillo, together with 10 cannon, 2500 rifles and considerable ammunition.

The government general, Marjarres, reached Rio Frio with reinforcements of 2000 men. These troops were destined for the isthmus and their arrival at Rio Frio was unexpected. The government forces, already before the rebel positions, in conjunction with the men of Marjarres' command, managed to surround the enemy completely and, after a well contested engagement, to force them to surrender. Four hundred revolutionists are reported to have been killed. The dead were left unburied.

According to terms of capitulation, General Uribe-Uribe undertakes to bring about the surrender of all revolutionary bands now in the departments of Magdalena and Bolivar. He goes to Bogota to confer with the Colombian government to this end.

Judges In Contempt

Kansas City, Oct. 30.—Samuel O. Peden, ex-judge of the county court of St. Clair county, who has been in jail at Maryville since May, 1901, for contempt of court, in refusing to order a tax levy to pay bonds pledged for the Tebo and Neosho railway in 1879, was ordered released yesterday by Judge Phillips of the United States district court. While in jail Judge Peden sent his resignation to Governor Dockery and a successor was appointed. Judge Thomas Nevitt, presiding judge of the St. Clair county court, is still in jail for having refused to respect the United States court's commands to order a tax levy for the payment of the bonds.

Found Children In Orphans' Home

St. Louis, Oct. 30.—After a search that has extended over three states and lasted for nearly three years, Henry M. Willis, a professor at the National university, Washington, has located his two little daughters in the Methodist orphans' home here. Professor Wills applied for a writ of habeas corpus, asking that the children be restored to him. In 1899 the parents were divorced and the mother took the little girls to Tennessee from their former home in Indiana. Last August the two children were placed in the home here and the father learned of their whereabouts only a few days ago, after a constant search.

To Visit Southern States

Washington, Oct. 30.—President Roosevelt will make a trip through a part of the south next month if official business should not make his presence in Washington necessary at that time. The trip will be made about the middle of the month, the primary object of it being to enable the president to attend the reception to be tendered by the citizens of Memphis to Vice Governor Wright of the Philippines.

Terrible Triple Tragedy

Wayne, Ark., Oct. 30.—Mary, Sophie and May Gibson, aged 17, 12 and 10 years respectively, daughters of a prosperous negro farmer, were murdered and one of them was the victim of a criminal assault at their home near here yesterday while they were alone in the house. David Cross, an old negro, finally confessed that he witnessed the killing and said that a negro named Johnson was the guilty man.

Held as Murder Suspect

New York, Oct. 30.—A young man who described himself as William G. Johnson of Philadelphia entered a police station here last night and said that he desired to surrender himself as the murderer of Albert C. Latimer, who was shot, apparently by a burglar, in his home in Brooklyn on July 2 last. The man said that he surrendered because he was stricken with remorse. He was locked up.

"Tube" Contest Before Parliament

London, Oct. 30.—The efforts of the promoters of the Morgan "tube" railway scheme to procure the re-establishment of the parliamentary status of their original franchise bill as a whole led to an hour's debate in the house of commons last night, the only result of which was the withdrawal of the endeavor.

A MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY

Murdered Womans' Body Is Found In a Field

THE VICTIM IS UNKNOWN

Evidently Brought In a Wagon to Place Where It Was Found—Hunter's Dog First Discovered Body, Which Was Covered With Boughs

Reading, Mass., Oct. 30.—A huntsman's dog brought to light yesterday afternoon a murder just off a well travelled highway near the Wakefield line, the victim being a woman, evidently a tramp, but whose identity has not been established. When first discovered by Walter Locke, whose dog drew him to the spot, the body was still warm, and blood was slowly oozing from no less than six wounds in the head. Five of these wounds were from pistol bullets, while the sixth, which had gashed the left ear and plunged deep into the neck, had been apparently made by some sharp instrument.

There was every indication that the murder itself had been committed elsewhere and that the body had been taken from a wagon and dragged into the field where it was found. From the number of wounds, the local authorities are led to believe that the crime was done in anger. The dress of the woman, the fact that she wore two skirts, three pairs of stockings and two coats, all seemed to indicate a person well prepared for long journeys on foot in all sorts of weather. There was no clue whatever to her identity and hundreds who looked upon her in the local undertaking rooms pronounced her a stranger.

Locke had been hunting through the Reading and Wakefield woods nearly all day and was coming back towards his town when his dog, who was well ahead, suddenly stopped and began to bark.

Locke paid little attention to the animal until he reached him and then he discovered the body, partially covered with pine boughs. Satisfying himself that the woman was dead, he ran to the nearest house, that of George Loomis, just over the line in Wakefield, and the two men succeeded in getting word to both the Reading and Wakefield police, and Medical Examiner Jack in Melrose. Dr. Jack soon arrived and pronounced it a case of murder, giving his opinion that any one of the wounds might have proved fatal. According to Dr. Jack, the woman was apparently about 45 or 50 years of age, 5 feet, 4 inches in height and weighed about 140 pounds. The location of the body was 20 feet from the Wakefield line in Reading.

The fact that the body was still warm leads to the belief that the crime must have been committed some time after noon, as it was 2:40 o'clock when Locke found it. A well recognized trail led from the street, which gave every indication that the body had been brought from the actual scene of the crime in some vehicle, and then dragged into the field, some attempt being made to conceal it by pine boughs.

Although the place where the body was found is somewhat remote from any house, the surrounding country is open for a considerable distance, while the road is particularly straight, which would give anyone standing on it a quarter of a mile in either direction a good chance to see any team which might be driving along or stopping by the roadside.

As soon as Dr. Jack had made his examination the body was taken to undertaking rooms in this town, where an autopsy will be performed. J. H. Whitney of the state police will take charge of the case, being assisted by Chief Merrill of the Reading police.

The affair caused a great sensation in this vicinity, and hundreds filed into the undertaking rooms last evening to look at the body of the unfortunate woman.

Father and Son In Prison

Portland, Ore., Oct. 30.—William Baldwin and his son, George, were sentenced to serve two years and one year, respectively, in the penitentiary yesterday, the father for aiding and abetting and the son for striking the blow in a prize fight that killed Frank Carlson. Carlson and George Baldwin had trouble over two girls and decided to settle their differences in the ring.

Vessel Wrecked on Rocks

St. John, Oct. 30.—Barkentine Frederica, Captain Churchill, was wrecked yesterday on the rocks two miles east of Cape Spencer light. The vessel was bound from Parrsboro to Portland, Me., with coal. The wind blew with terrific force with high seas and the crew could do nothing with the ship. They lost everything but what they stood in.

Women's World

MISS LOUISE TRAUX.

She Whistles Sacred Music During Church Service.

Miss Louise Traux of New York city devised a novel way to attract congregations to church. She whistles sacred music during service. Worshipers who are not fond of frivolities of any kind declare that her whistling is so beautiful they cannot believe it to be wrong. Fashionable churches everywhere are seeking her assistance. And so, instead of whistling being a revolution, as the sedate members of several church congregations feared, it has become a most welcome innovation in the church services.

Miss Traux likes church work, and whistling in church is as great a pleasure to her as it is to her listeners. That is the reason she invented the novel plan of attracting people to church.

Her church work is largely confined to whistling the offertory. Now and then she will whistle a solo for an evening service, but she prefers the morning exercise.

When this heretofore unheard of feature was introduced into the morning service at a New York church, it created a great sensation. The sound of a girl's clear, sweet whistle, accompanied by the low, deep tones of the organ, had never been heard in the services of a church before.

MISS LOUISE TRAUX.

But close upon the surprise came the realization that the whistling was music infinitely sweet and pleasing. Miss Traux is a thorough musician and shows it in every note. Her trills are the perfection of musical art. She whistles as a master plays the flute. She is as sure of every note as he is.

"I didn't realize what was in store for me when I began whistling in church," said Miss Traux, who is not yet nineteen. "I prefer church music, and whistling is little or no effort to me. And when I was asked to whistle at a morning service I had no idea it would create so much notice. But I enjoyed my first experience, and I shall continue my church work. The people like it, and that pleases me.

"I was only thirteen years old when I discovered that I had a natural gift as a whistler. Of course since then I have gone on improving, for I notice everything that helps to improve the tones, but I really don't know how I do it. I have learned that the objectionable feature about the whistling of most persons, that puffing sound, can be overcome by the trill, and I have followed the principle of the trill. But when it comes to saying precisely how I produce the quality of tone I must confess that I cannot do it. One must have firm lips to whistle correctly."

Miss Traux is believed by her friends to be one of the most accomplished whistlers in the world. Before she took up whistling in church as a profession she was often heard at receptions, musicales, concerts and musical festivals. She has appeared with such artists as Mme. Schumann-Heink and Mme. Lillian Blauvelt.—New York American.

Settings For a Library.

The elaborate bindings which characterize the hundreds of "latest" books continually on the market have forced book buyers, if only to be consistent, to give their library a proper setting. With comparatively little trouble you can fix up a beautiful little corner for your books, which you will find the most restful and delightful room of your home.

In the first place a soft shade of old blue in raw silk will give you beautiful curtains for your bookshelves. Run a slender brass rod in a loose casing at the top of the curtain without upstanding ruffle. Chinese wares in blue and white, exclusive greens and strong yellow make lovely bits of color as vases. Search the Chinese and Japanese stores for your large vase, and if possible place it on a stand of carved teak wood.

An Egyptian jar of figured brass makes a charming jardiniere to drop a potted plant in. Such a piece as this should have an oriental taboret under it. Raw silk curtain over Arabian net would give you pretty window draperies. In this case the Arabian net with border and perhaps inserting hangs straight and slightly full next the window, over curtains of blue. Raw silk can then be draped back if you so desire.

Dressing the Schoolgirl.

It is sheer cruelty to send a girl to school badly dressed, and the idea that until she "comes out" anything is good enough for a schoolgirl exposes her to more unpleasantness at school than parents are aware. Many girls are relentless critics, and even though they may do their best to conceal their feelings and ideas on the point a sensitive child will very soon discover in countless ways what is the effect of her general appearance upon her schoolfellows. Another point is that at a certain stage of their growth some girls' hands look abnormally large, and it is quite a common mistake on the part of mothers to accentuate this failing—which, by the way, is very often only temporary—by giving them clumsy and ill made gloves. One has only to take a peep back into one's own past to see how hard such treatment is and how much a highly strung nature goes through on account of these seeming trifles. On the other hand, there are quite a number of mothers who overdress their girls to a ridiculous extent and allow them a measure of freedom of opinion and action that can naturally only be abused by a partially developed brain and mind.

Graceful Leavetaking.

A little nicety of leavetaking that is practiced by a certain well bred woman is to rise to end her visit while she is the speaker. In this way she is apparently leaving while she is much interested. This is better than to start at the end of a pause or to jump up the moment your hostess' voice drops. One way implies boredom and the other waiting for a chance to get away. This may seem a trifle of observance, but it is worth while if only to train oneself in the habit of easy leavetaking, a rare accomplishment even among women with wide social experience. Once standing, leave promptly and avoid spinning out a second visit in the hall. Girls will say all this does not matter, but presently the girl will become a matron introduced perhaps into a circle of strangers, and it will be hard to assume all at once these small but desirable formalities that she has habitually disregarded.

Versatile Woman.

It is above all things required of the modern woman that she be possessed of the versatile mind, ready for and in sympathy with all the varied phases of life, and yet remain at all times first and essentially a woman. It certainly doesn't give her the chance of driveling away her days, this many mindedness that is required of her, and it won't do some women any harm to have to cudgel their brains to the better understanding of sport and the intricacies of the management of such matters as motors or the active superintendence of their own gardens. Women should know all about architecture and chimneys and pipes and drainage and the systems of lighting. Why don't they become architects instead of doctors and solicitors and give us houses intelligently arranged?

Beating Wears Out Rugs.

It is an excellent thing to keep the house or apartments always spick and span, but very frequently the housewife by too frequent and vigorous cleaning is apt to do more damage than good.

The average American housewife wears out her rugs by continual sweeping and beating. The plan of putting them upon a line every two weeks or even once a month and there having them whipped is not to be commended if the rugs are of any value. They should be cleaned with a carpet sweeper, occasionally put upon a line and brushed and once a year sent away to be cleaned in a proper manner or else washed at home.

Making Ringlets.

Every mother likes to see her baby with curly hair, and if it is not naturally so it can be made to grow so with very little care. The baby's hair should of course be washed and brushed every morning, but when the brushing is done do not leave the hair smooth, but with the tips of the fingers rub the head in little circles from right to left all over the scalp. This twists the hair at the roots and produces the much desired curls.

A Good Kitchen Knife.

An artist housewife discovered that a palette knife is a most useful kitchen implement and keeps one in the table drawer of that apartment as well as in her studio. To ice cake or slip in pans to which anything sticks it is invaluable as well as for various other services where a thin, pliable knife is needed.

Elder Flower Water.

To make elder flower water pluck the flowers, cut off the stalks quite close up to the blossoms and place the latter in an earthenware jar. Then cover with water, heat to the boiling point, strain and bottle for use. Two ounces of spirits of wine to one quart of this water will help to preserve it.

Your Expression.

"Take care of your expression," said a woman who has been giving a series of practical talks on beauty to her friends. "Take care of your expression, and the rest of your beauty will take care of itself."

Children generally hate to be idle. All the care, then, should be that their busy humor should be constantly employed in something that is of use to them.—Locke.

Good Afternoon.

Henry H. Faxon is not so much of an issue in the city campaign this year as some would make it appear. It is clearly a Bryant and anti-Bryant fight, as last year. That which the opponents of Mr. Bryant feared last year has come to pass. Mr. Bryant has not made an ideal Mayor. The feeling against him is so strong that Republicans and Democrats as well are ready to forsake their party and vote for any upright citizen who will put a stop to one-man rule. It is something new for Quincy to have a man in the executive chair who is vindictive. In other years Democrats have fared well at hands of Republican administrations, and Republicans have fared well at the hands of Democratic administrations. Our executives have been Mayors for the whole people, and not for a few. Party nominations are necessary to secure the election of good men, but politics should be relegated to the rear, to a large extent, after election. Finances, appropriations and taxes should be paramount to politics.

Considerable local news intended for today's issue is unavoidably crowded out, although eight pages are presented. These are busy days before election at the Ledger office.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The decision of the Supreme Court of Nebraska that the reading of the Bible in the public schools is in contravention of the statute which prohibits sectarianism may be warranted by the Nebraska code. If it is it reflects no credit upon the code makers. It is absurb that a quibble over this or that religious doctrine should shut the masterpiece of the world's literature, if no other claim be made for it, from the curriculum of any school. Not only have most of the inspiring thoughts of the ages come from the Bible, and the grand images of human speech, but it has been and is the one unfailing source of those precepts of noble conduct, which inspire youth and direct age. If it be excluded from the studies of the young because some parts of it may be misunderstood or misinterpreted, every great masterpiece of literature the world has produced may be brought under the same ban. Fortunate have been the generations which have been brought up in intimate acquaintance with the Bible. It will yet be restored to honor in the secular educational systems of the world, as the book of books.--Des Moines Leader.

Quincy Wins.

Wednesday evening on the local alleys the home team defeated the Boston Jrs., a team made up out of the New Century League, two games out of three. Mitchell was high man for Quincy with 272, but was hard pressed by Jackson of the visitors with 271.

☞The daily matinees at 3.15 in Music Hall will be a great treat for the ladies and children who cannot attend in the evening, and the same performance will be given in the afternoon as in the evening and at reduced rates.

TARIFF REFORM.

The Theme at the Democratic Rally.

Congressman Naphen a Speaker.

Also Candidates McNary, Jenney, Fallon and Others.

The first rally of the campaign at Music hall was held Wednesday evening by the Democrats. There was a large attendance, which about half filled the hall.

The speakers were met at the Quincy depot at 7.50, and escorted by the City Band and prominent citizens to the hall.

On the platform besides the speakers were George H. Wilson, Fred W. Tirrell, Dr. H. C. Hallowell, J. F. Burke, E. J. Parker, John W. Walsh, M. P. Sullivan, W. T. Shea, E. G. Hall, John Curtis and several others.

Chairman Carey of the City Committee welcomed the audience and introduced W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., as presiding officer.

Lawyer Pattee was glad to preside, he said, because the party was entering on a new era. Tariff reform was a Democratic doctrine, and its need was now recognized. All Democrats can stand on the Massachusetts platform, and work with a will for Col. Gaston.

Hon. James E. McConnell of Fitchburg was the first speaker, and said it was a great curse for a party to be entrenched in power with a large majority. He admitted that legislation at Washington was responsible for prosperity, and advocated curbing the trusts, justice to Cuba, reciprocity with Canada and the rights of labor.

Hon. John K. Foster, in opening, said there were no political questions this year. He was glad President Roosevelt did what he did to end the strike, and believed him honest in his relations with labor, but also gave the Trade Unionists and Mitchell credit. Senator Hoar was quoted and endorsed generally, but not wholly. The speaker assailed the Republican record toward labor in the Legislature, and had a good word for Candidate McNary.

Candidate McNary was received with three cheers. Republican legislation, he claimed, was responsible for the trusts. The tariff prevents free competition. Beef would be lower but for the tariff.

Henry H. Faxon interrupted and inquired if the tariff did not help the farmers.

The speaker claimed that it did not. That the farmers of New England and New York had been crowded out, and that in the west the beef was raised on large ranches and not by farmers. He further claimed that the tariff on hides did not protect the farmer, and that the tariff did not protect American labor. [Applause.]

Mr. McNary argued that tariff legislation had driven industries out of New England, and quoted that President Watson of the Fore River plant as saying: With free iron and coal our shipyard could compete with any in the world.

If elected, he would work to secure for Massachusetts her legitimate share of National appropriations.

Ex-Mayor Coughlin of Fall River said we were told there were good trusts and bad trusts, but he believed the only good trust was—trust the people. He was sorry Senator Hoar could not see the danger in his party. Iniquitous institutions threaten the overthrow of our county. Therefore you should put on trust at Washington one who will be faithful to you, He spoke in high terms of Mr. McNary.

Congressman Naphen was enthusiastically received. Two years ago he had made promises, and he was pleased to report that a sum was in the appropriation bill for Town river, and that Congress was committed to a government building in Quincy.

He gave a little heart-to-heart talk on the tariff. The Republicans say we are enjoying prosperity and the tariff should not be meddled with. It is a false claim and invites panic. He admitted that tariff legislation may have influence on prosperity either for or against, but noted that Canada with low tariff was outstripping us. The internal test was not to be judged solely by production, but by the proceeds of labor. He claimed that wages had decreased and averaged under $9 per week, and that the deposits in loans and trust companies had increased faster than in savings banks. He heartily endorsed Candidate McNary.

Hon. James A. Gallivan confined himself to the candidates and wondered if anyone had heard of W. W. Towle before he became a candidate for Congress. He had served with him in both branches of the Legislature and said he was only a chair warmer. For McNary, Jenney, Wright, Fallon and Collagan he had a good word.

E. F. Jenney of Hyde Park claimed the trusts were raising the prices of everything, and said the workingmen must stand together. He said no relief could come from Republicans.

Candidate Fallon said it was his maiden speech in Music hall, and he felt ont of place on a platform with a Congressman. He was not sure whether he was a delegate or a candidate, but he thought the people knew him pretty well, and if elected he would try to act honestly for all. He would not be a chair warmer.

A case of smallpox was reported to the Board of Health this morning from Atlantic. The patient is the three-year old daughter of Irving E. Olmsted of 11 Webster street.

A great many are anticipating the Hallowe'en frolic at the John Adams birthplace Friday evening. An old fashioned supper is to be served at six o'clock followod by story telling and games.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Home Science association will be held on Friday afternoon in First church chapel. Mrs. J. H. Litchfield of Wollaston will read her prize essay and a social hour will follow.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." sold by all druggists.

Fourth Supper.

The Memorial Congregational church of Atlantic gave its fourth annual supper to the church members in the annex on Wednesday evening. The tables were decorated with chrysanthemums and the delicious supper put every one into a delightful humor.

Under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Theodore Parker the following committee did exceptionally good service—Mrs. Ellis Smith, Miss Susie M. Hall, Miss Cook, Miss Ethel Hill and Mr. Malcolm Blake. After supper Mr. Theodore Parker presided as toastmaster with a dignity which gave to the occasion a more earnest note than common and the speakers in responding to their toasts seemed to take inspiration from this. The topics and speakers were:

"Our Sunday School," Mr. Walter F. Blake.

"Our Prayer Meeting," Mrs. Neily.

"Our Opportunities," Miss Lillian Hammond.

"The Church Building," Rev. J. H. Whitaker.

"Our Blessings," Mr. Henry Hallett.

"Our Social Life," Mrs. W. N. Ware.

"The Church that Helps," Mrs. Horace Bemis.

"Our Aim," Mrs. Levi H. Turner.

A grand service was held at the Mission church Sunday evening, in celebration of the fifth anniversary, by T. I. Reese. There was also a special musical program. One of the pleasing features was the announcement that the church site had been paid for, and that the Mission commenced the new year free from debt.

A Hallowe'en party will be held at the residence of Mrs. Baxter Friday evening.

The exercises included a piano overture by Miss Flossie Flowers and an address by Mrs. Elsie Robinson, president of the Rebekah assembly of Boston. This was followed with remarks by Special District Deputy, Miss Grace W. Mitchell of East Weymouth, and a reading by Miss McKenzie.

Warship Proposals.

Will the Quincy shipyard get another contract? Acting Secretary Darling has settled the question which has divided the naval construction board relative to the proposed armored cruiser Tennessee by accepting the recommendation of the majority of the board in favor of power instead of high speed. The decision was influenced, perhaps, by Admiral Melville himself, who assured the acting secretary that the majority plans, though short in speed, would give the Government a most formidable and desirable warship. Therefore, by direction of Mr. Darling, Judge Advocate General Lemly has sent out advertisements calling for proposals for the construction of two armored cruisers of the Tennessee class, of about 14,500 tons displacement, the bids to be opened Jan. 6, 1903. The construction board now will perfect the plans for two small gunboats, to be advertised very soon.

A Bridegroom's Ears

[Original.]

In the good old days when New York was called New Amsterdam there lived near Bowling Green a rich Dutchman, Gerrit Ten Broek, whose daughter Anneka was the apple of his eye. Anneka was seventeen, and her father thought it high time that he should arrange a marriage for her, for in those days girls were married much younger than now and had very little to say in the choice of a husband.

Ten Brock was engaged in the fur business with one Ten Eycke, Ten Eycke buying furs in Albany which Ten Broek sold in New York. The two Tens were not only partners in business, but bosom friends. One day Ten Broek wrote his partner:

Anneka is now old enough to be married. What has become of your son Peter? I remember him as a little boy, and he promised to be a fine looking man, except that his ears, which were very large, stuck out singularly from his head. His mother was trying to alter their position. I trust she succeeded. However, this has nothing to do with what I have in mind. As I said, Anneka is old enough to be married. What do you say to uniting our business for another generation at least by marrying your son to my daughter?

To this Ten Eycke replied:

Your plan of marrying my son to your daughter is a very good one. The only trouble in the way is the defect you mention. Peter is very sensitive about it, and I fear I shall not be able to persuade him to marry any one. However, I will see what I can do in the matter.

After much coaxing Peter was won over to the plan. A betrothal was made by letter, for ships sailed infrequently between New Amsterdam and Albany in those days, and the journey was too troublesome to be taken when it could be avoided. At least this was the reason given by the parents of the contracting parties. The real reason was it was feared if Anneka after seeing her betrothed should have time to act before the wedding she would refuse to be married. Anneka was broken hearted over the matter, though her father could not find out whether it was the deformity that troubled her or that she had a lover of whom he knew nothing.

However, he paid no attention to his daughter's repugnance to the match, and it was arranged between him and Ten Eycke that Peter should come down to New Amsterdam on the sloop Katrina, leaving Albany on the 5th of October, 1686, for the purpose of being married. Every preparation was made for the wedding—the parlor swept clean, the dining room and kitchen (they were one) scrubbed and no end of cakes made. At 11 o'clock in the morning of Oct. 7 a young man appeared at the front door, gave a loud rap and when admitted announced himself as Peter Ten Eycke.

When Gerrit Ten Broek saw his enormous ears, nearly the size of a donkey's, and how they stuck out on each side, flapping when their owner walked, his heart misgave him. How could he inflict such a deformity upon his daughter? His neighbors would be forever laughing at him, in their sleeves if not openly. Nevertheless a Dutchman of those days never gave up a purpose. Gerrit had no thought of receding from his plan, but a natural tenderness for his only child induced him to comfort her.

"We will not hasten matters, my dear," he said. "Tomorrow will be time enough for the wedding, or, if you like, next week. Meanwhile you will become accustomed"—

"If I must marry him," said Anneka, "let it be at once."

"What—as soon as he has arrived?"

"Yes. I am ready now."

"Very well, my child, since you wish it."

It was a strange wedding procession that walked up what is now Broadway to the church. The ears of the groom flapped in the wind, and the townspeople crowded the wedding party to get a view of him, not scrupling to vent their mirth in loud guffaws. In the church the dominie had a hard time to keep the people from unseemly behavior and hurried through the service so rapidly that few heard the words, and if the couple had been Hans and Mary instead of Peter and Anneka no one would have known the difference. When the twain were pronounced man and wife and they had turned and faced the people to leave the church, the groom put his hands to his ears and, to the surprise of every one, pulled them off.

For a time there was a silence, after which came at intervals explosions of laughter as the phlegmatic Dutchmen one after another got it into their heads that the man had worn false ears. Meanwhile the bridal couple started down the aisle, the groom grinning from ear to ear, the bride smiling contentedly on his arm.

At the door Gerrit Ten Broek came running up to them to ask what it all meant, but was stopped by a stranger who appeared on the scene with ears somewhat larger than the usual size, though not especially noticeable. He announced himself as Peter Ten Eycke.

"And who are you?" asked Gerrit of the groom.

"Midshipman Jack Somerset of his majesty's ship Terrible. I have loved your daughter since I came into port a week ago and, hearing that you wanted a son-in-law with donkey ears, concluded to accommodate you."

Now, Gerrit Ten Broek had been very much troubled about his son-in-law's deformity, and Peter Ten Eycke had a ladylove in Albany. The consequence was that the wedding party went back to the house and ate the wedding feast, all well satisfied. When the Terrible sailed for England, Jack Somerset took his bride with him, and she became in time one of the prominent social women in England.

MINES SHUT DOWN

Workers Join In Celebrating "Mitchell Day"

LEADER GIVEN AN OVATION

Impresses Upon His Followers That Unionism Is Their Only Safeguard—Declares That Operators Will Avoid Settlement of Bills of Great Strike

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 30.—"Mitchell Day" was celebrated in all the principal towns of the anthracite coal region yesterday and in order that all the mine workers might have an opportunity to participate in the exercises the mines were closed down. The principal demonstration was held in this city and President Mitchell took part.

There was snow and sunshine during the day, but the changeable weather did not keep the army of strikers out of town. Everybody wore a Mitchell badge. The procession started shortly before noon and was nearly one hour in passing a given point. It is estimated that there were 10,000 men in line. The parade was headed by a platoon of police. They followed carriages containing the principal officers of the United Mine Workers' organizations and invited guests.

President Mitchell was given an ovation all along the line of march and when his carriage stopped the crowd from the sidewalk pressed around and insisted on shaking his hand. An American flag was carried at the head of every "local" and brass bands by the score furnished music. The banners carried bore many curious inscriptions.

Thomas Haggerty, who was down on the program as the principal speaker of the day, eulogized Mitchell for his great work in behalf of the miners. Several addresses in foreign languages then followed.

President Mitchell was the last speaker. He said in part: "Language is inadequate to express the gratitude I feel for the great reception I have received at the hands of the anthracite miners and I feel that the victory is not due to myself, but to the men, women and children who made so many sacrifices. I hope that there will never again be a strike in the coal fields of Pennsylvania. I want the union miners to prove that they are better workmen than the non-union men. I desire the men and the operators to meet. I do not want to make enemies of the operators.

"In closing I wish to impress upon you that membership in the union is the only safeguard. The operators are not going to pay the bills of the strike. They will make the workers pay it if they can, but if not they will make the public pay it. It behooves the mine workers therefore to see to it that they are not made the victims, and I hope you will be true to yourselves and to one another and see to it that the cost of this greatest labor struggle that has ever occurred is not placed on your backs. Stick by your union and the union will stick by you."

President Mitchell was busy last night completing his plans for the first meeting of the arbitration board at its meeting in Scranton today. Professor Weil is assisting Mr. Mitchell in preparing his case for presentation, as is Dr. Roberts of Mahnoy City, an authority on the hard coal industry. Dr. Roberts has received a degree from Yale for writing a book on the anthracite coal industry.

Oxford Colliery's Threat

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 30.—"Mitchell Day" observances threw idle all the collieries of this region, excepting the Oxford and some of the washeries. The Oxford, which worked during the strike, has taken back 60 of its old employes. A notice was posted at the head of the shaft that anyone who did not report for work yesterday would be discharged. Despite this some of the union men at the mine joined the West Scranton celebration. A majority of washeries worked, but with small forces.

Parades were held in West Scranton, Minooka, Dunmore, Olyphant and Carbondale. At the conclusion of the parades mass meetings were held in halls, where addresses were made by local labor leaders.

Commission Settles Down to Work

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 30.—The anthracite coal strike commissioners, who will make an inspection of the mines and the homes of the mine workers, arrived here last night. The commission's headquarters are at the Hotel Jermyn, where the party occupies 14 rooms.

Suicide to Smooth Politics

Norfolk, Oct. 30.—John A. Morgan, a leader of the "straight out" Democratic party in Norfolk county, which faction has been fighting the organization of fusionists for several years, blew his brains out yesterday. Heir to Siamese Throne Receives a Welcome From Governor Crane

Boston, Oct. 30.—The Crown Prince of Siam reached this city last night, accompanied by his suite, and for a few days will occupy his time in visiting Massachusetts industries, institutions of learning and other places of interest. The prince was met at the station by three members of the governor's staff, and upon his arrival at Hotel Somerset was formally welcomed to the state by Governor Crane. Later in the evening he was banqueted by the governor. This function, although of a formal nature, was a very pleasant affair, as there were no speeches and only a few toasts. Governor Crane proposed the health of President Roosevelt and Mr. Peirce that of the King of Siam. Governor Crane then toasted the prince and the latter responded by proposing the chief executive of Massachusetts. At the banquet, besides the prince's party, were Mayor Collins and nine other persons.

PROSECUTION ENDED

Testimony Which It Desired In the Molineux Case Is Excluded

New York, Oct. 30.—The prosecution in the Molineux case rested yesterday after the defense had secured an important advantage in the decision by Justice Lambert that the reading of the testimony given at the first trial by Mamie Melando and Detective Farrell, both of whom are beyond the jurisdiction of the court, was inadmissible.

The greater part of the session was devoted to the examination of a handwriting expert, who, like all those who have preceded him, testified that one hand wrote the poison package address, the Barnett and Cornish letters and letters admittedly written by Molineux. The presentation of the case for the defense is expected to occupy not more than two days and interest centres in the question whether Molineux will testify in his own behalf.

For Christians to Consider

London, Oct. 30.—Very Rev. W. H. Fremantle, dean of Ripon, addressing a meeting of the Churchmen's union yesterday, suggested that the idea of the immaculate conception should be left out of account, because, except in St. Matthew and St. Luke, the virginal birth of Christ is not mentioned in the New Testament. The speaker asked whether it was irreverent to believe that Christ, in the matter of miracles such as raising the dead, etc., could not have failed to make a distinction between death and various forms of unconsciousness. With regard to the resurrection the dean said he considered this was meant spiritually and not materially.

Miraculous Escape From Death

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 30.—The Harrisburg express was running at the rate of 40 miles an hour last night when it crashed into the rear of a freight train which was standing on the track at Dillerville. The engine of the express ploughed into the last car of the freight train. The violence of the compact shattered the windows of the passenger coaches and hurled the passengers from their seats, but aside from the jar, no one was hurt. The engineer and fireman of the express managed to crawl out of the wreck, slightly scalded and bruised. The express engine and three freight cars caught fire and were consumed.

Officials to Lose Their Jobs

Washington, Oct. 30.—A severe shake-up is to be made soon in the immigration service at Ellis Island, following a secret investigation into the condition of affairs in the island. Some of the facts are to be placed before the grand jury in New York. The investigation shows, it is claimed, that for years a system of petty thieving and blackmail has gone on. Beside the dismissals there will be a shifting of about 40 "privilege" men. Railroad and steamship companies likewise will be held responsible in the future for their employes.

KRUGER'S ARRAIGNMENT

Of Britishers and Their Policy In South Africa

SAYS RHODES WAS A CURSE

Declares That Chamberlain Was an Accomplice In the Jameson Raid and Hurried on the Contest For Fear of Losing a Pretext For War

London, Oct. 30.—It is understood that the "Kruger Memoirs," of which a first installment of extracts has already been published in The Times, give a narrative of the ex-president's career, but do not go deeply into political or diplomatic aspects or advise the Boers as to the best policy to be pursued after Mr. Kruger's death.

A striking feature of the memoirs is a revelation of the jealousies which existed before the war between the inhabitants of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State and the Cape Colony Boers, which prevented anything like a satisfactory mutual understanding. Mr. Kruger takes pains to prove that he did his utmost to smooth matters over and prevent the war, but the Boers' inborn antipathy to foreign interference proved too strong for him.

The installment of the memoirs published by The Times this morning contains some interesting lights concerning Mr. Kruger's opinion of various men prominent in South African history. The ex-president was once invited to meet Sir Bartle Frere. He replied he would be quite willing to do so if he were told which Frere it was. He declared he knew four Freres, and explained this remark by describing different aspects of Sir Bartle Frere's character, as presented by blue books, etc., saying some of his characteristics were friendly while others were inimical to the Boers.

Mr. Kruger describes the "Jesuitical" Cecil Rhodes as the "curse of South Africa." He says: "No matter how base or contemptible, be it lying, bribery or treachery, all and every means were welcome to him."

Lord Milner he describes as "a typical judge, autocratic beyond endurance."

Mr. Kruger declares that Colonial Secretary Chamberlain was undoubtedly the late Cecil Rhodes' accomplice in the Jameson raid and that Mr. Chamberlain appointed Lord Milner British high commissioner of South Africa with the direct intention of driving matters to extremes. "This tool of Mr. Chamberlain," says Mr. Kruger, "carried out his mission faithfully and turned South Africa into a wilderness."

British policy in general Mr. Kruger sums up in the following sentences:

"Lies, treachery, intrigues and secret investigations against the governments of the republics—these have always been the distinguishing marks of English politics."

Mr. Kruger declares that the Transvaal National union was under Mr. Cecil Rhodes' paramount influence from its very inception and describes it as having, from the very outset, used the demand for the franchise as a cloak for designs against the republics. He describes how, after the Jameson raid, when the republic was practically defenceless, he became convinced of the necessity of preparing for war and gradually accumulated war material. This was especially the case after the British parliamentary inquiry into the raid, which, Mr. Kruger says, showed Mr. Chamberlain's complicity. Mr. Kruger contends that his institution of reforms in 1899 probably startled Mr. Chamberlain and impelled Great Britain to hurry on the crisis for fear of losing a pretext for war.

The author of the memoirs asserts that the signatures to the petitions of British subjects in the Transvaal against the so-called grievances were obtained by the greatest fraud and describes how the franchise remained the question at issue, until, writes Mr. Kruger, in spite of all concessions, all patience and the indulgence of the republic, war broke out.

Mr. Kruger says that enormous demands were then made upon his industry; all persons came to him for directions, advice or comfort. There was not a night during which he slept undisturbed and when the burghers grew discouraged he himself went to the commandos to restore the confidence of the combatants.

The former president writes that he looked upon the war not so much as an event, but rather as a sign of the times.

Berlin, Oct. 30.—The municipality of Berlin has decided to devote the new $50,000,000 loan largely to profit-making enterprises, including $15,000,000 for the erection of gas works and for the construction of a wholesale meat market.

NIPPUR EXPLORATIONS.

Discoveries In Babylonia Described by Professor Hilprecht.

Professor Hilprecht delivered the third lecture of the course on "The History and Results of the Four Babylonian Expeditions of the University of Pennsylvania" at Philadelphia the other afternoon.

Professor Hilprecht took up the story of the researches from the time of the return of the explorers to Nippur in 1890, after having then abandoned the work temporarily because of the hostility of the Arabs, says the New York Times. In the interim, he said, an epidemic of cholera had swept throughout the country, which in a measure the Arabs attributed to the exercise of superhuman powers by the explorers as a punishment for their wrongdoing. Work was resumed on the mound covering the temple of Baal with much larger forces of men. Within a short time the whole of the Parthian fortress, built on top of the temple ruins, was uncovered.

Professor Hilprecht said that among other discoveries there was found in one of the chambers of the outer wall a large number of tablets and other objects of lapis lazuli and other substances, the cuneiform, Saumarian and Semitic inscriptions on which showed them to date back to periods 3,000 years B. C. When the fortress was destroyed, they were in the hands of a jeweler.

"The history of one of these little tablets," said Professor Hilprecht, "is plainly written thereon and assuredly substantiates the truth of the Biblical story of Abraham. Three thousand years before Christ it was owned by a king, who presented it to a deity, so that he might have long life. This fact he inscribed thereon. When Nippur was overthrown, the conquerors carried this tablet with their other spoils to Susa.

"After a lapse of nearly 1,200 years from the date of the inscription it was retaken by another king and again placed in the temple. This time a second inscription was engraved upon the reverse side relating these facts. Hundreds of years after the jeweler secured it."

RECLAIMING IRELAND.

United Effort to Revive Almost Forgotten Industries.

To make Ireland a desirable country to inhabit and thereby not only check the outflow of her people, but also encourage those already abroad to return, is the object of the art industrial settlement opened in Dublin the other day, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The heads of the settlement will be Miss Evelyn Gleeson of the Irish Literary society of London, Miss Lily Yeats and Miss Elizabeth C. Yeats, daughters of the Irish portrait painter, J. B. Yeats. These young women are ardent Irish patriots and personally talented. Miss Gleeson is a powerful writer on pro-Irish themes. Lily Yeats has made a reputation in London as a teacher of art needlework. Elizabeth Yeats is a gifted art critic.

They have taken a large and beautiful house in Dublin and intend to convert it into a center both of propagandist and practical work for the industrial rebuilding of Ireland, particularly as regards art industries. In their scheme for rebuilding Irish industries the Misses Gleeson and Yeats have the hearty sympathy of Irish patriots everywhere. They will add one more active force to the large number that are now striving to bring Ireland back to the path of national greatness.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

Severe Case of Lockjaw Yields to New Antitoxin.

Reports are being prepared by the Newark (N. J.) hospital board to be presented to the State Medical society and the New York medical board concerning a case of lockjaw that was cured in that institution with tetanus antitoxin procured from the New York board of health, says the New York American. The patient whose life was saved is Samuel Gohy, twelve years old.

When Gohy was received in the hospital, his jaws were already set, his head was thrown back, the muscles of his body were contracted and his limbs were stiff.

Work was at once begun to save the boy's life. It was five days before the boy's rigidity yielded to the antitoxin, and thrice in that time the doctors feared he would die, but now he has entirely recovered.

A Negro Bishop's Advice.

Bishop B. W. Arnett of the Pittsburg A. M. E. conference in his farewell address to the young ministers advised them to pay strict attention to their own wives, says a dispatch from Williamsport, Pa., to the New York World. "When you marry," he continued, "and you go to church on dark nights, have but one lantern and let your wife enjoy that light with you. Do not allow another man's wife to have the light and your's to walk in the dark or you will soon have trouble." The bishop also advised the young men to learn trades and added, "Strive to feed your brain with book learning and cease playing the dude with a two dollar hat on a two cent head."

Cure For Whooping Cough.

Dr. C. Leuriaux, a young Brussels physician, has discovered a serum that cures whooping cough, says the New York American. The serum is injected under the skin in the abdominal region and is quite harmless. The first effects of the serum are apparent in forty-eight hours. Not only does the application produce an early cessation of the distressing fits of coughing, but by it the malady can be cured in from eight to ten days.

SOUTH AFRICAN TOPICS

Dr. De Thompson Says the Boers Still Have Hopes.

THEY DREAM OF A VAST REPUBLIC

Former Officer Under De Wet Says His Countrymen Hope to Form One Composed of All States From Cape Colony to the Zambezi—Bishop Hartzell on Africa's Wealth.

Dr. Otto De Thompson, a former officer in the Boer army under General De Wet, who has been in St. Louis for several days, delivered an address the other night in the Reformed church, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. In the course of his remarks Dr. De Thompson said:

"The Boers have buried their arms and their flag, but they have not buried their traditions. Their dream, which will be realized some day, and that in the not distant future, is to form a South African republic composed of all the states from Cape Colony to the Zambezi river. When that dream has become a reality, the South African country will again come under the rule of the Boers, to whom it rightfully belongs. We were defeated not by the British, but by the Americans. Unaided by American supplies, England never could have conquered us.

"At the battle of the Modder River, when 1,500 Missouri mules stampeded from the English lines and ran into our camp, General De Wet remarked to me, 'Even the mules refuse to aid the English.'

"The traditions of the Boer people are too strong to be forgotten. My people are a part and parcel of the same people who were driven from England, Germany, France and Holland more than 300 years ago by religious persecutions. Some of them came to America, and others went to South Africa. In both countries they built a nation. Both countries for a time were the victims of English tyranny. Those who settled in America threw off the yoke, but my people are now wearing it. I cannot say how long it will be, but a new and a stronger South African republic will arise from the ashes of the one that has just been destroyed."

After the address, which was delivered to a large audience, Dr. De Thompson talked interestingly of the Boer people and their condition. After the treaty of peace he went to Europe and about two months ago came to the United States and was immediately assigned to the general Boer league for missionary duty. His object here is to secure homes in Missouri for a colony of his countrymen who, like himself, have been sentenced to exile by the British government.

Dr. De Thompson said that under a rule of the British government all persons not natives of South Africa who bore arms against the English during the late war will not be permitted to return, and it is in the interest of these persons that he is now making a tour of the United States.

Dr. De Thompson says that more than three-fourths of the women and children of the Boer republics were killed or died of starvation during the war, and 30,000 farms were devastated. All of these things cry out to the survivors and keep alive their hope of a new republic and the final overthrow of the English.

Tradition and fable never ascribed to Africa greater wealth than did Bishop J. C. Hartzell the other night at St. James' Methodist church, says the Chicago Tribune. With the future of the continent assured to the control of the white races, the missionary prophesied the development of fabulous riches in minerals and precious stones. With this growth the speaker foresaw rapid progress in industrial lines.

"The Cape to Cairo railroad has been forgotten in the wars of the south of the continent," Bishop Hartzell said, "but the project is not dead. I myself expect to ride in a Pullman car from one end to the other of the great continent. There will be a break for some years in the middle of the route, where passengers will be transshipped from one rail line to the other by the great lakes of central Africa, but it will not be long until the whole rail line is completed.

"It will be a ride of 6,000 miles, and of this 2,000 miles are finished at the north end and a like amount at the south. The road is not the dream we are apt to consider it. It is being pushed at a rate none but Englishmen or Americans could realize."

With the road the missionary told of other changes the future would bring. Great cities, populous farming communities, the most extensive mines on the globe, were elements of the progress of white man's Africa.

"From one gold bearing district alone around Johannesburg," he said, "the output will rise from $80,000,000 a year that has been attained to the almost incomprehensible total of $300,000,000 year. Then Johannesburg will have within its borders nearly 500,000 people."

There are, the bishop said, unexplored areas in the south that undoubtedly contained as much gold as the limited tract now known, and it was not possible to set any bounds to the possibilities of this bonanza portion of the earth. To the north, near the Victoria falls, which are more than twice the height of Niagara, are extensive copper and iron bearing fields. The power of the falls is being utilized to generate electricity which will be employed in developing the region. Altogether, Bishop Hartzell declared, there is no region in the world offering such promise for men of ability and industry.

These two, for at his shy caress
The darling girl has whispered, "Yes!"

The Public Marvel and Doctors Everywhere Pleased.

Nowadays it takes considerable to astonish the world. So many wonderful things have been discovered in the past century that it has seemed almost impossible that anything more could be found to add to the comfort or benefit of man.

Probably no branch of science has made such wonderful strides as have been made in the practice of medicine. Diseases that a number of years ago were considered fatal, are now known to be curable, Even consumption is no longer looked upon with the dread that it formerly inspired.

It is right on this line of wasting diseases that we now have news of a wonderful discovery—one that is bound to revolutionize the science of medicine and startle the world. Every one is familiar with methods that have been employed by physicians for years, in cases that they were afraid would develop into a decline. In all troubles of the throat, lungs, bronchial tubes and other similar ailments that were known to end disastrously, about the first thing the doctor would do would be to recommend cod liver oil, for cod liver oil has been recognized for a great many years as possessing peculiar medicinal properties particularly adapted for the cure of such troubles.

Every one knows the objection, however, to the use of this nauseating remedy. So extremely disagreeable is the taste and smell of cod liver oil that many people have actually been unable to take a single dose of it. Many others have made heroic efforts to take the medicine, but have been obliged to abandon it after struggling with the horrible stuff for a few days.

The consequence is that thousands have drifted into incurable diseases who might have been saved, had it been possible to administer this potent medicine. Enough people have been able to assimilate cod liver oil to prove to the medical profession and the world at large, its intrinsic value. Such patients as were blessed with unusually strong stomachs derived benefit from cod liver oil. Why then, could not a form of it be devised, to be administered to patients whose digestive organs had been weakened by disease.

This is exactly what scientists and chemists have been aiming at for years, and this is exactly what has been accomplished by two prominent French chemists. Their secret has been brought to America and our own Mr. Edward J. Murphy has succeeded in connecting himself with the prominent firm of Boston chemists who are placing this new preparation on the market. The preparation in question, now that it has been discovered, like all other great inventions, is simple. By a peculiar process the the liver of the live cod is treated in such a manner that there is obtained an extract which contains all, and only all of the curative properties that have made cod liver oil famous. The horrible smelling, nauseating-tasting fat that has always been a part of this remedy has been left entirely behind

This curative extract is the basis of Vinol which Mr. Edward J. Murphy is presenting to the public. It is placed in a delicious table wine, and in itself being tasteless, the consumer is unable to distinguish the fact that he is taking anything more than a pleasant port wine.

Mr. Edward J. Murphy has indeed struck it just right in making arrangements to handle this new remedy, which goes under the name of Vinol, Wine of Cod Liver Oil. It is worth any one's while to talk to him about it and to learn directly from him the good that is being done by finding a way to administer what has always been a horrible and much dreaded medicine, in a form that is actually pleasant, to say nothing of being a hundred times more efficient.

The Frenchwoman's Way.

Perhaps the most pronounced difference between the way a Frenchwoman shops and the way any other woman shops, says an exchange, is that the latter begins by the dress or the coat and hat and works from the exterior toward the petticoats and lingerie, if there be anything left to buy lingerie with, whereas the Frenchwoman begins with the jupon, the corset, all the dainty froufrou, the stockings and slippers, the peignoirs and negligees. She dresses first for herself and for the sake of being dainty and last of all for show.

Japanese Women.

In regard to Japanese women a writer says: "Of 123 Japanese sovereigns nine have been women. The custodian of the divine regalia is a virgin priestess. The chief deity in their mythology is a woman. Japanese women by their wit and genius made their native tongue a literary language. In literature, art, poetry, song, the names of women are among the most brilliant of those on the long roll of fame and honor on whose brows the Japanese at least have placed the fadeless chaplet of renown."

Trailing Fragrance as She Goes.

A girl who has tried it says that if bits of pumice stone upon which a little of a very fine perfume has been dropped be slipped between lingerie, neckwear or handkerchiefs in bureau drawers or among the gowns in the wardrobe they will impart the delicate and elusive fragrance that floats in the wake of the dainty woman. Sometimes white blotting paper is similarly used.

ICELESS REFRIGERATOR.

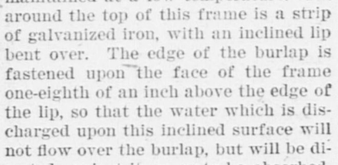
Oregon Man Invents a Blessing For Housekeepers.

An iceless refrigerator has been invented by an Oregon man in which the principle of the evaporation of water to reduce temperature is used. According to the inventor, the iceless refrigerator presents much the same appearance as do ordinary refrigerators. The outer casing and door may be made of plain or expensive woods, as taste may dictate. The upper half and the top are closed tightly. The lower portion is formed of inclined slats, through which air may be freely admitted. The door is also made tight at the top and provided with slats at the bottom. The interior frame is made entirely of galvanized iron to prevent shrinking and expanding or becoming moldy with constant dampness, and it is also a good conductor of heat and therefore assists in reducing the temperature lower than it could otherwise be maintained. Burlap or other fibrous material is fastened upon this inside frame so as to form an interior wall, which stands at a sufficient distance from the outer wall of the structure to form an annular space between the two.

In the top of the inner structure is an opening covered with screen material. Through this and the slats around the bottom of the outer casing a constant draft of air passes, thus causing an evaporation of moisture, with which the fibrous material is saturated, so that the interior of the apparatus is maintained at a low temperature. All around the top of this frame is a strip of galvanized iron, with an inclined lip bent over. The edge of the burlap is fastened upon the face of the frame one-eighth of an inch above the edge of the lip, so that the water which is discharged upon this inclined surface will not flow over the burlap, but will be directed against it, so as to be absorbed, thus saturating the burlap.

The fastening for this burlap or other fibrous material consists of a double pointed tack or holder, the head of which is soldered or otherwise secured to the face of the galvanized iron. The fibrous material being pressed over the points, they are folded down to hold it in place. This renders it easily removable for change or cleaning.

Above the top of the frame is a tank for holding water. Projecting from the sides and ends of this tank and at a suitable distance apart are horizontal pipes having in the outer ends vertically disposed needle valves, which ontrol the flow of water from openings in the lower parts of the pipes. These openings and controlling valves are situated in line above the slanting lips, so that water delivered from the openings falls upon the lip and flows down into the fibrous material, keeping it constantly saturated.



"Diseases of the eye do not cause headaches. This is a fantastic idea of American physicians which has never been borne out by my experience. Spectacles never cure headache unless assisted by hypnotic suggestion."

This remarkable statement is made by Professor P. J. Mobius of the University of Leipsic, who is one of Germany's great authorities on nerves and nervous diseases. There are many other things that cause headache, and, according to the Philadelphia North American, his advice to those who suffer from pains of that description is to consult the general practitioner rather than the eye specialist. He says:

"The first thing that ought to be prescribed for a headache sufferer is fresh air. But we can't all go to the mountains or seashore certainly, but even city dwellers may find many far more healthy spots in their prison than their own rooms. Walk the streets, lounge in the parks, if you can't do better, and if you must sit inside keep the window open, if only a little on the top. Headache sufferers should never sleep with closed windows winter or summer.

"The vegetarians say their way of living forestalls headaches, but my experience as a practicing physician flatly contradicts that assertion. Though I had many patients who tried vegetarianism and temporarily got rid of their headaches, the headaches came back, and came back to stay, after the first enthusiasm had worn off, spinach and peas notwithstanding. Still at the same time I always advise my patients to curb their appetite for meat. Undoubtedly too much meat is liable to cause headache in people otherwise predisposed for the disease.

"It's important that nervous people suffering with headaches should eat every few hours. If their stomach is empty, they become faint, and headache is the result. But never lose sight of the fact that constipation is one of the prime causes of headache. Headachy people should make it a practice to have prunes and honey cake around; also to eat plenty of honey and rhubarb and occasionally use sitz baths (cool) and chew tamarind. Salts should be avoided except by very robust persons."

Magnifying Sound.

M. Dussaud, the French scientist has applied the microphone principle in constructing a telephone for the hard of hearing. To test this invention hold the receiver to your ear and have some one talk to you, but naturally, evenly, without any changing of tone or pitch. The voice in the receiver is normal, but now turn the key of the switchboard under your hand one notch, and the voice is at once perceptibly louder. Another notch and it is louder yet. Complete the semicircle of the switchboard, and you will have the clarion shouting of a stentor in your ear.

UNCLE SAM'S NEW FARM

Model Institution to Be Established Near Washington.

ALL KINDS OF CROPS TO BE GROWN

Secretary Wilson of Department of Agriculture Proposes to Make the Farm a Mecca For Farmers the World Over—Valuable Arboretum One of the Practical Features.

The department of agriculture is to have a model farm situated just across the Potomac river, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post. It will embrace that part of the Arlington estate not used for the National cemetery, amounting to about 400 acres to the south of the carriage road that leads to the Sheridan entrance and bordering the river. It is to be known as the Arlington Farms, and it is the purpose of Secretary Wilson to make it a Mecca for farmers not only in the United States, but from all over the world.

In May, 1901, the first move was made toward reclaiming this part of the Arlington estate. The property up to that time had been in charge of the war department, but it was not used and had received practically no care. At the suggestion of Secretary Wilson it was turned over to the department of agriculture for experimental purposes. L. C. Corbett, the horticulturist of the plant breeding division, was chosen to work out the plans, and under the direction of the secretary and of Professor B. T. Galloway he began. The land had been used only for a mule preserve. So for two years the best thing Mr. Corbett could do was to restore the soil. He had it plowed up and sown to cowpeas, soy beans and coarse fodder, which, when matured, were promptly plowed under again. This year he put in a crop of rye as an experiment and found that it yielded twenty-five bushels to the acre, which is much better than the average.

Mr. Corbett has had the land carefully surveyed and has drawn plans just as an architect would for a house. There will be a model farmhouse, a model orchard, with the finest American fruit that can be grown, and all sorts of crops, standard and new. There will be also a large collection of shade trees brought together for comparison and all marked plainly with both their popular and their scientific names, so that a farmer visiting the place and seeing a tree or a shrub which he would like in his own home will be able to make a memorandum and order from it intelligently. There will be foliage plants and shrubs also arranged in the most artistic and useful way, furnishing object lessons in their use and adaptability. Already the work of building a model farm has begun, and many of the trees have been started.

"We intend," said Mr. Corbett, "to make it the finest and most complete collection of apple, peach and pear trees in the country, and the first object will be to complete the list of American varieties. We are particularly well situated here for the growing of all these fruits in a zone where the flora of all the north and south overlap. We can grow apples which flourish in the northern part of Minnesota or the Dakotas and at the same time can grow the varieties which do well in the Carolinas and the northern part of Florida. So it will be with peaches, pears and to some extent possibly oranges. In making this collection we shall grow each tree ourselves, grafting the stock on a young tree of known character and health. The cutting will be taken from a tree which is in fruit and which we know to be true to its name. This will insure accuracy of nomenclature. The trees will be very valuable for propagation purposes, and in the work of breeding and cross breeding they will be convenient to the experimenters of the department.

"The arboretum will be a very practical thing. There are a great many native trees in Washington now, but they are not assembled as they will be here for purposes of comparison. Every native tree which thrives in this climate will be grown on the four acres which have been set apart for this purpose. The shrubs and perennial grasses will be grown in such places, screening buildings and beautifying the landscape, as to make them object lessons in what may easily be done on any farm. We shall not go in for the fancy or foreign things except as they are brought for experimentation. The main object will be to show what can be done by any enterprising farmer with the material at hand."

Interesting Elevator Test.

Secretary Hitchcock and numerous officials of the interior department recently witnessed an interesting test of one of the elevator air cushions which are to be put on all the elevators in the government buildings, says a Washington special to the New York Times. The car was dropped fifty feet, with a half dozen eggs, a dozen electric light globes and a live monkey in a cage placed inside. One of the eggs was cracked, and the monkey was panic stricken; otherwise no damage was done.

WEST QUINCY M. E. CHURCH.

Sketch of the Society Which Begins Today a Three Days' Celebration of Thirtieth Anniversary.

A sketch of the West Quincy Methodist Episcopal church which celebrates its thirtieth anniversary tonight, Saturday night and Sunday will be of interest.

Regular preaching services, under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal church were begun April 28, 1872, by the Rev. Samuel Kelley, who, at that time was chaplain of the National Sailors' Home. A Sabbath school on Sunday afternoon had been held for four or five years by persons connected with the Congregational church at the center of the town. An occasional sermon had been preached, or a lecture given, but up to that time no stated public services had been conducted by any Protestant denomination.

A Class meeting was established on Sept. 6, 1872, and on January 1, 1873, the Sunday school was formally transferred to the care of the Methodist pastor and congregation. Until the church edifice was erected the services were held in E. H. Doble's hall.

On July 13, 1873, the church was organized as a separate society by Rev. W. R. Clark, D. D., Presiding Elder of the Boston District. Two weeks later, or about the first of August, Mr. Kelley drew up a subscription paper, for the purpose of raising funds to build a church edifice for the society in West Quincy. A building which could be removed and remodeled into a church was given for that purpose by Mr. Nathaniel Beal, and Joseph W. Robertson, Esq., deeded to the society for one dollar, the lot on which the church and parsonage now stand.

Owing to the depression of business, but little was done toward raising the necesary funds for the erection of the church, until the spring of 1874. Work was pushed forward as rapidly as funds could be gathered, and in September of that year, the society commenced holding services in the vestry of the new church. The audience room was completed and the building dedicated December 15, 1874.

The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. Samuel F. Upham, D. D., and the church was dedicated by Bishop S. W. Wiley.

Rev. Samuel Kelley, familiarly known as "Father Kelley" continued to act as chaplain of the National Sailors' Home and also to supply the pulpit of the West Quincy church till April 1878. The pastors since that time have been as follows:

1878—80, Rev. R. W. Harlow.
1880—81, Rev. S. W. Truesdall.
1881—83, Rev. C. M. Westlake.
1883—85, Rev. Franklin Furber.
1885—88, Rev. Henry Dorr.
1888—90, Rev. K. J. Pomfret.
1890—91, Rev. W. F. Lawford.
1891—93, Rev. J. H. Humphrey.
1993—94, Rev. W. W. Baldwin.
1894—Oct. 95, Rev. E. W. Virgin.
Oct. 1895—98, Rev. A. A. Brown.
1898—Rev. C. W. Wilder.
1900—01, Rev. John Peterson.

Owing to the changing character of the population at West Quincy, and the frequent labor troubles connected with the granite industry, the membership of the church has never been large at any one time. The organization of the Swedish churches, and the Presbyterian church at South Quincy, together with the Baptist and Protestant Episcopal societies at East Milton, have taken away some attendants and even some members, whose former affiliations were with those denominations. The building of the electric railway has also rendered it possible for members of churches at the center who generally attended here, to reach their own churches easily.

Jonas Shackley was elected superintendent of the Sunday school in January, 1873, when it was formally turned over to the Methodist society. With the exception of a few brief intervals, aggregating five or six years in all, he has continued to hold that position to the present time.

During the past few months extensive alterations and repairs have been made to the church, and the celebration includes also the reopening of the church.

The first thirty years of the existence of the church as an organized body were completed on the 13th day of last July. As it was not practicable to observe the event appropriately in mid-summer, the celebration was deferred until this month.

Serenade.

A very pleasant serenade was given Monday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bugbee of Charles street, Wollaston, who have just returned from their wedding trip. After a very noisy serenade of two horns and drums, the bride and bridegroom invited the noisey croud inside and a very pleasant evening was spent. Music and games were indulged in and later a collation was served. Among those present, were, Mr. E. S. Ames, Mr. John Savage, Mr. Willis Tibbetts, Mr. Arthur Bean, Mr. and Mrs. George Roberts, Mr. Charles Lyon, Mr. Thomas Burch, Mr. Frank Leslie, Mr. John Damely, Mr. Herbert Shaw, Mr. Albert Madden, Miss Rose Cody, Miss Theresa Webb, Miss L. M. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Merchant.

Meeting With Success.

W. F. Hoehn of Portsmouth, formerly secretary of the Quincy Y. M. C. A., is in town today. His successful work in his new field is shown by the fact that "Breaking Ground" eremonies for the new building of the Young Men's Christian Association of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, will take place on Tuesday, November 4. The board of trustees will have as guests for the occasion: Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, U. S. N., and Rev. Edwin H. Hughes, D. D., Malden, Mass.

Concert at Wollaston.

The first musical concert of the season at Wollaston was the concert given under the auspices of the Unitarian club Wednesday evening at the Unitarian church. The superior program brought out a large and appreciative audience. The artists all gave great pleasure as was manifested by the enthusiasm and repeated encores. In the list were: The Harvard Quartette; Miss Coates, reader; Miss Phinney, harpist; and soloists from the quartette.

Thirty Thousand Barrels

THE OLD FOLKS.

A Notable Gathering at the Universalist Church.

Thurday afternoon and evening were devoted to the old folks at the Universalist vestry where a social hour, supper and entertainment were given in their honor. Invitations had been sent by the committee having the social in charge, to about fifty old people, those who used to attend the church; also those interested in the church and others.

The supper consisting of an old-fashioned boiled dinner, baked beans, Indian pudding, cake, pie, apples, bananas, grapes, coffee and tea was served at 6 o'clock.

At 7.30 the following program was given which was much enjoyed:

Piano and mandolin duet,
Mrs. C. H. Greene, Mr. H. L. Kelsey.
Reading, "Jernsha Ann goes to the picnic,"
Mr. Charles. E. Snow.
Solo, "By the waters of Babylon,"
Miss Evie Sherman.
Mandolin solo, Mr. H. L. Kelsey.
Solo, "From the mighty deep,"
Mr. John E. Greene.
Encore, "Gray rocks and gray sea,"
Reading, "Horatio at the bridge,"
Mr. Loveday.
Encore, "A compilative reading,"
Solo, "Faith and Hope,"
Mrs. H. R. Holmes.
Mandolin solo, Mr. H. L. Kelsey
Reading, "A Prayer cure,"
Mr. Charles E. Snow.
Duet, "Jesus, the very thought of Thee,"
Miss Sherman and Mr. J. E. Greene.
Mandolin solo, Mr. H. L. Kelsey.

The social hour was perhaps enjoyed as much as anything, when all had the opportunity of meeting many old-time friends and talking over the good old times. The committee who worked so hard to make the affair a success were:

Rev. and Mrs. M. C. Ward, Mrs. E. F. Winslow, Mrs. F. M. Newcomb, Miss Annie Hobart, Mr. C. B. Tilton, Mr. W. S. Osgood, Mr. Peter Gomez, Mr. William A. Hayden, Mr. Herbert L. Kelsey.

The Tomb of the Adamses.

Several who attended the sale at First church Wednesday evening availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the tomb of the Adamses where great improvements are being made. The large vault extends well under the stone entrance steps. It has been whitened, lighted by electricity and besides the heavy stone door there is now an iron gate where people can stand and look into the tomb. The space in front is to be fenced in and suitable stairs will connect with the vestibule of the church which will much better accommodate visitors.

This is a much needed improvement and we are glad that it has been decided to honor the two presidents with more fitting surroundings in their last resting place.

A RESURRECTED HERO

By Captain Harry L. Wells

Copyright, 1901, by Captain Harry L. Wells

When Colonel Twiller appeared at the door of his apartments in the Nagasaki hotel, he saw that Nellie was standing at the window looking out over the crowded harbor and drumming impatiently upon the glass with her fingers. Now, the colonel had not been the guardian and sole mentor of that young lady since her tenth year without learning the signs of the times, and he read in that drumming the existence of a mental condition that was better permitted to work itself off through the fingers than through the lips. So he stole in as softly as the stiffness of his cork leg would permit and seated himself in a low bamboo rocker to await the turn of events.

The colonel's other leg had been left at Gettysburg, and when he was well enough to go home Nellie's mother, who had refused him whole before he enlisted, married the remaining three-fourths of him and seemed glad to get the chance. The colonel was glad also, and when Nellie was born he was still more glad. His happiness continued about ten years, and then the death of his wife robbed him of it until the budding of his daughter into womanhood, an exact counterpart in form, feature and disposition of the lost wife, restored it to him. He had become an abject slave of this impulsive, changeable, petulant, warm hearted copy of his wife, and that was the only reason why he was now 8,000 miles away from his native land.

Nellie had said she absolutely must go over to Japan to see those cunning Japanese girls in their own homes, and the colonel had said, "Yes, of course," though he very well knew that she cared no more for the cunning Japanese girls than she did for the woman who is supposed to keep company with the man in the moon. He knew she simply wanted to get as close as possible to Lieutenant Jack Carter, who was fighting in the Philippines and whom she had flatly refused to marry.

Jack was the son of the colonel's old chum, who had been so badly wounded at the time the colonel lost his leg that he only had lasted through a few years of suffering and then had left his little curly headed boy an orphan in the care of his comrade in arms. The two children had grown up together and loved each other, but Nellie had some romantic notion about heroes, such as her father with his cork leg, which Jack did not seem to fill. He was only Jack. So she refused him without knowing how much it hurt her, and he, when the war broke out, enlisted, still without knowing how much it hurt her.

Her pride at the thought that perhaps Jack would become a hero after all was mingled with a fear that the price of the heroism might be more than a mere cork leg, and this idea the colonel stimulated upon every occasion that offered. As time went on news from the Philippines became more startling, and that is why she told her father she wanted to see those cunning little Japanese girls in their own homes and selected Nagasaki, the nearest port to Manila, but the poorest for seeing Japanese life, as her point of observation.

As Nellie stood at the window drumming she saw the sampans darting about the harbor, the men-of-war lying at anchor, the large merchant steamers, the whalers and the many fishing boats and just under the window the long row of jinrikishas backed up against the sea wall in front of the hotel, the rickshaw men looking like animated mushrooms in their sugar bowl hats and knickerbocker trousers. She was especially interested in an army transport that had steamed slowly into the harbor a few minutes before with the stars and stripes floating from the stern, and now as she watched the group of khaki clad officers disembark from a sampan and climb the long stone steps to the bund she drummed still more impatiently and remarked spitefully:

"They make me tired!"

"Who?" queried the colonel from the depths of his chair.

"Why, those officers with their nice, clean uniforms! What right have these officers to come away from Manila when Jack is over there fighting those horrid savages? I should think they'd be ashamed to do it."

"Perhaps they would if they knew Jack was there all alone."

"Now, popsie, you stop making fun! You know they have no right to come home unless Jack does. I just know he's been sick all the time. None of them has been fighting night and day as he has. I wish you would go over to the club and see if those good for nothing officers know how soon Jack's regiment is going to be sent home. You'll find them there, for they are certain to be all standing in front of the bar drinking those horrid Scotch sodas."

"Very well, my dear," said the colonel, rising, "but I want to call your attention to the fact that a young officer who is sick all the time could not be fighting savages night and day. You'd better decide upon one thing or the other as the reason why he ought to be sent home." And the colonel chuckled as he stumped down the hall and the broad flight of stairs to the hotel entrance.

The colonel had a very dignified, military carriage, the dignity being accentuated by his desire to conceal the presence of the cork leg, and when he made his stately appearance on the hotel steps there was a rush of rickshaw men, bowing low with hat in hand, to tender their services. Selecting one, he stiffly mounted into the seat and was soon trotted to the door of the English club, where, as predicted, he found a double row of officers and Scotch and soda glasses aligned for business.

Upon invitation he joined them, but before he could ask any questions his eye happened to catch sight of some clippings on the bulletin board. He was soon absorbed in what they had to say. They were taken from the Manila Freedom and had been brought on the transport that morning. Briefly they told of a treacherous attempt to kill Americans under cover of a flag of truce. The American major, with his adjutant and orderly, had gone out to meet the flag and when well away from cover had been fired upon. The orderly had been killed and the major wounded by the volley. The adjutant, who had carried his wounded commander back to shelter under a hail of bullets, was so severely wounded that he was expected to die. The name of this gallant hero was Lieutenant Carter. Here was Nellie's hero at last, but, alas, not with a mere cork leg, but probably by this time sleeping beneath the silent stars on Battery knoll.

The colonel hung his head in sorrow. How should he tell the news to that little girl whose very heart he knew would break, all the more surely because of remorse for having sent Jack to his death without knowledge of the love for which he had craved and pleaded?

Slowly he passed out of the club, entered his rickshaw and was soon at the hotel. He stumped stiffly along the hall to the parlor where Nellie was waiting. She turned from the window as he entered, and a glance showed her that something was wrong. With a rush she was at his side.

"What is it, father?" she asked excitedly.

"Jack," was all he could answer as he sank into a chair and covered his face with his hands.

"What, father? What about Jack?" She sank on her knees at his side and with a firm grasp took his hands away from his face.

"A flag of truce! Jack and his major went out! Fired upon by those monsters. Major wounded! Jack carried him to safety, but was mortally wounded himself in doing it."

For an instant she remained kneeling as though stunned by the news, and then she sprang into action. Jumping to her feet, she almost lifted him out of the chair and dragged him toward the door, exclaiming incoherently:

"Come, come quick! We must go to him. Oh, dear, I wish I hadn't let him go! How can we get there? He may be dead! Oh, there's no steamer for a week! Won't that transport go back with us? I wish he had stayed at home. I wish I had married him. I'd do it this minute if I could!"

"That's a go! I reckon there's a minister of some kind to be found in Nagasaki," said a voice in the doorway.

Nellie looked up at the figure standing there clad in khaki; then, with a cry of "Jack!" she rushed forward and threw her arms around his neck. As for Jack, he clasped her in his arms and danced around the room with her, while the colonel, excited beyond recollection of his dignity, stumped about the room like their shadow. Finally Jack stopped to catch a breath, and as his grasp relaxed somewhat Nellie released herself, saying:

"Jack Carter, you're a fraud. You've never even been wounded."

"Never said I was," he answered sententiously.

"Then who was that Lieutenant Carter who was wounded under a flag of truce?"

"He belonged to another regiment. Poor fellow, he died the day we sailed! That's my regiment out on the transport. But, say, I'm going out to hunt a minister."

"Well, you needn't. I only said I'd marry you because I was sorry for you."

"Well, I'm sorry enough for you to marry you too. So there's two of us. We'll mingle our tears." And he picked her up and took another spin around the room.

The colonel stumped around after them again till he came to the window. Then he stopped and looked out. He did not even turn around when Jack paused out of breath a few minutes later and shouted, "Say, colonel, it pays to be shot, doesn't it?" He simply continued to look out the window and laughed softly.

A Message From the Pulpit.

In the old days, and probably to some extent at the present day, the Scotch clergyman was very much the pastor of his flock. He looked out for the big and little needs of their souls, and also of their bodies. Dean Ramsay, in his book, "Scottish Life and Character," tells a story vouched for by one of his correspondents as authentic.

John Brown, burgher minister at Whitburn, grandfather of the author of "Rab and His Friends," was traveling in the early part of last century on a small Shetland pony to attend the summer sacrament at Haddington. Between Musselburgh and Tranent he overtook one of his own people.

"What are ye dain' here Janet, and whaur ye gaun this warm wather?"

"'Deed, sir," replied Janet, "I'm gaun to Haddington for the occasion, an' expeck to hear ye preach this efternoon."

"Vera weel, Janet, but whaur ye gaun to sleep?"

"I dinna ken, sir, but Providence is aye kind, an' 'll provide a bed."

Mr. Brown jogged on to Haddington. After service in the afternoon, before he pronounced a blessing, he said from the pulpit:

"Whaur's the auld wifie that followed me frae Whitburn?"

"Here I am, sir!" piped a shrill voice from a back seat.

"Awell," said Mr. Brown, "I have fand ye a bed; ye're to sleep wi' Jennie Fife."

REBELS READY TO YIELD

Propose Peace With the Colombian Government

WAR PRACTICALLY ENDED

Surrender of Uribe-Uribe, One of the Brainiest Men of the Liberal Party, Discouraged Other Revolutionary Leaders—Further Fighting Unlikely

Panama, Oct. 31.—There is reason to believe that the Colombian revolution will now end with little, if any, further bloodshed.

Information from a reliable source has been received here that General Vargas-Santos, the military director of the revolutionists, has been negotiating a treaty of peace in Costa Rica with a representative of the Colombian government. Last week General Vargas-Santos sent a cable message to Governor Salazar, asking leave to come here to confer with the governor personally. Yesterday General Vargas-Santos repeated this request and Governor Salazar replied by cable, telling him to come. Much is expected from the approaching conference between these two men.

It is also a fact that last Tuesday the revolutionary general, Herrera, sent a communication to Governor Salazar insisting upon a conference with the governor of Panama and saying that from it he believed peace would result. This message was answered by Governor Salazar yesterday. He said he was ready to meet General Herrera.

General Herrera's desire for a peace conference is undoubtedly a result of the recent surrender at Rio Frio of General Uribe-Uribe, who was one of the most active of the revolutionary leaders. He is considered to be one of the brainiest men in the Liberal party and his surrender was a severe loss to the rebels.

On the isthmus there is now much hope that internal peace will soon be an accomplished fact.

MOTION DENIED

Counsel Black Asked For the Acquittal of Molineux

New York, Oct. 31.—Counsel for the defense in the Molineux trial moved yesterday that the court direct the jury to acquit the defendant on the ground that the evidence was insufficient. Justice Lambert denied the motion. Ex-Governor Black, in moving Molineux's acquittal, said the evidence given was not sufficient to warrant a conviction; that there was no evidence that the defendant ever had in his possession cynadide of mercury, or the bottle-holder in which the poison was sent; that he did not mail the poison package, and that there was no proof whatever connecting the defendant with the crime charged. At the close of Mr. Black's argument Justice Lambert said: "I will deny the motion for the present, and will hear all the evidence."

Mr. Black then asked the court to permit him to make his opening address to the jury and Justice Lambert acquiesced, declaring court adjourned until today.

Revolutionists Return

Fort au Prince, Oct. 31.—Forty followers of General Firmin and five members of the chamber of deputies who were left without means of support by General Firmin at Mathewtown, Bahamas, have returned here. With the exception of the deputies they were all imprisoned.

Hitherto they refused to do so. The men who started out yesterday are marching towards Caltcoats. The Doukhobors who are not affected are using their influence with the women to induce them to return home. A few are consenting. Everything is orderly and respectful.

SAW MINERS AT WORK

Arbitrators Spend an Interesting Day In Coal Fields

HAD A TRIP UNDERGROUND

And Showed Great Eagerness For Information—Discussion at a Breaker Over Number of Pounds Constituting a Ton of Coal Before Cleaned

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 31.—The seven commissioners appointed by President Roosevelt to adjust the differences existing between the anthracite mine workers and their employers yesterday made a tour of the extreme upper coal field, and saw every step taken in the production of coal from the time it is blasted from the ground, hundreds of feet below the surface, up to the point where it is sent to market ready for the use of the consumer.

The arbitrators had an interesting day and returned to their hotel at 6:30 o'clock last night, grimy from coal dust and tired after eight hours of observation and investigation. The trip was quite a novelty to most of those in the commissioners' party, some of whom had never been in the hard coal regions.

The commissioners displayed the greatest interest in every feature of coal mining, and went about their work in a manner that was pleasing to both the mining superintendents and the representatives of the mine workers who accompanied the commissioners. The seven arbitrators had to endure many discomforts, make their way through wet places in the mines, almost crawl along some of the gangways in the workings, and pass through clouds of coal dust in the breakers. Notwithstanding this, their eagerness for information was not diminished and they expect to put in another hard day's work today in this vicinity.

It would be unfair to say that one commissioner displayed more interest than another, but it can be truly said that Bishop Spalding asked more questions than any one of the others. He was usually in the centre of a group of commissioners and asked many questions of those who are employed in and about the mines.

The start from this city was made at 10 o'clock. A special train of two Pullman cars and a day coach, which was chartered at the expense of the commissioners, carried the party.

The rear car was used for observation purposes by the commissioners. In the car was a large map showing the coal beds from Scranton up to the northern edge of the field at Forest City. The commissioners studied it carefully and its many features were explained to them by Commissioner Watkins, who is an expert in coal mining and who was formerly an independent coal operator. The arbitrators also carefully noted the many mining villages passed by the train. At each of the stations a small group of persons was gathered who curiously watched the special train run slowly by.

All the commissioners were good listeners but poor talkers when it came down to getting an expression from them of any feature of the mining business. By their actions it is certain they have agreed not to say one word of what they think of any question that will come before them.

The arbitrators had an interesting time at the Coal Brook breaker at Carbondale. They went to the top of the great building and inspected all the machinery down to the ground. They were much interested in the men and boys who are employed in picking slate and "boney" from the coal. From the breaker the commissioners were escorted to the chute where the coal, fresh out of the mine, is sent to the breaker by means of a "conveyer," an endless chain arrangement of scrappers.

It is here where one of the principal bones of contention betwewen the employe and employer is found. The miners maintain they are often unjustly docked by the docking bosses for the amount of slate, boney or other refuse found in the coal. The commissioners watched the work of the boss closely and saw him dock several miners because, in his judgment, there was too much foreign matter in the car of coal.

A few feet away is the place where cars of coal are weighed. After the arbitrators had watched the weighing of coal for a while, Mr. Clark inquired how many pounds constituted a ton at this colliery. Superintendent Bryden of the Ontario and Western thought it was about 2800 pounds, but District President Nicholls said it was a little over 3100 pounds. Mr. Nicholls said that granting that 2800 was correct, these figures are too high. He said when the companies fixed 2800 pounds to constitute a ton so as to get out of it 2000 pounds of pure coal, the operators did not sell pea coal in the market. Now they have a market for pea coal and about three other sizes below it, and the miners' ton of 2800 pounds has not been decreased.

While the discussion was on the colliery whistle blew the signal for quitting, and then Judge Gray said: "It is 5 o'clock and I guess we will have to stop work." This interruption broke up what might have grown into a heated discussion as to how many pounds should constitute a ton at the mouth of the mines before the coal is cleaned.

CLUE TO MURDERER

Positive Identification of Woman Found Dead In Wakefield Swamp

Boston, Oct. 31.—The woman murdered in Cedar swamp at Wakefield Wednesday has positively been identified as Mary Myers, and until the day of her death she lived at 24 Fabin street, South End. Up till Oct. 14 she lived in that same neighborhood on Shawmut avenue, and was known as Mary Wyner, or similar in pronunciation to the name Weingert, which, years ago, she bore as the wife of Samuel Weingert, a pedlar, who lives in the West End.

The murderer is believed to be hiding in the swamp in Wakefield, and is supposed to have been seen by Howard Burroughs, who met a man there Thursday who answers the description of a man seen with the Myers woman a short time before she met death.

The police are believed to have a good clue to the murderer, but they have not closed in on him. The autopsy is thought to show that the murderer shot the woman as she was lying down, and the fatal blows, which were struck with a rock, were inflicted during a fury of passion.

Police Suspect Foul Play

Boston, Oct. 31.—Mary A. Cooper, 23 years old, was found dead in bed yesterday in her room at the South End. A bottle of so-called medicine was found in the room, and the police claim that there are other evidences warranting a rigid investigation. An autopsy will be held.

INDIA'S ROYAL PAGEANT

Plans For the Magnificent Delhi Coronation Durbar.

NOBLE CHIEFS WILL ALL ATTEND

Homage For King Edward to Be Tendered to His Viceroy—Imposing Ceremony Will Be Held Near the Scene of Many Deeds of British Valor.

The ground upon which the ceremonies connected with the coronation durbar at Delhi, India, will take place is not only specially connected with the roll of honor of the British empire, for the famous ridge bounds it on the east but is also specially associated with the assumption of imperial authority as the Shalimar gardens, which witnessed the coronation of the only great mogul emperor subsequent to the founder of the present city of Shahjahanabad—viz, Aurangzeb, the ornament to the throne—lie but a short dis tance removed to the west, and the durbar itself will be held in the great Bawari plain, upon the same site as the imperial assemblage which signalized the assumption of the title of kaisar-i-hind by the first queen empress of India on Jan. 1, 1877, says the London correspondent of the New York Times.

At ordinary times the plain at the foot of the ridge is an empty, bare stretch, covered with short turf and forming a pleasant ground for a morning's canter, but at Christmastide, 1902, it will be covered with the snowy camps of the viceroy of India and his principal lieutenants and adjutators and will be resplendent with the bright eastern surroundings by which such camps are always framed. The viceregal camp will be in the center of all, flanked on the south by the camps of the governor of Bombay and of the commander in chief of India and the generals of the four commands, and on the north by those of the governor of Madras and the lieutenant governors, chief commissioners and agents to the governor general throughout India.

At the back of the central camp is being constructed a permanent residence for the viceroy's occupation. This will hereafter fill a much needed want at Delhi—viz, a guesthouse for distinguished guests and visitors. The press camp will be on the left of the state camps and one visitors' camp on the right, while another will be outside the Kashmir gate of the city. All the camps and the durbar plain will be connected by the light railway which is being constructed for the convenience of visitors, and all will be illuminated by electric light.

Proceeding along the Grand Trunk road and beyond the canal another plain is seen to the north, more low lying and more bare than the stretches of the old cantonment. This is the Bawari plain, and in the middle of it, about two miles from the state camps, which will be the center of everything, and some four miles from the Kashmir gate, are the imperial amphitheater and dais where the coronation durbar will be held. On this occasion, as on that of the imperial assemblage, it will be the scene of a gorgeous ceremony, in which no element of oriental pomp will be lacking. The viceroy himself, the great chiefs in peace and war subordinate to him alone, the noble Indian feudatories of the crown, troops and guns, horses and elephants, splendid regiments and brightly clad, joyous crowds, all will be there and will make a picture of display and splendor such as has never been seen even in India.

The amphitheater in which the durbar will be held is somewhat different in shape from that constructed in 1877 and has been built in a horseshoe form, with the imperial dais at the upper end instead of in the center, as then. Inside the wedges of seats will be a circular road, by which the viceroy will drive up to the dais, and in front and behind the amphitheater will be drawn up the troops which will lend military splendor to the display. The road from the viceroy's camp to the amphitheater will pass through the principal bodies of troops encamped at Delhi; the cavalry camp, however, will be farther up the Grand Trunk road, near Badlikisavih, where the battle of June 8, 1857, was fought, and on the nearer side of it will be the camp of the ruling chiefs of the Punjab. The camps of the other ruling chiefs of India will be situated at various points on the western road from the Lahore gate of the city of Rehtak, and on the southwestern road from the Ajmir gate to the Kutab, and great will be the display and furious the firing of salutes as the viceroy visits each of those entitled to this honor, the most highly prized of all honors by the great feudatories of the Indian empire.

Of the ruling chiefs of India, one, and one only, who was distinguished as a ruler in 1877, has survived to be present in 1902, the Rajai Rajagen Raja Hira Singh, G. C. S. I., of the Nabha state in the Punjab. The chiefs of Haidarabad and Baroda were minors then, and the chief of Sravancore has just attained his majority; every other state among the leading ones in India will be represented on this occasion by some successor of the chief present in 1877. Lord Kitchener will be present at the coronation durbar as commander in chief in India.

The ridge has looked down upon many pageants and historic scenes, but for Englishmen the ridge will always be best remembered in connection with the gallant stand made on it during the months of June, July and August, and till Sept. 14, 1857, by the British forces against the immense array of mutinous soldiers who had gathered around Delhi and the last representative of the once glorious line of effete mogul emperors.

ROSY ALASKAN PICTURE.

A Million People to Find Support In the Yukon Valley.

Judge James Wickersham of the Third judicial district of Alaska paints a gorgeous picture of the future of Alaska, says the Philadelphia Record. He says that 1,000,000 inhabitants will find support in the valley of the Yukon on the American side of the line. Time will tell of the unimaginable possibilities of this grand region beneath the arctic circle. Good gardening and farming are being done. Good roads is one of the crying necessities of the country, as they are of any new country. During the winter, however, he says, you can have good roads in any direction without any expense. What is needed is a general system by which a road that is greatly needed can be built. The country has no such system and no road law.

From this time on Alaska will have to be reckoned with as a residence country. The whole Yukon valley is capable of comfortable settlement and will support an immense population. There is a peculiarity of the plant life of that country in that arctic vegetation is found at Lake Bennett and a country void of trees. The farther one goes north the vegetation increases until at Fort Yukon forests of a merchantable timber grow. These forests fade away again before you reach the coast, and they do not reach the Bering sea by 150 miles.

The interior is much warmer than the coast owing to the dry atmosphere of the Yukon region. The high coast range of mountains precipitates the moisture on their westerly slopes, leaving a dry winter in the Yukon valley.

YACHT FOR ADMIRAL WILDE

Great Heat Makes Warship Unfit For Naval Officers In Orient.

Mail advices from Hongkong state that a yacht has been provided as a flagship for Admiral Wilde and staff, in command of the American squadron stationed in oriental waters, says a Tacoma (Wash.) special to the Chicago Inter Ocean. On account of the great heat a regular warship is uncomfortable in many ways for officers in command of naval movements in that part of the world.

The vessel to be used by Admiral Wilde is the Rainbow, formerly a cattle ship, which was purchased by the government at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war and afterward converted into a distilling ship. She was sent to Manila and has since been put into shipbuilders' hands in oriental waters. She has been comfortably fitted up for the accommodation of the admiral commander at Manila, together with a large staff. She is neither armed nor armored, simply carrying guns of small caliber for saluting purposes.

The Rainbow is admirably fitted for entertaining purposes and will be thus used when the fleet visits the various cities of the Asiatic coast. She has large saloons and fine sleeping quarters.

Scientists Charmed by Indian Chants.

Art, with no other idea than to be beautiful, broke into the Americanists' congress at the Museum of Natural History in New York the other day. The grave men there did not know at first that it was art, says the New York American. Arthur Farwell led it in, disguised in the black domino of "Ethnic Significance." He played on the piano the theme of an "Old Man's Love Song" that the Omaha Indians chanted. He played the song of "Ishabruzzi" that tells the advance of foes and calls the warriors to arms. The pianist combined with it a rallying song.

The Footballist.

His brow was wrinkled in a frown;
His cheek was dented, rough and brown;
His countenance was grum;
His hair—a streaming aureole—
Seemed, as he hurtled to the goal,
A mad chrysanthemum.

His nose was in a rubber shield
That dug great furrows in the field
And yielded not an inch;
His arms were massive in their strength
And terrifying in their length
And awful in their clinch.

His feet, whene'er he got the ball,
Like automobile dashed, and all
Were mangled in his path,
And, oh, he howled in such a way
No Piute Indian would essay
Such medium of wrath.

And all the ladies begged a curl
And shuddered at the way he'd furl
The tackle on his boot.
There, in the grand stand, they exclaimed
The while he wrecked and slammed and maimed:
"How lovely! Ain't he cute?"

Drift of Opinion.

☞Both operators and miners were wrong. Both operators and miners were right. The operators made a great mistake in taking the arrogant attitude they did in the face of the good offices of the President. They lost much sympathy. There is no doubt but that they sincerely think they were right. They believed a surrender to the Union would mean disaster to their business. They found by sad experience after granting concessions two years ago, that they had placed themselves in irresponsible hands. The men, flushed with their victory, would do as they were of a mind, and the leaders could not control, and the recent strike proves it, in that it was declared in opposition to the leaders. So the operators said: "We will not negotiate with an organization that carries no security. They were willing to have a conference with representatives of their men as individuals but not as a Union. That is, they would not recognize the Union in its present unincorporated and unreliable condition, simply because any such agreement could not be practically binding on one party to the agreement. Without a bit of sentiment, there appears to be no little justice in that position: That they were willing to hear and adjust grievances but not to make an agreement with a party which could show no security for the fulfillment. But with all that right on their side, there is much to put in the other balance.

The miners were right in demanding better pay, shorter hours, more of the comforts of life, greater freedom from dangers and more independence, the right to the rights of manhood. The Union is wrong in putting the men under even under more severe servitude than any employer would ever dare impose. Wrong in not becoming incorporated so that it may carry some measure of legal responsibility in making agreements. Wrong in not encouraging individual advancement. Wrong in discouraging prudence and saving by denying help to those who have been careful and saved a little from their small wage, and giving to those who have spent all as they went along. Wrong in not recognizing that they best serve their own interests in serving the best interest of the business in which they are employed, in being a hamper to prosperity, instead of a help, by making rules which interfere. It would be good to see a Union with the real interests of the workingmen at heart, for the workingmen are the strength and stay of the Nation, but that Union which does not afford encouragement for individual advancement on merit is not a friend. It is not surprising that the operators after their experience refused to treat with an irresponsible body. Either make it responsible, or let it stand aside so that men can make terms under which they can go to work.—Universalist Leader.

HUNT---HOYT.

A Pretty Wedding and Reception at Wollaston.

Wednesday evening, Oct. 29 was the occasion of a very pretty wedding, when Mrs. Lena Le Vaugh Hoyt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin W. Packard, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Howard D. Hunt, son of Capt. and Mrs. Charles N. Hunt of 179 Farrington street, Wollaston.

The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles W. Hatch, 315 Farrington street at 8.30 o'clock, and was performed by Rev. Jesse Wagner of the M. E. church, Wollaston. The maid of honor was Miss Bessie Ethel Smith of Wollaston, and Mr. James R. Young of Athol, Mass., friend of the groom served as best man.

The ushers were, Mr. Lawrence Dunn of Thomason, Maine, Mr. Willis E. De Laite, Revere, Mass; Mr. Cyril E. Jasimine, Coasicooke, Quebec and Mr. Charles Wesley Packard, Somerville, Mass.

Mrs. Eva De Laite presided at the piano, and at the strains of Lohegrin's wedding march, the bridal party appeared and advanced to the corner of the parlor which had been transformed into a bower of autumn leaves, palms and cut flowers, where the marriage ceremony was solemnized.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white taffeta silk with pearl and embroidered chiffon trimmings. She wore a pearl brooch and carried a boquet of Bride roses. The maid of honor was prettily attired in white Swiss muslin with applique lace and ribbon trimming.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl brooch, and to the best man an opal studded pin. The maid of honor received from the bride an opal ring.

A reception followed the ceremony from 9 to 10.30 o'clock. The couple were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hatch and N. E. Alley. Mr. Sparrow of Wollaston catered.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

The future residence of Mr. and Mrs. Hunt will be at 179 Farrington street, Wollaston where they will be at home to their friends after Dec. 10.

CHINAMAN'S WORLD MISSION

Choy Sel Ken Organizing Party to Reform His Country.

Choy Sel Ken, nobleman, college professor, author and man of wealth in the Chinese empire, recently reached New York on his world mission of organizing a reform party which, peaceably if possible and by revolution if necessary, is to seize the reins of government of the Flowery Kingdom immediately upon the death of the empress dowager, says the New York Mail and Express. As she is now eighty-six years old the belief is warranted that the event is not far distant. The reform party intends giving to China a liberal government, which, Choy declares, is the only salvation of the empire.

Choy Sel Ken is twenty-eight years old, educated and an orator of considerable ability. He has addressed several meetings in the Chinese theater in New York and has so aroused his countrymen that they have rallied to the reform standard with almost one accord.

The reform propagandist visited every city in the United States where there is a Chinese colony during the past eighteen months. He came here from Hongkong to escape the wrath of the terrible dowager, who sought his head because he advocated the "open door" and liberal commercial policy for China.

He is a reasonable rather than a violent revolutionist, arguing that any attempt to dethrone the dowager and place the present emperor in power would be useless owing to the sinister ruler's influence.

He declares that the emperor is favorable to the reform party and upon the death of the dowager will if properly supported by men and influence rule in reality for the Chinese as against the Mongolians which through the present Manchurian minister are in control.

Public schools, railroads, electric lights, trolleys and other improvements as well as free currency with all nations are among the planks in Choy Sel Ken's reform platform.

He intends to visit all the cities in Europe on a similar mission. In New York, as in San Francisco, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and other cities, he has met with gratifying success, and, according to his own statement, he found many who offered both money and personal services to the cause of Chinese patriotism. Local Chinamen have greeted him with effusive welcome.

NEW MARLBOROUGH HOUSE

Ballroom of Duke's Residence Promises to Surpass the King's.

If the other rooms in the great house which the Duke of Marlborough is building in Curzon street, Mayfair, equal in magnificence its partially completed ballrooms, the duke and his American duchess will be in possession of one of the most splendid residences in London.

Next to that at Buckingham palace, the hall of Terpsichore in the Marlborough House will be the largest in England, and in point of luxurious equipment it will eclipse even the royal ballroom, says the London correspondent of the New York Press. It is 60 feet long and 40 feet wide. The floor is being specially constructed, resting on springs which will impart a sense of delightful ease to the dancers' movements.

At either end of the saloon is a balcony of aluminium, and before the fireplace will be a great fender of some more costly metal. Alabaster paneled walls and costly silk and velvet hangings richly embroidered will complete the decorations.

Novelty In Birdcages.

Something new for the birds is an adjustable bathroom. It is in the form of a small cage, one side open, with a hook by which it is fastened to the regular birdcage, says the New York Times. The bathtub is put into the small cage, which is then hooked to the larger one. The door being opened, the bird can step into the bathroom and take a bath. The bathroom attachment is a great advantage, for after the daily housecleaning and chamberwork in the regular birdcage the bird, in bathing, splashes it in a way that is disheartening to the bird's chambermaid. The small cages cost 34 cents each. One made a trifle larger by the addition of an arched roof can be had for 60 cents.

Cost of Naval Mimic War.

It is estimated at the Brooklyn navy yard that it will cost about $1,000,000 to supply the naval vessels with the necessary ammunition for the midwinter maneuvers, says a special from New York to the Philadelphia Ledger and Times. Each ship will carry a magazine completely filled with cartridges, powder and shells, and in addition there will be $126,000 worth of reserve ammunition which will probably be carried on the supply ship Culgoa. The navy yard presents an active scene of preparation for the great maneuvers in the Caribbean sea. The other day a tug left for Philadelphia with twenty-four marines who are to be put on the Panther.

MAY BE AUSTRIA'S EMPRESS

Why Imperial Honors May Come to the Countess Chotek.

The declaration of the Bohemian radicals that the newly born son of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his morganatic wife, Princess Sophie of Hohenberg, is the lawful heir to the crown of Bohemia may complicate the succession to the Austrian throne.

Archduke Francis Ferdinand is the heir presumptive to the throne of Austria-Hungary. He fell in love with Countess Chotek and married her two years ago at the cost of solemnly renouncing all claims upon the crown by any children of that marriage.

This was required of him because the countess (afterward made princess) was not of imperial rank.

The archduke will be the next emperor if he outlives Francis Joseph, but his wife will not be the empress and his son just born cannot wear the crown—unless something happens.

The first child of the couple was Sophie Marie Theresa Francis, who was born at Konopischt July 24, 1901. This was made the occasion for a demonstration in favor of the offspring of the morganatic marriage being lawfully accorded the rights of succession. The birth of a son now has renewed interest in the contest, which promises to acquire the greatest importance.

The marriage of Archduke Francis and Countess Sophie Chotek on July 1, 1900, at Reichstadt, Bohemia, was popular because it was a love match, and the Bohemians dearly love romances. The Countess Chotek, moreover, was little removed from an imperial birthright which would have entitled her children to the right of succession. She is descended from an ancient and honorable Bohemian family which received a title of nobility in 1556. Emperor Francis Joseph himself conferred on her the title of Princess of Hohenberg on her marriage.

The countess met the archduke, heir presumptive to the throne, in Bohemia, and they fell in love. The morganatic union of an heir to the throne was almost unprecedented, but Archduke Francis was willing to resign all for love, which he did. Out of regard for his nephew Emperor Francis Joseph sanctioned the marriage after the renunciation of the succession.

The popular cry now is that the archduke had no legal right to renounce for his children's succession, and it is believed the fight for the Princess Chotek's children will be made along these lines.

Railway M. D's.

Conductors, firemen, engineers and trainmen on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad are to be made amateur surgeons and are receiving regular instruction in the rudiments of surgery and first aid to the injured, says the Philadelphia Press. By means of written instructions, special demonstrations and a course of lectures all the men on the road are to be made thoroughly acquainted with the subject by the district surgeons. The employees will be each furnished with a kit of the necessary materials for wound dressing, and on each train, freight as well as passenger, surgical instruments and medicines will be kept in quantity.

Moles.

Many women and girls suffer untold agonies from the presence on their faces or necks of large moles. They go on year after year just as if a mole were an inseparable portion of their anatomy, like a rib or an artery. Is it that they lack the courage to go to a doctor and have the unsightly brown patches removed? Or are they fatalistic enough to suppose they must continue to endure them? Or is it the possible expense that deters them?

The fact is a skillful physician can remove an ordinary mole almost as easily as he can take a temperature. Any good beauty specialist can do it too. The charge is usually $1 a mole, but one can often make a contract, it is said, and get the work done cheaper. If the operator is skillful, no trace of the mole is left behind.

REVISION OF THE TARIFF

Cleveland Says It Should Be Pressed Upon the Nation

BURDEN UPON THE PEOPLE

When Protection Is the Chief Object Sought—Says Republicans Are Responsible For Trusts, and Now Realize That They Have Struck Rocks

Morristown, N. J., Oct. 31.—Former President Cleveland spoke here last night to a political meeting here in Lyceum hall. Special trains brought hundreds of people from other cities and towns in this vicinity and Mr. Cleveland was given an ovation. He said in part:

I am rejoiced to look into the faces tonight of so many who represent a united, harmonious Democracy. Such an atmosphere as this brings to mind the old days when New Jersey Democrats were in the habit of presenting to its enemies a solid, determined front, and when, whatever happened in other states, there was no anxious waiting to learn what New Jersey had done in the battle of Democracy.

As I greet you now, I can not smother certain sentimental emotions which intensify the satisfaction which this occasion affords. I was born in New Jersey. After long absence, full of incidents and vicissitudes, I have returned to the old state, where I hope to pass the remainder of my days and find a final resting place.

I am especially pleased to learn that tariff reform has been made the principal issue in the canvas you have in hand. Never within my observation or experience has there been a time when this should be more earnestly, persistently and honestly pressed upon the attention of our countrymen than now.

Of course custom duties must continue to be the source of government maintenance until another plan is devised, but a tariff constructed for the purpose of protection as its chief object is at all times and in every feature of it an unjust and unfair burden upon the masses of our people; but the bold and arrogant developments of its unfairness and injustice in recent years and the new directions they have taken, ought to especially arrest the attention and apprehension of every thoughtful, sober-minded citizen.

It was not long ago that the Democratic party, in advocating the reduction of tariff taxation to the revenue needs of the government, based its insistance largely upon the right and justice of cheapening for the masses of our people the prices of the necessities of life, and withdrawing so much protection from a favored few manufacturers as allowed them abnormal profits at the expense of the great body of consumers. But the exactions from the people on account of protection were made in such a stealthy and unobserved manner, by adding them to their daily purchases, that it was difficult to impress upon the consumers of the land the extent of these exactions. While this process was going on, imported articles not produced in this country were charged with such high rates of duty as not only to greatly enhance their cost to the purchasing consumer, but to create a surplus revenue beyond its needs in the government treasury. This surplus represented clearly and definitely a small proportion of the unnecessary added expense of the living of our people on account of high protection; and its aggregate was ascertainable, but the amount of the exaction thus represented was insignificant as compared with the amount which protection permitted our own manufacturers to pocket from the consumer.

When, in 1887, the doctrine of the Democracy on tariff reform was embodied in an executive message to congress, though all the incidents and consequences of a high protective tariff were considered, it was hoped that the plan and palpable fact that what was then considered a large surplus remained in the government treasury which should be in the possession of the people, might, as an object lesson from an unusual standpoint, effectually present the situation.

Less than a year after this announcement of Democratic doctrine, it was made a target for all sorts of attack in a presidential election. The timid were assured that absolute free trade would follow Democratic success, that the importers paid the custom taxes, and above all, that if any revision or change was expedient, it should be entrusted to the friends of the tariff. The people were persuaded to continue these friends in political control and they forthwith constructed a new scheme of high protection. The advanced growth of the arrogance and greediness of tariff beneficiaries, and the kindness shown them by these friends of the tariff as exhibited in this scheme, demonstrated how confidently they relied upon the continuance of the people's credulity which they had so recently and successfully tested. The bill then passed was so full of abominations and so plainly showed the heedlessness of its authors and beneficiaries, and their disregard of the interests of the people, that the voters of the land, though accustomed to yielding to tariff delusion, were prompt in their revenge and condemnation.

It might naturally be supposed that so violent a blow as was then given would admonish, if it did not reform, these promoters of selfish tariff benefits, but as unregenerate as ever, as arrogant as ever, and hoping as confidently as ever for the time when the people could again be led away by false lights, they sullenly surrendered control of governmental policies and laid in wait for their opportunity. The lamentable conditions which quickly gave this opportunity are familiar to you all. I am not here to speak of Democratic misfortunes or miscarriages, but to call attention to the unyielding tenacity of high tariff rapacity and arrogance and to the manner in which they grow and develope whenever they have an opportunity.

Sooner than they had the least reason to expect, the friends of the tariff, or in other words, those who sought to grow rich with government help at the expense of the people, with their aiders and abettors, had turned over to them the work of again adjusting tariff rates. How did they approach the task? Their work was undertaken as they would have entered upon a privilege—to make the most of it. I have heard it said upon excellent authority that expectant beneficiaries under the existing tariff laws—made by its friends—were actually allowed to construct the schedule by which they expected to profit. This was quite in keeping with the color and complexion of the entire scheme.

How long has it been thought decent or even safe to cheat the consumers of coal by putting it on the free list, but dishonestly providing for its custom taxation in another cunningly constructed provision of the law? How recently have the "friends of the tariff" had the boldness to perpetrate such a trick and take the chances of facing the people, when, in the painful stress of a threatened coal famine, it should be exposed?

In 1887 competition which, if unrestricted, might modify the effect upon our consumers of a high protective tariff, was spoken of in the message to congress as "too often strangled by combinaitons, quite prevalent at this time, and frequently called trusts, which have for their object the regulation of the supply and price of commodities made and sold by members of the combination." When this was written, I suppose the trusts and combinations mentioned as "quite prevalent," so far as they were at all important, might have been counted off by the fingers of the two hands. When the friends of the tariff last took up the work of its reconstruction, these trusts and combinations had increased by the hundreds. The consequence of their operation could not fail to be understood. It was as plain then as now that a high protective tariff defends them against foreign competition, and that by agreed association and confederacy in production and price, they defend themselves against competition at home. It was perfectly apparent that under the broad wings of high protection, and fattened by unearned accumulation, they could complacently close their ears to the troublesome cry for easier living from the every-day consumer.

That present tariff conditions have assumed a complexion which not only requires a check in its aggressiveness, but actual amendment, is at last admitted among those responsible for these conditions. Such a concession was made when a dozen or more reciprocity treaties were submitted to the senate, but the sincerity of the concession and the honest intention to surrender the least advantage as long as it can be held, is emphatically disproved by the fact that session after session of the senate has passed without taking the least action on these treaties.

I need hardly refer to the prevalence just at this time among the supporters of high protection of declarations and professions in favor of tariff readjustment. Does it mean that they are sincerely willing to do something for the people, as against old comrades who have heretofore paid well for the neglect of the people?

How can we believe this when we see still paraded up and down before our sight the hoary-headed, bloated, and malodorous old fraud and pretense that the tariff should be revised by its friends? What have these friends of the tariff done that they should again be trusted? They have quieted the people's fears and professed solicitude for their welfare and promised to lead them to pleasant places; and now that shoals and rocks have been struck, they seek by another promise to mend the whole affair, and retain the confidence and trust of those they have deluded.

If you believe in giving the consumers of this land a better chance; if you believe in removing the fetters of trusts and combinations from the limbs of American freedom of individual endeavor; and if you desire to enforce in public life more unselfishness, more fairness, more equality and a more sensitive regard for the people's well-being, you can be well and ably represented in all these things by the election to congress of the young, vigorous and intelligent nominee of the Democracy of the district.

Japan's Proposed Big Navy

Yokohama, Oct. 31.—The Japanese cabinet has adopted the proposed scheme for naval expansion. It involves an annual expenditure of $8,250,000 for 10 years. The scheme involves the building of four new battleships, six first-class cruisers and various other craft.

GREAT COALING WHARF

Features of One Being Built at Puget Sound Navy Yard.

FOR USE OF BIGGEST WARSHIPS

Plant and Shed Will Unload Coal From Colliers, Store It and Redeliver It to Battleships at the Rate of Two Hundred Tons Per Hour. Quarters For the Workmen.

Over at the Puget sound navy yard a piece of construction work is being carried on by a bridging and dredging company that is full of interest in itself as an example of the latest move in modern engineering methods and also significant in its magnitude of the place which the government foresees for the Bremerton yard among the naval stations of the country, says the Seattle Times. The work consists of the construction of a coaling wharf and storage shed adapted to unloading coal brought to the wharf by colliers, storing it until it is wanted and then redelivering it to the warships at the rate of 200 tons per hour. The entire structure, including the coaling plant and the wharf beyond, will have a length of approximately 1,300 feet, or nearly a quarter of a mile. This will bring the end of the wharf into thirty feet of water at low tide and will make it possible to coal the largest battleships in the navy at any time.

When this plant is completed, the Puget sound yard will not only be highly efficient, but its advantage over Mare Island in lower cost of maintenance will be even more conspicuous than it is now, for while at Mare island the government is under continual expense in keeping open the ship channels which the shifting bottom of the harbor as continually strives to close in Puget sound the conditions are such that permanent improvements in widening and deepening the channels are so in fact as well as in name.

The new plant will be at the western end of the navy yard, about 100 yards east of the boundary. It will consist of two principal parts, the storage shed and coaling plant, which will be 620 feet in length from the shore end, and the wharf, which will extend for 650 feet beyond the outer end of the shed. The shed or storage plant will be divided into bins of suitable size for handling coal easily and quickly and will be connected with the outer wharf by an electric car system. The shed will be 92 feet wide, 55 feet high and 620 feet long, with a total storage capacity of 22,000 long tons. The wharf where the actual coaling operations will be carried on will be supplied with two movable steel towers which will operate along the outer 350 feet of the wharf, leaving about 300 feet of trestle carrying the car tracks from the main shed to the outer wharf. The towers will be eighty feet in height and will have arms or booms of sixty feet in length that can be swung out over the deck of a collier. In coaling a warship the coal will be run through chutes from bins at the end of the wharf directly into the bunkers of the ship.

For 350 feet along the coaling wharf a channel will be dredged 100 feet wide, 350 feet long and 30 feet deep. The material secured by the dredging will be used to fill in under the storage shed, with the results that the shed will be put practically on solid ground.

As soon as the contract was signed the contractors began the work of preparation for carrying on the work by the most improved methods of construction. Buildings were erected near the scene of the work, and a little colony of workmen moved in and took possession. Sleeping quarters and a messhouse were built for the men, a general office building for the company and an office for the government inspector, together with a power house and shop building. Everything possible is being done by machinery. The plant for driving the 5,000 piles that will be required is made of two land pile drivers with double drum engines and 3,000 pound hammers and two floating pile drivers of heaviest construction.

For building the shed a timber tower sixty feet in height has been erected, equipped with a four spool bridge erecting engine. The equipment also includes a steam cut off saw for cutting and squaring all timbers used in construction, an air compressing plant which will furnish power for driving all wood boring tools and air hammers for driving spikes. The materials to be used will include 3,500,000 feet of Puget sound fir, 5,000 piles and 500 tons of iron and steel.

For providing suitable quarters for the men the contractors have built two houses, one to be used as sleeping quarters and the other for the kitchen and dining hall. The building used for the living rooms is 24 by 108 feet and is partitioned into rooms 8 by 9 feet, with two berths in a room. Through the center of the building runs a corridor which will be supplied with stoves or some form of heating apparatus and will be used by the men as a place of assembly during the winter evenings. The cookhouse and dining room are contained in a building 20 by 56 feet. The dining room has twelve tables, with accommodations for 100 men.

An American Bamboo.

The agricultural department at Washington, recognizing that bamboo, the very mainstay of Japan, is a material which would have many commercial uses in this country did not the cost of importation mount so high, is trying to introduce its cultivation in the United States, says the Philadelphia Press. Bamboo requires a hot climate, a soil with plenty of moisture and roots and no frost. It is believed that the plant will flourish on the waste lands of the southwest.

CLEAR SKIN RULES.

Don't bathe the face while it is very warm or very cold.

Don't be afraid of sunshine and fresh air. They give bloom and color.

Don't bathe in hard water. Soften it with a little powdered borax or a handful of oatmeal.

Don't wash the face when traveling unless it is with a little alcohol and water or a little vaseline.

Don't rub the face with too coarse a towel. Treat it as you would the finest porcelain, gently and delicately.

Don't neglect sleep. You can even sleep yourself good looking. A long nap and a hot bath will make any woman good looking.

Don't attempt to remove dust with cold water. Give the face a hot bath with soap. Then give it a thorough rinsing with clear tepid or cold water.

Don't forget that the nurses of woman's beauty are seven: Fresh air, sunshine, warmth, rest, sleep, food and whatever stirs the blood, be it exercise or enthusiasm.

Don't forget that beauty is a power. There is nothing more potent. It is to a woman what capital is to a merchant. Its absence is a misfortune; its culture wise and proper.

Girls on the Farm.

Farmers' daughters who leave comfortable homes to seek uncertain employment in town often make a mistake. There are few cases where the same amount of energy and industry expended at home would not bring equal returns, besides the comforts and safeguards that are retained.

Most girls could obtain the use of an acre or two of land, and on this they might produce something profitable. Eggs, guaranteed strictly fresh; pure honey, fat squabs, plump and tender chickens—all these good things are desired by city people, and many of them are willing to pay a good price for articles that are always kept up to the mark in quality. The raising of these may mean some hard work, but not so hard or so confining as standing all day behind a counter or sitting at a sewing machine or typewriter.

A New Jersey woman some years ago planted a fourth of an acre of Tom Thumb cucumbers, tended them with care and pickled them according to an old family recipe. She sold them first to a retail grocer, but when they became known she was able to sell them to the best wholesale trade and makes a tidy sum.—Farm Journal.

Open to Women.

The world of commerce, unlike the higher professions, offers a fair field to women. It has no restrictions of sex. Opportunities therein are endless, possibilities limitless. It is, to be sure, a difficult world, where competition is cruelly keen. It demands untiring industry, quick wits, clever brains. But its rewards are worth having, and they come quickly to those who succeed. Businesses in these days do not grow slowly. With the help of advertisement, they spring up like mushrooms. New wants, new luxuries, are constantly evolved from the changing conditions of life, and those who can supply them do not need to wait long for prosperity. The supplying of a simple want is the foundation of most of the prosperous businesses that are the romances of the commercial world. Many instances might be cited to show that there is always plenty of scope for those who can most skillfully "find out men's wants and meet them there."

For the Fair Chemist.

The following miscellaneous measures and their equivalents are likely to prove of service to the amateur who is going in for homemade cosmetics:

A dram is an eighth of an ounce. An average tea or coffee spoon will hold one fluid dram.

An average wineglass holds two fluid ounces, a teacup five fluid ounces, a breakfast cup eight ounces and a tumbler eight ounces.

A minim is a measured drop. Drops poured from a bottle vary greatly, according to the size of the lip of the bottle. The dropper, which is to be obtained at any drugstore, will measure a full drop.

One gram is equal to 15 43-100 grains, and 3 9-100 grams equal one dram.

The Spirit of Hospitality.

The spirit of hospitality is too beautiful to be neglected. It should pervade every home, be it one room or ten. One should always stand ready to share one's meal with a chance guest, put up a visitor overnight and allow friends to enjoy a pretty home and lovely grounds. The larger one's possessions the heavier are the claims of hospitality. I have no fondness for men and women who accept much and give little, says the Pittsburg Press. It is a form of selfish people, however, so charming in manner that one is willing to overlook their faults, to shut the eyes tightly whenever the hard, unattractive side of their natures peer through the veneer.

In Business.

Two young women have a flourishing coal business in Indianola, Ia. One of them was for some time employed in a coal dealer's office in Des Moines and learned to like the business so well that she induced her sister to go into partnership with her in their home village. They erected coal sheds and opened an attractive office and are said to be doing well.

Silver.

Silver in daily use may be kept very bright if allowed to soak in strong borax water for four or five hours occasionally. The water should be perfectly boiling when it is poured over the plate. This simple hint will save much elbow grease and also plate powder if carefully followed.

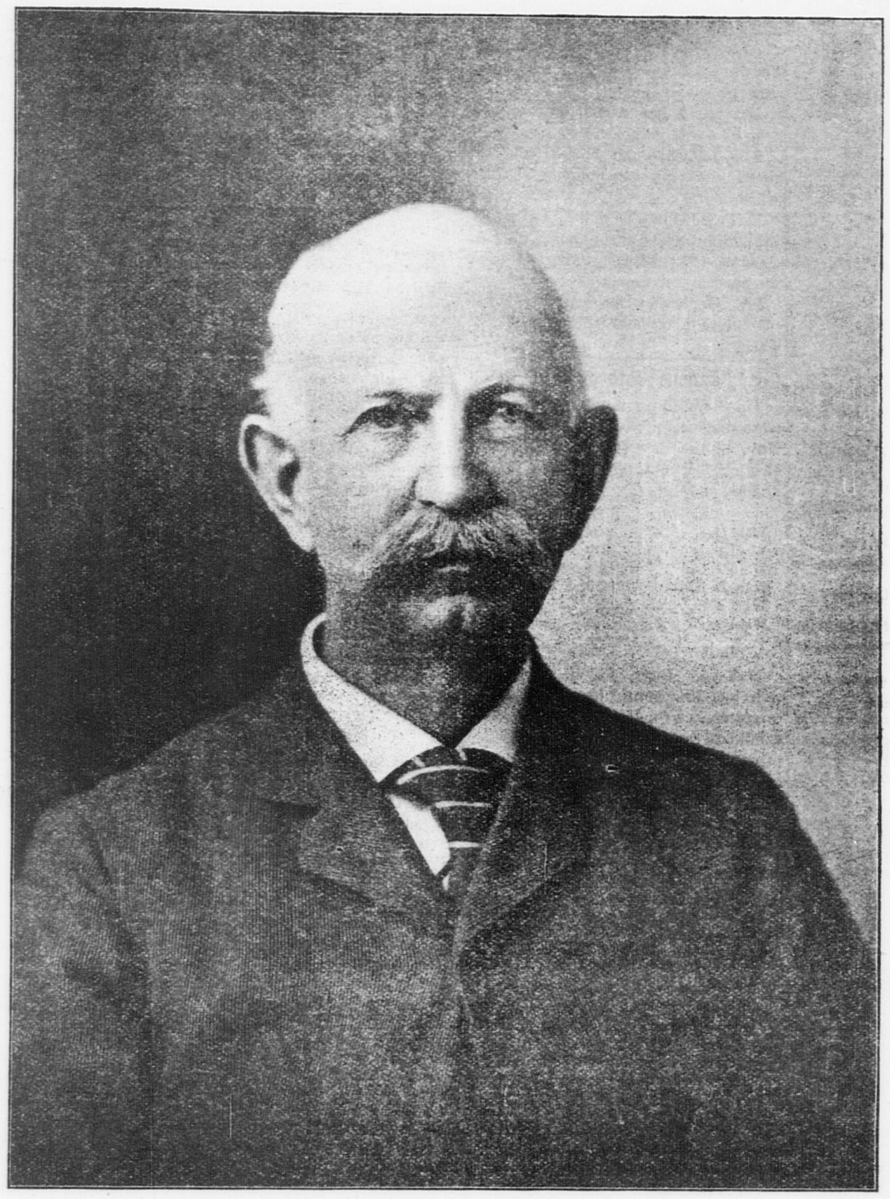
MARSHALL P. WRIGHT.

Candidate for RE-ELECTION as County Commissioner.



An Office the Duties of Which are Strictly of a Business Nature and Non-political.

The following circular has been issued to the voters of Norfolk County this week:

Norfolk County is a Republican County, but it sometimes elects Democrats to office, and re-elects them, if they deserve it, in spite of narrow-minded party efforts to displace them.

Last year MARSHALL P. WRIGHT was elected to fill out an unexpired term by the votes of thousands of influential Republicans and by those of the Democrats as well. He had 4800 majority. The reason that he received this large number of Republican votes was that the regular Republican nomination was one that ought not to have been made.

Mr. Wright is a man of high character and independent judgment, well fitted by training and experience for the kind of work he has been called on to do. He has proved an excellent commissioner, having the confidence of his associates and the appreciation of those in a position to know what he has done. He is peculiarly well adapted for dealing with the two large public works now in course of construction and in contemplation in Norfolk County—the Fore River Bridge and the Registry of Deeds Building.

Under these circumstances many Republicans felt that the best interests of the party as well as of the county made it desirable that Mr. Wright should be re-elected by general consent this year. As a means of promoting Mr. Wright's re-election, nomination papers were taken out in his interest and signed by a great many Republicans throughout the county. In Quincy alone, where Mr. Wright lives, and where his opponent also lives, more than 250 Republicans have signed these nomination papers for Mr. Wright. Under the law the Secretary of State will not allow the actual filing of more than 200 names upon nomination papers for a county commissioner, but the names of more Republicans are constantly being signed to the lists, although they cannot be filed.

The strength of the desire among Republicans that Mr. Wright should be re-elected was brought to the attention of the delegates to the Republican convention, and the Boston Journal, which helped elect Mr. Wright last year, declared editorially that the wise and decent thing for the Republican convention to do was to nominate Mr. Wright, and expressed the hope that this broad-guage course would be taken.

Nevertheless this convention, controlled by those who opposed Mr. Wright last year, by friends of self-seeking candidates, and by a few narrow-minded partisans, and including last year's defeated candidate in its membership, insisted upon taking a narrow view of the situation. Under the foolish cry that the county must be "redeemed," the nomination was made of a man whom no one seriously contends to be the equal of Mr. Wright in either capacity, experience or independence of judgment.

As at present constituted, the Board of County Commissioners consists of two Republicans and one Democrat. It is a harmonious and efficient board, and all citizens may be sure of obtaining from it exactly what they are entitled to. As there has been some talk about the apportionment of Representatives to the Legislature among the towns of the county by the Commissioners, it is well enough to say that the next apportionment comes in 1906, the year after the expiration of the term of the Commissioner to be elected this year. If it were otherwise, and the apportionment was to be made by the present Board, an absolutely fair and just one would be assured.

The result of the election depends upon the great body of voters who chose Mr. Wright last year, and who in years gone by twice chose Sheriff Endicott (a Democrat whom a Republican Governor had promoted to fill a vacancy,) in spite of narrow-minded party nomination made against him.

A committee of Republicans has been formed to make these facts known to the voters, and this circular is sent out accordingly.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deed—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who might truthfully say "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." sold by all druggists.

CURING CONSUMPTION.

The weight is the measure of the consumptive's condition. Every pound of weight gained is a matter for congratulation.

Exactly what goes on inside to make the consumptive gain weight when taking Scott's Emulsion is still a mystery.

Scott's Emulsion does something to the lungs, too, that reduces the cough and the inflammation.

More weight and less cough always mean that consumption is losing its influence over the system.

For all stages of the disease Scott's Emulsion is a reliable help.

On the Steps Of the Scaffold

[Original.]

It was moonset, a blood red crescent sinking into a band of yellow just over the roofs of London. The day had been a holiday, for King Henry VIII. had divorced his queen, Anne Boleyn, not by process of law, but by the ax. And now from many a chimney smoke rose on the still air while housewives beneath were preparing the evening meal. All London had attended the execution, and all London was hungry.

The young Earl of Emberton, who since childhood had been in France, had just returned and was passing over Tower hill. Before him against the yellow strip loomed the silhouette scaffold, the sinking moon at the moment standing above it, its lower horn seeming to rest upon the block where that day had been bowed the head of the young queen.

"Singular," muttered the earl, "that the red crescent should be in that position."

As he drew near the scaffold he heard a low moan and then noticed for the first time, seated on the lowest step, a woman, her head bent to her knees, her face buried in her hands.

"Madam," he said, greatly surprised, "I marvel to find you in this grewsome place at such an hour. How came you here?"

The woman raised her head, and Emberton saw that she was young and comely. She was not weeping, yet on her face was a strange distress. Her costume was rich, denoting that she was of high degree, her robe being of silk, though without any adornment whatever. Around her neck was a broad black velvet band, but even from this no jewel or trinket was suspended.

"Oh, sir," she said, "take me away! I was here with the crowd today, and when it was over all went to their homes but I. It was cruel to leave me here alone."

"But your menials? If your friends deserted you, surely those dependent upon your bounty"—

"They all went together, and I, dazed by the multitude, the solemn words of the man of God, the grim figure of the execution, the glitter of the ax in the sun, must have fallen into a swoon, for I have only just now come to consciousness."

"I cannot imagine," said the earl, perplexed, "how your friends and servants could have been so brutal."

"Brutal! Can you expect tenderness from a people whose king's divorces are written in blood?"

"Come away," said the young man. "You are trembling; you are faint. Your mind must be diverted at once from this bitter experience."

"Where shall I go?" she asked, fixing despairing eyes upon him.

"To your people."

"Oh, my people!" she said, a wail in her voice. "Do you think that they would welcome me after what occurred today?"

"Then you must come with me," said the earl. "To stay here another hour would drive you to a madhouse."

In Emberton's heart suddenly, without requiring time to develop, there was born a great love for this desolate being who had passed through so strange an ordeal. Since she did not move he sat down beside her. A chill wind made her shiver, and he folded his cloak around her, leaving his arms about the cloak. His eyes fell upon the band at her neck, and as his hand rested upon her shoulder he took the ribbon in his fingers and moved it just so far that in the dim light he saw what he thought was a fine red line. She drew his hand away. Hers was as cold as ice.

"Go with me," he pleaded. "You are cold and desolate. I will warm your heart with mine. I will make you forget this dreadful place. I will take you to sunny France. This dreary town is not fit for one so delicate, so sensitive. In France there are no troubles. The court and the nobles live in bright Paris, with its gardens, while the peasants tread the purple grapes in the wine vats, singing gayly. I came from there only today. We will go back together."

She turned her eyes upon his and seemed to drink in every word. He fancied a color coming into the pale cheek; that the icy hand he held in his was less cold.

"I will go with you," she said, "and love you forever, but first let me take one last look at the block."

"No, no," he cried; "no more of death! Come rather into life."

Despite his pleadings she moved up the steps, looking back at him wistfully. He held her hand, but it seemed to slip from his as if it were unreal. He caught at her robe, but it was fluttering in the wind and eluded his grasp.

"Listen," she said, pausing.

It seemed that he could hear a low murmuring of many voices. Then all was still.

She moved on, mounting each step heavily, as if weighted with lead, till she had reached the platform. Then, waving her hand to him as if in adieu, she kneeled and placed her head upon the block.

Emberton fancied he heard something moving swiftly through the air, a thud as of steel entering wood.

The next morning at daylight as the watch moved across Tower hill he discovered the Earl of Emberton lying in a stupor at the foot of the scaffold. He was taken to his home, where he lay for months with a diseased brain, and when his reason returned he left London forever. Even in his beloved France he found neither health nor happiness. No one save a menial was ever admitted to his bedroom, and after his death a portrait was discovered above his mantel—his sovereign's beheaded queen, Anne Boleyn.
